Mr. JONES is scarcely correct in saying that "legs and tomfoolery" are the greatest enemies of the drama. In the first place, legs, as legs, have long ceased to be a stage attraction. There was a period at which the exhibition of the lower extremities was popular; but that time is past. There are only two houses in London which present ballets; and these charm by the general effect of light and colour and not by individual voluptuousness or separate advantages of symmetry and contour. What Mr. JONES stigmatises as "tomfoolery"—by which we suppose he means broad, practical fun and boisterous merriment—is no enemy of the drama at all. The sports of children satisfy the child; and if the child prefers Punch and Judy to Hamlet, the puppet-show prepares him for the play. The only thing to do is to take care that the "English national drama" is as good of its kind as the "tomfoolery" is in its particular line. And, far from tomfoolery being the staple of entertainment at popular places of amusement, we see an ever-extending endeavour to introduce serious drama into the programmes of our variety theatres. The fact is, Mr. JONES has said so many different things at different times that, as Falstaff said of Dame Quickly, one knows not where to have him. Why doesn't he, instead of grumbling about the drama, write us a masterpiece?

MR. C. T. HELMSLEY'S ILLNESS.

Everyone will be glad to hear that Mr. C. T. H. Helmsley, the well-known acting-manager of the St. James's Theatre, has quite recovered from his recent serious illness. Mr. Helmsley since his start under Henry Irving at the Lyceum in 1882, has been steadily successful, and has increased his popularity and experience with equal steadiness. As business manager of the Compton comedy company, with a company of his own and Mr. Louis Calvert's, as general manager for Mr. John Hare at the Court and Globe Theatres, and finally in his present pleasant position under Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Helmsley has won golden opinions from all sorts of people, and his sporting tendencies have greatly contributed to this result.

Mr. Helmsley was taken suddenly ill on Oct. 19 with pneumonia and pleurisy, and was removed to the Nursing Home, 22, George-street, Hanover-square. The physicians in attendance were Dr. Jackson Lang and Dr. L. E. Shaw. He became rapidly worse, and on Oct. 26 it was decided that an operation must take place at once, although it involved great risk to his life. It was, however, successfully performed by Mr. R. P. Rowlands, of Queen Anne-street. All went well for several weeks, and he was removed to Ventnor. On Dec. 7 he had a relapse, and, as he did not improve, a consultation took place on Dec. 17 between Dr. Jackson Lang, Dr. T. A. Ross (of Ventnor), and Mr. Rowlands, and it was decided that a second operation was necessary. Mr. Rowlands was again successful, and after that Mr. Helmsley steadily improved, and is now quite "fit" again. He returned to his duties at the St. James's on Monday last. He is very grateful to his old friends, Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander for their devotion and kindness during the trying time. He is also under the deepest obligation to his valued colleagues Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds, Mr. D. W. Whitaker, and Mr. A. P. Horne for their great kindness in sharing his duties during his long absence, and he considers it a public duty to mention the great care and attention lavished upon him by his personal physician Dr. Jackson Lang, so well-known in theatrical circles. Mr. Helmsley has received so many letters, telegrams, cards, and telephone inquiries, totalling altogether 905, that he finds it impossible to reply to them personally, so he hopes his good friends will allow him to thank them heartily through the medium of The Era.

The London Gazette recently contained the following announcement from the War Office under the head of Infantry: 18th (County of London) Battalion London Regiment (London Irish Rifles).—Captain Charles T. Hunt Helmsley resigns his commission, and is granted permission to retain his rank and to wear the prescribed uniform.

The permission was given in recognition of Mr. Helmsley's efficiency and long service.

MR. GILBERT PAYNE'S pantomime The House that Jack Built is proving greatly to the public taste at the Theatre Royal, Macclesfield. The rôle of the principal boy is taken by Miss Kathleen Emmett, who plays the part with great vivacity; Miss Fanny Adamson makes a charming Princess; Mr. Gilbert Payne is a humorous Dame Trot; Mr. Fred Fulton an amusing Sir Niggley Grabbe; as Jossem and Jewen Messrs. Lapham and Wallen do good work; Miss Hilda Deacon is a winsome Marjorie Dawe, her dancing being much appreciated; and Miss Ethyl Errol as Tommy Tucker does creditably.

MR. LEIGH LOVEL and Miss Octavia Kenmore are this week presenting two of Ibsen's plays at the Crown Theatre, Eccles. On Monday they produced A Doll's House, in which Mr. Leigh Lovel, as Torvald Helmer, gave a meritorious performance. Mr. Kenneth Black as Dr. Rank also proved himself an actor of ability; Mr. Arthur McCulloch as Nils Krogstadt was responsible for an interesting performance; and in the character of Nora Helmer Miss Octavia Kenmore met with great success. Miss Katherine Maynard as Mrs. Linden was all that could be desired; and as Ellen and Anna Miss Daisy Race and Miss Gladys Everard did what little they had to do in a very satisfactory manner. On Friday night the company produced Hedda Gabler.

MISS KITTY LOFTUS and party are giving a delightful entertainment at the Grand Pier Pavilion, Weston-super-Mare, this week.

"DRIVING A GIRL TO DESTRUCTION."

Play, in Four Acts, by Mrs. Morton Powell, Produced, for the First Time, at the Theatre Royal, Belfast, on Monday, Feb. 7.

Ruth Wright ..... MISS KATE SYDNEY
Ruby Wright ..... MISS MAUD M. POWELL
Madam De Meral ..... MISS ANNA CORRI
Bessie Betts ..... MISS MAGGIE STEWART
Ned Chipples .... MISS EVA NORMAN SCRATCHARD
Robert Ray ..... MR. CHAS. STAFFORD
Lucas List ..... MR. F. CYRIL LEIGHTON
Octavius Screwe ..... MR. HENRY SCRATCHARD
Billy Broad ..... MR. EDWARD SWINTON
Bobby Broad ..... MR. MACKINTOSH CLYDE
Freddy Feather .... MR. H. WALLACE CURNOCK
Rev. C. Lovett ..... MR. WM. BERSON
Emily Rough ..... MISS RACHEL RHODES

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mrs. Morton Powell, who is the authoress of such successful plays as How Girls are Brought to Ruin, A Girl's Temptation, &c., has given the critical Belfast public an opportunity of passing judgment on her latest production, and from the reception accorded the initial performance, the play is destined to enjoy a successful future, possessing, as it does, all the sensational features that make a popular appeal. The play opens outside the Village School, Myrtledale, where Lucas List, a local magnate and member of the firm of Law, List, and Co., is distributing prizes to the scholars. List has betrayed Ruth Wright, a clerk and typist in his employ, and now seeks to win her cousin Ruby, a school teacher, who is engaged to Robert Ray, mate in the Merchant Service. Robert returns from sea, and announces his intention of marrying Ruby the next day. Lucas List determines to prevent the marriage, and, with the aid of Mme. de Meral, arouses Robert's jealousy. The young sailor is induced to drink, and in a moment of frenzy, finding Ruby in the arms of List, breaks off the engagement, and is induced by Mme. de Meral to offer his hand to Ruth Wright. Incensed at the thought that her cousin Ruby is about to win the love of Lucas from her, Ruth accepts the proposal of Lucas that she (Ruth) should accept the offer of Robert on condition that Lucas shall give up all thoughts of Ruby. Robert and Ruth are hurried off to the Registrar's, and Ruby, learning of the plot to marry the man she loves to the mistress of Lucas, follows, but arrives in time to find Robert and Ruth man and wife. Ruth determines to see Lucas List that night in the bedroom of his cottage at midnight, and is followed by Ruby, who endeavours to save Ruth from dishonour. Robert also learning of Ruth's appointment, goes to the cottage, determined, if he finds his wife unfaithful, to kill her, List, and himself. Entering the room, he finds Ruth, Ruby, and Lucas, and accuses his wife of being unfaithful. She denies the charge, and, in terror, says she came to save Ruby from the arms of Lucas. Ruby, dreading the consequences, accepts the situation, and takes upon her own shoulders the guilt of Ruth.

At a school fête Ruby is about to be crowned Queen of the May, but is accused of being the mistress of Lucas List, and being unable to deny the accusation, is dismissed by the School Board. She leaves the village accompanied by a crippled boy named Ned Chipples, an orphan, whom Ruby has adopted, and accepts shelter in the house of Mme. de Meral in London. Ruby, on retiring to rest, finds the door of her bedroom locked on the outside, but Ned gains an entrance by the fanlight, and they make their escape by the window.

The action of the play is now removed to Mme. de Meral's Bath and Massage establishment, where Robert arrives in search of Ruby, but is knocked down and stunned. Meanwhile, Ruby and Ned have sought refuge in a cellar, and Ruby, determined to end their misery by death, tears down the gas bracket from the wall, places the boy's mouth to the pipe, and wraps his head in her blouse. She is herself about to commit suicide when Lucas List arrives with food, and offers to save the boy's life if Ruby will consent to go with him. Ruby, driven to despair, consents to accompany him to his flat, where Ruth arrives in search of Lucas. Learning from a servant that List and a lady are expected, her jealousy is aroused, and she hides in an inner room as Lucas enters, bearing in his arms the insensible form of Ruby. List plies her with wine, and she is about to enter his bed-chamber, when the cry of the boy Ned falls upon her ear. She essays to go to his assistance, a struggle takes place, and she faints in the arms of List. Ruth enters, and seizing a knife, strikes at Ruby, but List receives the blow and falls dead. Ruby is accused of the crime, and is arrested. Learning that Ruby was not the mistress of Lucas List, Ruth determines to aid her. She, however, is met by Mme. de Meral, and a furious fight occurs, in the course of which the room is entirely wrecked, and both women receive their death blow. Before expiring, however, Ruth writes on the back of a picture in her own blood "I killed Lucas List.—Ruth Wright." Ruby, of course, is acquitted, and, accompanied by Robert, is welcomed home by the whole of her native village.

Mr. Charles Stafford furnished a clever impersonation of Robert Ray, speaking his lines clearly and with much effect. In the difficult rôle of Ruth Wright Miss Kate Sydney scored a success, on which she may be congratulated. Miss Maud M. Powell appeared to advantage as Ruby Wright, her fine emotional acting winning the sympathies of the crowded audience. Mr. F. Cyril Leighton furnished a realistic impersonation of the villainous Lucas List, his acting being free from the slightest exaggeration, and he was ably assisted by Mr. Henry Scratchard, who depicted the iniquities of an unscrupulous school official very vividly. Miss Anna Corri fluidly depicted Mme. De Meral, and is entitled to praise for her portrayal of such a repulsive rôle. Mr. William Berson (the acting-manager of the company) made the most of his opportunities as the Rev. C. Lovett. Comic relief was supplied by Mr. Edward Swinton as Billy Broad; Miss Maggie Stewart was a little too vehement as Bessie Betts, but, nevertheless, gained much approval as the friend of Ruby Wright, the heroine. Mr. H. Wallace Curnock, who is also responsible for stage-management, appeared as Freddy Feather. Miss Eva Norman Scratchard was most capable as Ned Chipples, and minor rôles were adequately presented.

The piece had evidently been well rehearsed, as the initial performance went with a smoothness upon which Mrs. Morton Powell and all concerned may be congratulated.

THE West Newington Conservative Association visited the Elephant and Castle Theatre on Wednesday evening last. The whole of the reserved parts of the house had been booked by the members of the Association, and the house was very gaily decorated throughout. Sir William Dunn, M.P., made a short speech from the stage, in which he thanked Mr. Charles Barnard and Messrs. Stephens and Buchanan for the excellent entertainment they had provided in the pantomime of Cinderella.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN WALTER'S pantomime Robinson Crusoe at the Hippodrome, Todmorden, is under their personal direction. Miss Florence Carlile in the title-rôle soon gets into the good graces of the audience, and is ably seconded by Miss Kittie Liske as Polly. Ally M. Benson makes a dashing Mrs. Crusoe and pleases the audience immensely. As Billy Crusoe Mr. W. Bland is one of the leading fun-makers. Messrs. Dytum and Dale give us some smart tumbling; and the Tivoli Troupe please with clever dancing and are great favourites.

REHEARSAL THEATRE.

TWO NEW PLAYS.

The Rehearsal company, under the direction of Mr. Clive Currie, produced two new one-act plays at a matinée performance, given at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, Strand, on Friday, the 4th inst.

The first of these, by Ursula Keene, was entitled

"THE FINAL PHASE."

Eleanor Gibson ..... MISS MAY SAKER
Diana Canning ..... MISS CLARICE LAURENCE
Jessie May ..... MISS ADAH DICK
Bridget ..... MISS IRENE MONCRIEFF
Sir Humphrey Canning. MR. CLIFFORD HEATHERLY

Eleanor Gibson is an actress who, after years of hard struggle, has "arrived." She has attained that degree of popularity when actresses find themselves overwhelmed with the letters of admirers, and of theatre-struck young women, who think it is "as easy to get on the stage as it is to get on a 'bus." She lives in a flat with her friend and companion, Jessie May, who assists her in replying to her numerous correspondents. The culinary department is ruled over by Bridget, an Irishwoman who is a sort of domestic despot in regard to the choice of viands for the small household. One of the most devoted admirers of the actress is "little Diana Canning," who has managed to make the acquaintance of the theatrical "star." She is the daughter of Sir Humphrey Canning; but, disgusted with her home life and the severe rule of a maiden aunt, she has run away, resolved to become an actress. She confides in her new-found friend, Eleanor, and in telling the story of her far from pleasant home life, mentions certain matters which reveal to the actress that the girl is her own daughter. Some twenty years previously Eleanor, finding that she and her husband—then known as Humphrey Maitland—did not agree, left him and her infant daughter, and they had never met since, the child as she grew up being told that her mother was dead. Sir Humphrey traces his runaway daughter to the residence of the actress, and Diana, on hearing her father approach, discreetly retires to an adjoining room. On entering he is startled to find in Miss Eleanor Gibson his own wife. At first the couple disagree as in the old days, but the actress is still a good-looking and charming woman. Sir Humphrey acknowledges that in the past he was in the wrong; the actress is quite ready to forgive and forget; and when Diana re-enters she discovers her newly-found mamma in the arms of the visitor, who promises to go to the theatre that evening and to see his wife play her part.

The little piece was well received. Miss May Saker was quite successful in her rendering of the rôle of Eleanor Gibson; and Miss Clarice Laurence proved to be a very bright and pleasing representative of Diana Canning. Mr. Clifford Heatherly was a satisfactory Sir Humphrey, the stern father; Miss Irene Moncrieff was good as the tyrannical Irish cook-housekeeper; and Miss Adah Dick as Jessie May played a minor part efficiently.

The second new one-act play by Frederic Sargent was entitled

"LOVE'S COMEDY."

Hon. Mrs. Roland Walton .. MISS ROSE DUPRE
Mrs. Beresford Revelle .... MISS MAUD BOWYER
Mollie Revelle ..... MISS JEAN GRAEME
Lieut. Kenneth Carson, V.C. MR. FREDERIC SARGENT
Mr. John Brett ..... MR. CLIVE CURRIE

This piece was first produced at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Feb. 22, 1909. The scene is an ante-room in Mrs. Walton's house in the West Riding of Yorkshire during the progress of a ball. Amongst her guests Mrs. Walton gives a specially warm greeting to Lieut. Kenneth Carson, who has just returned from the South African War decorated with the Victoria Cross for bravery. In the ballroom he catches a glimpse through the open door of Mollie Revelle, with whom he plighted his troth before he departed for the war; but during his absence she has become engaged to John Brett, whose wealth was his recommendation in the eyes of Mollie's avaricious, worldly-minded mother. In an interview with this lady, in the course of which angry words are spoken on both sides, the young officer flatly accuses Mrs. Revelle of keeping back the letters he wrote to his sweetheart while he was in South Africa. Kenneth also obtains an interview with Mollie, who is seeking a lost glove. He produces a soiled one, which he has kept for two years as a memento of his little sweetheart. He is, of course, anxious to discover how it is she has become engaged to the middle-aged Mr. Brett, and in reply to his questions Mollie admits that her mother forced her into the engagement, and not having heard from Kenneth she thought he had forgotten her. But her heart is still faithful to him, and though she liked, she did not love her wealthy suitor. While she is making this confession Brett, who has already obtained a pretty correct notion as to the real state of affairs, enters the room unperceived, and overhears the girl's admission. He at once comes forward and releases Mollie from her engagement to him, and thus the plans of the wealth-seeking mother are hopelessly shattered, and the gallant lieutenant triumphs.

The author of the piece, Mr. Frederic Sargent, did very well as Kenneth Carson; and Miss Jean Graeme was an attractive Mollie Revelle. Mr. Clive Currie deserves commendation for his portrayal of Mr. John Brett; Miss Maud Bowyer ably depicted the self-seeking mother, Mrs. Beresford Revelle; and the Hon. Mrs. Roland Walton had a capital representative in Miss Rose Dupré.

The first item in the programme was the bright little duologue, by Mary Openshaw, entitled My First Client, excellently played by Mr. Wilfred Flecher as Jas. Dickson Beverley, and Miss Winifred Howell-Jones as Mme. Yvonne.

The clever play by Fred. Fenn and Richard Pryce, 'Op o' My Thumb, was also successfully performed by the Misses Ursula Keene, Edith Carter, Grace Richardson, Evelyn Vanderzee, Evelyn Grey, and Mr. Frederick James.

The afternoon's programme was completed by the song "Love is a Slave," pleasingly rendered by Miss D'Auvergne Upcher. Miss Winifred Howell-Jones gave valuable services as pianist; Captain Arthur Morris acted as business-manager; and Mr. Fred Westlake as stage-manager.

AN especially brilliant and popular attraction has been provided at the Queen's Theatre, Longton, Staffs, for a fortnight, by the visit of Mr. J. F. Elliston's company, in The Babes in the Wood. It is distinguished by pretty and artistic dresses and fine scenery. La Belle Morgane makes a fine and dashing hero of Robin Hood; and is ably supported by a winsome Maid Marian in Miss Lillian Pollard.

"THE FACE AT THE WINDOW," the attraction at the Cambridge, Spennymoor, is finely presented by Messrs. F. Marriott Watson's and James Ussher's company. Mr. Charles H. Phelps acts in a commanding manner as Lucio Delgado; and in Mr. T. W. Dunscombe is found an able actor as Paul Gouffet; and Mr. Alfred Warne acts well as Henry de Busson. Mr. Haughton Macaulay is a successful Le Blanc; Mr. John A. Stimson a very good Peter Pottleberry; Mr. Arthur Cheeners is prominent as Lucien Cortier; Miss Marie Pemberton plays creditably as La Pinau; and Miss Francis Day as Babette and Miss Clare O'Sullivan as Marie are well placed.

THE Town Hall Theatre, Herne Bay, was well filled on Monday and Tuesday this week by the attractions of The Sorcerer, well rendered by the Herne Bay Operatic Society. Money was also turned away on Friday (4th) with Robert Macdonald's company in The Dairymaids.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"KAVALIERE."

Comedy, in Three Acts, by MM. Lothar and Sandek, Produced at the Hebbel, Feb. 5.

Princess Anastasia ..... FRAULEIN HARTWIG
Erik ..... HERR NISSEN
Von Flamm ..... HERR WLACH
Von Witgenstein ..... HERR EHRENS
Von Rosenau ..... HERR PRAGER
Von Romisch ..... HERR LUTTJOHANN
Von Rostowski ..... HERR MARLOW
Marquis Lusignan ..... HERR MERTENS
Pracha ..... HERR VON WOLZOGEN
Winter ..... HERR HERZFELD
Mr. Evans ..... HERR OTTO
Barth ..... HERR LEOPOLD
Frau von Bohlen ..... FRAULEIN BERGER
Meier ..... HERR WILBERT

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Feb. 10.—The authors have produced a piece which, if not as full of humour as we like and expect in a comedy, is at least entertaining. The audience were apparently well satisfied; they applauded warmly, and called the collaborators several times before the curtain. The plot is as follows: Anastasia, Princess Petrowna Nikotewna, is a Russian aristocrat, with plenty of millions to do as she likes with, and of a haughty bearing, softened, however, by a kind heart and pretty features. That she turns out later to be the daughter of a Berlin publican does not matter at all, and we ask no questions as to how she came by her Prince. The Princess is naturally the centre of a court of "cavaliers," and the one who appears most favoured is Baron von Flamm, a gentleman who has gone the pace to such an extent that the only article of value left to him is his famous racehorse, Comet. Neither can it be said that Comet is his property, it having been proved that three legs of the steed are mortgaged, so to say, to his master's creditors. The Baron now comes into a most awkward predicament. He is accused of having "doctored" a rival horse at Cologne races in order that Comet should come in first. He is brought before a court of honour, and the only thing that can possibly save him from everlasting disgrace is to prove an alibi. This at first appears—for a cavalier—impossible, the Baron having been drinking tea, "Russian" fashion, with the Princess between the hours of nine and midnight. The authors, nevertheless, are poking fun at the "cavaliers" of high life, and Flamm does not hesitate long in clearing his doubtful reputation. Princess Anastasia is naturally indignant at the breach of good manners, and turns her back upon the unfortunate Baron. The man now taken into favour is Flamm's jockey, a certain "Mr. Evans," whose worthy character has long impressed us. It may be mentioned, incidentally, that this good Englishman is a native of Berlin, like the Princess, and the pair soon discover their affinity. The gentleman jockey marries Anastasia, and generously engages his old master as jockey. We see at the close the Baron riding off on Comet to win a great race. The authors have laid the scene of the three acts in unusually interesting places. The action of the first passes in the dining-car of a corridor express, that of the second in the court of honour, the third in a race meeting. This effective placing and the good mounting aided the success of the piece. The acting was uneven; a little more vivacity would have improved it.

CONRAD DREHER, the clever Tyrolean actor, has come with his excellent company to give a season at the Apollo Theatre. This time it is not comedy pure and simple, but operetta in which Herr Dreher is excelling himself. A new work in three acts, Der Liebeswalzer, by C. M. Ziehrer, book by MM. Grünbaum and Bodansky, was produced last week, and has been given nightly with a good deal of success. In the postmaster Leopold Führinger Herr Dreher has a rôle that suits his Southern humour down to the ground, and his singing of the songs and couplets allotted to him was capital. The music is bright, and the interpretation all round was excellent.

TALKING of operettas, Léhar's new work, Zigeunerliebe (Gipsy Love), will be produced at the Komische Oper to-morrow night. The chief rôles are in the hands of Fräuleins Heide, Peters, Hagen, and Seebold, and Herren Nadolovitch (the leading tenor), Zador, Grünwald, and Kreuder. The booking is brisk.

HERR RICHARD SKOWRONNEK'S merry hunting comedy, Halali, has been revived at the Friedrich Wilhelm Städtisches Theatre, after an interval of some years. It met with distinct appreciation, and will certainly enjoy a lengthy run. In the good cast Frau Werner-Wagner was foremost for her clever and convincing impersonation of the rôle of Frau Kanzleirätin Schettler.

A NEW four-act farce, Der Hochzeitstag, by MM. Wolters and Königsbrunn-Schaup, has been given at the Luisen, achieving well-merited success. While not particularly original as regards plot, the piece is brightly put together, and the dialogue is amusing. It was remarkably well acted, and authors and artists were called several times before the curtain in response to hearty applause.

MR. GEORGE WILBUR REED, leading tenor of the Danzig Stadt Theatre, had a great triumph there last Sunday, when he gave the rôle of Pedro in Eugen D'Albert's tragic opera Tiefland for the first time. The house rose at him, shouting "Bravo!" with wild enthusiasm after each act. At the close of the opera Mr. Reed was recalled fourteen times, amidst deafening applause. This is all the more gratifying for the American artist, as the Danzig audiences are proverbially cool and reserved.

MR. CHARLES NORMAND'S VOCAL RECITAL.

On Saturday afternoon, Feb. 5, at Messrs. Broadwood's, King's Room, Conduit-street, W., Mr. Charles Normand, assisted by Miss Helen Blain (the celebrated Scotch contralto) and Mr. Robert Konigsberg (violinist), gave a well-attended recital. Owing to a severe influenza cold Mr. Normand had unfortunately to omit two examples of Verdi—"Ella giammai m' amò" (Don Carlos) and "Il lacerato spirito" (Simon Boccanegra); but in the concert-giver's singing of Leporello's aria "Madamina," from Don Giovanni, it was at once evident that he had a fine rich toned voice and cultivated style. In two Hungarian songs, arranged by F. Korbay, "I'm a horseherd" and "Had a horse," Mr. Normand sang with great spirit in spite of his cold. The refrain of the second song, "More was lost at Mohacs field," refers to the defeat of the Hungarians by the Turks in 1526, and is still used as a proverb at the present day. Mr. Normand was also heard in "Cœur d'Enfant" (Coenen); a dashing song by F. F. Bullard, "The Sword of Ferrara"; and "Dumbledum Day" (Löhr); while he was associated with Miss Helen Blain in a song-cycle "On Jhelum River," by Woodforde-Finden, in which composition the duet "Kingfisher Blue" proved very melodious and attractive. Miss Helen Blain's fine voice was heard to great advantage in Giordani's "Caro mio ben," and she also greatly pleased the audience in "An Emblem" (Thompson) and Cuthbert Wynne's song "My Heart's Song." In his violin solo of Wieniawski's "Mazurka" Mr. Robert Konigsberg produced a beautiful tone and skilful technique; while his performance of "Allegro Brillant" (W. Ten Have), Wolff's "Paraphrase," and his own composition "Le Déluge" were received with warm applause. Miss Lucie Gerrard, L.R.A.M., was the accompanist.

"AN IRISH EXPLANATION," by Fred Terry, illustrated by photograph and autograph. See "The Era Annual," 1910.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Arthur Weir, secretary of the Terriers' Association, will take the chair on Sunday at the thirteenth annual dinner of the Gallery First Nighters' Club, of which he is the president, at Frascati's Restaurant, and will propose the toast of "The Drama," to which Mr. Rudolf Besier (the author of The Virgin Goddess and Don) will respond. Miss Gwennie Mars, of the Follies, will reply for "The Visitors," proposed by Mr. Frank W. Whitworth.

The annual dinner and dance of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association at the Grand Hall of the Criterion Restaurant, announced for Sunday, Feb. 20, should be the most popular reunion of the year. The two charities to be benefited are the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Benevolent Institution, and the appeal on their behalf is to be made by Eugene Stratton, the popular coon, whose eloquence in a good cause will be backed up by Joe Elvin, the founder of the Benevolent Institution. The reception is at 6.30, the dinner at 7, conversazione at 11, and dance 12 to 5.

On Saturday morning last, at Euston Station, Miss Rose Hamilton, Miss Claire Romaine, and Mr. Edgar Romaine, who were departing by the 9.20 a.m. boat express for Liverpool, thence to embark on the Baltic for New York, had a hearty send-off from relatives and friends. Among those on the platform were Miss J. Hamilton, Mr. Jack Hamilton, Mrs. Wood, Miss Annie Wood, Miss Ella Lane, Miss Rosie Lloyd, Miss Marie Lloyd, and Edgar Bateman.

A cheque for £570 8s. 9d. has been forwarded to the Lord Mayor of London by Messrs. Moss' Empires, Limited, the proprietors of the London Hippodrome. This sum represents the entire proceeds of the successful matinée held at that house on Monday in aid of the Lord Mayor's Paris Floods Relief Fund.

Mr. Frank Postlethwaite, having taken possession of the Empire, Camberwell, as debenture holder, desires it to be known that he cannot hold himself responsible for any contracts made between artists and the Camberwell Empire, Ltd., or anyone who acted on its behalf from March 7 next inclusive and afterwards.

The debenture holder has, however, personally accepted the contracts made with the following agents for the remainder of the year 1910:—George Aytoun, Richard Cass, Frank Postlethwaite's agency, and Tom Shaw.

John Lawson opens at the Palace, Manchester, on Monday, with The Miracle, for fourteen performances, with entire London cast, scenery, and production. The cast includes Mr. F. Joynsen-Powell as Vachell; Mr. F. Naylor Grimston as Goldstein; Mr. John Cecil as the Antiquarian; the West African tragedian, Mr. G. Bushra, as Wallah; and Miss Lucille Sidney as Ena Leveson.

It will be remembered that there was a mistaken demonstration against this work on its production at the Holborn Empire. The sketch was witnessed by the Rev. Gerald Friedlander, of the Haymarket Synagogue, and several influential gentlemen, who expressed their satisfaction. Some objection was raised to the use of the Torah, and this was immediately discontinued. Exception was also taken to the introduction of the word "Jehovah" in the Synagogue scene, and Mr. Lawson at once expunged it from the sketch.

Mr. Burford Delannoy, the actor-novelist, who played at Sadler's Wells Theatre in the late eighties, has written several thrilling stories, among them being "Nineteen Thousand Pounds," "The Margate Murder Mystery," "M.R.C.S.," and is now turning his attention to writing for the stage. A sketch from his pen, The Idol's Eyes, is to be produced at the Shakespeare, Clapham, with Gabriel Grant—Gambler, another sketch of which he is the author.

The regrettable failure of The Strong People to attract audiences to the Lyric has left Mr. Waller momentarily free, and on Monday he goes to the Hippodrome to appear as the fatalist in the dramatic monologue by Henry Hamilton, entitled Fortune's Fool, originally produced at the Haymarket on March 25, 1895. It is a powerful but gloomy little piece.

Graham, the human marionette, in his latest creation, entitled Graham's Masterpiece, recently noticed by us in these columns, has been secured by Mr. Harry Hitchins on Monday next for the Empire. This ingenious and clever artist has also been engaged by Marinelli at the Olympia, Paris, where he will sustain the spirit of the entente cordiale for eight weeks. He has also forty weeks in America.

The report of the Empire is highly satisfactory. The net profit (including balance of last account) is shown at £24,702, and it is now proposed to pay a dividend in respect of the year 1909 of 3s. on each 15s. paid share, and of 2s. on each 10s. paid share respectively, being at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, absorbing £6,250, and carrying forward to next account a balance of £18,452 16s. 8d. This dividend will, if approved by the shareholders, be paid on or before Feb. 21 instant, free of income tax. The ordinary general meeting of the company is fixed for Friday next, at 12 noon, at the Empire Theatre.

The scene of Mr. J. B. Fagan's playlet A Dressing Room Dream, in which Miss Winifred Emery is to make her début at the Hippodrome on Monday, the 21st, is in Peg Woffington's dressing-room, and the play is concerned with Peg and an elderly beau, whom she disposes of in an extraordinary manner.

At the Palace Theatre on Monday next a young lady calling herself La Pia will make her first appearance in London in a "turn" called "The Spirit of the Waves." The stormy sea effects produced are said to be very pretty as well as very sensational, and it is thought that La Pia, who adopts the Loie Fuller fashion of dancing, will rise on the crest of the wave of popularity.

"The Drums of Oude," the playlet by Austin Strong, comes to the Tivoli on Monday next. The piece, originally produced at the Comedy Theatre on April 5, 1906, was played also at the opening of the Playhouse (Jan. 28, 1907) by Mr. Cyril Maude.

Mr. George Grossmith, jun., will be relinquishing for a time the part of the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint in Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety. He will go from London to the Paris Folies-Bergère on March 1 for a month, to appear there nightly in a revue, as an Englishman with some knowledge of French, and without the red side whiskers and check suit that were the chief features of French comic caricature of the "sacrés goddams" before the entente cordiale. The favourite of the Gaiety will act two scenes with the comedians, a little act with Mlle. Campion, and the "two-step" that he is doing here with Miss Gertie Millar. He will likewise sing "Yip-i-addy-i-ay" in French. Parisians will buck up and forget all about the Boodle in this rollicking refrain of a Cockney carol.

Mr. Albert Bushell, the popular manager of the Birmingham Gaiety, will have a benefit night on Tuesday, Feb. 22. A strong programme is being arranged.

The Hull Hippodrome has been taken over by a small private syndicate, at the head of which is Mr. Walter Bentley, the well-known London agent, who will be able to secure such companies as have not been seen previously at the house.

The definite date of the reopening is Monday, Feb. 21, and Hull entertainment lovers will, no doubt, be pleased to hear that Mr. Alfred Graham has been retained as resident representative.

Miss Eva Chadwick, charming vocal comedienne (and wife of Mr. W. J. Boyle, manager, Royal Hippodrome, Salford), recommences work on Monday, the 14th inst., opening at the Empire, Stockport.

Messrs. Braudyn and Montanini will, in the autumn, tour a new musical farcical absurdity entitled Many Merry Muddles, with a cast already secured of first-class musical comedy artists.

In addition to the Hippodrome which it has been decided to erect in Derby on a site in Green Lane, it is rumoured that negotiations are in progress for a site, not far from the existing Grand Theatre, for an establishment of the picturedrome order.

Miss Dorothy Ward, the popular principal boy at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Birmingham, was accorded a great reception on the occasion of her visit to the local Jewish Working Men's Club last Sunday evening. A fine concert programme had been arranged by Mr. Ben Peters, and Miss Ward had to contribute three songs and a recitation before she was allowed to leave.

Mr. W. Payne Seddon has leased the Theatre Royal, Loughborough, to Mr. Leon Vint from the conclusion of the present season, to be run as a variety house, and has arranged to book the Town Hall, which is equipped with a good stage and scenery, for a few theatrical companies, which will be booked in conjunction with Lincoln, Gainsborough, Peterborough, and Rugby.

The King's Palace, Wellingborough, a new venture, opened on Monday. The building is the King's Hall, converted into a smart little variety house, which is being run with two shows nightly by a local company. The current attractions are the Walturdaw pictures, of which a good selection is given, other items being contributed by Miss May Geraldine and the Great Kyoto. Mr. W. F. J. Hewitt is the manager.

Recently the Clerk to the Durham City magistrates (Mr. Jos. Mawson), addressing the Chairman, said that as there were no cases to be heard on that morning he had very great pleasure in presenting each of the magistrates with a pair of white gloves in honour of the occasion. The Chairman thought it a very happy state of affairs, and he was of opinion that the Palace Music Hall had had a lot to do with it.

The proprietor of the Palace, Durham, announces that owing to the County Magistrates' refusal to grant him a dramatic licence he has reluctantly been compelled to cancel a pantomime production and a dramatic sketch, both of which would have been very acceptable to the people of Durham, who are very indignant at the decision of the Bench.

Reference to our advertisement columns will reveal the fact that Poole's Theatre, Gloucester, which during the last three and a half years has been run on the twice-nightly plan, is now undergoing another, and important, change. Mr. Will Smithson, of the Empire, Barnsley, has just leased the house from Poole's Theatres, Ltd., and will now run it on up-to-date lines with opera, musical comedy, and drama. The new proprietor has secured the services of Mr. R. T. Rea as resident-manager.

Mr. Rea has occupied the position of acting-manager at the house since the early part of 1905, and has proved himself very popular during his managerial career. In addition to the Palace, he has during the last twelve months also managed, with great success, Poole's Imperial Pictures at the King's Hall, Gloucester, also belonging to Poole's Theatres, Ltd.

At the conclusion of Mr. Leo Dryden's performance last Saturday evening at the Hippodrome, Nottingham, a laurel crown, handed to him over the footlights, had a card attached bearing the inscription: "To Mr. Leo Dryden, as a mark of sincere appreciation from a few Nottingham admirers to an artist for Art's sake and to crown the success of False Gods." Mr. Dryden immediately placed the crown on his head whilst in the costume for his song-playlet False Gods, and it certainly made a most appropriate finish to the impersonation, which has so deeply interested the townsfolk during the week.

Messrs. Moss and Stoll, ever ready in the cause of charity, have consented to give the Holloway Empire free of all charge for a concert on Sunday, Feb. 20, in aid of the Mayor of Islington's Fund for the wives and children of the local unemployed. Mr. Bertie Ralland (the manager), has arranged a programme of exceptional merit, including as it does such artists as Mrs. Lewis Waller, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fisher-White, Mr. John L. Shine, Miss Violet Essex, Signor Porschini, Mr. Ivor Foster, Miss Hessie Reeve (a younger sister of the famous Ada), Mr. Leonard Ash, and others. The entire staff have volunteered their services for the occasion.

At the Berkshire Winter Assizes on Wednesday, in the claim of F. C. Gooch v. the Reading Palace (Theatre) of Varieties, Ltd., the plaintiff, Mr. Frederick Charles Gooch, an insurance broker, claimed £322, £222 for commission on a loan of £9,000 from the Scottish Metropolitan Life Assurance Co., arranged by him on behalf of the defendants at their request, as agreed, and £100 for damages and loss of commission on life policies for £10,000 arranged by the plaintiff for the defendants in connection with the loan. In the result the jury found for the plaintiff and assessed the damages at £50.

In recognition of the valuable services so often generously rendered by members of the music-hall profession on behalf of Sheffield hospitals and charities, the Sharrow Cycling Club organised a Bohemian smoking concert, which was held on Friday evening, Feb. 4, in the Cutlers' Hall, Sheffield, the proceeds being devoted to the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund and the Music-Hall Benevolent Institution. A most attractive programme was largely contributed to by principals from the Royal and Alexandra pantomimes, and artists from Barrasford's Hippodrome and Empire. There was a large company present, and the two charities named will benefit considerably. Much of the success is due to the untiring energy and organising ability of Mr. E. J. Woollen (president of the Sharrow Cycling Club), who so ably discharged his onerous duties as secretary.

Messrs. Fortune and Granville, musical, dramatic, and variety agents, are removing their offices next Wednesday to more convenient premises at 91, St. Martin's-lane.

Miss Gertie Gitana concludes to-night another highly-successful London season, and commences a two months' provincial tour at Birmingham, where she is an enormous favourite.

The date of the next Vaudeville Club Bohemian concert has been postponed from Feb. 20 to March 6, owing to the M.H.A.R.A. dinner and dance being fixed for the former date. Mr. Herbert Darnley is to be in the chair.

In our "Variety Gossip" columns last week we stated that Mr. Robert Fort was the pioneer of the two-houses-a-night system in London. Mr. L. B. Barnard writes to say that that system has been worked at Barnard's, Chatham, since 1850.

We regret to hear of the dastardly assault on Mr. Pete Murray, manager of Sadler's Wells, who is ill from the effects and was unable to appear on Monday to prosecute a man now under remand, from Clerkenwell, who had been turned out of the theatre.

Miss Florence Smithers, now appearing with such great success at the Lyceum Theatre, has been re-engaged by the same management for their next pantomime. Shortly after the present Aladdin engagement she reopens on the Moss-Stoll tour, in her comedy sketch, Our Mary Jane, and is booked by this firm till 1911.

While Miss Daisy James, the principal boy in Jack and the Beanstalk, was playing at Brixton Theatre on Thursday night, burglars raided her house in the Sudbourne-road and stole about £250 worth of jewellery. The thieves paid their visit while the maid was shopping. She was only absent a quarter of an hour.

With the conclusion this evening of the run of Mr. Brammall's Britannia pantomime Dick Whittington, Mr. George Rapley resumes his music hall engagements at the Granville and Royal Standard. In the part of Eliza the cook Mr. Rapley has added considerably to his reputation in what is termed "dame" parts, and his funny sayings have added much to the store of drollery that has been a feature of the Hoxton theatre's Christmas production.

Mr. Ben Woodger, secretary of the Music Hall Home, 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, desires to thank Messrs. Percy Ford, Ernest Ball, and Roy Cochrane for their kindness shown towards the inmates of the Music Hall Home. "The Era Appeal Fund" now amounts to over 2000 shillings. Send along your cards. The next committee meeting will be held on Thursday next at the Empire, Camberwell. Mr. F. H. Kohler, Joiners' Arms, Denmark Hill, has been added to the list of committee-men. Men's old clothes and boots would be very acceptable at all times.

Before Mr. G. W. Chapman, Official Receiver the statutory first meeting of creditors was held on Wednesday under the failure of Bernard M'Namee, music hall artist, professionally known as Barney Armstrong, and described as of Bridge road, Stratford, E. The debtor's present position was attributed to liability in connection with a promissory note, to the non-success of a sketch called The Sultan, which he jointly produced with other persons, and to illness, which had prevented him from obtaining engagements. The case remained in the Official Receiver's hands, the liabilities being returned at £321.

Mr. George Robey's claim to set aside a contract to perform at the Oxford and two other halls at a salary of £120 a week was ratified by Mr. Justice Joyce in the Chancery Division on Tuesday. His Lordship upheld the comedian's contention that the agreement in question was a personal one with the late Mr. Adney Payne, and that it became inoperative on that gentleman's death in 1907. The Oxford directors have given notice of appeal.

It was at the Oxford that Robey scored his first real success in town. He was secured by Mr. Charles Brighten, the first manager (1893) of the rebuilt Oxford, and for some time appeared at the house as the stock "deputy"—that word being hoisted at the side of the stage when he came on to sing "The Simple Pimple." Anonymity not being altogether in the young comedian's line, he soon went ahead at other halls besides the Oxford, and the name of the new humorist soon became a household word. He was fortunate in escaping the early struggles of such a gifted performer as Dan Leno.

Anent the proposed idea to furnish entertainment on theatrical lines upon the renowned Cunard liners, under the able superintendance of Mr. Chas. Frohman, it is worth while to note that Mr. Will Dalton (of Dalton's Agency) was in communication quite a long while ago with Mr. Alfred Booth, chairman of the Cunard Company, and had suggested to Mr. Booth, while travelling to Lisbon, the possibilities of ocean entertainment on a proper scale. Mr. Dalton has been for some time very desirous of effecting a contract between the Cunard Company and himself, his idea being an entertainment on the high-class plane of the Follies, with portable scenic arrangements.

On Monday last the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Bell, in Gray's Inn-road, was ransacked by burglars during their absence at a dinner party. The thieves were evidently disturbed, as a large quantity of plate and jewellery was left behind, although a fur motoring coat, valued at £40, the property of a guest, was stolen, together with the contents of Mr. Bell's dressing-case. Up to the present the police have been unable either to lay their hands on the stolen property or the marauders. In the meantime rehearsals for Ivan P. Gore's new historical playlet, Richelieu's Spy, which Mrs. Bell produces at the Surrey on the 21st, under the direction of her husband, are being pushed forward.

At the Palace Theatre on Thursday at a special matinée for the sufferers in the recent Paris floods the programme was long and varied. Most of the advertised artists appeared, and no time was wasted in long intervals. Among the distinguished artists who performed were Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh in Sixes and Sevens; Mr. H. B. Irving and Mr. Lewis Waller, both of whom recited; Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson and the Peshkoff Troupe, who danced; Messrs. C. H. Workman, Alfred Lester, and Harry Welchman, and Misses Amy Evans, Vesta Tilley, and Mary Grey, who sang.

The proceeds of the entertainment were announced by Sir Herbert Tree, who in a neat speech spoke of the noble manner in which the French people had borne their misfortune, and added that the matinée had realised about £350, which, even in these days of prosperous music-halls, was a considerable sum. Sheriff Slazenger, who represented the Lord Mayor, stated that he was glad to make his début on the stage in so magnificent a cause; while the Marquis de la Bégassière, on behalf of the French Ambassador, declared the French people's full appreciation of the brotherly assistance rendered by England.

The usual Sunday meeting of the Terriers' Association will not be held on the 20th inst., in consequence of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund Dinner and Ball.

The monthly meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held on Wednesday at the Crown Hotel, Charing Cross-road. The members present were Messrs. Pat Carey (in the chair), H. Jennings (trustee), T. B. Brydge, S. White, T. Carney, and A. E. Drew.

Mr. Pat Carey, the hon. treasurer of the Music Hall Sick Fund, has been presented by Mr. H. Jennings with a pair of cuff links which were once the property of a music hall comedian who flourished a good many years ago. These links are quite unique in their way, and will be valued by the popular Irish comedian as a relic of the time when the great Vance, Jolly John Nash, Arthur Lloyd, and George Leybourne were "stars" in the variety world. Mr. H. Jennings has been a trustee of the Music Hall Sick Fund for many years, and still takes a real interest in the oldest of the music hall provident societies.

The vogue of Chantecler, Edmond Rostand's wonderful farmyard play, is upon us, and the place of flowers that do not bloom in the spring as ladies' hat-trimmings will be usurped by the full plumage of the gay rooster. But cocks' combry will not be the only wear; for we are to have toques suggestive of the shy pheasant or the robust blackbird. There will be, too, a "Chantecler" fashion in songs, and W. F. Frame, the canny Scot, has started off with a new number, "Gobble, gobble." This will relate to Turkey, but its title is not to be regarded as a solution of the Cretan problem.

The gifted actress Miss Lois du Cane and her clever company will play The Russian Princess at two halls next week—namely, the Camden Hippodrome and the Royal Standard, Pimlico.

Miss Dorothy Grahame who made such a success about this time last year in La Danse des Apaches at the London Pavilion is producing on Monday next an entirely new and original act entitled Ma Fille, introducing the Dance of the Hooligans, assisted by Paul Armand and Alex Clifton.

At the 646th meeting of the Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A., held on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Fred Herbert in the chair, the Wheatsheaf Hotel, Burton-on-Trent, was appointed as the Association's agency in that town. The weekly financial statement showed thirty new members and a cash total of £41 10s. 6d.

Mr. Seymour Hicks, in a recent interview, has stated that he returns to the variety stage at the London Hippodrome in September with a new sketch of his own, entitled A Flat to Let, whilst at the Coliseum will be found Miss Maie Ash and Mr. Stanley Brett, brother of the unrestful Hicks, in a condensed version of Bluebell.

Mr. A. E. Mayne is about to open at the London halls with a strikingly original condensed version of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, already produced for copyright purposes. The change from Dr. Jekyll to Mr. Hyde and vice versa will be instantaneous, in full view of the audience, and without the aid of wig or make-up of any kind.

Miss Louisa Peach is meeting with a most enthusiastic reception this week at Mr. Raymond's Hall, Walthamstow, with her sketch of East Lynne, which has proved such a hit that she has decided to add it to her répertoire. Miss Peach is at Collins's next week with her American episode, The Settler's Daughter, again supported by Messrs. E. H. Dobell, Edmond Sydney, and Edwin Bennett.

Mr. James Willard, the author and producer of the playlet The Ace of Hearts, which is now nearing its thousandth representation, is shortly producing a smart comedy episode, entitled The Knight and the Garter (to say nothing of the lady). This will not by any means be Mr. Willard's first attempt at comedy in the variety theatres, for his farcical sketches Did He Deserve It? and The Little Wonder were each toured with gratifying success a few years ago, in London and the provinces.

Tom Edwards's latest adventure in New York is detailed with harrowing picturesqueness by a New York reporter. On Sunday night, Jan. 23, Tom left the stage door of the Orpheum carrying his props in a hold-all, and got out of a train in the Longacre-square Subway Station. Absorbed in thoughts of his business, he commenced almost unconsciously to imitate the cry of a smothered baby, which is to be a new feature of his act. It was a long wailing cry, and it was immediately located by a motherly-looking woman as coming from the hold-all he carried.

"Kidnapper!" she shouted, and a crowd immediately began to jostle Tom. The men seized him and smashed his hat, and the women grabbed his hold-all. When the dummies fell out they thought for a minute that they had the baby. But a friendly policeman enlightened them, and arrested the sorely-beset ventriloquist, who was charged with disorderly conduct at the night court. The magistrate took in the situation, and let Tom go after advising him to use more discretion in future.

The County Borough of Brighton invite tenders for the hire of a stand on the beach opposite Cannon-place; the Madeira Drive Bandstand and the two lawns immediately adjoining; and the Western Esplanade Bandstand and one of the lawns adjoining, for the purpose of giving entertainments during the summer season of 1910. Sealed tenders addressed to Hugo Talbot, Town Clerk, and endorsed "Tender for Hire of Stand on Beach" or "Tender for Hire of Bandstand," as the case may be, must be left before ten o'clock in the forenoon on Wednesday, Feb. 23.

The sensation created by the Kilties, Canada's representative concert band, some years ago in London will be well within the memory of our readers, who will have agreeable recollections of the harmonious effects produced by this smart combination of musicians. In the meantime, they have been round the world, and have just returned to London after a triumphal tour, embracing the United States, Canada, Hawaii, Ceylon, the Fiji Islands, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, Ceylon, India, Burmah, Arabia, and other remote parts of the globe, including also Italy, France, and Spain. During the last twenty months the company has covered some 60,000 miles, putting in over one hundred days at sea. They reached England on Saturday last on the P. and O. steamship India, and open at the Pavilion, Glasgow, on Monday, with the Moss and Stoll tour in prospective.

The performances of the celebrated orchestra will be in every respect equal to those for which they are so justly famed. Classical and popular music will be included in their programmes, and special features of the show will be provided by the Clan-Johnstone troupe, whose International dances are universally admired. Conspicuous, too, will be the giant drum-major, over 7ft. in height, who may be said to effect his masterpiece in Tschaikowsky's stirring overture 1812, in the performance of which the band excels. The manager for the Kilties, it should be added, is Mr. T. P. J. Power.

The Queen and Princess Victoria visited the Hippodrome on Tuesday afternoon.

Mme. Holt's Juvenile Follies, who have been scoring so heavily in Dundee and Aberdeen, are due at the Standard, Pimlico, on the 21st. Among the crowd is a wonderful Scotch boy whom Madame has christened the Pocket Lauder.

Mr. Ernest Shand, out with the rod in Scotland, writes:—"I killed a salmon of 20lb. on Saturday and have landed a quantity of kelts—salmon just off the spawning beds—one weighing 30lb. If it had been a clean fish it would have weighed nearer 40lb. The river is full of them. I must have landed and lost between twenty and thirty. I have contracted a cold which has stopped my fishing, but I hope to be out to-morrow (Wednesday). Weather here very cold."

Charles the First, the latest and most up-to-date Simian, is quite a philosophic ape. Even America has taken to wondering at his marvellous capacity and adaptiveness to human surroundings. He is specially engaged by Mr. Martin Beck for sixty-five consecutive weeks on the Orpheum Circuit, and is owned and educated by Charles Judge. The name of Judge should certainly go down to posterity as one to conjure with in animal and bird acts; and since bird drama is to be the rage in Paris, we ought to be quite prepared on this side of the Channel for a parroted playlet from the pets so cleverly trained by the Sisters Judge. Another Judge is manager for Juliette's educated sea lions—an act without parallel.

One of the most important persons in Chantecler, who figures modestly in the cast as the Jay, is M. Harry Geack, a "farmyard imitator," engaged from the Paris music halls. Upon him devolves the reproduction of the cries of birds and beasts in the play heard "off." During the prologue, when the hum of farmyard life resounds from behind the curtain, M. Geack, surrounded by "supers" with sabots, tin cans, and bells to represent human sounds, has to imitate successively the chirping of a bullfinch, the whistle of a blackbird, the cooing of a dove, the chatter of a jay, and the lowing of a cow. Mr. Walter Stanton and Mr. Harry Carsdale have been doing these imitations on the variety stage for many years, and there are others.

We much regret to record the death, at the early age of 34, of Mr. Reginald H. Foster, the manager of the Halifax Palace and Hippodrome. The late Mr. Foster came to Halifax to succeed Mr. Edward Harrison as manager of the Palace on Sep. 1, 1907. He remained here until the opening of the Huddersfield Palace on August 1, 1909, when he was commissioned by Mr. Macnaghten to take charge of the new theatre.

He remained in Huddersfield until a month or six weeks ago, and then returned to Halifax, where he was warmly welcomed back by his numerous friends. Mr. Foster's first engagement under Mr. Macnaghten was as manager of his theatre in Southampton. He was successively manager of the Broadway Theatre, Deptford, and of the Palace at Bradford, where he made a wide circle of friends prior to coming to Halifax.

The remains were interred in All Saints' Cemetery, Salterhebble, on Monday. A short service was conducted at the house by the Rev. R. H. Douglas, of the Halifax Parish Church. Miss Foster, the deceased gentleman's sister, was unable to attend, having been hastily summoned to return to Bournemouth to attend her mother, who has been taken seriously ill.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten travelled specially from Brighton to attend the funeral. He, together with Mr. E. P. Lawton (Sheffield), Mr. Edward Harrison (Bradford), Mr. B. Garside (Huddersfield), Mr. W. E. Berry (Bradford), and Mr. R. B. Horsfall (Halifax), represented the Macnaghten Houses. The whole of the staff of the Halifax Palace Theatre attended, and six men, attired in the smart uniforms provided by the Palace management, acted as bearers.

Beautiful floral tributes were sent, among others by the following:—Mrs. Foster and Miss Foster (mother and sister), Mr. Frank Macnaghten (London), Mr. E. P. Lawton (Sheffield Office Staff), Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harrison (Bradford), Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Berry and family (Bradford), the Old Boys and Patrons of Bradford Palace Theatre, Staffs Bradford Palace, Huddersfield, Blackburn, Warrington, Burnley, the Halifax Theatres, Messrs. E. and H. E. Eglin (Halifax), Mr. J. S. Taylor (London), "Only little pal Daisy," "Few friends, Halifax," Orchestra Palace Theatre (Halifax), "Jimmy," Mr. and Mrs. John Branham (Bradford), Mr. and Mrs. Stewart MacDonald (Stalybridge), Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Horsfall (Halifax), Boys of the Palace Theatre (Halifax), Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Swithenbank (Bradford), Mr. and Mrs. Winks (Grand Theatre, Halifax), Staff Shakespeare Hotel (Halifax), Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Scott (Halifax), Staff Theatre Royal (Halifax), Halifax Borough Club, "From the Three Floradoras" (Leeds), Mr. and Mrs. Barnett (Theatre Royal, Leeds), Mr. and Mrs. N. Hepworth (Leeds), Mr. and Mrs. Whitelock (Grand Theatre, Halifax), "Respected by all the Staff at the Grand Theatre, Halifax," Mr. Crawshaw, White Horse Hotel; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Greenwood, Shakespeare Hotel, Halifax; Messrs. O. and W. Binns (Halifax), "The Geraldos," Mr. and Mrs. Waly Lingard (Halifax), Miss Rene Douglas (Leeds), and "A few Bradford friends."

Mr. T. C. Rawes, proprietor of the Palace Music Hall, Durham, who already holds a music and dancing licence granted by the city justices, made an application recently for a full dramatic licence. "There were," said Mr. W. H. Oliver on his behalf, "certain little sketches performed on the music hall stage which came within the Dramatic Licence Act, and in order to avoid running any risk, he made application for the granting of that licence. Of course, it was his client's intention to continue to use that music hall as it was being used at present, but he desired to prevent any breach of the law." Mr. Pegge, surveyor to the city of Durham, said he had examined the Palace Music Hall belonging to Mr. Rawes, and had found it a well-adapted structural building. It had no fewer than five exits in case of emergency besides the entrances. The proprietor also gave evidence. After retiring, the Chairman said the Bench had unanimously agreed not to grant the licence.

The Terriers held a most successful Ladies' Concert on Sunday at the Three Stags Hotel, Kennington. Terrier Ben Obo was in the chair, supported by Terrier Jim Obo. The following artists appeared with their customary success:—Terrier T. C. Callaghan, "See-Saw Esau"; Terrier Ernest Ball, "Parson"; Mr. Edie Comet, "Family Record"; Terrier Ernest D'Almaine, "I'll live or die for you"; Terrier Chas. Stevens, "Trying to find a match"; Terrier Martin Henderson, concertina solo, "The Lost Chord," and some imitations; Mr. William Waite, "Bedouin Love Song"; Terrier Barney Hyams, "Always in jail" and "Seeing life"; Miss Hooper, "For ever" and "Always"; Mr. Harry Lynne, whistling solo; Mr. Dickson Curwen, dramatic selection selection from Dickens; Messrs. Sweeny and Lyle, mandolin duet; Mrs. Traynor, "You might shake hands"; Terrier Chas. Cornish, "Money" and "The preacher and the bear." Terrier Ernest Ball acted as musical director, and Terrier J. Chas. Moore was the efficient accompanist.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

It is evident from recent newspaper reports that Mr. Lloyd George, whilst holiday-making on the Riviera, had been been studying a new Budget—a Budget that pleases every party, whatever their opinion. It is stated that on Saturday last the right hon. gentleman lustily sang in the pine woods near Cannes golf links Mr. Wilkie Bard's song "She sells sea shells on the seashore," proving that a Budget of Messrs. Francis and Day's admired songs has been well digested by the eminent politician.

A SECOND delectable collection of types of British beauty, showing the features of some more of the ladies who have been singing Messrs. Francis and Day's ditties in pantomime, again beautifies the advertisement of the famous firm in this issue, and the names of the fair artists are given alphabetically as follows:—Misses Ethel Beech, Celeste Brandon, Susie Belmore, Lily Brammer, Marjorie Carpenter, Adela Crispin, Isabelle Dillon, Kitty Douglas, May De Rowse, Queenie Essex, Jane Eyre, Harriett Fawn, Ada Fawn, Iris Hoey, Dorothy Harris, Edith Haley, Gertrude Harrison, Connie Haydon, Violet Lloyd, Lily Lassah, Ouida Macdermott, Phyllis Monckman, Alice Pollard, Ella Retford, Lulu Russell, Nellie Rodney, Ada Secren, Jessie Templeton, Daisy Wood, and Ray Wallace.

AT the Alhambra Mr. Byng's splendid band have nightly revelled in playing Herbert E. Haines' "Frolic" two-step, and at the Globe Theatre Mr. H. R. Grimston's orchestra have finely executed, and will do so during the run of Arsène Lupin, the "Belle Jeunesse" valse of Paul Lecomte. Both pieces are published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

PERCY EDGAR and Henry E. Pether have again collaborated in a charming song entitled "Yesterday," which Messrs. Francis and Day are producing. The same writer's "Shadowland" is enjoying a record sale.

A SONG from the pens of Charles Wilmott and Herman E. Darewski is always welcome, and their new number, "When you are gone," will commend itself to song lovers. It is in the press, Messrs. Francis and Day being the publishers.

MR. HARRY WOOD, famed throughout Great Britain as one of the pillars of Douglas, I.O.M., has published with Mr. David Day's firm a characteristic composition entitled "Le Carnival des Patineurs."

MISS GERTIE GITANA'S exquisite new ballad "Sweet Caroline," with which she has been evoking the greatest applause at all her engagements, has been secured for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. It is by Harry Staunton, Will E. Haines, and Donovan Meher. The trio are also responsible for Miss Hilda Jacobsen's "Cairo," which the same house are issuing.

THE new song entitled "I want you always" which is being sung in The Earl and the Girl, is by Bert Beswick and Pierre de Reeder. Messrs. Francis and Day are bringing it out shortly.

IT is good hearing for dancers that Mr. Arthur Morris has decided to place his new "Chiming" veleta on the market. Messrs. Francis and Day have it in the prees.

AMONG the multitudinous new items being brought out by Messrs. Francis and Day there may be mentioned "This is no place for a sailor" (sung by Arthur Lennard), by J. P. Harrington and O. Powell; "By the Sea" (the Brothers Carr), by Tom Mellor and Harry Gifford; "Wouldn't the world be brighter?" (Miss Flo Banks), by Harry Wenburn; "Ring-a-ding—puff-puff" (Miss Millie Payne), by Harry Castling; "Up, Guards, and at 'em!" by Weston, Barnes, and M. Scott; "I shall blow my whistle!" (Harry Knox), by Charles Collins and F. Murray; "Miss O'Hara in her emerald tiara," by Weston, Barnes, and M. Scott; "We did enjoy ourselves in London," by J. P. Harrington, E. W. Rogers, and John Neat; "Rosy, she's the girl for me" (Alec Hurley), by Fred Godfrey and Orlando Powell; "Our little country cousin," by E. W. Rogers and John Neat; and "It's all for the best, Polly, darling," by Tom Mellor, Chas. Collins, and Harry Gifford.

EDGAR BATEMAN, who "pleads guilty to turning the beam at fifty entire summers on Monday next," having been born on Feb. 14, 1860, has been discovered of late making abstruse calculations in a vain endeavour to discover how far the Old Age Pension will go, taking into consideration the excursion fares to the Essex, Kentish, and Sussex coasts, and the probable current prices of bait for sea-fishing in 1930. He has just published with Messrs. Francis and Day a humorous song entitled "——And just then he fell out of bed!" in which ditty he has had the assistance of Henry F. Greenfield, who composed the melody to the twain's enormously successful sarcastic husband-and-wife duet "Do you remember?—How can I forget!" Every concert entertainer of note will be on the look-out for the new song, which gives great scope to show off a comedian's ability, it being in the same category as that fine number which Mr. George Bastow made popular some years since, and which was entitled "The story of a tin-tack."

THE New York Press has of late devoted much space to Mr. George Lashwood, his songs, and his great success in that city and elsewhere, and the following is an example of the kind of stuff that in some sheets passes current as authentic information:—"Mr. Lashwood has for many years been renowned as the man who dictates the styles and tells the King what to wear. Every morning at 8.44 King Edward 'phones the dressy person—'Aw, that you, George? I say, old chap, what should I wear to-day, y'know? This is Ed.' Mr. Lashwood then looks out of the window, sizes up the weather, and makes response—'Ullo Ed, old top! Well, now it's a bit grayish in the sky, d'ye see? Put on a turndown collar, a red tie with green stripes, y'know, a blue shirt with yellow dots, purple cuffs, silk underwear with golf stockings, d'ye see, werry faint gray trousers with bells on the bottoms, a' course, patent leathers with di'mond buttons, a white weskit with Indian beadwork on the blooming pockets, a red and black checked frock coat, a silk topper, y'know, and a short, green plaid topcoat. Oh, yes—light blue gloves and a malacca cane. Dog? Oh, any colour of dog, y'know, as long as he isn't a Chinese poodle—they're all out of fashion. Got that correct, Ed? Hallri'—see you lyter.'" "Bayard," of our well-known contemporary the Manchester Sunday Chronicle, drily remarks: "The American nation is long-suffering, but it likes this sort of thing."

THAT well-known writer for the variety stage Percy Edgar, whose songs have won for him a great reputation among music-loving members of the public, as also with foremost artists and publishers, is now installed at No. 18, Hart-street, New Oxford-street, W.C., hard by the Vienna Café, where, under the style and title of Percy Edgar and Co., he will cater for the wants of those requiring up-to-date material. The new song-writing bureau is on the ground floor, and the offices are sumptuously decorated and furnished, and replete with every convenience. During the week 13162 Central has been continuously rung up by numerous old clients and by confrères wishing Mr. Edgar the success he deserves in his venture.

THE TIVOLI.

Mrs. Lewis Waller, who, like a large number of prominent actresses, has deserted the theatres for the music halls, presented a novelty in the way of sketches at the Tivoli on Monday. It has been taken from L'Inconnue, the French farce, by MM. Paul Gavault and George Berr, produced at the Palais Royal on Dec. 18, 1901. The adapter's name is not given, but the English title is

"LOST, STOLEN, OR STRAYED."

Philip .....MR. GEOFFREY SAVILE
Commissioner of Police .....MR. LIONEL SCOTT
The Doctor.....MR. LESLIE BENNETT
Blithers .....MR. LEONARD ROBSON
Claire.....MISS LILLIAN MATHER
The Lady .....MRS. LEWIS WALLER

It is an unkind fate that pursues Philip, who is "discovered" in the bedroom of his bachelor flat at Whitehall Court. He is to be married that very day to one of the most charming girls in the world, and is toileting himself for the all-important ceremony. As he is putting the finishing touches, a noise outside attracts his attention, and from the bedroom window he witnesses a motor-car accident. He rushes forth, and, with the assistance of Blithers, the valet, helps to carry the unconscious form of a lady into the apartment. On coming to herself the stranger gazes about in a dazed state; the shock to her system has been so great that her memory has entirely deserted her, and her mind is a blank. The advice of the doctor is that the only possible cure for the unfortunate result of her nerve-wracking experience is to go to bed at once. She does so, behind a screen. Of course, Philip's bed is requisitioned, and the anxious and expectant bridegroom's state of mind may be better imagined than described when he is visited by the disappointed bride, who comes to see for herself whether Philip is going to be punctual. Naturally the bride's curiosity is aroused by the sight of articles of lady's attire. In a bachelor's flat, too! The bridegroom has to explain; but finis is put to his taradiddles by the strange lady being "discovered." The mention of "police" touches a responsive chord in her waking memory. Seizing the telephone receiver at the bedside, she rings up Scotland Yard, and summons her spouse, who is a bit unreasonable, but the evidence of the doctor puts everything right, and the curtain falls upon the departure of the pair for the wedding. Mrs. Lewis Waller plays the highly-strung lady with considerable force and spirit, but the part is not great. Mr. Leonard Robson as Blithers, the bridegroom's valet, is humorously effective; Miss Lillian Mather looks extremely well, and acts sympathetically as the bride; and Mr. Geoffrey Savile's Philip and Mr. Leslie Bennett's doctor are adequate performances. Among other new turns in the Tivoli programme this week are those of Mr. James Stewart, from the West-End. One remembers Peggy at the Duke of York's as the Slavey in The Gay Parisienne, and though this is just a few years ago, time seems to have had no other than a mellowing effect on the comedienne's talent. As a hard-working partner of a husband who goes in for politics and beer Miss Pryde raps out at the sterner sex in such a way as to renew her popularity in the most unmistakable manner.

Miss Millie Payne has the house laughing in her quaint offerings "Ringading" and "The birds were singing," her get-up in the caricatures so admirably drawn by the late Phil May being exceedingly droll. Mr. Dunville's policeman is as funny as ever; and George Formby as a reckless dog determined to spend at least a couple of shillings on a night-out cuts a quaint figure. Cris Van Bern's versatility as a conjurer, patterer, and banjoist is considerable; and Mr. Bert Coote supplies some genuine fun by his dude impersonation in the successful farcelet A Lamb on Wall Street. The Frasettis, in a refined musical turn; the Comedy Meisters, who are very much like the Gotham Quartet; Beatrice Lindley at the piano; and Poole and Maguire also add to the gaiety and variety of the bill presented by Mr. Joseph Wilson. Ruffell's Bioscope concludes.

MISS CLAIRE ROMAINE, who sailed to America last Saturday, under contract with Mr. Percy Williams, will make the piece de résistance of this, her fourth season in the States, a new song, in which she will assume the character of a girl of the demurest type, entitled "She always had her hymn-book in her hand," by John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell. This song, it is confidently believed, will create a veritable furore in New York. She also has a boy's good song, from the same pens, entitled "Don't mind me," which has every chance of also proving a hit.

"THE WHITE FEATHER."

Sketch, in One Scene, Produced at the Canterbury Theatre of Varieties, on Monday, Feb. 7.

Pride of regiment is the prevailing element in the above little sketch, which is well written and has the merit of being intensely dramatic. If the action lags somewhat at the beginning, it is amply compensated by a thrilling ending which arises quite naturally out of the story. It is a simple tale of an old Scottish pensioner, who is looking forward eagerly to the return from South Africa on the morrow of the Seaforth Highlanders, in which regiment his son David is a private. He has read of the gallant doings of the Seaforths among the Matabele, and his heart swells with pride at the thought of his son's return covered with glory—so different from his other son Alec, who aspires to be a church missionary and devotes all his time to book-reading. David returns earlier than was expected, for when the old man and his wife have retired to rest, and Alec is applying himself to his studies, there steals into the room a ragged figure with shame-faced countenance. It is David, who confesses to Alec that he is a deserter. At the call to arms out in South Africa he had shown the "white feather," and run away, working his passage back to Scotland. Alec, fearful of the shock that the news would give to the old couple, forces upon the refugee a few pounds he had saved, and bids him depart for Canada, carefully concealing the arrival of his brother from his parents. When the Seaforths duly appear a sergeant arrives and informs the veteran that when the roll was called after action David was found to be missing, but hints that the savages had carried off the body, thus leaving the old man in ignorance of his son's cowardice.

Presented by Messrs. Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company, the playlet had effective representation. A finished piece of dramatic work was submitted by that experienced actor Mr. Frank Lister, who played both the parts of old Donald Ferguson and his recreant son, a remarkable contrast being obtained between the excited old warrior who puts on his red coat in honour of his boy's return and the downcast David torn with remorse. Mr. Lister had excellent support, and the sketch was well staged, though we think it would be worth while to get a little more realistic daybreak effect. It is a production that ought to be much in demand.

RICHMOND HIPPODROME.

A season of pantomime here is succeeded by the usual variety bill. This week the programme is quite excellent, and boasts many turns that readily win recognition and approval. As a smart comedienne Sylvia Phillips is bright and vivacious, singing with refreshing naïveté "I like you better than anyone." Sylvia wears gowns that win the admiration of the fair sex in front. Distinctly clever are the feats of Franco's wonderful midget conjurers. With all the assurance of old hands these clever Lilliputians take the stage and astound by their remarkable manipulation. Franco's Midgets are delightful.

Watch the Chalk! is a sketch recalling Domestic Economy of long ago. It is the familiar story of the hen-pecked husband and the strong-minded female who wields her power with a strong hand. There is nothing menial that the luckless Brutus is not compelled to do from boot cleaning to scouring the bedrooms. It is during his wife's absence that the father of the crushed one turns up. Taking in the situation at a glance, he recommends Brutus to adopt strong measures. The plot is that the husband shall watch a chalk mark on the black-board and at each new stroke he shall assert his own independence and demonstrate that his wife's reign of terror is at an end. When the lady returns Brutus puts his plans into execution with complete success. The shrew is effectually subdued, and the husband acknowledged as lord and master.

There is no question about the training of Haley's Juveniles. Their energy, coupled with talent, is remarkable. In the course of the carnival there is little these precocious youngsters fail to do well, and they are an object-lesson in juvenile training. Mr. George Bendon, on the night of our visit, deputised satisfactorily with a song dealing with "messenger boys," and was favourably received. It was early demonstrated that what graceful La Belle Linda cannot do in the way of trick cycling isn't worth doing. Many of the feats performed are exceptionally clever, and she is one of the successes of the evening. Linda's costume is distinctly charming. The inevitable coon finds an admirable exponent in Herbert La Martine, a dandy coon and dancer of the approved type. As a dancer he gets in some wonderful steps and may be complimented on a singularly fine performance.

The Last Straw, billed as a tragic, emotional play, is from the pen of the Rev. E. S. Edwards, and marks one step more in the alliance of Church and stage. As it has already been noticed fully in our columns, we need only refer briefly to the wonderful acting of Mr. Cecil Gray as the maniac, and to the excellent support given by Mr. Ed. Warden as a kindly cleric, and by Miss Dora Eastlake, who makes the most of her limited opportunities. The Last Straw is capitally staged. The Bioscope, with views of Canadian "logging," is as instructive as ever.

MESSRS. WEEKES AND CO., of 14, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W., have published two very pleasing songs by M. Pierre Mellarde, organist of Halesworth Church, Suffolk. "Wake not, but hear me, love," is a slumber song, with words from Ben Hur by Lew Wallace. The accompaniment is written with musicianly skill, and the melody well carries out the sentiment expressed in the verses. M. Mellarde's second song is composed to the famous lines of Thomas Campbell "Ye Mariners of England," and the stirring music does justice to the fine subject. A baritone could hardly find a more effective song.

A. J. MILLS AND BENNETT SCOTT, the popular song-writers, whose songs "Ship Ahoy!" "Charlie Brown," and "Sea, sea, sea" are having such a record success in both London and provincial pantomimes, are busy writing a series of special numbers for the coming season. These will be issued in due course by the Star Music Co. In reply to numberless enquiries, Messrs. Mills and Scott regret it is impossible to grant permissions for "Ship Ahoy!" to be sung at music halls.

ARTISTS returning to the "halls" will find a selection of real big winners ready for them at the Star Music Co.'s offices, where all are welcome. Alfresco artists are also advised to make early application for this firm's new numbers.

MISS FLORA CROMER wishes it to be known that her successful song "I can picture Polly hanging up the holly" (by Rule and Pelham) is not a free song, and must not be sung at music halls. Permissions for pantomime will, however, still be granted by the publishers, the Star Music Co.

MISS MAUD ESMOND, the "Charlie Brown" Girl, has been engaged to play principal boy in a special production of Red Riding Hood at the Brixton Theatre, opening Monday next, and will feature her song "I've been out with Charlie Brown," also "I can picture Polly" and "Sea, sea, sea," all published by the Star Music Co. This pantomime will have several other numbers of the same firm.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Feldman's excellent catalogue is constantly having added to it the best and brightest compositions of our leading English authors and composers; Messrs. Feldman also have the exclusive rights of reproducing in this country the cream of the Jerome H. Remick, Chas. K. Harris, and Kerry Mills' catalogues. It may safely be asserted that songs to suit any and every style of professional singer may be readily found at 2 and 3, Arthur-street.

One of the first big "finds" of the Remick catalogue which Feldman and Co. are now placing on the market is the irresistibly "catchy" Irish cowboy song, "Santa Fé," by those famous writers, Williams and Van Alstyne. Many alleged cowboy songs have crossed the Atlantic ere now, but it may truthfully be averred that none of these have had the distinctive excellence or fidelity to the type of human nature depicted in the lines that is so marked a characteristic of "Santa Fé." This is undoubtedly one of this season's predestined "winners." Miss Madge O'Neill, who has made so great a hit in the Elephant and Castle pantomime with "Molly O'Morgan," will, on Monday week, open at the Surrey Theatre with the last-mentioned song, in addition to a special production, in character, of "Santa Fé."

From the same pen that gave the world that "record seller" in popular ballads, "Somewhere," comes an equally beautiful song of the emotions, entitled "I'm longing for one sight of you"; indeed, many who have been privileged to hear this new number doubt whether Mr. Chas. K. Harris has not even eclipsed his former colossal success, if such a thing be possible, in this new offering of his tuneful muse. Some developments will shortly occur in this song. That delightful singer, Miss Lil Hawthorne, will, in a week's time, feature yet another Feldman number, from the other side, "I wonder who's kissing her now?" by Hough, Adams, and Howard, three of America's foremost writers, a special additional verse to which has been written for Miss Hawthorne by John P. Harrington.

There is yet another Feldman ballad on the market just now, also from Chas. K. Harris's pen, entitled "I'm trying so hard to forget you," and ballad singers should certainly avail themselves of the golden opportunity held out to them of acquiring so strong an addition to their répertoires, entirely free of fee. The sentiment of the song is intensely human, and will certainly appeal to all audiences, cultured and middle-class alike. What may be termed the "cosmopolitan" character of Mr. Harris's ballads undoubtedly constitutes one of their chief charms.

Mr. Gordon Stretton, that ideal impersonator of the idiosyncrasies of the "coon," will, on Monday next, at the Queen's, Poplar, present, in a special appropriate stage setting, Messrs. John P. Harrington and Fred Godfrey's number, "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" This is one of Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.'s recent acquisitions, and a charmingly naïve love story is wedded to a simply irresistible melody.

The attention of ballad singers should be specially directed to two charming ballads, published by Feldman and Co., which have already won great success wherever and whenever they have been sung in public. These are entitled "Only," by those famous writers, Messrs. Clifton Bingham and Edward St. Quentin, and "Tell me if ever you forget?" by Gilbert Adair and Horace Milton, and are far above the ordinary in respect to both words and music.

In addition to the scores of artists whose success with Feldman's great song "Somewhere" has already been recorded in these columns, specially deserving of mention is Miss Florence Dudley, for her delightful rendering of this song at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, the same remark anent the same song applying to Miss Ethel Edwardes, at the Grand Theatre, Newcastle, and Miss Violet Romaine, at the Theatre Royal, Bury, with each of whom "Somewhere" is veritably going better than ever.

Mr. Charles Whittle, having given Mr. Jack Smiles permission to sing his fine comedy song "Fish sauce," by Charles Collins and Alfred Davies, this rapidly-rising comedian will at an early date sing this new Feldman song at all his engagements, and fully expects to score a complete and sterling success with same, as the words are screamingly funny, and the music quite in keeping with the theme of the lyric.

Little Ivy Francis is nightly scoring one of the biggest successes of Mr. J. Gar Kiddie's pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Mansfield, this week, with "Sweet little sunbonnet lady," one of Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.'s publications, and is the recipient of many encores ere her delighted auditors allow her to depart.

That popular comedian, Mr. Billy Merson, is one of the latest well-known artists to rally to the Feldman standard, and his fine new comedy song, "They can't find Kelly!" sung by Mooney and Holbein, has been accepted for early publication by the Arthur-street firm, and certainly promises to be one of the principal comedy numbers of the year, being redolent of wit of the approved Merson quality. Arrangements have been made for the early production of this number by the most popular of chorus singers, Miss Florrie Forde, so in such good hands the possibilities of the song's success is assured.

Messrs. Feldman and Co. are just issuing one of the most delightful ballads that Miss Clare Kummer has ever written and composed, entitled "I wonder if it's true?" The talented pen that gave the world "Egypt" and other ear-arresting melodies, was never more profitably employed than in the present instance, for both words and melody of this new composition are a sheer delight, and Messrs. Feldman are to be felicitated on the possession of so great a potential winner. Miss Mabel Green, whose rendering of "Somewhere" is a thing to be remembered, is singing this latest Feldman gem.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell have during the past week supplied Miss Ray Wallace with two specially-written songs to sing in her act at the London Pavilion and other halls, entitled "Star Duets" and "The Poetry of Motion." The same author and composer have also supplied Miss Marguerite Broadfoote with a new comedy number, "Whew! It's windy!" with which she will open at the Tivoli in March, and have been specially commissioned by the latter lady to write her entire music-hall répertoire.

Mr. John P. Harrington has received a special commission from Mr. James M. Glover to supply the libretto and lyrics of a miniature comic opera, to which the talented chef d'orchestre of Drury Lane Theatre will himself compose the music, for early exploitation, and is now hard at work on the scenario, &c.

During the current week at the Islington Empire Miss Aimee Roberts has been achieving a truly phenomenal success with Feldman and Co.'s successful song "Somewhere," and plaudits loud and long have been her reward; while, at the City Varieties, Leeds, in Mr. J. Walter's pantomime Robinson Crusoe, Eugene, the girl baritone, has also scored heavily with the same number.

BERT FELDMAN IN PANTOMIME-LAND.

Mr. Bert Feldman has returned from his recent four or five weeks' tour through the principal cities where King Pantomime still holds sway, and the popular publisher is as buoyant and enthusiastic as ever.

Mr. Feldman certainly covered some ground in his travels. He started direct from London to Edinburgh, where, at both the King's Theatre and Theatre Royal the songs "Somewhere," "Seaside," and a host of others are the principal vocal offerings, and at both houses the public reception accorded to all his firm's songs certainly left nothing to be desired. This has undoubtedly been the biggest year of success all along the line that his firm has ever experienced, and the Scots, who are nothing if not "canny" where words and music are concerned, whole-heartedly took the firm's numbers to their bosoms and applauded them to the echo.

From Edinburgh he journeyed to Glasgow, Leith, and Paisley. Everywhere, in every theatre in Scotland, the Feldman catalogue occupied pride of place, both in the affections of the producers and artists, as well as in the suffrages of the public.

Bidding "bonnie Scotland" a regretful adieu, he visited, in turn, Newcastle, Sunderland, Hull, Leeds, Bradford, Bolton, Manchester, Liverpool, Sheffield, and Birmingham, and in all these important cities and towns the same flattering tale of Feldman song success was told. Six of the firm's songs, which are literally everywhere, in addition to a host of others of lesser note, are "Somewhere," "I do like to be beside the seaside," "Molly O'Morgan," "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," "Pretty little girl from nowhere," and "I must go home to-night." These songs successfully hold their own against any other pantomime numbers of the present season.

Mr. Feldman has found a successor to "Somewhere," and from the same pen too, that of Mr. Chas. K. Harris. The intensely human sentiment of the lines is accentuated by the strikingly-beautiful waltz-time air to which it is wedded. "After the ball," with which the same author-composer ravished the ears of the world some twenty years ago, could not boast a finer melody than this latest chef d'œuvre of the gifted American. Mr. Feldman is certain that this will be the present season's biggest "hit" of a sentimental character, and all who have heard the song share his opinion.

Another song of a totally different character to which he is pinning his faith this year is an Irish cowboy song, by those famous American writers Williams and Van Alstyne, entitled "Santa Fe." This song is full of vim and "go," and the chorus is simply irresistible. For singers who like a breezy, typical lilt, full of the very breath of the spreading sierras, "Santa Fe" is an ideal number, and Mr. Feldman will be very disappointed indeed if this chorus is not speedily the property of the "man in the street." It is a noteworthy fact that the two writers themselves sang this song recently at the Colonial Theatre, New York, with such success that they were immediately booked for a solid season. Mr. Feldman sincerely hopes that some of our English singers may sing "Santa Fe" with similar satisfactory results.

MR. BERT FELDMAN.

Another clever song that America has given us is entitled "I wonder who's kissing her now?" This song, which is written and composed by three of America's leading writers—Hough, Adams, and Howard—is the rage of America, where it is sung in the musical comedy The Prince of To-night, and in Mr. Feldman's estimation stands a great chance of duplicating that success in this country when it gets round a little. With the assistance of the best writers of this country and the exclusive rights of reproducing the catalogues of Messrs. Jerome H. Remick, Chas. K. Harris, and Kerry Mills, Mr. Feldman has no fear but that he will even transcend the great successes his firm has hitherto won, and he hopes in a few days to throw several bombs into the vaudeville camp. His first thoughts will be of the artists who had supported him this year with such loyalty, and they may rest assured of finding just "it" in the song line among the many songs contained in the extensive new catalogue of B. Feldman and Co.

MAIDIE SCOTT'S UNDERSTUDY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In your "Variety Gossip" of Feb. 5 you say that Little Gladys Nelson has deputised three times for Miss Maidie Scott in The House that Jack Built at the Broadway, New Cross. This is quite wrong. Miss Nelson sang Miss Scott's "Teddy Bear" song when she was off, but that is all.

Miss Maidie Scott's part of Jill was very successfully played at very short notice by Miss Millie Gray, who will shortly be seen appearing on the halls.

Miss Gray, I may mention, is a sister of Miss Marie Santoi.—Yours faithfully,

R. G. STOTT.

15, Windsor Road,
Holloway, N., Feb. 7.

Miss Mary Mayfren's company, in a realistic sketch, entitled The Yellow Fang, tops the bill at the Royalty Theatre, Chester. Harry Mackenzie is a clever Scotch comedian and dancer; the Reays, marvellous silver-chain acrobats; and Sara Rosebury is a smart Lancashire dialect comedienne. Messrs. Gosling and Merrall's troupe of Australian Bush Boys present a typical camp-life scena; James Curwell, the Liverpool newsboy pianist, is a noteworthy turn; Mollie Watson, a good vocal comedienne, and Hal Bert, an original comedian, complete a varied programme.

THE ALHAMBRA.

Into the programme at the older Leicester-square house was introduced on Monday a dramatic episode entitled—

"SISTERS."

Marie .....Miss Esmé Beringer
Lisa .....Miss Vera Beringer

It should surely be quite possible to so revise and alter this powerful little piece as to make it acceptable, especially with such an excellent swordswoman as Miss Esmé Beringer ready with riposte. It will be remembered how cleverly this capable actress played a few years ago in a "fencing" piece at the Palace Theatre. The "sisters" Marie and Lisa, two Servian girls, after a separation of fifteen years, meet under the strangest circumstances. Lisa, the wife of a popular leader who has suffered for "the cause," has been entrusted with a mission of vengeance. She has to kill Count Stanislaus, chief of the police, the official who, it is notorious, knows no mercy. To carry out her desperate purpose Lisa forcibly enters the house of Stanislaus, carrying with her the bomb that is to be hurled at him from an upper window as he approaches the house. Lisa is followed by Marie, and the two recognise each other. Great is the contrast between the two; but Lisa, though dejected-looking and shabby, looks with scorn on the mondaine in silken attire. Marie does not attempt to conceal the fact that she is the mistress of the tyrant Stanislaus, and learns with horror of the purpose of Lisa, who is proud of her mission and of the husband whose martyrdom in the cause of freedom gives a tone of defiance to her utterance. Marie, in a state of alarm, alternately threatens and cajoles, but to no purpose. Lisa is not to be moved from her purpose. Passionate entreaty being of no avail, Marie, in despair, suddenly seizes a sword hanging on the wall and sets upon Lisa, who as speedily arms herself. Marie exerts all her power of attack, but in vain. The bomb is thrown, and with the explosion the curtain falls. Miss Esmé Beringer as Marie acts strenuously and energetically, and fences in very spirited style. Miss Vera Beringer is agreeably effective as Lisa.

Good singing has always been a feature of the variety programme at the Alhambra, and Miss Violet Essex, a new comer, quite sustains the high reputation of the house by her rendering of Charles Marshall's "I hear you calling." De Bière, who appeared some years since at the Tivoli, has made considerable advance as a conjurer, and in smartness and humorous deception quite holds his own. There is plenty of humour in the boxing show between the diminutive Marco Twins, who also do some clever acrobatism. The De Toma Troupe and Ridiculous Recco also add to the attractions of the bill, which is still blessed with the topical divertissement On the Heath and the Imperial ballet Our Flag.

WILLESDEN HIPPODROME.

The chief attraction at Mr. Walter Gibbons's fine hall here this week is Kate Carney's company in a new and original production, by Paul Pelham and Herbert Rule, entitled

"THE FUN OF THE FAIR.

Carmen .....Miss Kate Carney
The Lawyer .....Mr. Willie Phillips
Hagar .....Mr. Geo. H. Marriott
The Dude .....Mr. Albert Mason
Jim .....Mr. Fred Malcolm
The Showman .....Mr. Percy Moran

The sketch is exceedingly well mounted, and those taking part submit a faithful representation of the typical gipsies as known to us. The story revolves round a foundling named Carmen, who was brought up by the gipsies, eventually becoming queen of the tribe. A lawyer discovering Carmen to be heiress to a large fortune, tries to entice her from the tribe, but the attachment to her adopted people is so strong that no inducement would tempt her to leave them. This resolution is actively backed up by the male members of the tribe, who give the lawyer and his companion a rough five minutes. Miss Carney, in her usual artistic manner, is a great success as the Gipsy Queen, and her song "The Romany" is a striking number, to which she does complete justice dramatically and vocally, and special mention must also be made of the performance of Mr. Willie Phillips as the Lawyer. There is a great deal of fun in the playlet, and several tuneful numbers.

Billie Merson, an artist who has been rapidly coming to the front recently, is a great success with a humorous military medley "My soldier boy"; Bonnie Goodwin and her piccaninnies, in a dance speciality, gain a big reception; Gus Harris, Jewish delineator, is singing his great success, "The Synagogue"; Pat Rafferty keeps the audience in merry mood with his two numbers "The man who had one eye" and "The jolly old Irish pensioner"; Gala and Norris, in an original scene, introduce some good singing and dancing, finishing with an amusing skit on the troubles of rinking novices; Jean Morelle is responsible for clever tricks interspersed with some excellent playing on the saxophone; Fred Evans presents most successfully his diverting protean comedy Dreaming, which introduces humorous yet faithful impersonations of Charles Dickens's characters, Fagin and Bill Sikes; and the Warringtons, in an equilibristic act, are extremely neat and clever.

Charles Carr is singing "I wish I had a girl," concluding with a well-executed step-dance; Rosie Lee gives imitations of Victoria Monks and Marie Lloyd and dances; and Ruffell's Bioscope, projecting a humorous film entitled Why Jones Could Not Sleep, concludes. The front of the house is still controlled by Mr. Lawrence F. Maloney, assisted by Mr. Durham, and Mr. Geo. R. Hatley's orchestra continues to render valuable assistance.

A COINCIDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have read with lively interest a story entitled "The Silence of His Excellency," contributed by Mr. William Le Queux to the February number of Nash's Magazine, and have been much impressed by the resemblance it bears to my one-act drama Heard In Camera, which Mr. Eric Mayne is now presenting at various London music halls. Mr. Le Queux favours Sofia and a "happy ending," while I have been content with St. Petersburg and a tragic "curtain," but there the dissimilarity finishes. In both cases (a) the action passes in the private cabinet of the Prefect of Police; (b) the story opens in the same manner; (c) the Prefect's visitor is admitted with the same precaution; (d) the Prefect interrogates her for the same purpose; (e) he learns the secret of her early liaison by the same accident; and (f) he endeavours to extort from her the same evidence by precisely the same threat and the same trick. In fact, the characters and plot are the same in "The Silence of His Excellency" as in Heard In Camera, the entire scene is conducted in the same manner, and substantial portions of the dialogue in my play might have been lifted bodily from Mr. Le Queux's story. In the circumstances, I trust you will permit me to point out that while the story appears in a February magazine, the play was produced at the Holborn Empire on Dec. 20 of last year, and a notice appeared in The Era of the 24th of that month.—Yours faithfully,

GRAHAM HILL.

FUNERAL OF MR. BARRASFORD.

The great esteem in which the late Mr. Thomas Barrasford was held by the general public, no less than by the members of the theatrical profession, was fully evidenced on Saturday afternoon last, when his mortal remains were consigned to their final resting place in the Extra Mural Cemetery, Brighton. A crowd of several hundred people assembled in Middle-street when the coffin was borne out of the deceased's residence adjoining the Hippodrome. The coffin, which was of oak, bore the inscription "Thomas Barrasford, died 1st February, 1910, aged 50 years." Accompanying the coffin was a beautiful cross of arum lilies and heliotrope orchids, bearing a card on which was written "Poor Tom; God rest your soul in peace. From his loving and devoted wife, Maud Barrasford." Another floral tribute bore the inscription "To dear Daddy, from his little boys Patsy and Freddy. Rest in peace."

The chief mourners were Mrs. Maud Barrasford (widow), Patsy and Freddy (sons), Mr. T. Barrasford (son, of Keighley), Mr. Valoni (the well-known juggler) and his wife. The hearse was completely covered with floral tributes, and a second hearse and three carriages were also laden with choice flowers.

In addition to the wreaths sent from Mr. Barrasford's theatres in England and from the various federations and societies, some came from the Continent. Prominent among them was a large basket of bead-work flowers, with an attached purple ribbon bearing the following inscription in gold letters, "A notre regretté patron, Alhambra Stage Staff, Paris." Other wreaths were from the "Orchestre, Alhambra, Paris," "Le personnel de Barrasford's Alhambra de Paris," and another inscription read "Die Internationale Artisen-Loge, Berlin; Unserem All vehrten Directors, Thomas Barrasford."

On the cortège reaching the chapel Mr. Arthur W. Briggs, the pianist at the Court Theatre, Brighton, played an extempore voluntary on the organ. The service was conducted by the Rev. G. F. Bond, and its impressiveness was enhanced by Mr. Osland Denner's singing of Mendelssohn's air, "O Rest in the Lord." As the coffin was being borne to the grave Mr. Briggs played Handel's Dead March in Saul.

Among the mourners at the grave were: Mr. Arthur Aldridge, Mr. W. Boardman (Manager, Newcastle-upon-Tyne), Mr. Frank Bast, Mr. B. J. Brown (Manager, Brighton), Mr. J. Brooks (Stage Manager, Alhambra, Paris), Mr. Bauer (Anger & Bauer, variety agents), Mr. Whit Cunliffe, Mr. C. B. Cochrane, Mr. Harry Clark (Stage Manager, Brighton), Mr. A. Coote-Suggit, Mr. P. D. Elbourne (Manager, Birmingham), Mr. Walter Edelstein (agent), Mr. Gideon (Advertising Manager, Alhambra, Paris), Mr. J. Melville Gillies (Musical Director, Brighton), Mr. Albert Gilmer (Manager, Hove Skating Rink), Mr. Walter Hassan (Manager, Hippodrome, Liverpool), Mr. Sydney Hyman (theatrical proprietor, Johannesburg), Mr. S. T. W. Johnson, Lafayette, Miss Leddington (Head Office staff), Mr. Bob Lyons (Lyons Trio), Mr. Frank McNaghten, Mr. Tom Pacey (agent), Mr. Harry Pick (Messrs. Knight and Forster, of Leeds), Mr. Purdy (Southsea), Mr. Amery Parkes, Major E. J. K. Savage (Director of Barrasfords, Ltd.), Mr. Thompson (Manager, Brighton Court Theatre), Mr. Fred Wilmott (Liverpool theatrical proprietor), Mr. J. Williams (Stage Manager, Southsea), and Mr. J. W. Waddington (Leeds). In addition to these there were present the staff and orchestra of the Brighton Hippodrome, and many members of the theatrical and musical professions.

Floral tributes were sent by the following: Messrs. Anger and Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. H. Barrasford (Halifax), Brighton Hippodrome Orchestra, Mr. W. H. Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Brown, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boughton, the Directors of Barrasfords, Ltd., the Artists, Birmingham Hippodrome, Birmingham Hippodrome Staff, Mr. F. C. Bostock, Messrs. Bruff and Sherek, Mrs. C. E. Broadbent, Mr. Fred Baugh, Mr. F. Bast, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Bostock, Mr. W. H. Brown, "William Henry and Percy B. Broadhead," Mr. Bob Baxter and Miss Alma Obrey (Jack and the Beanstalk Company), Brighton and Hove Wine Company, Court Theatre Staff, Mr. Harry Clark (Stage Manager, Brighton Hippodrome) and Mrs. Clark, "The Carmos," Mr. and Mrs. Coote-Suggit, Mr. Will Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. THE Council of the Borough of Luton is prepared to receive offers for the privilege of giving entertainments from May 30 to Sept. 3, 1910, upon a selected site at Wardown Park. Sealed tenders, endorsed "Entertainments," should be delivered at the Town Clerk's Office, Town Hall, Luton, before Feb. 18.

MR. CHARLES URBAN, F.Z.S., the joint inventor of "Kinemacolor," will, by special invitation, give a demonstration on Tuesday of his system, illustrated by several new natural history films, before the Fellows of the Zoological Society of London, Hanover-square, W.

SOME delightful new life-motion studies of birds and animals in the actual tints of Nature are being added to the "Kinemacolor" animated pictures at the Palace Theatre, including examples from the Washington (U.S.A.) as well as the London Zoo. Specimens which illustrate at its highest value the beauties of the new art are of the lion, leopard, lynx, parrot, and especially of a peacock, with plumes erect, reproducing with great distinctness the vivid colouring and perfectly symmetrical distribution of the "eyes" in the spread "train."

MR. GEORGE ROBEY'S CONTRACT.

In the Chancery Division on Saturday, before Mr. Justice Joyce, a point arising out of a music hall contract was argued in Wade v. the Oxford (Limited). It was an application by Mr. George Edward Wade, known on the variety stage as Mr. George Robey, for a declaration that a contract (dated June 1, 1904) entered into between him and the late Mr. George Adney Payne, managing-director of the defendant company, was void on grounds set forth by his counsel.

The plaintiff was represented by Mr. Simon, K.C., Mr. McCardie, and Mr. Churchill (instructed by J. B. and G. S. Beirnstein); and the defendants by Mr. Younger, K.C., and Mr. Maugham (instructed by Andrew Wood, Purves, and Sutton).

Mr. Simon said the stipulation was that Mr. Robey should appear at the Oxford Music Hall every evening, and also on the Saturday afternoons, during certain periods of twelve or fourteen weeks in 1910, 1911, 1912, and 1913, and that prior to or during those engagements he should not perform at any hall within a mile of the Oxford, except the Tivoli. Then they found this very curious clause:

"Mr. George Adney Payne hereby agrees to find Mr. George Robey two other halls to work in conjunction with the Oxford, for all the within-mentioned periods, at a salary of £120 a week, such salary to be made as Mr. Payne may think fit."

Mr. Payne died in May of 1907 without having personally done anything.

Mr. Robey (examined by Mr. McCardie) said he made Mr. Payne's acquaintance fifteen or sixteen years ago. One night in 1904 Mr. Masters, Mr. Payne's private secretary, came round to him at the Pavilion, where he was performing, and asked him to call and see the "governor." He accordingly called upon Mr. Payne the following morning at his office at the back of the Oxford Music Hall. Mr. Payne said he wanted him to sign a contract with him for a period of years. "He said he would look after my interests financially, as I had been running a bit loose. He said if I made this contract with him he would look after my interests. He said it would be a good thing to have someone to look after me properly, so that I should not get into trouble."

Did he tell you what sort of contract he wanted you to sign?—Yes; he made that clear to me. He said he would give me a contract for four years at a very good salary which I could bank every Monday.

What was said, if anything, as to who the contract was to be with?—It was distinctly arranged that it should be with him.

Was anything said about salary?—Yes. First he said £100 a week. I talked it over with Mr. Masters, who was present, and I said I did not think £100 was enough. Mr. Masters said, "Well, make it £120, £20, one way or the other, does not matter."

What was said about how it was to be paid?—It was arranged that Mr. Payne should pay me. I was not to know how much was being paid by each of the other halls, but Mr. Payne was to make the money up to £120 a week.

Witness said that the Oxford was clearly stated as one of the halls at which he was to appear, and Mr. Payne was to find the other two.

Is the question of the hall at which a performer appears of great importance to him?—Yes, but I knew that Mr. Payne would not put me in a hall which would not suit me.

Asked by his Lordship to explain this point, witness replied: Well, there are "halls and halls."

Mr. McCardie: Explain to his Lordship what you mean by "halls and halls."

Witness: There are what I call first-class halls, mediocre halls, and very bad halls.

What would be the effect of your appearing at a very bad hall?—They would not understand me.

Would your reputation be improved or injured by your appearing at a bad hall?—Injured.

Suppose you appeared at a mediocre hall?—It would be a question of luck how I went there. It would depend upon the temperament of the audience.

Witness said he signed the contract that day, June 1, 1904. At the time he made the contract he had full confidence in Mr. Payne. He was willing to leave it to him to choose for him whatever halls he thought fit.

Mr. McCardie: Would you have entered into such a contract as this with the Oxford Limited?

Mr. Younger: I object to that question.

His Lordship upheld the objection.

Cross-examined by Mr. Younger, witness said that in 1904 he had an engagement with Mr. Payne with regard to the Oxford which did not come to an end until the autumn of last year. His position in 1904 was that he was performing five or six times a night and received about £120 a week.

And was not this what Mr. Payne said to you—that he thought you were wasting yourself singing at so many halls, and he thought it would be better if you did not sing at more than three halls?—Yes.

And he said he was able to offer you a contract wherewith you would get your £120 a week, and would not be bound to sing at more than three halls?—Yes.

Do I understand you to say that the agreement of June 1, 1904, was made by you from beginning to end with Mr. Payne as an individual?—Yes.

It had nothing to do with the Oxford except that Mr. Payne might have told you to sing there?—That is so.

Your price has gone up since 1904?—Yes.

It is the truth, is it not, that you have entered into a new agreement with Mr. Gibbons?—Yes.

Provided that you get rid of this agreement?—Yes.

Witness admitted that the agreement with Mr. Gibbons was for £200 a week for two halls a night, to be selected by Mr. Gibbons.

The hearing was adjourned till Monday, when Mr. Ibbertson, secretary of the Oxford Company, produced a petty cash book showing items of 6d. for "stamping Robey's contract," and "fares to Somerset House" for that purpose, 4d. These amounts were paid by the Oxford and Associated Halls.

The case was resumed on Tuesday, when, without calling upon plaintiff's counsel to reply, his Lordship decided in favour of Mr. George Robey, holding that the contract was a personal one with Mr. Payne, and that on the death of the latter it became unworkable. Under the circumstances, Mr. Robey was justified in entering into an agreement with another person, and there was nothing he need be ashamed of in that. The action, therefore, succeeded, and the counter-claim must fail, defendants to pay the costs. The directors of the Oxford, acting on counsel's advice, have appealed against Mr. Justice Joyce's decision.

MESSRS. A. J. CARTER (manager of the Palace, Manchester) and Thomas Henry Poole, candidates for membership of the Terriers' Association, have successfully passed the ballot.

SCENE: A Manchester variety theatre's dressing-room. Small-part super to super who is hoping for a similar chance: "Have you ever studied elocution?" Second super (very seriously): "No; I only go in for character parts."

AT the forty-seventh annual meeting of shareholders in the Penzance Public Buildings Co., Ltd., a dividend of 1s. per share was declared. The rent for the year from St. John's Hall amounted to £255 6s. 6d., and it was stated that the present financial position of the company would have enabled the directors to have recommended a larger dividend, but they thought it a wise policy to create a fund for the purpose of effecting some necessary improvements to St. John's Hall which they now have under consideration.

MR. G. H. ELLIOTT.

Mr. G. H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, and his friend, Mr. J. C. Inman, at the Chocolate Stall at the Colston Hall Bazaar, Bristol, where an exhibition of dolls was recently held. The artists appearing at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, and at the Theatre Royal, Bristol, with their customary generosity, presented a large number of dolls in costume, which were on sale on behalf of the poor children of Bristol. The theatre dolls were greatly admired. Mr. G. H. Elliott recently gave 5,000 packets of Fry's chocolates for the poor nippers so well looked after by Uncle Jack, of the Bristol Times and Mirror, and the members of the Children's Corner. During the exhibition all the artists visited the hall, and were delighted.

MUNICIPAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

In the High Court of Justice (Chancery Division), on the 4th instant, judgment was given by Mr. Justice Joyce in the action the Attorney-General (on the relation of James Lawrence Graydon) v. the Walthamstow Urban District Council.

The Times of Feb. 5 gives a very full report of this most important action to restrain an alleged breach of a statutory provision that where public baths are let for entertainments comprising music or dancing no money for admission shall be taken at the doors.

The defendant council were in the position of "commissioners" under the Baths and Wash-houses Acts, 1846 to 1899. The relator was the hon. secretary of the Entertainments Protection Association, stated to be an association representing theatrical and variety proprietors and managers in London and the provinces. By virtue of the above-mentioned Acts the defendant council owned, controlled, and were responsible for the letting and user of the public baths at Walthamstow. By section 5 of the Baths and Wash-houses Act, 1878, it was provided that no covered or open swimming bath when closed might be used for music or dancing. That provision was repealed by section 2 of the Baths and Wash-houses Act, 1899, which provided "(a) That the commissioners appointed under the Baths and Wash-houses Acts, 1846 to 1899, or any other body for the time being acting in the execution of those Acts, which commissioners or other body are hereinafter referred to as 'such commissioners,' shall, before any such bath is used for music or dancing, obtain such licence as may be required for the use of a place for that purpose under any enactment in force in the area for which such commissioners act, or, if no such enactment is in force, obtain a licence from the county council of the county in which the district of such commissioners is situate. (b) That no portion of the premises in respect of which the licence is granted be let otherwise than occasionally to any person or persons, corporate or otherwise, and that no money for admission be taken at the doors. (c) That such commissioners be responsible for any breach of the conditions on which the licence is granted which may occur during any entertainment given on such premises by their permission." The defendants had, by their clerk, obtained a licence in respect of the baths for music and dancing from the Essex County Council under the provisions of the Disorderly Houses Act, 1751. The plaintiff alleged that on several occasions the defendant council had let or used, or permitted to be used, their public baths for the purpose of entertainments consisting of music, singing, acrobatic displays, and cinematograph pictures, and on such occasions, in contravention of the Act of 1899, had taken, or permitted to be taken, money at the doors of the said baths for admission thereto. The defendants denied that they had ever taken or permitted to be taken money at the doors of the baths as alleged. They further said that on all occasions on which the defendants had granted any permission or licence to use the baths for any purpose other than swimming it had been on the express condition that no money should be taken at the doors, and if on any such occasion money had been so taken, it had been done in breach of such condition and without the sanction, authority, permission, or knowledge of the defendants; and the defendants did not claim, threaten, or intend so to take or permit money to be so taken. It appeared that on some occasions money had been in fact taken at the pay-boxes which were fixed inside the entrance to the baths, and, upon this being complained of, movable pay-boxes placed upon land belonging to the defendants just outside the building had on other occasions been used for the purpose of taking money for admission to the entertainments. It appeared that the defendants for the purpose of letting the baths for entertainments used a printed form of application to be filled up and signed by intending licensees. The form stated that "having perused the conditions and regulations hereto attached" the applicant undertook "to abide by, and conform to, the same in the event of this application being granted." The attached conditions and regulations included the following:—"14. No money must be taken at the doors," and "24. If any hirer refuse or omit to comply with any of these conditions or regulations or with any instructions conveyed to him by the clerk of the council, on behalf of the council, he and his servants may be excluded until he comply with the same, but without relieving him from his obligations under any contract or agreement.

Mr. Younger, K.C., and Mr. W. Payne, for the plaintiff, contended that the prohibition of the statute was absolute, and the defendants, who had it in their power to prevent the breach of it, were responsible for any such breach. By the form of their agreement with the lessees or licensees they had the power, and were bound to use it, of preventing any breach of the statutory prohibition. As commissioners under the Acts they were responsible for any breach of the conditions under which the music and dancing licence was granted. That licence must be read as if the prohibition against taking money at the doors were inserted in it. The defendants could not get rid of their statutory obligation by merely inserting a condition in their hiring agreements and then allowing the prohibited act to be done by their licensees.

Mr. Hughes, K.C., and Mr. J. Mansfield, for the defendants, argued that a local authority who let their baths with an express stipulation against taking money at the doors were not guilty of any breach of the statute. They could not be compelled to take action against their tenant or to turn them out. There was no ground for an injunction to restrain them from permitting the prohibited act being done.

Mr. Justice Joyce, in giving judgment this morning, said that the defendants were the owners of the public baths at Walthamstow, and they were authorised by statute to let the baths occasionally for the purpose of entertainments with a provision in the Act of 1899 that no portion of the premises be let otherwise than occasionally, and that no money for admission be taken at the doors. No reason for that provision as to taking money at the doors was indicated in the Act, nor did it appear for whose protection it was inserted, although his Lordship was told that it was inserted for the protection of an association of which the relator was the secretary—viz., the Entertainments Protection Association. It was by no means clear why that association should be protected, nor how this provision in fact protected them. No penalty was prescribed by the Act nor was any remedy provided for the breach of this provision. This was an application for an injunction to restrain the defendants from taking or permitting to be taken at the doors money for admission to the baths on the occasions when they were let for the purposes of music and dancing or either of them, and there were allegations in the statement of claim that the defendants had taken or permitted to be taken money at the doors on such occasions. The defendants were not under any contract or covenant not to do what was complained of. Where there was an express covenant not to permit a certain thing to be done an injunction might be granted against permitting it to be done, although where the defendants were not in possession it was not clear what constituted a breach of the covenant. What the defendants had done was this; they had granted a licence for the use of the baths for certain entertainments, and it was said that their licensees had taken money at the doors. It was further alleged that they were now seeking to evade the provisions of the statute by the erection of pay-boxes outside the premises for the purpose of taking money, and it was sought to prevent the defendants or their licensees from acting in contravention of the statute on the assumption that what was being done was in such contravention. If an injunction were granted as asked it might render the defendant council liable to sequestration, or possibly the members of the council, subject to attachment or committal for the misconduct of their licensees or lessees, even although the defendants as a body bona fide disapproved and objected to what was being done. It was sought that the Attorney-General might be in a position to apply for sequestration of the council or the committal of its members. The statute said nothing as to the responsibility of the commissioners under the Act (in this case the defendants) for the acts of their lessees, although it did provide that they should be responsible for any breach of the conditions on which the music and dancing licence was granted. There was no provision that they should be responsible for the acts of their lessees or licensees as to taking money at the doors. It seemed to his Lordship that he was asked to impose this responsibility. In other words, he was asked to add another clause to the statute. He did not doubt that the defendants might be restrained from causing money to be taken at the doors if in fact they were causing that to be done. So also they might be restrained from authorising it if they threatened, intended, or claimed the right to authorise their licensees to take money at the doors. It was not shown that they had done that. At the most it was suggested that they had not been so energetic as they might have been, and had not used their best endeavours to prevent what was complained of from being done. If this Lordship were to make an order he would be imposing upon the defendants a responsibility for the misconduct of their licensees or lessees, and thereby adding to the provisions of the statute. The Attorney-General might take proceedings against the really guilty parties if he chose to do so, but his Lordship could not compel the defendants to take proceedings against their licensees, nor would it be reasonable, and he did not see his way to compel the defendants to exclude their licensees, thus taking the risk of the result of a decision as to whether the use of the pay-boxes outside the premises was an unlawful evasion of the Act. In the result the action failed and must be dismissed.

The solicitors in the action were Mr. P. J. Rutland, 67, Chancery-lane, W.C., acting on behalf of the Proprietors of Entertainments Association, and Cartwright and Cunningham, who instructed counsel appearing for the Walthamstow Urban District Council.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

A students' organ recital was given at the Royal Academy of Music on Monday afternoon. As a recital entirely devoted to the organ might prove somewhat monotonous, the programme included several excellent vocal items and one violin solo. Widor's masterly First Movement from his Symphony in G minor was well executed by Mr. Edward H. Hollingham, and Mr. Horace Perry displayed refinement in his playing of the Choral and Andante of Mendelssohn's Sonata No. 5. In the showy song, "Villanelle" of Eva Dell'Acqua, Miss Dorothy Mostyn received much applause, and the excellent and well-trained voice of Miss Ella Caspers was heard in a very creditable rendering of the air "Have mercy upon me, O Lord," from Bach's Passion Music. The accompaniments on organ and violin were carefully played by Mr. Edward H. Hollingham and Miss Zona Trades. A good account of Guilmant's clever Scherzo from Fifth Sonata (organ) was given by Miss Ellen M. Fulton, and Mr. Alec Rowley was equally successful in his performance of Finale from Sonata in G minor (Piutti). Miss Marion Detmar had a most enthusiastic greeting after a very able interpretation of the Introduction and Finale from Reubke's Sonata in C minor. The last organ solo was Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D, played by Mr. Stuart Duncan. Two attractive songs by Sir Alexander Mackenzie "The first rose" and "Spring is not dead" were cleverly sung by Miss May Purcell, and Mr. Constantine Morris deserved praise for the dramatic expression he gave to Tschaikowsky's "Don Juan's Serenade." Miss Mildred Avis, who has a fine voice, sang "My resting place" (Schubert), while mention should be made of Miss Nellie Fulcher's neatly-executed violin solo "Andante and Rondo Capriccioso" (Saint-Saëns).

CHIEF among the attractions to be seen at the Coliseum on Monday next is Capt. "Joe" Taylor's extraordinary performing elephants, which make their first appearance at this house. Perhaps the most-talked-of member in the crowd is the "Elephant Acrobaticus," which Taylor has trained to stand bolt upright on his head with all-fours off the ground. Another sensation is the dramatic arrest of a mischievous pachyderm by his uncle, dressed as a policeman. Then there is the Elephant's Orchestra, consisting of an organ, a bass drum, cymbals, tambourine, &c., conducted by the trainer.

AT the London Hippodrome on Monday a special matinée was given on behalf of the Mansion House Fund for the relief of the sufferers by the floods in Paris. The Lord Mayor and Sheriffs attended, together with M. Paul Cambon (the French Ambassador), Count Benckendorf (the Russian Ambassador), M. Takaaki Kato (Japanese Ambassador), and the Marquis de Soveral (Portuguese Minister). One of the features of the lengthy and excellent programme was the comedy sketch entitled French as He is Spoke, played by Mr. Cyril Maude and company. This was the second time of the production of the farce on the variety stage, as it will be remembered that Mr. Cyril Maude gave it at the Rats matinée last year at the Oxford. Mr. Lewis Waller gave a recitation, and amongst other well-known artists who appeared were "The Follies," Miss Evie Greene, Mr. Seymour Hicks, and Miss Elialine Terriss. There was a very large audience present, and the entertainment realised over £500.

THE result was announced from his box by the Lord Mayor, Sir John Knill, who added that the whole idea of the matinée had come from the management of the Hippodrome, and he was particularly thankful for the assistance thus given to the fund by Mr. Oswald Stoll and the other directors. The French Ambassador, who also returned thanks, said that he saw in what was being done to relieve the sufferers in Paris a mark of deep sympathy between the English and French peoples, and he expressed his gratitude to the Lord Mayor for his noble initiative in starting the Mansion House Fund.

ON Monday an application was made by Mr. William Richardson to the Richmond magistrates for the licensing of four children to appear at the Richmond Hippodrome in Halley's troupe of juveniles. The applicant stated that he fed, clothed, and boarded the children, and allowed them a shilling a week. He pointed out that the children were really apprentices, and were being taught their profession. One girl in the troupe had been taken from absolute poverty in Liverpool, was a bright and intelligent child, and was being taught a profession, in which she would eventually earn a lot of money. The licences were granted, one magistrate, however, strongly objecting, and asking for a note to be taken of his objection.

MUSIC HALL HOME SHILLING FUND.

2063½ SHILLINGS.

We are again making an appeal on behalf of the Music Hall Home Era Shilling Fund, and with that appeal we have very great pleasure in associating the name of Miss Vesta Tilley, who will for the next few months act as a sort of fairy godmother to the fund. "I think," said Miss Tilley, in conversation with our interviewer the other day, "that the Music Hall Home is a very deserving charity and a very excellent thing. Something of the sort was certainly wanted for the poorer professionals. Every week of my life I give pounds away at the stage-door to numbers of the profession who call upon me for assistance. Now this year I want to create a record in the matter of collections for the fund, and I personally shall work my very hardest for it. In everything I wanted before the profession has always come forward very generously, and I hope that they will help me all they can now. I have a number of private friends who are going to work for me, too. I think, however, that most of the support should come from the professionals themselves. Outside people have their own charities to look after. I have asked my husband if he can arrange special matinées at each of his halls for the benefit of this fund, and he thinks that he will be able to do this. A great deal in that case will rest upon the artists, and if they would turn up we should be enabled to augment the funds of the Home very considerably. Wherever I am now appearing I am fixing up cards so that members of the same company for the week may put their names down for a subscription. I also hope by the sale of autograph postcards in the front of the house to collect a still further sum for the same purpose."

As was arranged last year, a solid gold medal will be presented by The Era to the collector who obtains the largest amount for the Fund up to March 31, 1910, the lists closing on that date.

MUSIC HALL CELEBRITIES.

MISS JOSIE DELAINE.

A disposition towards the stage was early evinced by Miss Josie Delaine, who is the daughter of that popular artist, Miss Florrie Gallimore. Josie's first appearance was at Blackpool, at the early age of four, when Miss Jennie Valmore took her on with her by way of a joke. The little lady insisted on staying there, so the conductor asked her what she could sing, and she replied, "Oh, Mr. Porter." The band struck up that favourite song, and the audience, entering into the spirit of the thing, threw money on to the stage. Much to the dismay of her mother, Josie would not come off, so they were forced to ring down.

The next appearance of Miss Delaine was at Middlesbrough when seven years of age while on her holidays from boarding-school with her mother. Miss Trixie Gilfain (of Boyd and Gilfain), had engaged a little boy to sing the chorus of her song, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," but the lad was indisposed, and Miss Delaine, who was still ambitious, begged to be allowed to sing the song, which she did so effectually that she was presented on the last night with a doll dressed exactly like her mother, who played principal girl, Fatima.

Miss Delaine has played principal girl to her mother's principal boy—a circumstance that has seldom occurred in the annals of the profession. This year the two ladies were engaged in friendly rivalry in the same city, Miss Gallimore playing Whittington at the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield, and Miss Delaine principal girl (Jill) at the Theatre Royal. Miss Delaine has had offers from Mr. Edwardes for The Merry Widow and other musical comedies, and no fewer than ten proposals for pantomime this year. She has, moreover, played three seasons at the Palace, in Shaftesbury-avenue, and, although only nineteen, has appeared at nearly all the principal music halls in the United Kingdom. She is booked with the Oxford and Tivoli Syndicate until 1914.

Miss Delaine, it may be added, is the wife of Mr. Langford, of Downes and Langford, who are now appearing in the Drury Lane pantomime.

CHARLES S. KITTS.

Mr. Charles S. Kitts was born in Suffolk in 1871, and comes of an old theatrical family. He made his first appearance with Miss Rose Leclercq as Willie Carlyle in East Lynne, when he was nine years of age, and subsequently fulfilled a short stock season at the Rotunda Theatre under Grannell's management, concluding with a children's pantomime. Thence he went into a Christmas juvenile production at Covent Garden Theatre, where he was personally complimented by the late Sir Henry Irving upon his impersonation of that famous actor. In 1883 Mr. Kitts was in the production of The Palace of Pearl at the Empire Theatre, Leicester-square, and was then drafted to the house opposite, viz., the then Prince's Theatre, Coventry-street, for the original production of Alice in Wonderland. At the conclusion of the run he toured with the Children's Opera Company, and finally after many years in the dramatic atmosphere drifted into musical comedy under the managements of Mr. George Edwardes, Mr. T. B. Davis, and Messrs. Morell and Mouillot. One of his most notable characters was that of Charlie Appleby in The Shop Girl, which he played for over 2,000 performances.

In 1902 Mr. Kitts tried his luck upon the music-hall stage, and, meeting with every success, he decided to remain there. He has played most of the principal variety theatres in the United Kingdom, including the Palace, Coliseum, Tivoli, Oxford, and holds further contracts with Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Gibbons, Mr. Henri Gros, &c. His music hall experiences include a tour in America, from East to West, under the banner of Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger.

Mr. Kitts is the author of many successful playlets. He is exceptionally fond of golf, yachting, and swimming, and greatly attached to his wire-haired terrier "Skittles," who has many friends in the dramatic and variety world.

CHAT WITH A SKETCH WRITER

MR. CAYLEY CALVERT.

"My first original production," says Mr. Cayley Calvert, the well-known sketch writer, "was at boarding school—to be particular, at Arnold House, Blackpool. It took the form of a burlesque entitled Toddy Ash, the Funny Policeman, and was intended to satirise the peculiarities of the author's schoolfellows. There was no censor, but the audience took the matter in hand, getting the offending author into a corner at the conclusion and demonstrating their want of appreciation of his humour by raining blows with sticks, slippers, and anything handy until the timely appearance of a muscular and commanding junior master averted the possible necessity for a coroner's inquest."

Undeterred by this rebuff, further essays in the Theatre Royal Back Drawing Room followed, until in 1885 the youthful wooer of Melpomene nervously left his MS. of a full-blooded drama, The Vendetta, at the stage door of Sadler's Wells. The then manager, Mr. George Roberts, called upon the author the next day and arranged to produce the piece, which he did within about a fortnight, and it changed the customary announcement of "for this week only" to "until further notice," to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Mr. Calvert's song-writing began with Mr. Charles Coborn's "But it ain't" and Mr. Ben Nathan's "Not a return," and the writer developed a clientèle amongst the leading stars. The sketch field opening about this time, Mr. Calvert entered with Cupid-up-to-Date, in which Misses Sybil and Grace Arundale appeared at the Oxford, Palace, &c. This success he followed up with Heroes of Our Empire, elaborately staged by the late Mr. George Adney Payne at the Canterbury, where it had a long run, and whence it toured. Then Mr. George Leyton produced his Wellington at Waterloo at three London halls simultaneously, Robin Hood followed at the Oxford, and employed a hundred performers. A like number supported Mr. John F. Sheridan in Mr. Calvert's Shamus O'Brien at the Paragon. The Concert of Europe, a political skit, ending with a fine tableau by Hemsley, had a long run at the London Pavilion. Napoleon held its place for seventy nights in the bill of the Tivoli, with Mr. Dennis Macarthy as Napoleon, whilst the same artist was a similar period in the same author's On, On, On, at the South London. The Flower Girl (written in collaboration with Mr. John M. East) introduced Mr. J. H. Clyndes to Paragon audiences as a "fighting parson," Jew or Gentile Mr. John Lawson as a rabbi in old Jerusalem, and Trafalgar's Eve Mr. Ashley Page (who had made his variety début in the same author's Bobs) as Nelson. The Esther Phillips Combination successively produced On the Rocks, The Matador, and A Second Magdalen, and Mr. Bransby Williams The Vicar's Christmas Eve (London Pavilion) and The Goblin and the Sexton (Collins's). Briton Against Boer made a great hit at the Canterbury, presented by Mr. Harry Renouf and a strong cast, and among sketches which followed were Have You Got the £10 Note? (two companies), The Belle of the Pacific, Dreyfus, The Little Dinner, Ladysmith Day, A Handful of Fellows, Hidden Foes, &c., and more recently Our Home Defenders, A Critical Operation, What's Charles Worth? &c.

Altogether Mr. Cayley Calvert has contributed some two hundred productions to the variety stage. He also wrote Mr. Ellis Brammall's Brighton pantomime Blue Beard and the late Mr. Oswald Brand's production 'Endon Way at the Imperial. He is at present busy on some forthcoming novelties and taking an active part with Mr. George Gray and others in the reformation of the Sketch Artists' Association.

Miss Melinda May, secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., on behalf of the committee, begs most gratefully to acknowledge the following:—Miss Jessie Star (collecting), £1 2s.; Miss Ada Webb (collecting), 3s.; Miss Louie Davis (Ward and Davis), collecting 4s. at the Palace, Camberwell, last week, out of which Miss Paola kindly contributed 1s. and Miss Daly 6d.; Miss Jimson, collecting from the ladies and gentlemen at the Broadway Theatre, Deptford, 2s. 6d.; Miss Lilian Bayliss, Victoria Hall, Waterloo-road, giving and collecting £1; Dr. Walker, Camberwell-road, for his kindness and attention to a case; Mr. Alec Barish, women's boots and shoes (new); Miss Lottie Albert, boots and hat.

Are there any willing workers who could collect for the Guild at Liverpool Feb. 23 and March 2? Please write to Miss May. Will friends, in and out of the profession, please note that a prize will be given to anyone collecting the most money for this deserving charity in twelve months, commencing from Nov. 4 last.

Our heartfelt thanks are due to Mr. Joe Zarmo for giving to the Guild the Rex motor-bicycle, which has realised the sum of £30 19s. The winner is Mr. E. Foote, 29, Market-place, Stockport, who possesses the number 158. Friends of the charity are heartily welcome to tea and reception held every Wednesday, four to five o'clock. Funds, boots, and clothing are urgently needed.

Before Mr. Registrar Giffard, the public examination was appointed to be held of G. Barrasford, music hall agency manager, 39, Charing Cross-road, W.C. The debtor, however, failed to appear. No statement of affairs was filed, and the assistant-receiver said that the debtor had not attended under the proceedings. It was believed that he had gone to America. His Honour accordingly adjourned the examination sine die.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENTS.

SAFETY PRECAUTIONS AT THEATRES AND OTHER PLACES.

The Children's Care (Central) Committee reported to the London County Council Education Committee on Wednesday as follows:

"We reported on July 28, 1909, with reference to the safety of school-children at entertainments or displays held either on the school premises or elsewhere. The Children Act, 1908, which came into operation on April 1, 1909, imposed on the Council as education authority a certain responsibility in cases where the school organisation is used either to promote an entertainment or in some way to cause the pupils to be present thereat. The Committee passed the following resolutions—'(a) That no entertainment in which the school organisation is in any way involved be held on the premises of L.C.C. schools or in any other places unless an application for permission to hold such entertainment, and a certificate that satisfactory arrangements have been made, duly filled up and approved by the managers, have been approved on behalf of the Council; and that the Council be recommended accordingly. (b) That the attention of the managers of non-provided schools be drawn to the requirements of section 121 of the Children Act, 1908, with reference to the safety of the children at entertainments; that they be informed of their legal responsibility under the Act and of the precautions taken by the Council in respect of the use of the organisation of L.C.C. schools for purposes of entertainments, treats, &c., whether in the schools or public halls; and that they be asked to adopt procedure similar to that referred to in the foregoing resolution (a), whenever it is proposed to give an entertainment, treat, &c., to children attending non-provided schools; and that the Council be recommended accordingly. (c) That the following rules be approved for the conduct of entertainments in which the school organisation is in any way involved—(i.) Application for permission to hold entertainments must be made to the Council at least twenty-one days before the date fixed for the entertainment, must give full particulars as to the nature of the entertainment, the hall proposed to be used, the maximum number for whom tickets will be issued, and as to the arrangements made for the control of the audience and the proper supervision of the school-children. (ii.) The head teachers of L.C.C. schools and managers of non-provided schools are requested immediately to inform the education officer of any proposal to invite school-children to attend a pantomime or other performance at a theatre, whether within school hours or otherwise. (iii.) The distribution to pupils of tickets of admission to places of entertainment, apart from the cases referred to above where authority has been duly received, is strictly forbidden. (iv.) The procedure set out below with reference to the attendance of children at theatres is to be observed—(a) The Clerk of the Council must be consulted as to whether the Theatres Committee are satisfied that the premises are reasonably safe for the reception of the public, and, if so, confirmation must be obtained in writing. (b) In the event of a reply in the affirmative, the chief officer of the fire brigade to be informed that children will visit a theatre on a certain date, and to be asked to arrange for a special inspection of the premises to be made immediately prior to the performance to ensure that all the arrangements are satisfactory; and also to allow his officer to stay until the conclusion of the performance. (c) The head master or mistress (or, in the case of a non-provided school, the correspondent) is to be informed that no objection will be raised to the attendance of the children at the performance provided (i.) that the consent of the parents or guardians be first obtained, and (ii.) that a sufficient number of the staff of the school are willing to accompany the children and remain with them until the close of the performance.'

"The Committee reported on the subject to the Council on Oct. 12, 1909, but the chairman of the Education Committee withdrew recommendations (a) and (b), in order that we might consider a statement which had been made by the Theatres and Music Halls Committee in regard to the rules which had been approved by the Education Committee in the foregoing resolution (c). In this statement it was pointed out (i.) that in the case of premises licensed by the Lord Chamberlain or the Council it is not necessary for special inspections to be made on each occasion when parties of school-children are present, in view of the fact that such premises are regularly inspected by the Council's officials, and may be considered reasonably safe from the danger of fire; (ii.) that in the event of a panic, the officer of the fire brigade present at the time could not render any more useful service than any other male attendant, and that therefore no purpose is served by the attendance of such officer. We reported thereon on Nov. 10, 1909, and the Committee concurred in our opinion that it was very desirable that reports should continue to be submitted in regard to the safety of any theatre or other place of entertainment to be visited by large parties of school-children, and decided that the Theatres and Music Halls Committee should be asked to continue the practice. The Committee also considered it desirable that the practice of inspecting theatres and other places licensed for public entertainment prior to the attendance of parties of school-children, and of allowing an officer of the fire brigade to be in attendance throughout the performance, should be continued, and agreed to inform the Fire Brigade Committee that if necessary the charges incidental thereto should be defrayed out of the maintenance (elementary education) account.

"We have now had before us the replies of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee and the Fire Brigade Committee. The former Committee have stated that they still adhere to their opinion that the practice of inspecting licensed places of public entertainment prior to the attendance of parties of school-children is unnecessary, as such premises may be considered reasonably safe from the danger of fire. The latter Committee have stated that, while concurring in the view of the Theatres Committee, they are of opinion that the presence of a fire brigade officer would serve no useful purpose, as the danger when such children attend theatres is mainly one of panic calling for the presence of a large percentage of adults, preferably their teachers. We have given the most careful consideration to the statements submitted to us in regard to this matter. We have in no way changed our view as to the desirability of continuing the procedure which we originally proposed. As, however, it is of the greatest importance that the new procedure as to entertainments should be applied at the earliest possible moment, and as a further insistence upon the views already expressed by us might unduly delay the adoption of the scheme by the Council, we recommend—'That rules Nos. iv., (a) and (b) approved by the Education Committee on July 13, 1909, with reference to the attendance of children at theatres be repealed.'"

The recommendation of the Committee was agreed to without discussion.

THE HIPPODROME.

Besides that wonderfully effective Esquimaux spectacle The Arctic, with its splendid assemblage of seventy Polar bears, the programme at the London Hippodrome is immensely attractive at present, containing some specially strong and effective items, several of which are soon to depart. The culminating sensation of The Arctic is humorous as well as startling. The avalanche of bears which pours down the "shoots," sometimes head foremost, sometimes the reverse, until the "basin" is full of the happy, hirsute strugglers, is a spectacle of the most novel and diverting character. Long after the conclusion of the descent of the seventy divers, the admiring audience stand round the bears' bath, unwilling to tear themselves away from a sight so extraordinary and so interesting; and the real Esquimaux dogs are a feature of the sketch which is greatly admired. A "big thing" on the programme is Olga Petronowa, who hails from the Imperial Conservatoire, Moscow. She is a handsome and energetic lady who, clad in scarlet costume, standing on the stage with her back turned to the audience, directs the performance of a large orchestra, who are seated in a semi-circle. Inspirited by her vigorous gestures and by the brisk wave of her bâton, the musicians render, in excellent style, such telling selections as "1812," a selection from William Tell, and a pot-pourri of national airs, concluding with "Rule, Britannia." The combination of female beauty and orchestral ability is irresistible, and evokes enthusiastic applause. The weird and awful Vampire dance continues to thrill and praise is deserved both by the supple grace and activity of Miss Alice Eis and the dramatic expression of that artist, and by Mr. Bert French as the vampire's victim. Miss Eis's facial play is intensely expressive, and she makes the female blood-sucker most mysterious and intense. Her attitudes are very artistic, and her treatment of the terrible theme is strong, vivid, and artistic. Her performance recalls the descriptions of female vampires given by Mr. Bram Stoker in his nightmarian novel "Dracula." The entertainment supplied by Lamberti deserves warm praise for the thorough and finished manner in which it is carried out in every detail. Lamberti has evidently studied carefully the peculiarities of the composers whom he represents. One of his best impersonations is that of Liszt, but his Joachim is almost equal to it in merit. His Paderewski is intentionally caricatured, but his Gounod is comical without being exaggerated. Lamberti has made himself a favourite at the Hippodrome, and has to respond to a call at the close of his entertainment. Les Silas are two French operatic vocalists who appear first of all as Pilgrims, and afterwards as "incroyables," and sing suitable selections in excellent style; and Pipifax and Panlo make themselves very popular, the one by his activity in turning somersaults, &c., and the other by his screamingly funny knockabout business, in which he becomes entangled in a number of chairs. Their turn goes extremely well, and they win warm applause. Loyal's trained dogs include an animal of wonderful ability, who does a somersault in the air while leaping over various obstacles; Mr. Selwyn Driver's merry monologue is cordially received; and the Rexos do some extraordinary roller skating, the gentleman dashing through a hoop only sixteen inches high, and doing some marvellously clever figure work on the rollers, besides skating on his hands splendidly. The Alaskas with their pantomime acrobatic act win much favour. Mr. Charles Mildare combines imitations of birds with some very neat whistling, and the views of Canadian farming shown by the Bioscope certainly ought to encourage emigration. Mr. F. Trussell presides in front of the house with his wonted courtesy and discretion, and the playing of the fine orchestra is a treat in itself.

POPLAR HIPPODROME.

Crowded houses twice nightly here testify to the popularity of Dan Thomas's pantomime of Dick Whittington, which has been previously reviewed in our columns, and now goes with a swing from start to finish. As chief mirth-provokers Dan Thomas and Jack Harris are well to the fore, their efforts meeting with decided approval. A pleasing feature is the grand floral ballet, entitled Highgate Hill, performed by Mlle. Lilian and twenty local children. The story of the pantomime follows on the usual lines, and the many different scenes are all well arranged to good effect.

Miss Daisy Yates makes a fine figure as Dick, and gets through a large amount of work in fine style. Her chief songs are "Ship Ahoy!" and "Miss Linda." Alderman Fitzwarren was capably presented by H. D. Lynton, and Miss Olive West made a very dainty Alice. Much amusement was created by Jack Harris as the Idle Apprentice. Mlle. Lilian is heard to advantage in "Sincerity." The Cat was cleverly played by Mr. Pete Almonti, his antics causing much laughter. Mr. Arthur Wade made an imposing Emperor, and sang "Let's all go down the Strand" in very taking style. Messrs. Haverley and Horner are a funny duo, and soon make their presence felt. They are both clever step-dancers. The star of the evening, however, was, without doubt, Dan Thomas as Betsy, and whether singing, dancing, or fooling, keeps a grip on the audience. His catch-phrase "I've found a new mash and got a new hat" was soon taken up. Special mention must be made of burlesques of the Salome and Vampire dances, both being excruciatingly funny.

The costumes are very good, and the whole thing is well produced, Mr. Arthur Wade being responsible. The resident-manager, Mr. Austin Anderson, is never happier than when he is busy, so this week he is particularly cheerful.

Gentil in Paris.

WITHOUT preliminary announcements J. Gentil, a young Brazilian fancy skater, modestly made his bow at the Paris Hippodrome on Sunday last, under the direction of Mr. T. L. Benn. Gentil is a remarkable artist. He performs every variety of step and fancy toe business, his supple figure and hands moving gracefully with the feet movements. His chair jumping, on one foot, is a feature, and the act concludes with a high jump over chairs and flaming fire, a most effective finale. Colonel Winslow, the director of the Winslow Skate Manufacturing Co., was enchanted, exclaiming "Here we have genius. During my thirty years' experience in the rinks I have never seen such a finished artist!" The Colonel subsequently presented Gentil with a £10 note for a special commemorative medal, which is now being struck.

THE HIPPODROME DOGS.

The part which the team of sledge dogs is playing in the Arctic spectacle at the Hippodrome draws attention to an interesting breed of the canine race. Popular opinion associates all sledge dogs with the name Esquimaux, but those at the Hippodrome are Samoyedes, and their natural habitat is North-East Russia and Western Siberia. They are the same kind as have been used on nearly all Polar expeditions which have started from Europe during the last fifteen years, including the expeditions of Nansen, H.R.H. the Duke of Abruzzi, Jackson-Harmsworth, the first Antarctic expedition led by C. B. Borchgrevink, and those of Captain Scott and Sir Ernest Shackleton.

The chief occupations of the Samoyedes are raising reindeer, trapping, hunting, and fishing. Reindeer live on a particular moss or lichen which grows in the Arctic regions, and when the moss is eaten off in one place, the Samoyede people pack their tents and other belongings on to sledges and move to a new feeding ground. For this moving dogs are very necessary to "round up" and drive the reindeer, in much the same way as collies "work" mobs of sheep in this country. Reindeer, are, however, more difficult to handle, and can only be caught with the lasso. Samoyede dogs have been domesticated for so long that they are easily trained, and able to help their masters in tight corners such as are met in polar regions. Eight are usually harnessed to one sledge in four pairs with a main trace rope between, so that the dogs pull from the side. This was the method used by Sir Ernest Shackleton, and it is how the dogs are harnessed at the Hippodrome.

SAMOYEDE DOGS AT THE HIPPODROME.

We believe we are right in saying that Mr. Kilburn Scott first suggested the use of sledge dogs in a letter to the Hippodrome management some seven months ago. The great interest which attaches to polar expeditions at the present time, including the Cook business, suggests many possibilities for plays, &c. Indeed, Mr. Kilburn Scott thinks that it would not be difficult to arrange a ballet bringing in Arctic scenes and Russian and Siberian life.

Samoyede dogs are very suitable for stage work because they are about medium size and carry themselves well, with ears erect and tail over back. Large dogs such as Great Danes or mastiffs look unwieldy on a stage, and most of the terrier breeds are too small, besides being very noisy. Naturally, at the rehearsals the dogs wanted to retire precipitately when the shooting began, for they weren't to know the cartridges were blank; but they soon got used to the noise. The only thing that worries them now is the bears, for no doubt they feel themselves at a disadvantage hitched to a sledge in case a few of the seventy-three got loose. Not that Samoyede dogs are afraid of Bruin, for they most distinctly are not. In their native country a Polar bear has very little chance of escaping from a pack of Samoyede dogs. All the expeditions to the North Polar regions have been supplied with bear's meat largely by the vigilance of the dogs and their boldness in attack. The harness of the dogs was made by Messrs. George Parker and Co. to Mr. Scott's design. Each dog has a collar and body belt, and connecting the two is a strap 2in. wide passing down each side and round the dog's chest, the animal therefore pulling from the chest. Coupling chains attached to the collar and the body belt effectually prevent the dog jumping the main trace or turning round. The animals are arranged in pairs, in exactly the same way as adopted on Polar expeditions, with the main trace down the centre, the only difference being that the main trace consists of two ash poles. A rope is too flexible for stage work, especially when bringing the dogs round at the back where there is very little room. The team of dogs shown in the picture includes representatives of two Polar expeditions, namely, that of H.R.H. the Duke of Abruzzi and the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition. The sledge is being shown at the Hippodrome, and it was the first to be used on the Antarctic continent ten years ago. It formed part of the equipment taken by C. E. Borchgrevink in the Southern Cross, and was given to Mr. Kilburn Scott by Sir George Newnes, who financed that expedition.

It is interesting to note that there are Samoyede dogs in New Zealand and Australia. They are descendants from those which C. E. Borchgrevink took out in the Southern Cross in 1898. After his return from the Antarctic some of the dogs were landed on Stewart Island, New Zealand, and it was some of these which Sir Ernest Shackleton used on the last Antarctic expedition. One of the original members of the pack was brought from Sydney last year, and his descendants are now in the kennels of Mr. E. Kilburn Scott at Vale House, Bromley. Captain Scott has arranged to take out a team of Mr. Scott's dogs on the Terra Nova next August, and the rest of the pack are to be obtained from Siberia by Mr. Meares, who will ship them from Vladivostock direct

THE JOHNNY ALEXANDER MATINEE.

THE APOSTLE OF THE RINK.
AN APPRECIATION BY CHARLES COBORN.

Alexander the Great may have been a very clever fellow in his way, but it is doubtful if he was ever half so amusing or contributed so much to "the gaiety of nations" as the subject of these lines. At any rate, one thing may be said with certainty, and that is that he was not the first to introduce roller skating to the British stage, whereas our own particular Alexander—Johnny, of that ilk—was. In these very slippery skating times the fact is worth noting. On the advice of some of his very numerous friends, our old pal Johnny is going to have a complimentary concert on the afternoon of Thursday, the 24th inst., at the Camberwell Empire, very generously lent by the management for the occasion, and all who have derived pleasure from the exercise of roller skating should "roll" up on that afternoon, if only as a mark of gratitude to the first missionary of the art to our shores.

His first appearance upon the "mimic stage," in the early fifties, was very nearly simultaneous with his first appearance at all, as he undertook the leading part of the baby-in-arms in the christening scene in the Dumb Man of Manchester when only three months old, and we believe that no complaint was made of his not being perfect in the lines. His next "first appearance" was that under his present name, as a member of the now celebrated Alexander family of actors, singers, dancers, pantomimists,

LE PETIT JACKSON HAYNES.

JOHNNY AS "THE OLD ACTOR."

and everything, as harlequin in the juvenile harlequinade, concluding Nelson Lee's Buds of Promise at the City of London Theatre, Norton Folgate, in 1861—a sort of forerunner of the juvenile plays of the present day. We find him again a few months later in a more elevated position being—again as juvenile harlequin—carried on the shoulders of the late Mr. J. L. Toole up and down the platform in front of Richardson's show at the first Dramatic Fête which was held at the Crystal Palace. The late Sir (then Mr.) Henry Irving did the same office as "bearer" for Johnny's brother Arthur. About forty-three years ago as "le petit Jackson Haynes," he introduced roller skating to the stage, and that fact alone distinguishes him particularly amongst his fellows.

Closer up, a mere twenty-five years ago, he appeared as the old actor in the sketch called The Actors, which had a tremendous long run, and contributed greatly to his popularity. In the course of a long and arduous professional career he has performed in almost every part of Europe and experienced many interesting vicissitudes which there is neither time nor space to do more than hint at now. Amongst his many accomplishments he was very fond of swimming, and some of "the boys" have told me how that once at Blackpool, whilst all the others were trying every device to keep out the blizzard which was raging, Johnny came in with his towel round his neck and said that he should have enjoyed his swim in the sea more had it been rather colder!

At a swimming carnival in Brussels, managed by the celebrated Peter Johnson, a young member of the English aristocracy was swimming under water. Johnny thought that he seemed to be rather too long under, and so jumped in with all his clothes on and practically saved the young fellow's life. Instead of receiving a medal or a vote of thanks, or some favourable acknowledgment from the proprietor of the bath, that individual actually threatened to sue Johnny for making the water dirty, which, as Sairey Gamp puts it, was "base ingratitude."

Amongst other important engagements, Johnny was for fourteen consecutive seasons clown at the Pavilion Theatre. It must not be forgotten that our friend has always worked hard, and considerably to his personal cost, in support of almost every institution ever organised in the interests of the music-hall profession. I believe that the Music Hall Home was first started on his suggestion, and on Dec. 6, 1899, he called upon Mr. Pedgriff of The Era and proposed the idea of The Era Shilling Fund, which has achieved such magnificent results to date, more than £2,000 having been accumulated since its origin.

Some of those circumstances which may befall the most industrious and experienced have convinced Johnny's friends that a good, fat, rousing benefit would not be altogether unwelcome, and so we are setting about it, and hope it will prove a great success. Sir Edward Moss sent a most encouraging telegram, and good old Chirgwin wrote: "Dear Alexander,—Do you a turn? Why, yas! Good luck.—Yours truly, GEORGE." Joe Elvin, Fred Kitchen, and other good boys are taking a lively interest in the affair, and that delightful actress Miss Ada Reeve sent a letter, not so completely full of sympathy and good wishes but that room was left for a handsome donation towards the expenses. By the way, Miss Reeve made her first public appearance as a very tiny child at one of Johnny's benefit performances at the Pavilion Theatre, reciting, "The Cat and the Kitten."

THE GRAND, CLAPHAM.

The recent deplorable fire at Clapham Junction has not been without its effect on local variety-goers, and it is only by dint of the most attractive fare that Mr. Walter Gibbons' hall on St. John's-hill is able to maintain its popularity. Heading a varied bill is Mr. Lew Lake's latest sketch, King Nobbler, in which the adventures of Jerry and Nobbler are carried on in a style that reminds one of the thrilling serials that prove so attractive to the boys of England. There is, of course, the added humours of the incorrigible and inseparable pair, not to speak of the diverting Abey, who accompanies them on their hilarious travels. Merriment reigns throughout the sketch, which is mounted in an elaborate and complete style rarely reached by a music hall production.

Less pretentious, but equally effective is the duologue, Jim's Pal, presented by Shirley and Ransome. The simple sentiment and homely humour of the little coster episode make a powerful appeal to the house, which is kept pleasantly vacillating between laughter and tears, the former, however, predominating. The playlet is admirably acted, and Jim's song at the close is quite tunefully sung. Essman, who has recently been delighting habitués of the Home of Mystery at Langham-place, brings to the halls his clever display, in which many novel tricks are included. His "juggling waiter" is a marvellous personage, and the audience watch in amazement his manipulation of various household articles from which the element of "fake" is refreshingly absent.

A merry time is spent in the company of Mr. Frank Fort, described as the Johannesburg Jester. One remembers him at Margate, to the gaiety of which popular resort he has for many years ministered. Mr. Fort's chief means of provoking mirth is by his biographies of celebrities, in which quaint accounts are given of famous personages, while comic views on courtship and marriage are expressed in a song set to the tune of "The Campbells Are Coming." Mr. Archie Jervaise is a young comedian of the "swell" type, with a powerful voice and an emphatic method. He has a song with the refrain "I've been looking for you for years and years and years," which is taken up by the gallery, and inspiration for a comic lay is also found in the "Cinematograph Palace," and of a visit thereto. A bright comedienne and an expert dancer is seen in Miss Ivy Aberdare, who is loudly cheered for a smartly-executed wooden shoe dance, in which rare skill is exhibited. The Three Glenvilles give a clever dancing speciality, and other contributors to the bill are Yvonne Lamor, "somewhat different comedienne," and the Warsaw Brothers, Australian musical pair. The subjects on the Bioscope are of the newest. Mr. Fred C. Cockerill continues to act ably as manager, and has a new assistant in the person of Mr. H. J. Campbell.

THE SORE THROAT GAG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—The following is an example of the ease with which artists can get doctors' certificates. I am in the habit of running several pantomimes, and towards the end of the run frequently find artists try to take it easy; but I think the following is the limit: We are within ten days of the finish of a run and my conductor had an accident on Thursday, Feb. 3. My manager sent for the theatre doctor to see him. Immediately my principal boy hears that a doctor is on the stage she also demands to see him, with the result that the following certificate is handed to my manager:—"Copy of certificate given Thursday night, Feb. 3. I hereby certify that I consider Miss —— is unable to sing for a couple of nights owing to a relaxed sore throat." This certificate was brought to my office on Friday, Feb. 4, and in reply I sent the following letter to the artist:—"Dear Miss ——, I have received a certificate from Dr. —— informing me that you are not able to fulfil your professional duties on account of your throat. I am sorry, and hope you will soon be all right. However, I consider it best that you have complete rest, and I have arranged for your understudy to play the part for the present. Under the circumstances I must request that you will furnish me with a doctor's certificate before I can allow you to play the part again, as I would not like you to break down on the stage." This letter my manager handed to the artist on Friday night, Feb. 4., and as she was the only one of the company not paid on that night she could see that I intended to stop her salary if she did not appear. The result was that she was at my office on Saturday morning before 10.30 with the following certificate from another doctor:—"Copy of the second certificate. "This is to certify that I have this day examined Miss —— and find that her throat is now quite well, that her present condition of health is very good, and she is quite fit to sing and appear on the stage without any fear of a breakdown."—Yours faithfully, CATARRH.

HIS MAJESTY KING EDWARD attended the performance of The Marriage of Kitty at the Brighton Alhambra yesterday afternoon.

"DR. MAUD'S FIRST PATIENT."

Duologue, by H. Darnley, Presented at the Oxford, for the First Time, on Monday, Feb. 7.

Dr. Maud ..... MISS CLARA BERNARD
Crimpet ..... MR. MARTIN ADESON

This lively little farcette, which is from the pen of Mr. Herbert Darnley, has done excellent service in the cause of laughter in the suburbs and provinces, and its reception at the Oxford during the week has completely justified its reputation. Mr. Darnley, its author, wielding a prolific pen, has a broad view of the exigencies of comedy at the halls. He has no use for subtlety. He knows when to limit the cackle and get to the situations—no one better. Dr. Maud herself is brief and to the point in explanation of her impecuniosity, and the hope raised by the promise of a rich patient afflicted with rheumatism sends joy to her heart. She is expecting every minute to hear the step of Crimpet, the millionaire, and to greet him with warmth as her first patient. There are, of course, two Crimpets. The one with which we are concerned is a gasfitter, who has come to cut off the supply to the meter. Dr. Maud knows that eccentricity has marked down for its own many a millionaire, and it does not occur to her that she is not dealing with a moneyed magnate. At any rate, she proceeds with her treatment, and previous to sounding, or massage, or both, she orders him to remove his coat, waistcoat, and shirt. Plenty of mirth arises from his excited and mock melodramatic protests against the removal of the last garment mentioned. She slaps his chest, and stethoscopes him; and when the diverting business has been carried on for the length of time necessary, Crimpet has to confess to his purpose in coming, and proceeds to cut off the gas. He places her in connection with an electric battery under which he has already writhed, and leaves her squirming in semi-darkness.

Mr. Martin Adeson, a comedian of resource, experience, and excellent quality, plays the gasfitter with a real sense of its farcical possibilities. He gets the audience laughing, and keeps them at it. We have few farce actors now, and Mr. Adeson is certainly one of the best of them. Miss Clara Bernard, engaging and suave, has presence, and makes an admirable foil. The mirth created by Dr. Maud's First Patient is quite uproarious.

Another amusing sketch in Mr. Blyth-Pratt's capitally-varied bill is The Matrimonial Fee, presented by Harry First and company. This is literally a case of Harry "first and the rest nowhere," as no names of the cast are given on the programme. Still another comic item is put down to Mr. Joe Peterman and company. It is known as The Belle of the Orient, and is entitled an Oriental fantasy. Since we noticed its original production at the Oxford a year or two since it has been played successfully on tour. No names are given of the interpreters of this blend of music and farce.

The variety company includes Miss Lucy Clarke, the popular contralto, who makes a welcome return to the scene of her early triumphs; Mr. Syd May, with a capital imitation of Gus Elen; Mr. Tom Dunville, a warm favourite; Miss Victoria Monks, the "Oxford idol" Mr. Sam Mayo, the immobile one; the Hiatts, in musical comedy mélange; M. Gintaro, Japanese juggler and top-spinner; Max Waldon, protean artist; Mr. Gilbert Girard, in animal imitations; Miss Ida Barr, vocalist; Les Xentrix, speciality artists; Mr. Geo. Formby, the Lancashire comic; Troba, juggler; the Gothams, vocalists and comedians; and Miss Zona Vevey, in a pastorale, assisted by M. Max Erard at the piano.

THE GRANVILLE.

In very few districts are the lovers of variety more ably catered for than in Walham Green, at the cosy little hall which is so efficiently managed by Mr. Robert W. Duce.

Mr. T. E. Dunville tops the bill this week, and, needless to say, this peculiarly quaint comedian makes an instantaneous hit. Amusingly programmed as "the long, lean, lorn loon," he certainly carries out the description to a nicety. His first song, "Rub it in," thoroughly tickles the risible faculties of the house, but the success of this number is entirely eclipsed by the next, in which, garbed as an eccentric policeman, he goes at great length to explain, that despite his many more or less startling achievements in the force "They haven't made him sergeant yet." Miss Nellie Wilson, a pleasing comedienne and an accomplished dancer, is always sure of a hearty welcome here. Mr. Gene Brant is a droll comedian with some funny methods, and he renders his two songs "In our home, sweet home" and "Mrs. Dunegan" in a capable way.

Miss Phœbe Mercer and Mr. Frank Harrison figure in a farcical episode smartly written by Zoe Herbert, entitled Mistakes Will Happen. Most of the dialogue is crisp and sparkling, the humour of it hinging on the fact that the lady's loss of a pet dog is misconstrued into being laments for the loss of a husband. Miss Lucy Clarke is an experienced vocalist, with an easy style, and very well received are her pretty ditties "Katie" and "Rory O'Moore." Mr. Edward Rose and Miss Dora Challoner are a clever comedy couple with a laughable duologue The Porter and the Singer, in which Mr. Rose is very happy in his impersonations of Gus Elen and Sam Mayo.

Mr. Tom Jones is a Welsh comedian entirely with a style of his own, his humour being of that crisp and dry variety that is always so effective, and which finds ample opportunity for an outlet in his up-to-date ditty "Clara ap Morgan." Mr. C. H. Charlton is a conjuror with many mystifying tricks, one of the most startling being the inexhaustible kettle, from which an endless variety of drinks are poured from time to time, according to the wish of any individual, such widely divorsified liquids as milk, whisky, beer, or green Chartreuse being dispensed at will. Miss Jessie Lee also appeared, and some clear films were screened on the cinematograph, which brought a pleasant evening's entertainment to a fitting close. The artists receive every assistance from the band, which is ably controlled by Mr. Frank Thomas.

THE attraction at the Sheerness Hippodrome this week is provided by Mr. Norman V. Norman's company in David Garrick. Mr. Norman V. Norman appears in the title-rôle, supported by Mr. Norman Leslie as Simon Ingot, Messrs. Frederick Lock, Alfred Wiltshire, J. Anthony Snaith, Campbell Cargill, and Herbert Alexander, Misses Mabyn Fay, Ethel Coleridge, and Beatrice Wilson.

AT the Palace, Porth, Ed. E. Ford, the "Australian sundowner and president of the face trust," appears with unbounded success; the Rangers present a capital comedy cycle act; Lydia Neilson's Boys and Girls, in their smart and up-to-date scena "A Drawing-room Rehearsal," are favourites; Sam Williams is a first-class character comedian; Godfrey Price, Welsh baritone, is an exceptionally good singer; Madge Cliff and Eveline Vanston, in a comedy duo An Actress Protégé, introduce piano, singing, 'cello, and violin with marked success; Howard and Wall's, in Taming a Wife, arouse roars of laughter; the Spanish Goldinis do carpet-spinning extraordinary with marvellous electrical effects; and the Palascope supplies entertaining pictures.

BY the courtesy of the management of the Dewsbury Empire, the "old folks" of the district (who attended the annual treat) will be admitted free to the matinée performance to-day of the pantomime Sleeping Beauty, the whole of the pit being reserved for this purpose.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

The Earl's Court Carnival.
The Empress, Earl's Court, will be the scene of a grand historical and fancy dress carnival next Wednesday, which should present a spectacle well worth seeing. Manager Izod has been hustling again, with a result that tickets have been selling like wildfire. This is not surprising, for the splendid prize list is a great inducement to compete. As before, skating will start at 7.30 and be continued well into the early hours of the morning. Many members of the profession have promised to "turn up" as early in the evening as their engagements will permit.

Martine for Earl's Court Carnival.
Martine, who gives a very marvellous contorting and acrobatic performance on skates, has been specially engaged to appear at the Empress Hall Rink, Earl's Court, on the occasion of the fancy dress carnival on Wednesday next,

O'Hagan Wins S.C. Championship.
Under the auspices of the National Skating Association, the One Mile Roller Skating Amateur Championship of the Southern Counties was decided last Wednesday evening at the Empress Hall, Earl's Court. There was a capital entry, necessitating six preliminary heats each of 11 laps and 60 yards, which constituted the mile. The final produced a keen race between O'Hagan, of the Empress Club, and Swain and Cocker, of the Lava S.C., whose headquarters are at Denmark Hill. There was a crowded company, and the champion had a very flattering reception. The prizes consisted of gold, silver, and bronze N.S.A. medals. The chief officials were:—Judges, Mr. Guy M. Campbell and Col. G. T. B. Cobbett; stewards, Messrs. H. Taylor, C. More, H. Y. Evans, and S. T. Wood; timekeepers, Messrs. H. J. Rothery and D. K. Hall; standard timekeeper, Mr. Barclay; starter, Mr. H. G. Brockman.

The Final Heat.
Little and Cocker made the early pace, but after a quarter of a mile Cocker, O'Hagan, and Swain became the order, this trio just heading the others. Three laps from the finish O'Hagan came to the front, followed by Cocker, with Swain close up. The pace was not great, but at the bell all three spurted tremendously. O'Hagan led into the straight, but Swain, going for the line with splendid resolution, only just lost the first place by inches—a very close finish indeed. A yard away, Cocker was placed third. Time, 3min. 30 2-5sec. Final heat: H. O'Hagan, Empress S.C., 1; D. M. Swain, Lava S.C., 2; A. W. K. Cocker, Lava S.C., 3. Certificates were awarded to the following competitors, who beat 3min. 30sec. in their heat:—F. E. Barker, H. H. May, R. S. Marston, and F. W. Stent.

A Champion of To-morrow.
To show the great interest taken in this race, it can be recorded that little Master P. J. Twomey, the twelve-year-old son of the Mumbles' piermaster, journeyed to London to take part in the race. This little lad's time at a private trial was 3min. 45 1-5sec. for the mile at Earl's Court, and 3.52 at Brixton. His age was his only disqualification, and the small boy bravely kept back the tears when this fact was announced to him.

One Mile Championship of the World.
Everybody is talking about the chief sporting event in the rinking world—the One Mile World's Championship and a purse of £80—to be run off at Earl's Court during the week of Feb. 20. It will be remembered that some few weeks ago Mr. J. White, on behalf of Mr. Rodney Peters, the champion speed skater of America, challenged the best men in England to race for £100 aside and the best purse, but although £100 was put down at the Sporting Life office by Mr. White for Peters, there were no takers, and the money was withdrawn. There seems now, however, to be some likelihood of Mr. Rodney Peters being able to meet our best, and if the offer of Mr. Willard, the managing-director of the Empress Hall, and other Empress rinks throughout the country, be accepted, then we shall have a series of races worth going some distance to see.

What the Colonel Thinks.
Colonel G. T. B. Cobbett has been ice rinking in Switzerland recently. On Wednesday night, when judging the N.S.A. championship, he told the writer that after twenty years' experience on ice and rollers, he considered the floor at Earl's Court to be the finest surface he had ever ventured on.

Last Day the 27th.
The Sunday Skating Club at Olympia comes to an end on the 27th of this month.

Special Prizes for Olympia Carnival.
Lord Crichton, the vice-presidents, and committee of the Olympia Sunday Skating Club, are offering two special prizes to be competed for at the Masquerade and Fancy Dress Carnival at Olympia on Friday evening next by lady members of the Sunday Skating Club only.

Judges for Olympia Carnival.
Sir William and Lady Bull, Kate Cutler, and Phyllis Dare are among those who have promised to act as judging committee at the big masquerade carnival to be held at Olympia on Feb. 18.

Duchess and Daughters Rink.
The Duchess of Devonshire and her two daughters, Lady Maud Cavendish and Lady Blanche Cavendish, the Duchess of Norfolk, Lady Theodosia Acheson, and Lord Winterton have indulged in roller skating at Devonshire Park this week.

Crystal Palace Carnival.
The second Fancy Dress Skating Carnival, which takes place on Wednesday next, bids fair to be a great success. The judging will take place at 8 p.m., and at 8.45 Syd Martin will present his unique and grotesque skating act. At 9 o'clock the prizes will be presented to the lucky winners.

Roller Skating in a Park.
On a specially asphalted piece of ground round the bandstand in Southwark Park scores of youngsters are to be seen daily whirling round on roller skates.

The Silent Floor.
Hitherto the handicaps of the National Skating Association have usually been held on the Empress track at Earl's Court, which gives eleven laps to the mile. Now it is announced that some of the meetings are to take place at the new Maida Vale rink. The London rinks grow more luxurious every week, but only one rink, and that the Empress, Earl's Court, has discovered any means of silencing the noise of the skates.

Mr. Willard's Sporting Offer.
Mr. Willard writes:—"To the Editor of the Sporting Life.—Sir,—Some time since an American skater, Mr. Rodney Peters, issued a challenge to any and every English speed skater, unfortunately with no results. It seems to me it is rather a pity we cannot arrange a match for this gentleman, and in the circumstances I am prepared to put up a purse of £80, £60 to go to the winner and £20 to go to the second, providing we can get the five best skaters in England at the present time to compete for this, viz.:—Messrs. Rodney Peters, Allie Moore, Charles Wilson, Bear, and Curtis, and anyone else who has any qualification to take part in a contest of this kind. I know Mr. Peters would jump at this chance, as nothing but the scalp of Mr. Allie Moore will satisfy him, and I have already written Mr. Charles Wilson to meet me. I think if he enters we could bring the match off. I have pleasure in enclosing you my cheque for £80, and would ask you to be good enough to appoint a referee for the match, which, if convenient, shall take place at the Empress Rink, Earl's Court, on the nights of Feb. 22, 23, 24, 25, and 26. It is understood that each man must meet the others in turn in separate heats.—I am, &c., P. W. Willard, Managing-Director."

The Entries.
At the moment of writing five well-known skaters are pledged to enter, and include Allie Moore, who won no fewer than five world's championships in 1908; Rodney Peters, who had a similar record last year; C. Wilson, who as the amateur champion of Great Britain was undefeated; he is also the present professional champion of Great Britain; A. Bear, the British professional champion of 1907 and 1908; and J. Plumridge, regarded as a coming man and a very dark horse indeed in Clubland. With five such men entered within three days of Mr. Willard's offer, and there being no handicap and nobody barred, this event promises to be the greatest struggle that has yet taken place on any rink in this country. Records are evidently going to be badly treated.

Value!
Mr. Alec Payne writes: "I had nearly 200 answers to my advertisement last week, which goes to show that rinkers read their Era regularly."

Apache Dance on Skates.
Alec Payne, who produced the Skating Ballet in Mr. Gus Levaine's Babes in the Wood pantomime, now in its ninth week, is introducing an Apache dance on skates in conjunction with Miss Flo Blake's act.

Should a Lady Refuse?
At the fashionable skating rinks notices are occasionally put up indicating that partners only may skate for the moment. A correspondent wants to know: Should a lady refuse if a stranger rolls up to her and asks her to skate?

Hurst's "Enchanter."
Walter Hurst, the well-known Continental trick skater, is manager of the Boston Rink, and besides being a skater is a clever musician. Lovers of music, especially skaters, will appreciate the new skate dance he has just composed, and which is now published under the title "Enchanter." It is his ambition to improve and make skate-dancing a great success and a boon to rinks.

St. Valentine on Wheels.
There is quite the ring of the ballroom about the programme that will be submitted at the fancy dress carnival to be held at the Walthamstow Rink on Monday next. At 7.30 a start is made with the march, "Let's be jolly," then follows a two step, a valse (couples only), and two more waltzes, another two step, "The Mosquito's parade." After that we get a grand fancy dress parade, a valse, a two-step competition (couples), another valse, a waltzing competition (couples), a two step, a musical chair competition (ladies), a valse (couples only), and then the prize distribution, and parade of winners. "Yip-i-addy-i-ay" gives the cue for couples only to two-step, and the "Thunderer's march" proclaims the beginning of the confetti battle. Patrons of the rink will be invited to judge.

Coming Catford Carnival.
A Fancy Dress Skating Carnival will take place at the Central Hall, Catford, on Thursday, Feb. 17. Judging will be at 9.15.

Waltzing at Wandsworth.
On Wednesday last the management of the Wandsworth Rink held its first amateur waltzing competition. The competition was watched with a deal of interest by about 200 people. The first prizes, pearl opera glasses (lady) and a calendar clock (gentleman) were eventually won by Miss Olive Trainor and Mr. Martin; the second prizes, a clock (lady) and writing cabinet (gentleman), going to Miss Bright and Mr. R. Pooley

Speed Club for Wandsworth.
On Monday last about twenty patrons of the Wandsworth Roller Skating Rink met together to discuss the formation of a Speed Club. Mr. L. Morley (rink manager) presided, and if the members continue to be as enthusiastic as they were at the initial meeting we shall expect to hear big things about the Wandsworth Speed Club. The following gentlemen were elected as officers:—Hon. sec., Mr. Hunt; Club handicapper, Mr. W. Doland (floor manager); committee, Messrs. L. Morley, J. Lunn, A. Sutton, R. F. Palmer, and J. Hayward.

Wood Green's Latest.
Another rink has been opened at Wood Green. The North London Rink, as it is called, is situated in River Park-road, in close proximity to the Public Library. Measuring 180ft. by 80ft., the floor has a skating area of nearly 15,000 square ft. It is constructed of best rock maple, laid on top of a felt-covered pine floor, under which is a strong foundation of concrete and asphalt. Eight hundred pairs of skates are provided. They are of the well-known "Wolf" make—the same as are used on the famous Earl's Court rink. At one end of the rink is a large balcony, from which an excellent view of the skating can be obtained. Mr. H. G. Boys is the resident manager. He is a member of the International Professional Roller Skating Association, and comes to Wood Green from the well-known Empress Rinks. Gymkanas and carnivals will be held frequently throughout the season. The opening ceremony was performed by Mr. Carlton Roberts, chairman of the Board of Directors, in the presence of some hundreds of people. Twice—once in the afternoon and once in the evening—exhibitions of fancy skating were given by Professor Carrol. He gave a very clever display, including a leap over ten chairs. At the close ten minutes were devoted to fast skating, gentlemen only being allowed on the rink.

Monohan at Rotherham.
The Great Monohan, the champion trick skater, is the attraction at the Philadelphian Skating Rink, Rotherham, this week. He has had a splendid reception.

Monohan at Sutton.
Life was dull at Sutton, we are told, before the Rinkeries opened there. The management is nothing if not enterprising, and as the Great Monohan made such a furore when he appeared at the opening of the rink, he was then engaged to pay a return visit. The consequence was, the second date having arrived last week the Great Monohan had a magnificent reception. When the floor was cleared Monohan gave the first part of his performance. Then he invited competitors for the medal he proposed to offer for the best imitators of his great feat of skating on a rolling barrel, and the fun (for the majority) started. The medal was awarded to Mr. R. Hindwood, who managed to stay on the barrel for a few seconds. Gentlemen were invited to enter for the two-step skating, and a dozen started off. Monohan chose Mr. Hugh Matthews as the best exponent, and awarded him the medal. Ten ladies came forward for a similar competition, and they gave a splendid exhibition of graceful skating. One little girl skated beautifully, but the grace of her movements were somewhat marred by the fact that she found it hard work. The winner was Miss Goodison. Monohan was accorded a vote of thanks for giving the medals and judging the competitions. On the 18th of this month it is intended to hold a fancy dress carnival at the rink.

The Floor-Manager's Part.
The flowers presented to Bertha Doud Hack at Sheffield last Saturday evening were so numerous and heavy that the floor-manager had to be gallant and carry them off for her. Bertha goes back to Sheffield the last week in March.

Starting Early.
The skating instructor at Prince's makes his little fortune, and the popular teacher at Olympia has his reward. They both have their imitator in the small expert in a side street whom we encountered giving his lesson to a small girl. He charges a farthing a lesson, and the Islington small girls are willing to pay. He is a cautious lad, and has not yet married any of his pupils. But he has banked his farthings, and is dead set on an Easter Monday outing.

Rexo and the Insurance Man.
Edward Rexo, that astounding skater, who is this week starred at the London Hippodrome, writes that "the inclusion of a somersault in my exhibition led a large and influential insurance company to refuse me a policy on my life. Their terms were definite—no somersault if they were to give a policy. After I worked the trick for a number of years without meeting with any mishap I again approached that company. They were, however, as obdurate as before, but I eventually got another company to take me on. Much as amateurs may admire somersaulting on skates, it is a chas of trick work I would not advise them to try unless they are really expert acrobats, as well as good skaters. It has been comparatively easy and safe with me, because before I became a skater I was trained in the hard acrobatic school of the circus. I was not seven when turning somersaults, doing the splits, and hand and head balancing were my natural pastimes, and when my love for the rollers led me to abandon the ring for the rink, introducing on wheels what I had done so long on the sawdust came as a second nature to me."

Law and Roller Skating.
Mr. Hedderwick, London's new magistrate, at North London on Tuesday refused the application of the police for summonses against boys for roller skating in the streets, saying there was no law against the practice, and suggesting that the County Council should make by-laws on the subject.

You Must Have a Gavioliphone.
The cost of a band is a very serious expense to most rinks, more especially as an orchestra to be effective at all must be of not less than twelve instruments, therefore £20 or £30 per week for band is a very heavy item. The Gavioliphone is the finest substitute. This instrument is exactly what is required, and the time can be regulated to the slowest waltz or to a lightning galop. An 89-key instrument is being used at Earl's Court, which is the largest span building in England, in addition to a band of thirty performers, and a Gavioliphone fills this gigantic building even when 2000 skaters are on the floor. Mr. P. W. Willard has a number of these organs, ranging from £150 to £500, in stock. The Gavioliphone's good points are: It will wear for years; no repairs, tuning only every season; no heavy cylinders at enormous expense; music changed in ten seconds; any boy can take charge; impossible to get out of order; the only suitable instrument yet made for rinks; unless you can afford a band of fifteen to twenty performers you must have a Gavioliphone.

Bentley in the North.
Prof. Bentley, who, up to the time of the temporary closing of the Palace Skating Rink, Douglas, was its manager, is at present making a tour of the principal rinks in England, giving exhibitions. Last week he was at the Palace, Manchester, and this week he has been at the "Premier" rink in Liverpool.

Plenty of Fun at Bridlington.
Mr. Lawrence A. Williams, managing the Garden Rink, is supplying his patrons with plenty of novelties in the way of golf matches, juvenile carnivals, and special ladies' evenings. This week a military tournament causes much amusement. The various events, such as tilting at the ring, the Turk's head, tent pegging, and a special series of similar events for ladies, are very novel.

The "Garden of a Thousand Lights."
The application in Bridlington Police-court last Saturday by the Garden of a Thousand Lights Skating Rink Co., Ltd., Esplanade, Bridlington, for the renewal of the licence held for eight years by Messrs. Field and Co., Ltd., aroused keen opposition on the part of the owners and occupiers of the large boarding-houses and private premises adjoining. We shall get the result in a month's time.

"Best Out of London."
Devotees of the rollers are still on the increase, and the management of the Queen-street Olympia, Cardiff, have evidently hit the taste of the local rinkers, since a very appreciable increase of business is to be noted day by day. Radiators have been installed so that the building can be maintained at a comfortable temperture in all weathers. An up-to-date café is in course of construction for the special convenience of lady patrons. The floor is being resurfaced, and many professionals vote this establishment the best to be found out of London.

Skatery for Chichester.
An up-to-date skating rink is about to be established at Chichester. "Chichester Olympia, Ltd.," has been formed for the purpose of erecting, equipping, and conducting a high-class roller skating rink, and an electric theatre or cinematograph exhibition. An admirable site has been secured at Northgate, where a building, already existing, will be converted into what promises to be an ideal rink and electric theatre. The main rink will be a skating area of about 5,000 square feet. There will be a smaller rink for novices. The capital of the company is £4,000 in £1 shares, and it is hoped to open the building in March.

New Rink at Cork.
Another skating rink has been added to the growing number in Cork city, entitled the Cork City Skating Rink. It was formally declared open last week. The rink is replete with every comfort and accommodation for skaters and non-skaters, and contains tea room, ladies' and gentlemen's dressing rooms, and promenade.

Derby Rinker's Success.
Mr. Leonard Innes, of Derby, last week won the half-mile amateur championship of Nottingham at the Empress Rink, defeating by three-quarters of a lap G. Warwick, the holder.

Rink for Dunoon Gardens.
After prolonged negotiations, Dunoon Town Council last week, at a special meeting, agreed to grant Mr. W. W. Morton, Glasgow, permission to erect a roller skating rink in the Castle Gardens. Mr. Morton is to pay £100 a year for the ground on a ten years' lease, the building at the end of that time to revert to the Council. It will be used exclusively for skating purposes.

Pushball at Durham.
At the Olympia Rink here this week pushball has been starred, matches between local gentlemen causing great merriment. When finished the contestants looked more like sweeps than rinkers. On Wednesday night a good match was played between Durham and Bishop Auckland teams, the Durham team winning by five points to three.

Councillor Bostock Closes Zoo Rink.
Councillor E. H. Bostock has decided to shut down the Zoo Rink at the end of this week, and has several plans in contemplation for the future. Of these, one that includes an up-to-date circus, with probably a variety of side-shows, is most likely to be adopted. At the Dennistoun Rink a novel spectacle is in preparation for Monday first, the rinkers to be dressed in characters from the works of Dickens, Scott, and Burns, and with the assistance of the Fancy Dress Association, it is sure to be a hit.

"Dutchland" at King's Lynn.
St. James's Hall Roller Skating Rink presented a charming appearance on Monday evening, upon the occasion of the first Cinderella. The huge building was superbly decorated with fine panoramic views of Dutch life and landscape. The great stage was set with magnificent representation of Marken, one of the skating centres of Holland, and with profile foreground and windmills presented a delightful picture. Other pictures included skating on the dykes, the whole being painted by Messrs. G. M. Bridges and Son. The costumes were mainly Dutch and were in pleasing variety, making the task of the judges most difficult. During the proceedings Mr. W. Winch, the business manager, announced that other spectacles of equal brilliancy would be presented during the season.

Leicester Rinking.
Mr. Court informs our Leicester representative that Mr. A. H. Bear, the well-known professional skater, is to meet Mr. Archie De Board in a one mile race on Feb. 15, for £20 aside, at the Empress Rink. Mr. A. H. Bear caused a sensation in Leicester some time ago by his defeat of Mr. T. P. Blakesley in two races out of three for the championship. At the Boulevard Rink on Monday a football match on skates took place. The Belgrave Rink is, unfortunately, handicapped by being without a music licence. It is a great pity that it should be thus impeded, as the rink is well built, well conducted, and exceedingly well-managed.

Middlesbrough v. Stockton.
On Tuesday last Stockton Royal Rink Hockey Club played their return match at the Olympia, Middlesbrough, and a very keen and exciting game was witnessed. The home team scored the only goal of the match in the first half.

Rhondda Rinks.
A very successful carnival and confetti battle was held at Olympia, Pentre, last Tuesday. The management has decided to hold a Grand Carnival of Nations on St. David's Day, March 1.

Widnes's Rinks.
The number of rinks in the murky chemical town has been reduced from five to three. This does not denote a decrease in the number of devotees to the popular pastime of rinkology. The remaining three rinks are extensive patronised, and the majority of Widnesians are accomplished skaters. The Borough Rink Hockey Club holds the honourable position of being the finest hockey team in the Liverpool and Wirral League.

Harry Hall Goes to Paris.
Harry Hall, late floor manager at Glasgow, Bolton, and Newcastle-on-Tyne, has been appointed floor manager at a rink in Paris.

C. P. Crawford to the Rescue.
C. P. Crawford used his large motor-boat to good purpose during the recent Paris floods, and he organised a rescue party which did magnificent work. In addition he devoted the whole of one afternoon's receipts at the St. Didier Rink to the American Board of Trade's fund for the sufferers. Both the Hippodrome and St. Didier rinks in Paris are high up, and were out of the reach of the overflow from the Seine.

Paris Hippodrome Carnival.
Although this year the Mardi Gras festivities were considerably curtailed, the customary processions, masquerading, and confetti throwing on the boulevards being abandoned in consequence of the effects of the recent inundations, Messrs. Crawford and Wilkins stepped into the breach and organised a big bal masque at their Hippodrome rink. Throngs of enthusiastic skaters, in every variety of fancy costume, flocked hither, and the huge auditorium was crowded by chanticlers, toreadors, pierrots, Indian chiefs, Apaches, Salomes, male and female impersonators, and scores of other fancy-dress costumes too numerous to mention. The whole scene was of exceptional brilliance. At midnight Mr. George H. Callis, the resident-manager, organised a confetti battle, and serpentine shooting followed. Franc R. E. Woodward was an active master of ceremonies. Attractions are now constantly introduced at the Paris Hippodrome for the entertainment of spectators. W. Curtis, junior, gives frequent exhibitions, and races against Peters and Murphy for big stakes. A six days' racing season, for which all the chief available speed skaters in Europe will be engaged, is being arranged in conjunction with the French journal L'Auto.

RICHARDSON SKATES are the BEST in the WORLD.
They have held ALL WORLD'S RECORDS for twenty-four years, and every event of importance during the past few years, either fast or fancy has been won on RICHARDSON SKATES, including Harley Davidson's victory at Olympia Rink, London, February 26th, 1909.
STATEMENTS WHICH CANNOT BE DISPUTED:
The Richardson Ball Bearing Skate Co. positively equipped 80 per cent. of the Rinks operating in America. Sixty per cent. of the Rinks in this country operated by independent rink proprietors are equipped with Richardson Ball Bearing Skates.
Richardson Skates are the universal choice of, and used by, practically all the leading instructors, unless employed in rinks operated by other skate manufacturers. The Richardson is the most perfectly constructed Skate on the market. The front truck is under the ball of the foot, and the rear truck practically under the heel, which allows the skater to be over his work. This principle is acknowledged to be the best by the leading skaters of the world. Rear trucks extending back of heel only act as a leverage when skaters lose their balance.
The Richardson Ball Bearing Skate Factory have equipped more Independent Rinks than all other manufacturers combined.
The repairs of Richardson Skates are 50 per cent. less than those of any other make, and the simplicity of construction makes it an easy matter to effect repairs.
Manufacturers: Richardson Ball Bearing Skate Co., Chicago, U.S.A.
Sole Distributing Agents for Europe: J. G. PLIMPTON & CO., Limited, Plimpton's Buildings, 116, Old Hall Street, Liverpool; 38 and 40, Curtain Road, London, E.C.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Lynn Mart.

THE forthcoming meetings at King's Lynn have a special interest, in view of the important matters that must be considered by the executive council of the Guild. The Parliamentary work is of the gravest moment to the showpeople on the great Midland round. If the Handsworth Corporation succeed in their endeavour, it will encourage other public bodies to attempt the same thing, and the show business in one of its most important centres will be seriously injured. Handsworth cannot be permitted to obtain its penalising clauses against the show business without the most strenuous opposition. The petition against the Handsworth Bill (if, in the meantime, the Guild officials do not succeed in their negotiations) must be filed before the 19th of this month.

The West Riding of Yorkshire and Licences.

THE Rev. T. Horne and Mr. Goldthorpe Marshall (representing the Showmen's Guild) had a most useful conference—arranged for by the Guild—with the chief officers of the Council concerned with the issue of licences to travelling shows. A most friendly and frank discussion took place, and the points of objection raised by the showmen were most carefully considered, and ultimately noted for reference to the General Purposes Committee of the County Council for their decision. Agreement was arrived at on various working points of detail that will greatly simplify the working of the Act in the future. It is satisfactory to state that in ever case where the Guild officials have intervened with regard to the Act and its administration the County and County Borough authorities have shown a cordial willingness to work with the organised showmen.

THE points under discussion are in the following copy of the County Council's conditions to be observed by all showman licensees in the West Riding:—

"CINEMATOGRAPH ACT, 1909.

"Conditions to be observed when the premises are of a movable character, in respect of which a licence has been granted by the County Council.

"When it is proposed to give a cinematograph exhibition in any building or structure of a moveable character in respect of which a licence has been granted by the Council of the county in which the owner ordinarily resides the following conditions shall be imposed and notified to the occupier in writing, viz.:—

"1. The building or structure shall be erected in an isolated position and at least 30 feet from any building.

"2. The building or structure shall not remain erected upon any one site for a period exceeding three consecutive calendar months.

"3. All doors and barriers must open outwards.

"4. All gangways, passages, and staircases intended for the exit of the audience shall be kept entirely free from chairs or other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary; nor shall persons be allowed to congregate there so as to obstruct the free passage of the audience.

"5. The owner shall prevent the admission of any persons who cannot be accommodated without causing such obstruction or causing undue or inconvenient overcrowding of any part of the building or structure.

"6. The owner shall be responsible for providing a staff of attendants sufficient and competent to secure the safety of the public, particularly at entertainments intended mainly for children and young people.

"7. All doors not ordinarily used for exit, but available as additional means of escape in case of alarm, shall be indicated by painted or printed notices in plain letters not less than 2in. in length.

"8. The owner shall to the best of his ability maintain and keep good order and decent behaviour in the premises during the time of public performance.

"Regulations made by the Secretary of State.

"The owner of any building or structure of a movable character must comply with the Regulations made by the Secretary of State.

"Breach of Conditions.

"For every breach of these conditions or of the Regulations made by the Secretary of State the owner of any building or structure of a movable character is liable to a fine not exceeding £20 on summary conviction."

Rotherham Statutes Fair.

WHILST down in Yorkshire, the organising chaplain arranged for an interview with the Town Clerk of Rotherham. Considerable progress was made with regard to one or two matters in dispute between the Corporation and the organised showmen. There is every prospect of a most friendly agreement being arrived at, and the old Statutes Fair will become more prosperous than ever.

The Date of Bolton Summer Fair.

THE old Whitsun Week fixture at Bolton has been changed, to coincide with the operatives holiday week at the end of June. The date this year will be June 25 to 29 inclusive. This change of date has been arranged after consultation with the executive officials of the Guild and the British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union.

Maesteg Fair, Wales.

THE annual February Fair was held on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Pleasure-seekers were well catered for by Messrs. Wadbrook and Scard, who were in attendance with their Bioscope and variety theatre. Amongst the fine films displayed were the following:—The Floods of Paris, Before the Mast, and The Maesteg Horse Show. The latter caused a deal of interest locally. Variety turns were given by William and Hayes, in The Prima Donna and the Tramp, and the Godfreys, in a musical comedy act, entitled The Coon and the Slavey. Mr. J. Studt's motor-cars were also in great demand. Hoop-la circles, rifle ranges, and cocoanut shies were supplied by Messrs. Wadbrook and Scard, North, Scott, Butlin, Freeman, and Davies. Other attractions were snake-charmers, phrenologists, &c.

Sale of a Famous French Menagerie.

A REFERENCE to our advertisements will discover the fact that Bidel's Menagerie is to come under the hammer on Feb. 22 at Paris. The sale is owing to the death of the proprietor. The late M. Bidel was the premier animal trainer of France, and the trained animals he left behind will find ready purchasers. The show, judging from the preliminary notice before us, must be a capital one, and up to date in every detail.

Longton Shrovetide Fair.

UNDER the banner of the monarch of British shows, Mr. P. Collins, the famous No. 1 show—Mrs. Flora Collins' Wonderland of Light and Illustration—was the centre of attraction and the money-magnet of the fair. P. Collins exhibited his fine set of racing motor-cars, the electric bikes, and the racing birds; W. Davies, with three-abreast gallopers, the ships in the air, and swings; Wm. Chaplain and N. Wright with juvenile horses, motors, and Teddy Bears; shooting galleries and ranges by Fossett and Wright; hoop-la circles by Powell, Wright and Hart; throwing games in great variety by Humphries, Connor, Cordwell, Wright, Chapman, Powell, Humphrey, Cooper, Thompson, Birch, and others. A good fair, and well patronised by the people of the Potteries.

JACOB STUDT is having a season of private business with his show, &c., at Southall. William Taylor, with the big show from the World's Fair, is at Acton. Forrest Brothers are on their ground at Mile End-road with machines and shows. James Manders, with picture show machine and other novelties, is on the Lillie-road, Fulham, Fairground. The other pitches for shows in London include: High-street, Deptford; High-street, Stratford; Cambridge Heath-road; Lavender-hill; and Arthur Burgess is holding a Fun City at Chelsea.

News from Yorkshire.

Harry Ashington with his show is at Adwalton; with him are W. Bassett, Redfern, and Daley with their fairground novelties and games. At Wombwell is (or was?) John Proctor—perhaps the show is now en route for Lynn. Harrison, with colossal auction van, is at the Broadway, Mitcham-road.

The Showmen's Guild at Lynn.

THE new vicar of Lynn (the Rev. J. C. Vaudrey) has written to the Guild Chaplain to the effect that the arrangement of many years' standing with reference to the showmen's service on the Mart will be carried out as usual this year. The chaplain will be the special preacher at St. Nicholas Church on the Sunday morning at 11, and the choir and clergy will assist at the afternoon service of the Guild.

Shrovetide Fair at Lichfield.

THE Lichfield Shrovetide Fair was held on Tuesday, but under existing arrangements with the City Council, Mr. P. Collins had opened proceedings on Saturday and Monday, the result being that the fair assumed considerable dimensions. The Market-square was well filled with attractions, the chief of which included Collins's splendid cinematograph exhibition, Collins's switchback roundabout, the haunted castle, numerous side-shows, and novelties. The Mayor of Lichfield (Councillor G. R. Benson, brother of the well-known actor and manager, Mr. F. R. Benson), together with Mr.

OPENING CEREMONY OF LICHFIELD SHROVETIDE FAIR.

Sheriff Winterton and the Town Clerk, the members of the Council, the mace-bearers and the cryer, opened the fair with the old-world proclamation, the ceremony being witnessed by a crowd of citizens and a throng of the employees of Mr. Collins, who appeared vastly interested in such an ancient ceremonial. The Mayor dispensed the usual hospitality to his guests and attendants on their return to the Guildhall. The other entertainers at the fair included Devant's hall of fun, shooting galleries and rifle ranges by Messrs. Dobson. The hoop-la circles and throwing games were by Messrs. Mitchell, Harris, Lewis, and other caterers.

The Fight for Mitcham Fair.

GREAT interest attaches to the coming election of the parish council of Mitcham. The people of Mitcham have only one chance of pressing their views upon their representatives, and that is only once in three years at the election. The friends of the Fair, although in a minority on the parish council, have made their power felt on the council. Many efforts have been made by these true friends of popular rights to convince the obdurate majority that the policy of the abolitionists is not acceptable to the great mass of the people of Mitcham. The time has now come (after three weary years of patient waiting) to show the would-be despoilers of the people's amusements that the people want their Fair and mean to have and to hold it.

The Long-Suffering People.

IT is so hard to nurse a grievance for three years, especially when the man who did you the wrong is in many other ways a good fellow. With regard to the Fair rights of the people of Mitcham, the parish council has both by grant of money and by repeated resolutions (some only carried by one vote, it is true) done all it could to destroy the people's Fair. The same council has ignored the expressed will of the people at two properly-convened parish meetings. The question of taking a poll of the people has been shelved—and why? The only honest answer is that a majority of the present parish council want to abolish the Fair in spite of the people's declared will at two parish meetings and at public meetings convened by the Showmen's Guild and other bodies.

What is the Duty of the Electors?

IT is to see that the Fair and its continuance is made a test question at the next election; it is to refuse to vote for the man who would help to rob the people of their old Fair. It is to teach a necessary and most salutary lesson to all those parish councillors who claim to know much better than the people themselves know what is good for Mitcham. That is a lesson that the people of Mitcham can only teach once in three years. The time is close at hand for teaching these arrogant would-be masters and dictators of Mitcham that as regards public matters, parish councillors, and, indeed, all elected persons, are not the masters but the servants of the people who send them in to place and power.

What will the Showmen's Guild Do?

IT was only by a stroke of good luck four years ago that showmen got warning of the movement to abolish Mitcham Fair. It was nearly too late to take action, but action was taken, and with immediate and good effect. The Home Secretary was petitioned, and the Guild petition strengthened the petition of two parish councillors who in the people's cause opposed the council in the matter.

THE showmen won the day; the Fair was held, and has been held every year since. Three years ago a new council was elected, and six Progressives got in. Public interest in the Fair question grew and grew—not only Mitcham but South London became enthusiastic in defence of the old-time Fair. The friends of the Fair on the parish council did their best to bring about a peaceful settlement; the friends of the Fair on the Board of Conservators also did their best, but without avail. The four Mitcham conservators have been opponents of the Fair all the time—sent there by the enemies of the Fair on the parish council. The Four Mitcham conservators are the nominees of the parish council, who, despite two parish meetings, still persist in forcing their will upon the people.

The Guild and the Election.

THE organised showmen will take care that the people do know who are their real friends in the matter. The Guild will not allow the question to go by default, but will work to rouse Mitcham to a true knowledge of its responsibilities and its power. It is at the ballot-box where autocrats find that they can no longer flout the people's wishes. The Guild has had to wait for the opportunity—the constitutional opportunity of helping the people of Mitcham to realise that Mitcham Fair is theirs and their children's annual Fair and local holiday for ever; that to lose so precious an heritage would be a craven thing, and would do despite to those who went before them; and that it would be a base betrayal of those who may follow after. To enter the lists, and to make the people's Fair a real people's question is the work before the Guild, and the many friends of the showmen in and around Mitcham will find the showmen ready to do their part to secure to the people for ever the ancient charter Fair of Mitcham.

British Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union.

THE above Society will hold its annual business committee meeting at King's Lynn on Wednesday next, Feb. 16, at 2.30 p.m. For place of meeting see advertisement.

Old-Fashioned Roundabout Engaged for Covent Garden.

AN old-fashioned "merry-go-round," which for generations has been the centre of attraction at English village fairs, arrives to-day at the Covent Garden Opera House. The "merry-go-round" is to take a silent part in Covent Garden opera for one night only, for its quaint steam organ with the moving mechanical figures will not assist with the music. The organ's tune will be played by the orchestra. This is the first time a "merry-go-round" has been introduced at this famous opera house. Together with a shooting gallery, fat man show, gingerbread stalls, &c., it will form the scenery of the Fair scene in The Village Romeo and Juliet (Delius) on Feb. 22. The whole of the stage will in this scene be transformed into a most realistic country fair, in which the company will be disguised as showmen, farmers, yokels, &c.

Fair in Music.

SPECIAL attention has been given by M. Delius, the composer, to the music, which even makes allowance for the cracking of rifles and the babel inseparable from a country pleasure fair. How to look picturesque and sing with wonted expression and dignity is puzzling not a few of the artists who will appear as showmen or gingerbread-stall keepers. As a brigand or peasant the matter is easy, but the character of the raucous-voiced caterer of pleasure at country fairs is quite a different matter to Covent Garden professionals. After its "turn" at Covent Garden on Feb. 22, the "merry-go-round" will, under the direction of its proprietor, once more commence a tour of the English villages.

THE veteran Little Thomas will hold his annual grand Bohemian concert at Stanley Hall, Junction-road, N., on March 14. The old Mohawk is sure of a bumper.

MISS ADA TILLEY has scored a success at the Palace, Bow, this week with her farcical sketch A Call to Arms. Mr. Walter B. Nugent and Mr. Harold Wagner are supporting Miss Tilley.

OF all the bouquets received by Miss Maidie Scott on the termination of the pantomime last Saturday at New Cross, she felt most flattered by one presented to her by the members of the Broadway orchestra — a real tribute to her popularity.

PRESENTATION.—On the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary benefit of Mr. J. F. Elliston, the managing-director of the Bolton Theatre and Entertainments Co., Ltd., occasion was taken by him to present his energetic and popular acting-manager, Mr. John Moncur, with a handsome liqueur tantalus.

THE numerous friends and admirers of Miss Amber Austa will be glad to hear of her complete recovery from her recent illness. The sprightly lady has some surprises in store, and hopes to resume business immediately. Mr. George Bastow likewise is in hopes of getting into harness shortly, and was observed lately darkly conspiring with Fred W. Leigh at Messrs. Francis and Day's, again concocting between them probably yet another "Galloping Major."

MANY members of the profession will be sorry to hear of the death, after a long illness, of Mr. Thomas J. Fishwick, a well-known sportsman, whose fine hostelry The Prince Edward, in Parkhurst-road, N., was the resort of nearly all the stars when fulfilling engagements at the Holloway Empire, and during the strenuous time of pantomime rehearsals sections of the company of the adjacent Marlborough Theatre have been glad to make use of the spacious saloon where "Flat-iron, London," welcomed them year after year. The deceased, who was a bachelor, was interred on Monday at Bow.

Belfast Press
pronounce it fine play.

Northern Whig says:—
"Driving a Girl to Destruction" is sure to prove A GREAT POPULAR SUCCESS, as it possesses all the requirements to that end. The plot is ingenious without being over-complicated. The dialogue is crisp and telling, and there is a succession of strong and thrilling situations, while the scenery and accessories are a feature of the production. . . . The unmistakably favourable verdict passed on the play by Belfast is certain to be endorsed in other centres. . . .
The Irish News says:—
There was a big house. . . . and the four acts were followed with a good deal of interest. . .. The plot never lags. . . . The play moves with tremendous rapidity. . . . The company is a strong one. . . . The staging and mounting was on an elaborate scale.
The Belfast News Letter says:—
. . . Her latest work is likely to bring her fresh popularity. . . . The play has plenty of exciting incidents to arrest the attention, and the humorous interludes which characterise it caused much amusement

NOTICE.—OPTION CLAUSE.

COUNSEL WAS REQUESTED TO ADVISE

Whether, having regard to the terms of Clause 16 in the model contract attached to the Arbitrator's Award, the Management are entitled to insist upon the exercise of their option.

(a) In the event of the Artiste having filled by engagements made either wholly or partly after the date of the contract, all vacant dates within 18 months after the date of the notice of intention to exercise the option, and

(b) In the event of the Artiste having, in similar manner, partly filled his time so that the number of vacant dates within that period is insufficient to comply with the option.

COUNSEL'S OPINION.

In my opinion the clause requires the Artiste so to arrange his or her engagements, made after the date of the contract with the Management as to render it possible for the artiste to fulfil a re-engagement with the Management, should the latter exercise the option conferred upon them by the contract; and that it is no answer for the Artiste to say that he or she cannot fulfil such re-engagement because of engagements made by him or by her after the date of the contract.

(a) In my opinion the Management are entitled to insist upon the exercise of their option, although the Artiste may have filled up all vacant dates within 18 months after the date of the notice of intention to exercise the option, provided such engagements were made wholly after the date of the contract. So far as these engagements were made before the date of the contract, the Artiste is entitled to fulfil them, and the Management cannot insist upon such engagements being a breach of the artist's contract with them.

(b) In my opinion the Artiste is bound to reserve sufficient dates to enable him to fulfil a re-engagement by the Management. If, therefore, he accepts engagements after the date of the contract which prevent him fulfilling his re-engagement in its entirety, he commits a breach of his re-engagement.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, and DISTRICT.—MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, and DISTRICT.—MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.—MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists working in the North of England who have odd weeks vacant are invited to communicate with the Local Manager at above Theatre, with a view to arranging a trial week.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to CO-OPERATIVE OFFICES, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill-matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

Frank Postlethwaite's Agency, and Tom Shaw.

EMPIRE, CAMBERWELL
(LTD.).

FOR SALE

at the end of present successful run,
FRANCIS LAIDLER'S
SUPERB PANTOMIME PRODUCTION,
BABES IN THE WOOD.

This magnificent production which is BREAKING ALL RECORDS at the THEATRE ROYAL, LEEDS, where it was produced on Dec. 23 last, is FOR SALE, only because Mr. Laidler has no use for it next season. The Gorgeous Scenery and Costumes are practically unsoiled.
Owing to the Phenomenal Success of this Pantomime it has been found necessary to put on an extra Matinée each week. There are now Matinées every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.
THE PRODUCTION COULD ALSO BE USED FOR "RED RIDING HOOD" PANTOMIME.

The LEEDS MERCURY says:—
The pantomime is superbly dressed and is staged with all the artistic taste in scenic effects that an exacting public expects now from every pantomime of first-class merits. Scenically it is one of the best ever staged at the Royal. The Fairies' Glade is a dazzling dream of floral beauty, and the last scene of all, the Levée at the Palace, is as beautiful as anything seen in Leeds.
The BRADFORD DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—
It is typical of the modern conception of pantomime—wonderful scenery and lovely dresses. The Royal has seen the production of fine pantomimes before, but never a finer than this, and Mr. Laidler may be congratulated on producing an artistic triumph at his first attempt in Leeds. The scenic effects are dazzling. No one who visits the Royal will go away dissatisfied.
Full particulars may be had on application.
FRANCIS LAIDLER, THEATRE ROYAL, LEEDS.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF BRIGHTON.

TO MANAGERS OF CONCERT PARTIES, ENTERTAINMENT CATERERS, AND OTHERS.

The Council hereby INVITE TENDERS
for the Hire of
1. A STAND on the Beach opposite Cannon Place.
2. The MADEIRA DRIVE BANDSTAND and the two lawns immediately adjoining; and
3. The WESTERN ESPLANADE BANDSTAND and one of the lawns adjoining, for the purpose of giving Entertainments during the Summer Season of 1910.

Conditions and forms of tender may be obtained on application at my Office at the Town Hall, Brighton, where sealed tenders addressed to me and endorsed "Tender for Hire of Stand on Beach" or "Tender for Hire of Bandstand," as the case may be, must be left before 10 o'clock in the forenoon on Wednesday, Feb. 23, 1910.
The Council do not bind themselves to accept the highest or any tender.
HUGO TALBOT, Town Clerk.
Town Hall, Brighton, Feb. 7, 1910.

ILFORD URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL.

OPEN-AIR CONCERTS

IN VALENTINES and SOUTH PARKS.

The above Council is prepared to RECEIVE OFFERS
for the privilege of giving open-air concerts in the bandstands in both Valentines and South Parks, Ilford, during next season, from May until September next, as follows:—
(1) For every Saturday.
(2) For every Thursday.
(3) For every Thursday and Saturday.
(4) For alternate Thursdays and Saturdays.

Chairs will be provided by the Council, and the promoters of the concerts will be allowed to charge the sum of twopence each for same, and one penny for programmes, but no collections will be permitted.
The programme on each occasion to be submitted to the Clerk to the Council for approval.
Sealed offers, endorsed "Tender for Open-air Concerts," to be delivered to the undersigned on or before Monday, the 21st day of Feb., 1910.
The Council does not bind itself to accept the highest or any offer.
By Order,
ADAM PARTINGTON,
Clerk and Solicitor to the Council.

BIOGRAPH FILMS.

Mr. J. W. Chapman's opinion of Biograph films:—
I consider your subjects splendid. They are greatly appreciated by my audience, who usually give a good round of applause at the end of each picture. They have excellent drawing powers, especially in Greenwich, and I have no hesitation in saying that I believe your films have helped considerably towards my extraordinary success at this theatre. With all good wishes.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Mr. Martin Harvey, with his admirably equipped company, is presenting selections from his well-known répertoire, including such fine media for the exercise of his versatile genius as The Breed of the Treshams, The Corsican Brothers, A Cigarette Maker's Romance, and Hamlet. In the company supporting Mr. Harvey are Miss N. de Silva, Miss Brenda Gibson, Mr. Charles Glenney, Mr. Owen Roughwood, and Mr. Leonard Craske. The popular actor's engagement has been nothing less than a triumph.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Percy H. Gallagher.—The outstanding feature of the Palace programme this week is the furniture-smashing sketch A Society Woman; Willie Atom and company present their comical episode Wiggles; and amongst the other turns are George S. Melvin, most versatile of comedians; the Gilberts, wire walkers; Lon Hale, a clever roller skater; Miss Agnes Tina, a versatile mimic; and Irene and Morton, comedy sketch artists.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Messrs. Lingford Carson and J. E. Barnes's company is playing here in The Drama of Life. Mr. Lingford Carson gives a meritorious study of Harry Beech; Mr. Archie Helsby as Walter Beech has a strong part, which he plays with distinction; Mr. Sidney Cranston is a mirth-provoking Sir Dobson Wilde; Mr. Marshall Meade plays with ability as Jack Lawton; and Mr. George B. Davies gives an admirable representation of Richard Brenton. Miss Patty Hastings acts with winning grace as Sylvia; Miss Alice Oliver realises the quaintness of the part of Lady Jane Wilde; Miss Beatrice Hudson is successful as Betty Black; and Master Robert Beech finds a capital exponent in Miss Doris Denville.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr Walter Mould.—Mr. William Watson's company is playing to record business here with Robinson Crusoe. Mlle. De Rose in the title-rôle renders some new songs in a pleasing style; Miss Hilda Claremont as Polly has a charming personality; Miss Etty Waldron as Mary is a great pantomime favourite here, and sings and dances prettily; Joe Waldron keeps the house in roars of laughter as John Willie; and Mr. Phil Lester makes a droll dame. Mr. Billy Watson is all that could be desired as Will Atkins, and Mr. Lem Naylor is a capital Capt. Blizzard. Mr. Cliff Dacre as Wreckeros and Miss Ruby Carlton as Wavina win golden opinions for their rendering of "Excelsior." Messrs. Lamber and Butler deserve a special word of praise for their excellent dancing, and are responsible for much fun as Friday and Saturday. The Sisters George as Maudie and Alice are prime favourites, and the singing of the Four Gilberts receives unstinted approbation.

ALDERSHOT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Saunes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—Variety for this week forms a change from the "legitimate." The Frantz troupe accomplish clever acrobatic feats; the Luzellas, two talented young ladies, go through a gymnastic and wire-walking act; the Menzies are amusing in their comedy absurdity The Suffragette; Lil Elfrida is encored in her impersonations of well-known artists; the Cecilias please in a musical selection; Lottie Leighton is a clever comedienne and clog dancer; and Frank Mortimer sings three capital songs.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Mr. W. Kelly's company is again here with A Royal Divorce. The leading rôles of Napoleon and Josephine are respectively sustained with histrionic discernment and skill by Mr. Keith Fraser and Miss Violet Ellicott; Mr. J. H. Roberts realises the cool, calculating diplomat Talleyrand; Mr. Chas. Stirling is a vigorous Marquis De Beaumont; Messrs. Edwin J. Collins and Harold S. Standing are capable interpreters of General Augereau and Marshal Murat; and Miss Winnie Tempest as Marie Louise fulfils all requirements.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—The Six Bros. Luck are here in their latest act H.M.S. Perhaps; Olive and Owen (Minnie and Bill) appear to advantage in a novel comedietta The Roadside Tinkers; Angus Strong, opera baritone, sings taking songs; Mabel Thorne, comedienne, is "fetching" in song and patter; the Boys of England are taking in barrack-room ballads; and Will Rhodes is droll in song and absurdity; Luis Hardt presents a new scena In Days of Old, with pretty scenic effects.

BARNSLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. A. C. Mitchell.—His Real Wife is doing good business, and the piece earns the approval of the audience. The star is Miss Ward, whose effective rendering of Rose Avondale is admired. Mr. Harding Thomas as Martin Avondale is good; Mr. Clifford Rean as Herbert Barton portrays his part excellently. The mounting and dressing is very creditable.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Smithson.—Baron's Burlesque Menagerie is a novelty; the Three Krakes introduce something new in their comedy act, Electric Car Conductor; Brothers Montes give a good show; Tom Clifford as a ventriloquist excels; Carlo and Mace Trio cause roars of laughter in their comedy acrobatic scena, Fun on the Lawn; Geo. Lawrence is a light comedian; Les Atans, Australian gymnasts, are good; Alice Golding sings sweetly; and the Palacescope shows some good pictures.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. James Kiddie's pantomime Dick Whitington is here. Mr. Charles Cork as Rodento and Miss Maude Leviete as Concordi sing and act well; Miss Lena Page is a capital Dick Whittington; and Miss Florrie Warner is a winning Alice. Mr. Tom Gott as Amelia Florence is very amusing, as are also Clifton and Gibson as Silly Peter and Lazy Larry, while Miss Florence Hilton is a very attractive Sir Algernon de Mash.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is here with The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning. Mr. William T. Riley makes a capital James Harcourt, and Mr. F. Ronald Adair is a typical tar as Willie Mason; Mr. Charles Ashwell does well as Jack Fenton; and Mr. Bert Agate as Johnny Walker is also good. Miss Jessie Belmore in the difficult part of Sophie Coventry shows much ability and resource.

TIVOLI.—Lessee, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—The top of the bill is occupied by Haley's Garden of Girls, vocalists and dancers, who give a charming entertainment; the Five Jolly Bakers, represented by the Will Douglas Troupe, is a highly amusing and clever acrobatic act; a really expert jumping act is given by the Royal Diamonds; Jock Mills, Scotch comedian and dancer, is popular; Bu Val is entertaining with his concertina; Connie Teca is a pleasing vocalist; and Vernon's Bioscope concludes.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. C. Routledge.—Morritt's entertainment is as popular as ever, and he is supported by the following capable artists: Madame Beulah, with a second sight performance; Miss Ethel Davies, a pleasing comedienne; George Guthrie, a clever instrumentalist; Mr. Gay West, a quaint comedian and dancer; and the Smalleys, triple horizontal bar performers. Some capital pictures are shown.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—East Lynne once again holds sway here. Mr. Tom Watt's company is here in the well-known Heath-Wilson Barrett version of East Lynne. Miss Laura Hansen as Lady Isabel gains general approbation for her skilful handling of the part; Mr. Joe Rowland's popularity as P.C. Bullock is unmistakeable; Archibald Carlyle is played with care by Mr. Rayson-Cousens; and Mr. Wilfred Percy Mansfield is duly hissed for his villainy as Francis Levison. Mr. William Turnbull is quite the best Justice Hare we can remember, and praise is due to Mr. Eric Lugg for the manner he enacts Richard. Mr. Tom Watt himself plays Lord Mounteven; Lawyer Dill is amusingly acted by Mr. Clifford Clifford; Miss Isabel Singleton is funnily fussy as Miss Cornelia; and a pleasing Barbara Hare is found in Miss Ida Heron.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Shuberth.—Leoni de Lausanne heads the bill this week in a sensational rifle-shooting act; Seener and Fridkins Troupe of Russian Singers and Dancers are always sure of a cordial reception; hilarity reigns while Johnny Dwyer holds the stage; a delightful turn is that given by Joan Deering, vocaliste-violinist; Harry Hilton's conjuring is excellent; Ted Curtis and Piccs. shine principally as dancers, though the juvenile of the trio shows promise as an eccentric comedian. The Sisters Harcourt, vocalists and dancers, also appear.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Mr. Graham Falcon's company is presenting the pantomime Cinderella, and the clever and charming principals, funny comedians, strong chorus, and pretty scenery are much appreciated. Miss Cecilia Gold is a graceful and winsome Cinderella; Miss Maud Nichols plays Prince Elegant in dashing fashion; Miss Lilian Drake is a smart and attractive Dandini; and Mr. Jack Waller is a versatile humorist as Baron Stoney. Mr. Wal Lesley and Mr. Albert Lawrence as the Ugly Sisters are responsible for a deal of fun; and Mr. Glen Alva is very droll as Billy Buttons. Mr. Jack Harley and Mr. Joe Hardon are clever knockabouts; Miss Rene Willoughby is good as Fairy Crystal; and Mr. Bert Darrell is a capital Demon. The speciality dancers are Miss Minnie Dorina, Miss Connie Langford, Miss Norah O'Malley, and Miss Hetty Ray, and Miss Beatrix Maude does some clever toe-work.

BELFAST.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson and company are paying a welcome return visit to this city with a round of Shakespearean plays. On this occasion Mr. Benson has secured the services of that capable actress Miss Genevieve Ward, who appears in Richard III. and Coriolanus. On Monday the former piece was presented and in the title-rôle Mr. Benson was eminently successful, his acting throughout gaining him enthusiastic admiration; Miss Genevieve Ward's histrionic ability found full scope in the rôle of Queen Margaret; and Mrs. F. R. Benson gave a finished impersonation of Lady Anne; Mr. Murray Carrington deserves to be congratulated upon his fine acting as Clarence, the Dream Scene gaining him a hearty recall; and the part of Earl of Richmond could be in no better hands than those of Mr. Eric Maxon; Mr. Moffatt Johnston was an excellent Duke of Buckingham; and Miss Violet Farebrother was all that could be desired as Queen Elizabeth; Mr. W. W. Caithness was good as Lord Stanley; and other rôles were presented by Miss Elinor Aicken Miss A. P. Nicholson Miss Molly Terraine, and Messrs. E. Harrison Guy B. Rathbone, Nigel Barrie, Fraze Outram and F. Conroy. Coriolanus, Macbeth, Much Ado About Nothing, and The Taming of the Shrew are also in the week's bill.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—A Life for a Life is presented by Mr. Charles Lester's company. Mr. Lester as Don Leon Fernandes gives a clever impersonation; Miss Lallah Davis acquits herself with distinction as Eulalie; and Mr. Hugh Travers furnishes a powerful portrayal of the villain Pedro Li Calci; Miss Dorothy Riddell appears to decided advantage as Kate Evelyn; and Mr. Bert Albert acts skilfully as Kit Oswald; Miss Winnie Rousby is a charming Venetta, exhibiting much ability for one so young; and the rôle of the Magistrate is done full justice to by Mr. J. Ernstone; Mr. Horace Buckley is decidedly humorous as an Irish policeman; and the Sheriff is in the safe hands of Mr. W. H. Carr. Other rôles are adequately presented by Miss Nell Ingram, and Messrs. Jack Mason, E. Williams, and J. B. Longfellow.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Messrs. Callahan and St. George are paying a return visit here, and their Irish comedy and musical items have been enthusiastically received; Vandy's juggling feats are marvellous; Miss Cecilia Maude, the singing conductress makes a big hit; Palles and Cussick raise much laughter with their comedy act; and Robins and Collier present with much eclat Miss Bacon's Easter Egg; Milner and Stoney are clever dancers; and Arthur Gill as a yokel is vastly entertaining. Also here are Lennie and Hast, in their fantasy; Monty Walker, comedian; and the Hippo scope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. C. Laidler.—The Elliott-Savonas top the bill here and gain a gratifying reception for their unique and beautifully staged musical act; Miss Mona Garrick's impersonations are so realistic; Victoria Dagmar and Clown execute some startling gymnastic feats; and Miss Ethel Bourne is a talented vocalist and instrumentalist; Mr Arthur Woodville is a capital light comedian; and Miss Madge Beresford is a dashing comedienne with good songs. Also here are Mr. Victor Travers, comedian, and the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Some capital pictures have been exhibited here, including Dove Eyes Gratitude, A Woman's Treachery, Three Thanksgivings, &c. The vaudeville element is sustained by Mr. W. Challiner, a capital vocalist and dancer; and Mr. Ellis Barrieton vocalist, who made a terrific hit on Monday with his chorus songs.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Under the direction of Mr. Hugh Beckett many beautiful films have been shown here, including The Restoration, The Duchess of Masovia, The Pillagers, &c. Mr. Hugh Witt and Miss Queenie Wynne speedily make themselves favourites with their capital entertainment, consisting of mimicry songs, and dances.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert M. King.—Mr. F. R. Benson's North Shakespearean company is on its annual visit here, and opened on Monday in Hamlet, with Mr. Henry Herbert as the moody Dane. Miss Gladys Vanderzee as Ophelia, Mrs. Charles Sparrow as the Ghost, and Mr. John Hood as Horatio. A large audience was much impressed with an excellent performance. On Tuesday The Merchant of Venice was played, and the week's productions have included The Tempest, As You Like It, The Taming of the Shrew, King Lear, and Macbeth. The staging of the pieces has been on a most liberal scale, and the company has well maintained an already favourable reputation in this town.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Keating.—Bella and Bijou, the popular vaudeville artists, are on a welcome return visit, and are received with undiminished cordiality; Wild, Willie, and West are most entertaining acrobatic comedians; and a fine company also includes Tom Leamore, the favourite comedian; Miss Lizzie Glenroy, Scotch vocalist and dancer; Guest and Newlyn, variety artists; Miss Ethel Loftus, a clever comedienne; Fyne and Hurley, burlesque boxers; Frank Boyce, character vocalist; Miss Nance Elder, Tyrolean vocalist; and Brown's Royal Bioscope.

HIPPODROME.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hinton and Travis Green's company are appearing twice nightly in Her Fatl Marriage, with Mr. Jerold Heather as Zaco, and Miss Hilda Shirley as Myara. Mr. William Drury and Miss Laura Wright admirably supply the comedy element, and the cast is most efficient throughout. Brisk business is the result.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; General-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Crowded audiences thoroughly enjoy The Jack and the Beanstalk pantomime. We understand the run will terminate at the end of the twelfth week—an extended season which is striking evidence of the success of the production.

PRINCE OF WALES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnstone.—Business here is excellent, and The Babes in the Wood pantomime is admirably played. Mark Sheridan has introduced two new songs with catchy choruses; Dorothy Ward is the recipient of handsome presents, and a strong programme is arranged for her benefit next Wednesday.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Barnardo; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—Enthusiastic scenes are being witnessed at this popular house, where the Aladdin pantomime is attracting crowded audiences. The special "club nights" have commenced, and the principal artists are the recipients of novel and handsome presents.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company from the Lyric Theatre are presenting the Aladdin pantomime to large and enthusiastic audiences. There is an abundance of genuine wholesome fun, the songs are bright and catchy, and the dancing is excellent. Miss Kittee Rayburn makes an ideal Aladdin, and she is a big favourite; a dainty and clever performer is Miss Nancy St. John (the Princess). The comedy business is strong in the hands of Mr. Harry Morgan (Abanazar), Mr. Fred W. Graham (Widow Twankey), and Messrs. Carl and Carr (the Bluebottles). There is an effective ballet, and splendid speciality turns are given by the La Belle Trio, Mrs. Victor's troupe of juveniles, the Nine Folliettes, and the Three Trees.

METROPOLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—Leah Kleschna, presented by H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is proving that it still wields a remarkable influence over Birmingham theatregoers. The clever acting of Miss Bessie Rignold in the title-rôle arouses much enthusiasm; Mr. William Clayton as Kleschna affords a clever study; and as Paul Sylvaine Mr. Charles Barrett gives an admirable portrayal; Mr. Algernon J. Hicks is clever as Raoul Berton; and Mr. Graham Pockett shows much ability as the faithful Schram. The company is a remarkably strong one.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Chas. Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Manager, Mr. F. Martin Morris.—The drama Whom God Hath Joined is meeting with very encouraging success. It is a vigorous play of real life and the joint authors Stuart Lomath and Ellen Owen figure prominently in the cast as Captain Jack Merrick and Kitty Crumpet, giving a very creditable account of themselves. Other important characters are well presented by Miss Amy MacNeil, Miss Ethel F. Greene, Miss Dorothy Booth, Miss Helena Walbran, Mr. A. E. Pringle, Mr. Lancelot Usher, Mr. J. Miller, and Mr. Victor G. Payne.

CARLTON THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Mr. Lewis Gilbert and company are presenting the drama A Daughter of the Sea to appreciative audiences. The title-rôle is undertaken by Miss Florrie Green, a young artist who acquits herself with the finish of an actress of much greater experience. Mr. Lewis Gilbert, the author, provides a clever study in the part of an octogenarian scoundrel, and is assisted by Mr. Ashmore Vincent. Mr. Victor Howard is successful as the hero, Ken Moreland; and plenty of delightful humour is introduced by Miss Mattie Everette, Mr. Sydney Deane, and Mr. Johnnie Chippendale.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Williams.—An exceptionally strong bill meets with the approval of crowded audiences. Gertie Gitana enjoys a warm reception, fully deserved, for she sings her songs in a delightful manner; Charles R. Whittle is original and his songs are taken up with striking enthusiasm; round upon round of applause pays tribute to the excellence of the performance of Pipifax and Paulo, whose clever and eccentric acrobatic feats are very finished; a sketch efficiently played by Herbert Sleath's company is entitled The Deputy Sheriff; and praise for clever acting is due to Mr. J. K. Walton and Mr. H. Wilmot Jackson. Taree, "an Australian Bushman," extracts melody from a mouth-organ and a small harp; Katie Butler is a pleasing character comedienne; Frederick Russell and Lillian Held are successful in songs and dances; the Musical Jees provide a musical treat in their scena The Musical Smithy; and Edward Mortimer is deservedly applauded for his sketching act.

THE GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. E. Foster; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Lucas.—The Slaviansky Russian Choir is a great draw here this week in a répertoire of Russian folk-songs. Patrons are provided with an exquisite vocal treat, and the applause is unstinted. King and Benson are extremely popular in a new musical burlesque, Around the Town; Vanando gives a novel and successful ventriloquial turn; the Leiter Brothers are brilliant dancers; J. W. Hall provokes much merriment; the Leslie Brothers are popular eccentric comedians; the Brothers Gaudsmidt are amusing acrobatic clowns; the Great Vincent is also an expert acrobat; Maizie Hibbs is a smart dancer; and the Bioscope exhibits interesting pictures.

GAIETY.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—The principal item in a varied programme is a clever sporting and dramatic episode entitled A 33 to 1 Chance, played by Mr. H. P. Selwyn's company. It is very effectively carried out, and the enthusiasm of the audience is thoroughly aroused. Mike Cray is a comedy juggler who is assisted by a highly-trained dog in an astonishing performance; the Great Albas is a sensational tight-wire artist, who receives well-deserved applause; the Spanish Juanitos prove very entertaining; Barbara Babington is a popular comedienne; Tee and Tee are amusing eccentrics; and much applause is accorded to Pop Dearly, dandy coon, Elsie Ellis, comedienne, and James Basnet, vocalist.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Barrasford's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. C. Baldry.—Audiences here are convulsed with laughter over the eccentricities of the Six Brothers Luck, whose sketch, The Demon of the Cellar, is scoring a huge success. Miss Harriett Vernon is reaping the fruits of her popularity with Birmingham people, and is making a great hit in several new songs; Mooney and Holbein are a smart vaudeville couple whose turn is well received; the Davis and Gledhill Trio give a sensational cycle and motor-racing turn; Mlle. Dalmeri presents a clever troupe of performing animals; Dewson is unusually good at the piano; and other good turns are provided by the Robertsons, Hyde and Cody Trio, Miss Alma, and Leslie Race.

ASTON HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Aston Hippodrome, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—The chief item on a good allround programme is the sensational sketch The Hold-up, in which clever and vigorous character studies are provided by Mr. Paul Lovett and Mr. Edward B. Ashby; Miss May Fairclough is a popular contributor in selections from Shakespearean and modern plays; charming songs and dances are presented by the Four Garricks; J. Augustin and Annie Hartley give a clever barrel-jumping display; Irve Hayman and company appear in a striking burglar episode, entitled Christmas Eve; the Brothers Ford are smart singers and simultaneous dancers; and other good turns are by the Claymore Trio and Harry Morris, Lancashire comedian.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—EDEN THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Capital houses are the order here to witness Mr. Chas. Constant's company in Florodora. The Frank Abercoed of Mr. Robt. Hine is effective; Mr. Eric Deane is clever as Captain Arthur Donegal; and the rôle of Cyrus Gilfain is capably portrayed by Mr. Edward Chester. Mr. Jock Parker is a good Leandro, and Mr. Arthur Lenville a successful Anthony Tweedlepunch. The Dolores of Miss Daisy Lake is charming; Miss Fannie Holmshaw is really smart in her presentation of Lady Holyrood; and Miss Josephine Ellis is a fascinating Angela.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Hippodrome, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi.—A. C. Mackinnon's Scottish Meisters provide a good turn as a singing quartette; the Sisters Brenton are clever dancers and singers; and Mr. Herbert La Martine is an especially fine dancer. Ingram and Irving's scena in The New Office Boy is amusing; and the Athos are well received in their ball and acrobatic display. Mr. Chas. Mildare is a capital bird imitator; and Tom E. Hughes pleases all as a comedian.

BLACKBURN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Royal and Hippodrome Co.; Governing-Director, Mr. Harry Yorke; Manager, Mr. Reginald Yorke.—A bright pantomime, nicely staged and well dressed, is the fare here this week, and Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company is earning a well-merited success in Dick Whittington, presented twice nightly. Mr. Dean Tribune as Idle Jack is a source of much merriment; Mr. Albert Williams as Sarah and Mr. Jack Hodgson as Alderman Fitzwarren ably assist him in sustaining the merriment; Miss Ethel Campbell is a confident and dashing Dick and sings tastefully; as does also Mme. Benita, the Fairy. Miss Tina Franks is very pleasing as Alice, and Miss Ivy Proudfoot as Viscount Piccadilly vivaciously portrays the heavy swell. Mr. Tom Gilmore gives a clever account of himself as the Cat.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—In this, his first visit here, this week, Lamberti makes a very good impression and proves himself a real artist. His impesonations of past great musicians and his quick changes therein are highly appreciated. The Max Tourbillon troupe of acrobatic trick cyclists are also greatly successful; Ben Williams, ex Welsh collier, sings baritone songs in excellent style; Barrington is good in a musical speciality; and Webb and Edna Branston are high-class vocalists. The Donnas Trio, trapeze gymnasts, and Archie Pitt, comedian, contribute. Pictures complete.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Raynor and company are continuing there visit here a second week, and their talented performances of well-known plays are giving the utmost satisfaction. A Bunch of Violets was played on Monday, when Mr. Raynor submitted a very fine study of Sir Philip Marchant. Mr. Joseph B. Montague played Jacob Schwartz with great power, and Miss Cecilia Dare cleverly portrayed Mrs. Murgatroyd. The other parts were also in competent hands. Still Waters Run Deep and Jim the Penman have also been played during the week.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Mysticus tops the bill here this week, and gives a capital entertainment of such a character as the name suggests; J. Wright Aitken and company contribute a capital sketch; Arabella Allen gives clever imitations of Dickens and other characters; Briff, Braff, and Broff are clever and amusing tumblers; Emma Don is a popular male impersonator; Tomato gives an astounding performance on the tight rope; Ide Dorrie is a dainty comedienne; Fields and Mansell are lightning picture painters; and the Daimlers are excellent comedy artists and dancers.

BOLTON.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—A large and enthusiastic audience witnessed the opening performance on Monday last of Mr. George Dance's company in Our Miss Gibbs. Miss Kathleen Courtney is winsome and attractive as Mary Gibbs, dancing nimbly and singing brightly; Mr. Theodore Leonard is a very humorous Timothy Gibbs. Mr. Tom Shelford's singing and acting as the Hon. Hughie Pierrepont are much appreciated; Mr. Crawford Kent, as Lord Eynsford, acts and sings in good style; Miss Gladys Ivery is a charming Lady Elizabeth Thanet, and Miss Nancy Hervyn does well as Mme. Jeanne; Mr. J. E.

Empire Hippodrome, Ltd.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Manager, Mr. A. R. Harrison.—Place of honour is accorded to George Mozart who delights the house. Contributions to the bill are also made by Joe Oliver, versatile vocalist; Ivey Aberdare, dainty comedienne and wooden shoe dancer, Virto (assisted by his daughter Venita), in a great musical speciality act; Chas. Vincent, eccentric comedian; Crentoni, mysterious shadowist; Fenton Cross, speciality entertainer; Haidee Lee and Wallace Kingston, artistic comedy duo, in A Resourceful Lover; the Bouncing Peps, comedy gymnasts, and their performing dog Prince; and the Hippodrome pictures.

BOSCOMBE.—Hippodromes, Ltd.—Joint-Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. H. Burdett.—Carrie Laurie's Juveniles, in Kindergarten, receive great applause; Dandini's Trio have a really funny juggling act; Harry Atkinson, the Australian Orpheus, in his marvellous imitations of musical instruments, is well received; Mart and Pep are a pair of remarkable head and hand equilibrists and tumblers; Clark and Glennie are very funny in The Haunted House; and Curtis Leo and his Fighting Rooster, in Fun in a Drawing-Room, creates roars of laughter. The Dancing Paceys and the Hippodrome pictures conclude.

BRADFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Jack and the Beanstalk is in the full tide of success. On Saturday last Mr. Hart, with his customary generosity, invited the boys from the Nutter Orphanage to witness the pantomime, and the delighted youngsters were, in addition, regaled with buns and fruit. To each of the boys, on leaving the theatre, Mr. Hart also handed a small bag with a present of money.

The Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—Fred Karno's company of comedians are on a return visit here this week in the bustling sketch Perkins, M.P., and in point of humour Albert Bruno proves a worthy successor to Fred Kitchen in the name part; Gardner and Stoddard, in a comedy and musical entertainment on American lines, introduce much that is distinctly novel and particularly enjoyable; and Paul Barnes, too, contributes an American turn as a raconteur and comedian, meeting with much success. There are some highly sensational feats in tumbling performed by the Five Manchurians, agile Russian acrobats; Horace White is a clever ventriloquist and very entertaining; in a fine gymnastic display, Rohda Bros. exhibit exceptional muscular development; Bert Erroll is the possessor of an excellent soprano voice, which he uses to advantage; there are some excellent contributions from Florence (a charming lady mimic), Rita Rhylle (comedienne), and the Bioscope.

The Palace.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Pyck, Tholl, and Taylor, in a delightfully amusing sketch, The Dancing Master, receive unbounded applause for their clever dancing; Billy Merson, the clever little comedian, elicits roars of laughter with his irresistible humour and capital song "Setting the Village on Fire"; in eccentric style Herbert Rule renders some capital comic songs; Rooke Rorke and Co., in a musical sketch The Prince's Love Affair, are humorous and entertaining; the Rosses, comedians, are very smart step-dancers; in charming style Beatrice Willey renders a medley of old-time flower songs; fine vocalism and instrumental music, combined with genuine and hearty humour, render the entertainment of the Four Royal Scots very enjoyable; the Lannons earn merited approbation for clever step and pedestal dancing; and the Palace Perfection Pictures are amusing.

BRIGHOUSE.—Albert Theatre.—Proprietors, the Albert Hall Co.; Manager, Mr. Martin Manley.—Mr. Charles Harrington and company, in Uncle Tom's Cabin, are enjoying a highly successful visit. Mr. Harrington has brought an excellent company, and the piece is well mounted. Mr. J. H. Boehm is very good as Uncle Tom; Mr. David Blair handles the part of George Harris with ease; Mr. Charles Harrington makes a dignified and pleasant Mr. St. Clair; Mr. A. Hayes is also very good as Phineas Fletcher; Mr. Victor Gordon gives a good reading of Legree; Mr. John Gibson does excellent work as Mr. Wilson; Mr. Reginald Kloof is very amusing as Marks; Miss Hero Hathaway gives a finished performance of Eliza; Miss Ellen Douglas is an effective Aunt Ophelia; Miss Gem Lloyd deserves praise as Eva; Miss Annie Watson brings down the house with her antics as Topsy; Miss May Turner is very good as Mrs. St. Clair; Miss Hettie Johnson gives a telling impersonation of Cassie; and other parts are well filled by Mr. E. Lenard, Mr. W. Eversleigh, Mr. Edie Roberts, Mr. J. Black Mr. S. Lewis, Mr. J. Martin, and Miss J. Green. Several specialities were introduced into the plantation scene.

BRIGHTON.—Grand Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Robinson Crusoe entered upon its closing week here on Monday, and is still doing excellent business. Miss May Mars, in the title-rôle is distinctly successful with her charmingly rendered songs; Miss Violet K. Orme makes a dainty Polly Perkins; and abundance of fun is provided by Messrs. Sandford and Lyons, Mr. Dave O'Toole, and Mr. George Campbell. A benefit was accorded Miss May Mars on Tuesday evening.

Alhambra.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Smith.—Princess D'Aryaba, charming danseuse, is enthusiastically applauded for her fantastic scena, in which she is assisted by M. Bartlemeny, Russian dancer; Andre Romanoff, an accomplished violinist, also achieves success; J. K. Reynolds and company appear in Disgrace, and are warmly applauded; Madge Manley and company are well received in After the Races; Athlone and Sinclaire are effective in an athletic and vocal act; the Sisters Allen are pleasing duettists and dancers; Minta and Paul give a clever gymnastic display; the efforts of the Rhoderick Duo, harmony lasses, are cordially appreciated; Bertina submits a refined musical act; and other turns are presented by Bert Crosbie, "the height of eccentricity," and Vi Laurie, comedienne and dancer. On Friday last week the King attended a special matinée performance here of The Marriage of Kitty, arranged by Mrs. William James, of West Dean Park, Chichester, for the benefit of the local branch of Queen's Nurses. The title character was admirably sustained by Mrs. James.

Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Bertram J. Brown.—Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh prove a great attraction and are highly amusing in the little comedy Sizes and Sevens; the Kiners-Moulin pair perform some smart balancing feats, and are also amusing with their by-play; Mlle. Pollo is a smart and graceful gymnast; Louie Tracey makes an attractive male impersonator; Willie Gardner submits a clever performance on Skates; Anna Heath is a dainty comedienne; the Six White Boys are pleasing vocalists and dancers; and Tom Joy, comedian, is well received.

West Pier.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Mr. Charles Windermere and company are here with Where is William? Mr. Charles Windermere acts with alertness and vivacity as the perplexed Sir William Gregory, whose butler, William Jolley, has a very amusing exponent in Mr. Rule Pyott; Miss Belle Donaldson is a graceful Lady Gregory; Mr. Wylie A. Thompson as Harry and Miss Clare Manifield as Phyllis are a pleasing pair of young lovers; Mr. Leslie Norman submits a clever character study as General Rubbub; and Miss Zoe Davis (Eliza) and Miss Evelyn Shelley (cook) render able support.

BRISTOL.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—Mother Hubbard is in a fair way to beat the record of Mr. Chute's pantomimes, for the house appears to be full at each performance. One advantage is that the story is both pretty and interesting, and the members of the company pay their parts so well that it is evidently quite understood and appreciated by the children, who, at the matinées, form a large part of the audience. The scenery, dresses, and staging generally are quite up to the high standard of former years, and the wholehearted way in which all the members of the company work together is decidedly refreshing. Another point which strikes one is the apparent suitability of the various artists to their respective parts, so that, taken as a whole, the performance leaves the impression that no improvement could possibly be effected. Miss Lulu Valli (Reggie), Miss Alice Pollard (Goody), Miss Sydney Fairbrother (Mary), Miss Emmie Gardner (Dorothy), Miss Betty Rutherford (Jack), Mr. Horace Mills (Mother Hubbard), Mr. Charles Harvey (the Squire), Mr. G. H. Elliott (Chocolate), Mr. George Barrett (Timothy Tacks), and Mr. Fred Conquest (Fido), are all very popular favourites; and the clever dancing of Miss Leah Hanman, assisted by Miss Norah Walker, is quite a pleasing feature in the performance. There are numerous bright and taking songs, and the electric ballet is always much applauded.

Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Carpenter's Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Robinson Crusoe continues to attract—in fact, the house is packed at nearly every performance with a very enthusiastic audience. The comedians, Messrs. Bennett, Martell, Garth, and Dunlop, are really funny; Miss Kitty Upton makes a decided hit in the title-rôle; Miss Blanche Marion is pleasing as Polly Hopkins; the Sisters Albert and the Sisters Emson do excellently in their respective parts; Mr. Dave Jenkins sings in good style; and Miss Judith Espinosa acts well as Friday, and her fine dancing is fully appreciated. The staging of the pantomime is excellent, and the dresses are rich and appropriate.

Palace.—Local Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Charles Austin's amusing sketch Parker, P.C. is the leading attraction here; it is really very funny, and it is capitally played. King Luis and Partner score with their acrobatic equilibristic novelty; Rowlands and Ford amuse with Welsh and Scotch comedy; Baby Vi Davis is a clever little actress-vocalist; Les Cossets are smart acrobatic clowns; Royburn and Dix amuse with their comedy act Skits on the 'Phone; and Walter Aubrey proves himself to be an exceptionally clever dancer. Interesting animated pictures conclude.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—B. A. Rolfe's "Colonial Septette" heads the programme with an exceptionally clever and pleasing vocal and instrumental act entitled An Olde Tyme Hallowe'en. All the members of the company are highly-trained musicians, and the scenic effects and costumes are appropriate; a dramatic sketch entitled The Adder's Tooth is cleverly played by a very competent company, and it is also well staged in two scenes. Williams' Jubilee Singers are pleasing vocalists, their turn obtaining much appreciation; May Lilian Levey, comedienne, is much aplauded for her taking songs; the Flying Orenius score with their sensational aerial act; Cyril Dane, vocal comedian, is successful; Lydia Dreams entertains with a ventriloquial act; Vera Wootton, comedienne, sings pretty songs in good style; and Ben Albert, comedian, obtains applause. Animated pictures conclude an excellent entertainment.

BROUGHTON.—Victoria Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. James Cramer; Manager, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Mr. James Kiddie's pantomime, Little Cinderella, was on Monday presented, under the general management of Mr. George Burton, to a large house, which thoroughly appreciated the excellence of the performance and the beauty of the scenery. Mr. Leslie Hawkins does a lot of clever work as the Baron Shiphtalotte; Mr. Harry Hutton is a most amusing Pimples; Mr. Harry Bliss (Ethel) and Mr. W. G. Wesley (Maud) score well as the Ugly Sisters; a dashing Prince Perfect is presented by Miss Edie May, whose songs, "Hanging up the holly," "Clogs and shawl," and "Somewhere," go well; Miss Kitty Avey is a charming Cinderella, singing "Come and be my Teddy bear" and "Please send me a picture postcard"; Dandini gives Miss Lily Ennis opportunities which she takes full advantage of, and makes a hit with "Charlie Brown" and "Seaside." Miss Fanny Douglas as the Fairy Godmother has a pleasing contralto voice; the Lisando Brothers introduce their clever specialities. The ballets are well trained, and the powerful chorus is very creditable under the bâton of Mr. J. E. Machin.

BURNLEY.—Victoria Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Large audiences are assembling here to witness the performances by Mr. George Dance's company of Miss Hook of Holland. The genial Mr. Hook is capitally represented by Mr. Edmond Russell, and Simon Slink is an amusing figure in the hands of Mr. Fred Dark; a pleasing lover is presented by Mr. Arthur Ballance, and Miss Gertrude Melville as Sally is highly popular; Mr. George Mudie, jun., contributes good songs, and Mr. Wood Mansey as Captain Paap has a stirring military number; Miss C. Shepton gives a clever and careful performance as Mina, and the excellent chorus is well directed by Mr. H. A. Dyer.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—A miniature pantomime, introducing good comedy, singing, and dancing, is given by the Georgia Coons, and the Dauntons-Shaw Troupe introduce a number of new cycling tricks; A-Ba-Be's Picture Postcard Album is an extremely pretty turn, and Queenie May is loudly applauded for "Days gone by"; the Lombards, athletes, perform a series of smart feats, and Leigh and Lowrie in an absurdity, The Gay Bohemians, are very funny; Dacey and Lewis combine equilibrium with singing, and Peddling Patrick is shown by the Empire Theatrescope.

Palace Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. R. Badcoe.—At the head of the programme here is The Ghost of Jerry Bundler, capitally played and mounted, in which Mr. Martyn Roland as Hirst does some clever acting; Enzer, smart soldier-juggler, is well assisted by Miss Clarice in demonstrations of Ju-jitsu; Gillin provides a ventriloquial turn which creates roars of laughter; and Ryder Slone is a big favourite with "Sing Sing"; clever bâton swinging is done by the Zampas, whilst Charles Gardner goes well with good songs; good humour is maintained by the Four Burnells in grotesque acrobatics, and the Simms are excellent dancers. The Palace pictures conclude.

BURY (Lancs).—Royal.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant Acting-Manager, Mr. H. H. Potter.—Mr. C. Watson Mills' company present The Love of the Princess with a capital cast. Mr. Frank Harvey as Prince Conrad gives an artistic representation; Count Dacillo is played in convincing style by Mr. Richard Vane; Mr. John Burton cleverly depicts King Josef; and Mr. D. Laurence Doyle as Prince Regent of Narava, Mr. Beckett Bonld as Lieut. Orlans, and Mr. John Worth as Lieut. Zaroff are all happily placed. As Princess Idalia Miss Dorothy Haigh gives a delightfully artistic performance. Miss Josephine Lee as Constantia and Miss Maude Steeple as Lady Irene are prominent.

Circus of Varieties.—Good turns are given by Millie Howell, character vocalist, and Walter Barrett, baritone. Pictures complete the programme.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Baker.—The Yellow Fang, an excellent dramatic sketch, is the principal attraction, and as presented by Miss Mary Mayfren's company is very popular. Miss Violet Campbell is to be complimented upon her perforamnce as Judith Beck, and Messrs. George Pickett, Lawrence Osborne, Leslie Howe, and Francis Annesley render valuable assistance. Herma gives an exhibition of weight-lifting; Tod Lowen is a versatile comedian; the Ten Dixie Girls appear successfully in a vocal and terpsichorean scena; Rennie, with his dog Popsy, gives a clever ventriloquial sketch; and as comedian and mimic J. P. Ling is artistic.

CANTERBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon.—The Sign of the Cross is paying one more visit to the local theatre this week, and on this occasion the carefully-selected company of Mr. G. W. Bowes is giving the representations. Mr. Leonard Yorke is a very fine Marcus Superbus and Miss Florence Maber very charmingly enacts the rôle of Mercia. Another good representation is the Stephanus of Miss Effie Dane.

CARDIFF.—New Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—Mr. Frederick Mouillot's company is presenting A Message From Mars in a faultless manner. Mr. F. Vernon Travers in the rôle of Horsace Parker acts with much vigour and earnestness; Mr. Danelle Greene is responsible for the part of the Policeman; power and dignity is imparted to the rôle of the Messenger by Mr. Wm. H. Brougham; Mr. Norman Clark as the Tramp wins the sympathy of the audience; Mr. Douglas Stuart as Dicey deserves credit; Miss Rose Hellene gives a charming interpretation of Minnie Templar; Miss Aubrey Ashton does well as Miss Parker; and Miss Mary Buckstone as Mrs. Clarence succeeds in being very attractive. Miss Estelle Twitchen is a particularly bright and chic impersonator of Bella

Theatre Royal.—General-Manager, Mr. Graham Morrison; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. E. Clay.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is here in the stirring drama The Soldier's Wedding, which is mounted in exceptional style; Mr. Douglas Cecil makes a particularly fine and dashing soldier hero Jack Brown; Colonel Graham is carefully presented by Mr. Cyprian Matthews and Mr. W. J. Butler as Charles Courtney is exceptionally good; Miss Dorothy Richardson as Nancy Lee is conspicuous for a sweet rendition; Miss Dora Pass in the rôle of Peggie Munroe is both prepossessing and painstaking; as James Fielding, the old farmer, Mr. Fred Yarnold submits a perfect performance; Miss Nita Langford in the part of Julie de Beauvrais could not be improved upon. The comedy is in the capable hands of Mr. Willie Scott (Tommy Spratt) and Miss Bessie Walters (Lizzie Walker).

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Taylor.—Heading a fine programme is the favourite comedienne Victoria Monks in her répertoire of catchy songs; Chanti, the modern Proteus, presents a series of transformation dances which are unique and distinctly clever; Nina Wood, in songs at the piano, is the personification of sweetness and grace; Arthur Leslie renews his popularity as a droll comedian; Tom Bryce, in a comedy interlude entitled A Dude's Wooing, proves a versatile artist; a novel ventriloquial performance is given by Rich Taylor; Billy, the human-brained horse, once more demonstrates his marvellous intelligence; Frank Cass sings a good song; and Dan Fraser is a clever Scotch comedian. The Bioscope completes the evening.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Will A. Jackson.—Interesting from start to finish was the verdict of the two large audiences which assembled on Monday at the popular Palace to see Bernard Mervyn's company in a detective sketch entitled Mick Carter, this hard-worked character being portrayed very cleverly by Mr. Mervyn himself, who is strongly supported by his talented company. Second position is given to Leroux's marvellous performing monkeys, who astound the audience by their wonderful performance; L. B. Athol, the actor-vocalist, appears in his successful scena entitled Dreamland; Bromley and Fontein prove capital comedy entertainers in The Man Behind the Music Stand; and the items contributed by Fritz Kornau, described as "the human flute"; Amy Bathurst, a taking comedienne; and Harry Luck, a successful fun-maker, share in the success of the entertainment.

CARLISLE.—H. M. Theatre.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mr. R. Stewart M'Kim.—A return visit of Mr. Seymour Hicks's company in The Gay Gordons is attracting large audiences. Mr. William Greene is a success as Angus; as Peggy Miss Clarice Lackstone makes a dainty and attractive figure. A capital and versatile comedian, Mr. W. H. Desmond has no difficulty in amusing his audience as the showman; Mr. P. J. Gale's dancing is enthusiastically encored, his Jack M'Phrisky being a lively performance; and Charlotte Siddons is amusingly portrayed by Miss Florrie Groves. Miss Mabel Dent sings with taste and skill as Victoria Siddons; and Miss Ada Mellon's clever touch of pathos as Janet McLeod is in agreeable contrast to her lighter shades of comedy.

CASTLEFORD.—Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman, J.P.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company in A Broken Heart are proving a great attraction. Mr. Harry Cullenford as John Barnard earns much applause for his powerful portrayal; Miss Sheila Walsh as John's wife proves herself an actress of considerable power; Mr. A. C. Holmes is grimly determined as the villainous Stephen Raylton; Mr. Ernest Duval carefully represents Gash Gills, and Miss Louise Millward plays very well as Mrs. Barnard; Miss Helen Lowther submits a charming portrait of Miss Grace Fanshawe, and Miss Daisy Rockefort shows considerable ability as Little May; Mr. Will Beasley is a typical village curate; Mr. Millar Wilson as Tony Tibbets is very amusing; Mr. Geo. Addison causes much merriment by his droll impersonation of Shrimp; Sally Travner is laughably portrayed by Miss Nancy Mitchell.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, The Castleford Queen's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing Directors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson.—The chief item here is provided by Fullbrook and company in a laughable sketch, Astronomy; August, September, and May are a comical trio; Miss Helen Martin is the possessor of a powerful and effective soprano voice; the Musical Bentleys manipulate a variety of musical instruments; a musical sketch is provided by Fred Carr and Ada Rose, who are well rewarded; Clive Watts sings and dances smartly; Daisy Hicks is pleasing in song, and Mike Shannon wins deserved applause for his sand dances. New and interesting films by the Loyal Dominion Co. are entertaining.

CHATHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lionel Barnard.—Mr. Charles Barnard is this week presenting the Elephant and Castle pantomime Cinderella. Miss Lillian Errol is a dainty Cinderella; Miss Mary Ambrose, an imposing Prince Casimir; Araminta and Elvira are amusing in the hands of the Misses Alice Inman and Florrie Haydon; Mr. Tom Poole is energetic and successful as Capers; Mr. Ted Young, an able comedian, scores throughout as Tiny; and able support is given by Mr. Freddie French as Hercules. Dandini is in the safe keeping of Mr. George Newburn, who makes a hit with his imitations of music-hall stars; Miss Madge O'Neill as the Duke of Whistbridge gives a popular performance; Benn's Dutch Boys and Girls introduce some excellent dances; and Baby Wolf sings and dances herself into favour.

Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Tschin-Maa and his band of Chunchuse mountebacks prove a great attraction here; Little Sophie's singing and mimicry are much liked; Harry Knox scores with "I shall blow my whistle if you do"; Kenneth and Kane have a chorus which proves most infectious; Munro interests all with his clay modelling; and E. E. Howard and Co. present a sensational episode entitled The Fight in the Lighthouse.

CHELTENHAM.—Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Oswald Redford.—Messrs. H. B. Levy and J. E. Cardwell's pantomime The House that Jack Built pays a welcome visit this week. Miss Daisy Wood, whose two best vocal efforts are "Molly O'Morgan" and "Someone," divides the honours with Miss Dolly Dodds, a bright and dainty principal girl, who give several piquant songs and dances; Misses Hetty Jones and Jenny Marsden are great successes as second boy and girl (Colin and Gertchen), the latter's clever clog dances making her a special favourite; Aunt Purdy has an indefatigable representative in Mr. J. Harrison, with whom is associated Wee Macgregor, whose accent and vocabulary are realised capitally by Little Chip. Mr. H. Hillerby as Squire Bounce and Messrs. Doyle and Gibson as his henchmen are keen, hard-working funny men; Messrs. Walker and Lake as Professor Pills and his assistant enact a phrenological skit—quite one of the best things; Mr. J. W. Hamm and Paddy Sloan as motor men, and Phono, the cow with the crumpled horn, assist in the comic turmoil; Miss Isa Wilson is a charming fairy; Miss Vera Weetman is good as the Cat; Mr. Ben Hughes as Sergeant McGinty indulges in lively pranks on the scaffolding of the house, assisted by other comedians. The scenery is pretty and the dresses are pleasing.

CHESTER.—Royalty Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—Toch and Tard, burlesque comedy artists, give a mirth-provoking show; Joey Sterling is a smart little character comedian; C. H. Charlton, a clever phenomenal conjurer; and the light-comedy couple, Millie and Arthur, deserve a word of praise. Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, singing box-makers, provide a strikingly realistic vocal novelty turn; Terry and Tatten are good comedians and dancers; Jack Martin is a competent actor-vocalist; and Goodfellow and Gregson prove a popular pair.

COLCHESTER.—Hippodrome.—Directors, Messrs. Frederick Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—After a "legitimate" session this hall reverts to vaudeville for one week. Ardell and Odell, American eccentrics, perform clever evolutions; Crawford and Johnson play on wood-wind instruments and dance in good style; the Hills also appear to advantage in a musical show; Angela Ward has some well-written songs; Lily Vine is well received; and Harry Hasto, quaint comedian, appeals to the upper house. Fred Hanlon goes well as a comedian, and the films are good.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarence.—F. Marriott Watson and James Ussher's company is paying a return visit in The Face at the Window. Mr. P. W. Dunscombe is a capital Paul Gouffet; as Lucio Delgado Mr. Chas. Phelps is responsible for some excellent stage villainy; Henry De Brisson is in the capable hands of Mr. Alfred Warne; Mr. A. Cheevers as Lucien Cortier is good, and Mr. J. H. Stimson as Peter Pottlebery is a great success. Le Blanc (the mad doctor) is capitally played by Mr. Houghton Macauley; Miss Clare O'Sullivan is a charming Marie; Miss Marie Pemberton an effective La Pinau; and as Babette Miss Frances Day excels.

CO&K.—Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. J Bell.—Messrs. Platt and Tower's company have been here with Mr. Bernard Shaw's comedy You Never Can Tell, which was well received. As Fergus Crampton Mr. J. Edward Pearce acted admirably; Miss Winifred Beech as Gloria Clandon was very successful; Miss Edith Hunter gave an appealing representation of Mrs. Clandon; as Dolly and Phil, the spoiled children, Miss Ida Southern and Mr. Geoffrey Wilkinson were excellent; Mr. Claude Haviland was a humorous waiter; as Bohun, K.C., Mr. Bellenden Clarke was irresistible; Mr. Allan Jeayes as Finch McComas, solicitor, was capital.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—Raglus, eccentric juggler, performs some difficult and amusing feats; Ruby Norton, comedienne, receives applause; La Vie, in a series of art poses, is very clever; Bert Lytton renders popular songs in pleasing fashion; Daisy Hurdle and Grace Bard are a capital pair of comediennes; the Zaid trio introduce an Oriental speciality act, which includes a gymnastic turn on the rings; Bowden and Stole, a clever pair of acrobats, contribute an excellent turn, and the Palascope pictures continue to please.

COVENTRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr Wm. Bennett.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's company, presenting The Woman in the Case, had a most enthusiastic welcome on Monday. Margaret Rolfe is represented by Miss Kathleen Russell, who gives an artistic rendering of the highly emotional rôle; Claire Foster is represented by Miss Maud Hildyard, who is a favourite in Coventry, and receives a rousing reception; Mr. James Lindsay makes a capable Lawyer; Mr. Wm. Kershaw is seen to excellent advantage as Julian Rolfe; Mr. Sydney Palfrey makes a good Louis Klauffsky; Mr. Paul Wynter being responsible for Jimmy O'Neil. The Deputy Sheriff precedes.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. T. New some; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. E. Wright.—Mr. Austin Rudd is the star turn, and meets with a very hearty reception; Chung Ling Hee and his troupe of Chinese magicians give a very fine display of juggling, acrobatic, and equilibristic feats; Miss Beaumont Collins and her company give a capital sketch entitled Leaves of Memory, the acting being particularly good; Alice Hollander, the Australian contralto, renders a couple of good songs in a good voice. Other artists are Alix Jukos, protean actor; Rosie Gaston, comedienne and dancer; Dale and O'Malley, funny characters; and Baker and Balfe, with selections on the xylophone. Amusing pictures close the entertainment.

CREWE.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager and Scenic Artist, Mr. Ambrose Fischer.—Mr. Fred Granville's company, in Beauty and the Beast, drew a good house on Monday. Miss Dollie Barrie made a charming Beauty, and was heard to advantage in several good numbers; Miss Jennie Hallworth infused plenty of dash into her impersonation of Silver Buttons; Miss Hilda de Gray was well suited as Prince Great Heart; Miss Victoria Francis made a dainty Fairy Sunlight; Miss Fanny Wallace was amusing as Wilhelmina; and Miss Florence Milton was a successful Dolly Dimple. Mr. Sammy Foster created roars of laughter in the part of Sammy; Mr. Albert Juan was good as Sir Mackintosh Winkles; Messrs. Edward Stream and Frank Daleno were fun providers as Sprindles and Twitters; and Mr. M. Williams appeared as the Beast. Specialities were introduced by the Royal Quintette of singers and dancers, Baby Boden, Foster and Juan, and Stream and Daleno.

CROYDON.—Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr Roland Daniel; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Held by the Enemy is billed here this week. Mr. Roland Daniel is very good as Colonel Chas. Prescott; Mr. Elliot Ball puts in genuine work as Lieut. Gordon Hayes; Mr. James E Manning is satisfactory as Uncle Rufus; Mr. Sydney Faber is commendable as Major-Gen. H. D. Stamburg; Mr. Louis Palgrave is much liked as Thomas Henry Bean; Mr. Ernest A. Douglas is a success as Brigade-Surgeon Fielding; Miss Dollie Roberts acts with care and judgment as Rachel; and praise is due to Misses Millie Ford and Roberta Pulleyne as Euphemia McCreery and Susan.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—Wash Evans and company in the musical comedy Paradise Alley are creating a furore here; Rosie Archer's impersonations of well-known artists are clever; Johnson and Bert are smart in acrobatic comedy act A Queer Customer; Fred Earle is a quaint comedian; Pat Lynch is an untiring dancer; the Four Vagabonds give an entertaining vocal and comedy turn; C. Garry, J. B. Gordon, and company make a palpable hit in Trilby, Miss Grace Illingworth being excellent in the title-rôle; the Four Amaranths, lady acrobatic dancers, are given a cordial reception; and others worthy of notice are Woodhouse and Wells, comedians and dancers, Pat Rafferty, Irish comedian, and Jennie Reeve, comedienne.

Public Hall.—A very enjoyable entertainment was given here on the 11th and 12th inst. by the Rainbows, under the direction of Messrs. Stewart and Lorraine. Norma Russell's singing won approval; Basil Meker's items deserve praise; Marie Craven's numbers were warmly applauded; Lionel Howard's impersonations were commendable; Charles Hutchings had a droll way with him; Dolly Watson sang nicely; and Harry Daunt's efforts were rightly directed. The Area Belle and A Twenty-First Birthday Party were creditably rendered.

DARLINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—The Moody-Manners Opera Co. is here, and gave a very fine performance of Samson and Delilah on Monday before a crowded house. In the title-rôle Miss Helen Culver acquitted herself admirably, her acting and singing being excellent; Mr. Albert Bowyer is a capital tenor, and is very successful in the part of Samson. Mr. William Farmer, who has a bass voice, is effective as the High Priest of Dagon. The scenes are very realistic and the effects striking. The Daughter of the Regiment, Faust, Il Trovatore, Carmen, and The Bohemian Girl are also in the week's bill.

Hippodrome Theatres, Ltd.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert E. Nicholls.—Lady Maud and her juveniles provide the top of the bill here in A Concert Rehearsal, the youngsters doing well; Vardon, Perry, and Wilber are clever dancers and singers; Fred Dunstone, comedian, is funny and amusing; Palette, in his pot-pourri, attended by his dog Max, scores effectively; Cash and Clair are good dancers; Alice Hughes provides a comedietta entitled the Star of the Bazaar; and the Creedons are clever jugglers. The Hipposcope shows a picture of the Paris Floods.

DARWEN.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Animated Pictorial Enterprises, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. E. Burnett.—Mr. Gilbert Payne's pantomime The House that Jack Built is here. Mr. Gilbert Payne as Dame Trot keeps the house in roars, being ably assisted by Mr. Fred Fulton (Sir Niggle Grabbe) and Messrs. Lapham and Wallen (Jossem and Jewem). Jack is nicely played by Miss Kathleen Emmett; Miss Fanny Adamson is charming as Sunshine; Miss Ethyl Errol is a dashing Tommy Tucker; and Miss Hilda Deacon's dancing as Marjorie Dawe is a feature of the show. Speciality dances are introduced by the Godfrey Girls.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent.—Mr. Charles Barnard's pantomime company with The Babes in the Wood occupy the boards. The principal boy (Robin Hood) has a charming exponent in Miss Gracie Graham, and her songs and dances are very capably rendered. Miss Violet Nunn does ample justice to the part of Maid Marian; the Babes are prettily impersonated by the little Misses Mabel Reeves and Ena Corelli, and their singing and dancing are altogether praiseworthy. First and foremost among the comedians are Nash and Noel, who keep their audience in a continual state of merriment. Mr. Dan Daly as Sir Rupert de Guile scores with his topical songs; and Mr. Charles Lilburn as Wilhemina and Messrs. Caldwell and Verne as Sally Slop and Percy Perkins also deserve commendation. The part of the Fairy Queen is entrusted to Miss Ethel Payne, and her pleasing voice is heard to advantage. The Demon King is capably enacted by Mr. Dan Weldon; and Mr. John McMahon is good as Friar Tuck. The Twelve Damozels provide some capital dancing. The pantomime is exceedingly well mounted and dressed, and the chorus is a strong one.

Palace.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Moyes.—As the star turn Howell Webb and company, in a sketch entitled The Galley Slave, are scoring a success. The Two Butterflies submit some very clever and daring gymnastic feats; Nellie Brierley, the Lancashire pit-brow soprano, delights her audience with several pleasingly rendered songs; Geo. Hall is an amusing comedian and an accomplished whistler; Max Sterling mystifies everybody with his sleight-of-hand turn; Tom Franks provides a clever ventriloquial entertainment; and the Cosman Couple are creditable comedy entertainers. A comic film on the Bioscope concludes.

DEVONPORT.—Metropole.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Mr. Andie Cane's pantomime, The Babes in the Wood, still proves popular, judging by the houses it is drawing. The artists know their work thoroughly, with the result that a really attractive evening's entertainment is provided.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—George D'Albert is the leading attraction here; Karsy and his wife entertain with the giant myriophone, from which some lovely music is obtained; Sterling and Love provide a clever little musical number, in which some popular songs and coach-horn and cornet selections are cleverly introduced; Gladys Revell scores with a well-rendered American ditty; Jack Crawley provides a popular military turn, entitled "Lights Out"; and other contributors are Williams and Miles, comedians, and Lila Wilson, comedienne and dancer.

DEWSBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company in the drama, A Thief in the Night, is here. Miss Margery Fane as Joan Escombe excels with her clever acting; Mr. Stanley Bedwell is commendable as Alan Escombe; the villainy of Michael Pagani receives the fullest illustration from Mr. Leyton Cancellor; who is well assisted by Miss Beatrice Homer, with an able portrayal of Sonia Cleve. Mr. Hugh EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Midland Entertainment Corporation, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.—Holt's Juvenile Follies top the bill, and prove a clever troupe of vocalists and dancers; Stowe Bros. give an exceptionally neat performance as equilibrists; Rudge Whitworth is a pleasing entertainer; Della Ray is a charming and powerful vocalist; Edmund Casseill, banjoist, is well received; as also are Jennie Wood, a dainty comedienne; and Bert Groves, eccentric comedian. The Empire pictures are popular.

DUNDALK.—TOWN HALL THEATRE.—Proprietors, Urban Council.—Mr. A. E. Smith's company is here with The Sleeping Beauty. The piece is dressed and mounted in splendid style. Miss Kathleen Garnon is to be complimented upon her fine impersonation of Prince Perfect, rendering several very tuneful numbers. Miss Gertie Leno possesses a beautiful voice, which is heard to full advantage in her solos as Fairy Queen; Miss Elsy Denys makes an excellent Princess, and creates a most favourable impression; Messrs. Foley and Francis are exceptionally funny as John James and James John, introducing some clever up-to-date gags; Messrs. Taylor and Alderman are also responsible for much merriment as Nurse and King Sol; the Sisters Lesmere are the recipients of loud applause for their clever and finished dancing. The music, under the direction of Mr. Hayden Halstead, is bright and sparkling.

DUNDEE.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Edward Compton and the celebrated Compton Comedy Company on Monday evening presented Davy Garrick, the title-rôle being played by Mr. Compton in his own masterly manner, his rendering being an artistic success throughout. Miss Kathleen Leigh's Violet was a performance replete with characteristic charm and histrionic skill; Alderman Gresham was held by that experienced actor Mr. Henry Crocker, who realised the character completely; Mr. Frank Royde's embodiment of the Hon. Tom Tallyhaut was a delightfully polished and cleverly carried-out performance; Rumbelow, Sowerberry, and Simkins were judiciously distinguished and individualised by Messrs. Philip Gordon, J. W. Austin, and C. Marquand respectively; while Misses Marie Hassell and Loraine Stevens did full justice to the parts of Mrs. Rumbelow and Selina. The servants' parts were nicely played by Mr. Lawrence Meade and Mr. Frank Snell. Davy Garrick was preceded by Tom Noddy's Secret, which was notable for the first appearance in Dundee of Miss Nell Compton, who as Gabrielle acquitted herself with distinction, and she was accorded a most flattering reception. The Rivals, The Road to Ruin, The School for Scandal, The Blasé Baronet, and A Reformed Rake are also in the week's bill.

KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Heading a capital bill here are the Dayton Family, whose well-worked turn is both novel and skilful. Zeta Gray and company, in a racy comedy sketch entitled The Lancashire Lass, keep the audience hugely amused; Syd Crossley makes a decided hit with his song on public-house politics; Heather Belle, a clever Scotch comedienne, scores with her various ditties; Linn and Darius present a charming musical scena which is much appreciated; Shrillo proves himself a smart and tuneful siffleur; the Three Pirmans are experts in the gymnastic line; Lonie Dott and Jack Williams give a fine exhibition of sand-dancing; Harris Coonie is a capital comedian and unusually nimble dancer; and the Kingscope with the newest films completes the programme.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company are drawing good houses here with Her Life in London, which is admirably interpreted. Mr. Carlton is particularly good as the young clergyman, the Rev. Allen Gordon, and infuses much force and power into his rendering; Astra Bell is enacted with much sweetness and spontaneity of manner by Miss Ruble Maude; Mr. Claude Agmond is most impressive as the blind burglar Gratton Gale; Mr. Claude Seaton gives a good study of the jeweller Mr. Tempelton; Miss Katie Randolph scores heavily as the Lady detective, her various disguises being cleverly handled; Miss Jenny Bostock as Mrs. Glendale and Miss Evelyn Walton as Sarah Shafto are alike excellent. Mr. John Crondace as Collini shows to advantage; Mr. Willie Vernon as Percy Plunker is responsible for much enjoyable comedy, and he is ably supported by Miss Rene Belle Douglas, a particularly lively Dolly; Mr. Alfred Deane as Cousin Peter; and Mr. Fred Coutts as Flickster. All the other parts are in safe keeping, and the scenery is most effective.

DUNFERMLINE.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. W. E. Potts.—The Stowaway paid a return visit the first part of the week, and was capitally staged and capably acted by Miss Winifred Maude and Mr. Victor Du Cane's company. Mr. Victor Du Cane as Dicky Dials gave a highly acceptable rendering, and Miss Winifred Maude acquitted herself with distinction as Althea Dale, both introducing songs which met with much appreciation. Mr. Arthur L. Reid gave a capital portrayal of Tom Inglis; Mr. Moris Maud created a favourable impression as the villain Charles Etherington; Mr. Walter Ernest was a characteristic Paul Inglis; Mr. Alfred Lester proved a good exponent of Job Hickey; as Chucky Miss Minnie Milwarde is smart in singing and dancing; and Mrs. Wingold Laurence gave a dramatic rendering of Florence Etherington. Mr. Haldane Crichton's principal company, in The Cingalee, provides the bill of fare for the last three nights of the week.

DURHAM.—THE PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—The principal turn here this week is the Seven Wulfrunas is a comedy acrobatic speciality, Fun in a Café; in singing and patter Spry and Monti give an entertainment full of humour; and the athletic poses and weight-lifting by Attillo Bros. are much appreciated; May Thorne is a spirited comedienne; for a clever gymnastic act Rappo and Elsa win applause; Tony Iveson is successful as "the ragman at the piano"; Tom Casey's singing and whistling proves popular; and the Cathedroscope is showing The Ferryman's Sweetheart.

ASSEMBLY ROOMS THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Rushworth.—The Gay Gordons came here on Thursday.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—The Pete company appeared here for the first three evenings of the week. Mr. Fred Victor, strong, manly and convincing, did excellent work as Pete Quilliam; an able and distinct performance was given by Mr. Alfred Lugg as Philip; Mr. Ellis J. Preston acted capably as Cæsar Cregeen; Mr. Maurice Yorke was an effective Ross; and Mr. A. A. Robinson did good work as the Doctor. A large measure of praise is due to Miss Constance Bachner for sympathetic and womanly work as Kate; Miss Alys Eden was an animated Nancy; and Miss Alice Dorle did well as Grannie. The Beggar Girl's Wedding is billed for the remainder of the week.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Resident-Manager Mr. G. G. Ridley. Heading the bill here are Messrs. John Grant and Henry Stewart, who appear with their company in a clever sketch with excellently-worked illusions, Phantoms of the Wood. Miss Nellie Coleman is popular with her impersonations; the Malcolm Cumming Trio work a bright sketch A Tooth for a Bride very smartly; Dome is a clever lightning clay-modeller; Goodall and Knox are funny comedians and good tumblers; Miss Lena Pinaud is a charming vocalist and graceful dancer; Mr. Harry Lawson supplies laughs as a singing comedian, and new films are shown.

EDINBURGH.—KING'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—Mr. Tom Clare, the clever entertainer at the piano, is one of the principal attractions here in a programme which contains many admirable artists. Mr. Clare's selections are given with the humour and point that distinguish his style, and he is enthusiastically applauded; Mlle. Eldee, "the girl in a golden frame," supplies a pleasing turn in her presentment of familiar subjects of classical fame; Mr. Sandy McNab, an excellent Scottish comedian, and Miss Bessie Arthur act an amusing sketch, The Egyptian Mummy, with much humour; Leipzig, a conjurer, who is not only a deft performer, but a comedian with entertaining patter, contributes a performance which is heartily received; Uren and Sadler are seen in a droll extravaganza, "Give Me a Shilling"; Mr. Harry Marylees, a good Scotch comedian, is extremely funny in his selections; Miss Esmie Harlow's performance is delightful, and she dances with much grace; Miss Netty Gray's vocal selections are expressively rendered; and Keen and Waller, capital acrobats, and Mr. Joseph Desmond, a baritone singer who can use his voice well, are also on the programme.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cooke.—This week's head-liner was Miss Amelia Bingham, who, assisted by Mr. Herbert Standing, Miss Beth Franklin, Mr. Lloyd Bingham, and others, contributed scenes from Madame Sans Gêne, La Tosca, and School for Husbands. By means of skilful compression and clever acting the leading motives of these three plays were virtually presented in the space of half an hour, and demonstrative applause greeted the well-directed efforts of the company. Gus Garrick's smart impersonations of diverse kinds of comedians were very entertaining; Jack Lorimer, the popular Scotch comedian and dancer, was quite successful in his new "Jennie McGregor" scena; and Charles Santon displayed special qualifications as a double-voiced vocalist and male soprano. Among the lady artists were the expert dancers Sisters Caselli; Ethel Newman, who gave a pleasing original monologue, entitled "Her Wedding Day"; and Stella Stahl, a bright comedienne and danseuse; Clarissa Talbot and Albert Pearce rendered very delightfully sundry Japanese musical duologues; Richard Corbin and his dogs provided an outstanding exhibition of canine comedy; and American Bioscope pictures were also included in the bill.

ELLESMERE PORT. — HIPPODROME AND PICTURE PALACE.— Proprietors, Messrs. Corelli and Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Corelli.—The musical turn contributed by Neddy Vokes is well received; Frank Weaver is a smart dancer; Evie Greene as a dainty comedienne pleases immensely; Barney Vox is applauded for his ventriloquial entertainment; the Bros. Maddison score as burlesque boxers; and the Animated pictures are interesting.

EXETER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford. — The Modern Stock Company entered upon the second week of their season here on Monday, when the successful Sutro play, John Glayde's Honour, was presented. As John Glayde Mr. Ernest Bodkin was capital, his impersonation being forceful and dignified; Mr. A. Austen Leigh was extremely good as Trevor Lerode; Mr. Wallis Clarke made an excellent Michael Shurmur; and Messrs. Edward Vernon and Gerard Wynne did well as Howard Collingham and Christopher Branley respectively. Miss Kathryn Collier portrayed Muriel Glayde in polished style; Miss Emmie O'Reilly presented a clever character-study of the Princess de Castagnary; Miss Vere Hodson made the most of her opportunities as Lady Lerode; Miss Gwendolen Wren and Miss Belle Travers also capably filling the parts of Dora Longman and Mrs. Renwick.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Resident and Acting-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—The Boisset troupe head the bill, their funny sketch The Bricklayers keeping the house in continuous laughter; Tom Woottwell, who makes his first appearance here this week, speedily established himself a prime favourite; the Five Musical Tritons sing and play on various musical instruments effectively; Frank E. Ford, a clever dancer, has an excellent reception; Barney Stuart, vocalist and mimic, is entertaining; and Edie Anderson proves herself a smart little comedienne and a neat dancer.

FALKIRK.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace W. Ebbutt.—The Village Blacksmith is the attraction at the above theatre this week, and the return visit of Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is heartily welcomed. As the Village Blacksmith Mr. Sam Livesey displays ability above the ordinary. The wrestling bouts are greatly enjoyed. Miss Maggie Edwards, in the rôle of Kate Strong, is a clever actress.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Pantomime reigns here, the attraction being Mr. Chas. R. Stone's company in Red Riding Hood. The rôle of Boy Blue is sustained by Miss Madge Campbell, a charming and dashing young lady, who has become a favourite; Miss Marie Dowsing is a vivacious Marjorie Daw; Miss Beatrice Varley a fascinating Prince Charming; and Miss G. Branscombe a most efficient Miss Muffitt. Miss Mabel Samont (a child actress) is all that can be desired in the title-rôle; Mr. J. Templer Ellis portrays Baron Badlot with irresistible humour; and Mr. E. W. Avery proves himself an excellent comedian as Dame Trott, their funny songs and patter causing much amusement. Messrs. Dan Seymour, Frank Strathan, and Joe Clark as Simple Simon, Johnny Green, and Jimmy Stout provide much fun. Miss Lily Lamont is an ideal Fairy Glowworm, and Miss Ethel May acquits herself well as Robin Hood. The rôle of the Wolf is undertaken by Mr. Steve Asher with great effect. Specialities are introduced by Miss Emily London's troupe of eight child vocalists and dancers, and a hit is made by Mr. Dan Seymour and Miss Marie Dowsing in the well-known Apache dance. A comic harlequinade concludes.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Local-Manager and Licensee, Councillor Harold Arnold.—Here this week are the Seven Perezoffs, in a wonderful juggling act, named "A Supper at Maxim's"; the Francoli Troupe present a most entertaining pantomimic number, in which is shown some clever tumbling; Andie Burns, an amusing comedian and dancer, is one of the successes; Fritz Von Liston strikes a popular note with his imitations of birds and animals and whistling solos; the Arntes make a hit in song and dance; Marie Kay sings sweetly, and dances gracefully; and Florence Raymond, ventriloquist; Sylvene, in an equilibristic act; and the Kingscope also afford amusement.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Messrs Bolam and Tiller's production of Bo-Peep has done good business here during this its last week.

GLASGOW. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy O. Humphrys.—Mr. Robert Arthur's pantomime, Aladdin, continues its successful career, and though now in its tenth week, large audiences fill the house nightly.

KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—Unusual interest attaches to the present visit of the Moody-Manners Opera company from the fact that three works new to Glasgow—Samson and Delilah, Maitre Seiler, and La Tosca—are included in the first week's programme. On Monday Saint-Saëns' opera was presented in a most complete and picturesque fashion. Mr. Joseph O'Mara as Samson gave a very touching portrayal; as Delilah Mlle. Zelie De Lussan sang splendidly, and depicted vividly the wiles of the enchantress; Mr. William Dever gave fine dignity to the part of the High Priest; and as an aged Hebrew Mr. Charles Magrath was also impressive. Abimelech had a promising exponent in Mr. C. Moorhouse; and three Philistines were well represented by Messrs. F. Davies, W. Bland, and R. Woollard. Tannhäuser, Faust, and The Bohemian Girl are also in the bill.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—Mother Goose pursues her victorious way here, and up till now there are no signs of her reign coming to an end. The humours of Mr. Neil Kenyon, Mr. Jack O'Connor, and Miss May Moore Duprez continue to draw the crowds, aided as they are by the charming personality of Miss Lily Morris, Miss Rhoda Gordon, and Miss Lily Edwards, to mention only the chief attractions of this lively and enjoyable Karno pantomime.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Willie Winkie is still bringing crowds. On Friday the handsome and dashing principal boy, Miss Jessie Templeton, took her benefit, and the many friends she has made during the run was proved in no uncertain style by the appearance of the house on that occasion.

METROPOLE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—A Wrecker of Men is being presented here by Mr. Thompson Carruther's company. Miss Ruth Zillwood is very successful as Risca Mallinson. She is capably supported by Miss Gwendoline Talbot as Doris Melville; Mr. Arthur S. Pitt as Jim Morley; Mr. Tom Bowron, a capital Guise Strange; and Mr. Edward A. Brooke, a dramatic and interesting Phariosaphus. Mr. Richard Bosco does well as Railton; Mr. Thompson Carruthers is very good both as Mummy and the Jew; the Hon. Reggie Verincourt of Mr. W. Palliser Acock is entertaining; and the Slopper of Miss Lydia Hart is greatly enjoyed.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Govan theatregoers are this week further supplied with panto. This time Dick Whittington, from the pen of the late Fred Locke, is produced. The company herein appeared with much success at the King's Theatre, Edinburgh, and are now on tour. The Sisters Cora as Dick and Alice are untiring in their efforts, and work admirably together; Mr. Sam Thomson gets through an immensity of clever work as Idle Jack; Mr. George Westland as Mary Ann is clever and witty; Mr. W. Glanmore Jones is admirably suited to the part of Alderman Fitzwarren; Mr. L. C. Young as the Cat is responsible for much amusement; Miss Kitty Thomas makes a good Tom Bowline; Mr. J. R. Wilson has a double part as Captain Bayley and latterly as Sultan Bouzican, and performs admirably in each; as Princess Halfid Miss Topsy Johnstone is capital; Miss Rene Wilson creates a favourable impression as Mustapha; while Miss Connie Irwin as Fairy Bow Bell is pleasing. Mr. Michael Kemble as King Rat sings several numbers with good taste. Specialities are provided by Lindsay and Harte, who are excellently received. The Four Killarney Girls, the Celestias Comedy Quartette, and the Sisters Cora are also prominent.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Reynolds.—The star turn here this week is that of the Jewels, in their scenic sketch called Change, or the Haunted Castle, in which Messrs. James A. Jewel, Herbert Jewel, and Miss Adine Carden play the principal parts; the Marco Twins present their intensely comical sketch, So Longy and So Shorty; the Brennans make clog dancing a really graceful art; Adolf Salge's living statues are extremely artistic, whether posing on pedestals or gracefully reclining as illustrations on porcelain; Massilia and Thrales give expression to various emotions in their dancing act, called "Captivation"; Sadie Jerome's monologues "from her own pen" are amusing and instructive; Dion Wade's drolleries keep the fun going on briskly; Waul Langtry's dialectic comicalities add their full quota to the merriment; up-to-date pictures on the Bioscope screen, and Frank Hartley's juvenile juggling complete an interesting bill of fare.

PAVILION, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Evan Good; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Foster.—Canada's famous band, the Kilties, is the star attraction here, and their playing has evoked the heartiest enthusiasm from large audiences. They are assisted by the Johnstone Troupe of dancers and by J. Coats Lockhart as vocalist. The turn provided by Barnold's Animal Actors is a wonderfully clever one, and the limit of animal training seems to have been reached by Dan, the drunken dog, without doubt the most marvellous turn of its kind ever seen here; Rosie Lloyd comes provided with several catchy songs, and is heartily received; Selbo, the favourite Scotch juggler, once more proves his neatness and dexterity in a host of difficult feats; Fred and Lulu Camplin give a smart musical comedy act, and are much enjoyed; Gus Barra, eccentric musician, proves his mastery over a variety of instruments; Pitts and Gould appear in an ingeniously devised song and dance scena, "A Bachelor's Memories"; Ethel Thomas, the Welsh nightingale, in several beautifully rendered songs, and the eccentric acrobatic turn of the Richards Trio complete a well-diversified bill.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—A good all-round programme is arranged here. The post of honour is occupied by Emerson and Baldwin, American juggling comedians; Les Morbas, humorists and acrobatic dancers, are extremely clever; Rose D'Aulby has well chosen songs; Tom E. Conover is a quaint character comedian; the Six Manchester Lads have a clever vocal and dancing scena; and the Summertons, speciality artists; Alf. Chester, character comedian; Bros. Hannaway, patter comedians and dancers; and Dugie St. Clair, Scotch comedian, are also in the bill.

COLISEUM. — District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—That popular comedian, Mr. Arthur Roberts, heads the bill here, and, in The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife, he finds unlimited scope for his humorous proclivities, and has the assistance of several clever and charming ladies; Miss Juliette's sea lions give a wonderful display of juggling, balancing, and musical talent; the Olympian Team of cyclists create much excitement with their football match on bicycles; Naughton and Gold, two smart Glasgow comedians, earn hearty applause for their really clever dancing and patter turn; Francis and Alfred, in a juggling act, ably combine daring feats with a blend of humour all through; Dot Hardy, an eccentric comedienne with lots of go, is well received; Stanley and Greenop's banjo selections prove most enjoyable; O'Gust, the famous French mimic, is as popular as ever; Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls contribute a clever song scena; and the Bioscope gives several of the latest films.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Chief among the variety artists here are Lux and Dux, acrobatic comedians and wrestlers; Cissie Arris is an expert dancer; and other turns include Glen Cairn, eccentric dancer; Sadie Ashby, burlesque actress; and Jimmy Harvey, a champion clog dancer.

GLOUCESTER. — PALACE.—Owners, Messrs. Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Director, Mr. C. W. Poole.—Consul, the educated chimpanzee, is drawing good houses; the Goldinis, carpet spinners and jugglers, present a clever act; the Kramer Troupe of equilibrists and gymnasts are very smart; Fred Poplar, with topical political song, makes a hit; Kitty Wager has her choruses taken up lustily; Walter Ellis and company in the sketch The Sleepwalker cause much amusement; the Three Alskarnos, Risley acrobats, are applauded; Walter Stanley pleases in a couple of good songs; the Sisters Indiana, flexible marvels, give a neat gymnastic turn. A new series of Paris Floods pictures are very interesting on the Palacescope.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM. — Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—Mr. Andrew Melville's company is here this week in Driven from Home. Mr. Felix Pitt is a powerful Anthony Raybrook; Mr. P. George Beresford ably fills the part of Walter Hatherleigh; Mr. John B. Shinton ably depicts Geoffrey Waring; Messrs. Winters, Hardy, and Bate are amusing as the bell-ringers; Mr. Harry Cornwall gives a clever character sketch of Jabez, the manservant; and Miss A. M. Ryder is a charming Laura Raybrook.

GREENOCK.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—An excellent house greeted Mr. J. H. Savile's pantomime Robinson Crusoe here on Monday. In the title-rôle Miss Daisie Morrell excels in everything she does, and has an able assistant in Miss Maud Terry as Polly Perkins; Mr. Harry Farrow as Mrs. Crusoe scores on every occasion; and Mr. Tatten Hall works hard as Will Atkins. Mr. Dan Maxford as Captain Kettle and Mr. Tom O'Neill as the Mate provoke much hilarity; and Mr. Harry Arnold as Willie Crusoe is also amusing. Miss Dorothy Harris acts with charm as Princess Pittising; and Miss Phyllis Thornton sings pleasingly as the Fairy Queen. Miss Margaret Webster, the Spirit of the Storm, appears successfully; and as the Voice of the Storm Mr. Lewis Morgan is heard to advantage. Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers are very clever, and win well-merited applause. The choruses are all excellently accomplished.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—Miss Ethel Arden and company top the bill here with their sketch, Three of a Kind, and the many amusing situations appeal to the large audiences; Miss Marguerite Ismay and her peerless white coons achieve success in a vocal and dancing act; as a musical and equilibristic juggler Ernesto is distinctly good; Les Bollingers distinguish themselves as rag-painters; and Bains and Reed, in a speciality act, are good. The Dromoscope shows some fine pictures.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—The second pantomime of the season here is Mr. James Kiddie's Forty Thieves. Miss Elsie Steadman is a pleasing principal boy as Ganem, and sings several popular songs; Miss Rose Pareezer as Abdallah is a dashing bandit chief, and is also a successful vocalist; Miss Lyle Jeffries as Morgiana is responsible for entertaining work; Mr. Percy Curry as Ali Baba is the principal comedian, and introduces much amusing business; Mr. Arthur Behan as Crogia is a quaint dame; Fame and Fortune present laughable burlesque as the detectives Pitchett and Poppitt; Mr. Mark Merry also contributes largely to the humour; attractive specialities are given by Miss Cissie Behan and Miss Kitty Behan, who are clever duettists and dancers.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Verner Walford.—Miss Frances Letty's refined musical and dancing entertainment is very popular—she possesses an excellent voice, and is accompanied by a clever pianist; La Freya gives a novel turn, in which pretty limelight and costume effects are introduced; Martin Adeson and Miss Clara Bernard appear in a farcical sketch, Dr. Maud's First Patient, which is full of laughable burlesque situations, and is well acted; Edith Harmer is a comedienne with a bright style; Charles Rose is a successful comedian and acrobatic dancer; the Three Borelia Brothers give a smart gymnastic display on the silver rings; and Will E. Stopit is a comedian with an original style of dancing.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director Mr. Wm Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Lyn Harding and Sidney Cooper's company is a big attraction here with The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Mark Paton as the Vice-Admiral is strong and dignified throughout; Mr. Hastings Lynn in the title-part, Richard Lascelles, is excellent; Mr. S. Groome and Mr. G. Lanham as the two midshipmen, Horatio Hood and Edward Dormer-Lee, are natural and easy; Mr. S. Gatling (Christopher Neal), Mr. F. Leicester (Major Thesiger), Mr. E. Mervyn (the Surgeon), Mr. W. S. Stevenson (Sergeant of Marines), Mr. W. J. Yeldham (General Gough-Bogle), are good; Miss Mabel Rees is capital as Mrs. Cameron; Miss Rosalind Ross's Lady Dugdale is another excellent character; and Miss Rita Johnson's Lady Hermione Wynne is a conspicuous success. Miss Una Venning plays nicely as Viola Hood.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—Margit and Lener, eccentric acrobats, captribute some daring tumbling; the Columbia Comedy Trio are excellent humorists; Les Montaldos, in an artistic slack-wire turn, introduce some clever parrots; Harry Weldon, comedian, catches on; and Norah Desmond, with picture songs; Tom Yorke, character comedian; a special juggling turn (deputising); and the Palace pictures complete.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks. — H. Finberg, in dramatic character studies, gives entire satisfaction; Jan Rudenyi, in a sketch, is well supported by Miss Hilda Stewart and Mr. Drew Mackintosh; J. W. Rowley is as popular and as funny as ever; Celest is a clever wire performer; Blanco White and Miss Clifford have a successful singing and dancing act; Mario, as a juggler, is an artist; Tom Morton and Maggie Bowman are highly popular in Mixed Pickles; and Nora Emerald is a nice singer.

HANLEY.—ROYAL.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone.—Miss Zena Dare, in The Little Duke, is proving a powerful attraction. Miss Dare is admirably suited as the Duke, and the whole company is well chosen. The piece is elaborately dressed and skilfully staged.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—The Saschoff Troupe of Russian singers and dancers are received with great favour; Charles Prelle's bijou dog circus achieves a great hit; Fred Land, eccentric comedian, is popular; Fred Maitland, assisted by Miss Pauline Walker, in Roots, Cash Chemist, make a laughter hit; the Three Van Dammes, comic acrobats, are very clever; the Musical Marvels are truly marvellous; Fred. Eaton has an original act; Richard Wally and Page are clever. The Circus Girl is a fine film. Houses are good.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding-Smith.—Mr. Alfred Paumier and Mr. Walter Howard are to be congratulated upon their selection of the company presenting The Prince and the Beggar Maid here. Miss Stella Campbell as Princess Monica deserves the highest praise for the fervour and dignity with which she invests the part; Miss B. Stuart makes a capital study of the ingenuous girl Viola; Miss Ethel Patrick as Camiola acts with impressive pathos; Mr. G. Mayor-Cooke makes a dashing figure of Prince Hildred; Mr. Lionel Gadsden gives a forceful rendering of Prince Michael; Mr. C. W. Standing as Prince Olaf is debonair and virile; Mr. Robert Noble as Captain Hector exercises artistic restraint, and delivers his lines with incisive elocution. The minor parts are all in capable hands.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. E. Scutt.—Mr. Walter Melville's play entitled The Beggar Girl's Wedding, held the boards in the early part of the week. The company was headed by Miss Marie Duncan and Mr. Otto Minster. Jack Cunningham, who marries the Beggar Girl, is ably represented by Mr. Otto Minster; and as the Beggar Girl Miss Marie Duncan acts with delicacy and refinement; Mr. Herbert Morgan successfully depicts Gilbert Lindsay; Miss Olive Warne acts naturally as Maud Villiers, a Society lady; Jack Cunningham's sister Elsie is well taken by Miss Lily Duncker; as Robert Grimshaw Mr. Herbert Goddard makes an able outspoken lawyer; Mr. Charles Barclay gives a good character sketch of the eccentric physician; and an amusing undercurrent of love-making is enacted between Davis, Grimshaw's clerk, taken by Mr. B. Elton, and Tina Torkington, represented by Miss Daisy Meynard. The remainder of the week Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company produce Messrs. Hall Caine and Louis N. Parker's domestic drama Pete.

PIER PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Mr. Ernest E. Norris and company are here in The Builder of Bridges. Mr. Ernest Norris gives a finished representation of Edward Thursfield; as Arnold Faringay Mr. Benson North treats the rôle quite naturally; Mr. Arthur Vezin capably takes the part of Walter Gresham; Mr. Edward Petley as Sir Henry Killick secures the heartiest approbation; Mr. Edward Boddy in the part of Peter Holland is natural; and as Dorothy Faringay Miss Muriel Dole plays with grace and finish; Miss Clara Nicholls brings dignity to bear upon the character of Mrs. Debney.

HORWICH.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Durie.—A special attraction is provided by Mr. W. V. Garrod and company, in A Country Girl in London. The scenery and effects are striking. Mr. Chas. Halling is a typical Squire Hamilton; Mr. W. V. Garrod plays Frank Gordon with fervour, and makes a great impression; Mr. William Bradford has full opportunity as Godfrey Clinton, and uses it to the utmost advantage; Mr. Owen Remonde has a capital part in Job Smithers, a ne'er-do-well, and creates roars of laughter; Mr. Frank Dallas as Heinrich Oppenheim gives a fine exposition of broad comedy; Mr. Edward Ashton as Joe Button looks and plays the part well; Mr. Seymour Perry as Wilberforce Puddyphat has a humorous part, of which he avails himself fully, being ably assisted by Miss Alice Clarke as Adelaide Puddyphat; Miss Ethel Crawford gives a pathetic rendering of Gwendoline Gordon; Miss Bertha Kingston in the title-rôle is artistic and natural, and had to acknowledge the plaudits of an admiring audience.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING. — GAIETY. — Proprietors, Messrs. Hall and Ainsley.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is here with Two Little Drummer Boys, and on Monday were well received by a packed house. Miss Maggie English and Miss Maudie Douglas as the two little Drummer Boys are excellent, and Miss Violet Langley, in the character of Alma Kinsley, meets with much success; Mr. William Vane gives an artistic impersonation of Captain Carsdale; and Mr. F. Walters, in the character of Captain Darrell, gives an ideal performance; Mr. Edward Bikker as Captain Kinsley, V.C., is also praiseworthy; the comic element is cleverly introduced by Miss Patrick Connaughton, Mr. Will Percy, and Mr. Dick Seddon. Successes are also secured by Mr. George Turner and Mr. Frank Cope, and Miss Violet Ingram cleverly enacts Margaret Rivers.

HUDDERSFIELD. — HIPPODROME.— Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—A fine example of animal-training is shown by Miss Marquis Dassie with her clever troupe of eight cobs, who go through many and various intricate evolutions. Also appearing are George Drayton, comedian; the Three Sisters Dixon, in a pleasing musical and dancing turn; Niagara and Falls, comedy acrobats; Dunn and Reano, gymnasts; the Three Langfords, clever clog dancers; and Surrie Lindon's refined singing quartette, in the dainty scena, Monks at Play. The pictures create plenty of laughter.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Herbert Garside.—Chief place is taken by the well-known Albert and Edmunds' company, in their pantomimic absurdity, The Tower of London. There are in the bill, in addition, Miss Amy Anderson and company, in their bustling act, The Banana Queen; Rene, a dexterous girl juggler; Roy Beavis, a nimble sleight-of-hand artist; Jack Warman, comedian; George James, comedian; and the Lafaille Troupe of gymnasts and equilibrists, in a brilliantly-executed performance. The pictures are good.

HULL.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Mortons, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Mr. Mollison and Miss Annie Hughes have given Hull an early opportunity of testing the merits of The Chorus Girl. Miss Annie Hughes plays the part of Patricia with fine skill; Miss Elsie Vron Neville as Norah gains much merit; the rôle of Crawford has scarcely sufficient possibilities for Mr. Mollison to reveal the wonderful talent we know him to possess; Miss Agnes D'Aragan puts good work in as the Wardrobe Woman. A Breezy Morning precedes.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Mortons, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—The Dottridge and Longden pantomime Robinson Crusoe has taken a firm hold, and crowded houses have been the rule throughout. Already one has sung the praises of Miss Maude Mortimer as Crusoe, the cleverly-trained children, the old Dame of Mr. Fixott, and the dainty ballets. It is with regret that the patrons of this house will see the curtain fall to-night (Saturday).

PALACE.—Proprietors, Moss Empires, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Barnett.—The chief feature of the bill here is the military sketch Gentlemen, the King, in which Mr. Henry Bedford takes the principal part, supported by a capable company; Cruikshank, the comedian, is again heartily welcomed; and an amusing sketch is given by Will Murray and company, entitled The Casey Army; a clever gymnastic display is given by the Bros. O'Brien; the Coloured Meisters have a smart turn; Mlle. Haydee's miniature vaudeville theatre has novel features; Clown Argo is an expert imitator of sounds; Harry Lewis, a very entertaining comedian; and Violet Stockelle, a dainty comedienne.

EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—Here are the Vays in the humorous and pathetic vocal scena Life in the Slums; another feature being Horace Monto, who is described as "the prince of versatility," in a novel pot-pourri act. The other turns are: John Renson and Rose Waite, Yorkshire humorists sketch Much Ado About Nothing; Miss Crissie Cross sings and dances admirably; and Bert Woodward accomplishes some very clever feats in his trick riding on bicycles. The Bioscope concludes a good bill.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Lionel Locke.—Mr. Wilson Benge's company is here this week with The Eve of Her Wedding. Mr. Cecil A. Melton is a manly George Tremain; Squire Leverton is in the safe hands of Mr. Ben Carr; to the part of Dick Leverton full justice is done by Mr. H. Danson; Mr. C. M. Doyle is a quaint Rudulph Earle; Mr. A. Keand makes the most of the part of Giovanni; Mr. Harry Leyton plays Dean Clifton with force and skill; Mr. C. W. Dockwray, in the dual rôle of Paul Cairshaw and Hiram P. Younger, is quite equal to his responsibilities; and Mr. H. Hastings plays Jack Herne capably. Miss Annie Hylton is an excellent Renée-de-Telle, an adventuress; Miss Pauline Nanton a charming Mavis Leverton; and Miss Nancy J. Clarke an effective Gwendoline Younger.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—Mr. John A. Thompson is paying his annual visit here with the pantomime of The Sleeping Beauty, which is quite up-to-date, and goes with a swing from start to finish. Miss Alyce Williams is a delightful Princess, and her singing and dancing is worthy of special praise; Miss Adele Rose has a shapely figure, and scores a success as Prince Charming; Bo-Peep is ably undertaken by Miss Nellie Scorey, who is a fine dancer and contortionist; Miss Emmie King sings and dances prettily as Little Boy Blue; and Miss Ethel Broad as Silver Star proves herself the possessor of an excellent voice. The comedy element is splendidly catered for by Mr. Sidney Godfray as Selina; Mr. Richard Teasdale, a very funny King Ruby; Mr. Joe Monkhouse, who creates roars of laughter as Bamboorleum; Mr. Tom Hanlon as Johnny Green; Mr. Alf. Harlin as Simple Simon; and Mr. Edward Freeling as Tommy Front. The variety turns are particularly good, and include the Four Musical Scoreys, in a musical pot-pourri; Mademoiselle Florence, who is inimitable on the rolling globe; Abex, a perfect pocket Hercules; and last, but by no means least, the Casino Girls, who do some much appreciated and graceful dancing. The orchestra is under the able direction of Mr. Arthur Sheldrake, the scenery is admirable, the big chorus of fifty is splendidly costumed and finely trained, and, altogether, the pantomime may be classed as one of the best ever seen here.

KEIGHLEY.—The Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. Barrasford.—A well diversified programme here is attracting good business. Mr. John F. Preston and company, in their great racing episode Rogues of the Turf have proved an immense draw. The company includes such well-known artists as Miss Mabelle F. Barlow, Mr. Howard Barlow, and Mr. Horace Cusins. Kiota and Esa, in their daring and sensational ladder act, appear with success; Miss Ray Raymond, chorus vocalist, received a flattering reception—her songs are smartly rendered, and she has a charming presence; the Five Bombays, coon singers and dancers, take extremely well; De Lil, illusionist, succeeds in mystifying the audience; and a smart turn is given by Hulbert, ventriloquist. Howard and Harris appear in duologue, "Taming a Wife"; and animated pictures complete a good bill.

KIDDERMINSTER.—New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—We have a visit this week from Mr. Haldane Crichton's company in The Cingalee. Mr. Arthur Cartwright distinguishes himself as the Hon. Harry Vereker and sings with much success; Mr. Jack Crichton is a funny Chambhuddy Ram; Mr. Douglas Munro a capital Boobhamba; and Mr. F. W. Ford's study of Sir Peter is excellent; Mr. Scott Cullen as Bobby Warren and Mr. Geoffrey Berwick as Myangah are respectively good; Miss Florence Watson's impersonation of Nanoya is clever, and her singing pretty; Peggy is vivaciously played by Miss Ida Ernest; and Miss Pauline Hague cleverly enacts the part of Lady Patricia.

LEAMINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Longden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. John Halifax.—Each evening the London Grand Opera Company appears in abridged versions of popular opera in English. On Monday evening Cavalleria Rusticana was performed. Miss Toni Seiter gave a passionate and dramatic rendering of Santuzza; the Turiddu of Mr. J. F. O'Sullivan and the Alfio of Mr. Leonard Russell were also excellent; Miss Muriel Jeffreys and Miss Margaret Carter acquitted themselves with considerable distinction. The musical director is Signor Sapio. The variety turns include a clever roller skating display by Hess and Chivers, humorous acrobatic performances by Cummin and Seaham, juggling and dancing act by Welda and Wynne, characteristic dances by Horace Sade, songs by Mr. Charles Woodward and Miss Elsie Bernard, and a smart little play entitled The End of the Chapter, by Miss Sidney Hayes and Mr. George Barran.

LEEDS.—The Grand Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Jno. Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Cinderella is drawing to a close, and Mr. Tom E. Murray, the clever comedian, is shortly to take a well-deserved benefit. Messrs. Edward Lewis, Albert Letine, Jack Pleasants, and Bros. Redmond are big favourites, and Misses Moya Mannering, Jane Eyre, Barry Eldon, and Florence Parfrey shine conspicuously.

Royal Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Francis Laidler; Manager, Mr. Nathaniel Hepworth.—The pantomime here, owing to its enormous success, will not finish before the middle of March. Mr. Hepworth is billed for a benefit. Miss Florrie Forde is one of the best principal boys seen here; Miss Susie Belmore has become a great favourite as Maid Marian; whilst the Floradoras, in their speciality act, are one of the hits of the pantomime. Bert Byrne, Will Lindsay, and Burley and Burley are comedians of much merit.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—The famous Cinquevalli is adding to his renown as our most talented juggler; Fred Storey and Co. is presenting his clever and dramatic sketch, Rip Van Winkle; Gobert Belling does a versatile act with much success; the superb singing of L'Incognita is received with much applause; and other talented artists include Arthur Kenny, John Scott's company, Tom Lloyd, O'Malley and Brown, Jessie Albini, and Eight Lancashire Lads.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Bush.—Mother Goose, a bright and sparkling pantomime, is drawing crowded houses; Walter Dale and J. W. Gallagher create much mirth; Kitty Russell ably takes the part of the principal girl; the Miltons give a smart exhibition of skating; and the Eight Sydney Girls appear in a clever dancing scena.

Barrasford's Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford.—Fred Karno's company, in Skating, which includes Johnny Doyle and Charlie Chaplin, is proving a great attraction; Madge Temple meets with a huge reception in some of her latest successes; Kitty Colyer is an expert dancer; and other artists in a good bill include Reg. Beauchamp, G. Colbert, the Hectors, Christie Duo, and Harry Taft.

The Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—Perrier is smart in a ventriloquial act; Steel and Lang are talented comedy artists; and Winnie Derson's songs meet with much applause. John Partington, Primrose Quartette, Percy Dalton, and Johnny Cecil are also included in a good all-round bill.

LEICESTER.—Royal Opera House.—Business-Manager, Mr. Trueman Towers.—We are having a return visit of Mr. James Welch's company in When Knighthood was Bold, in which Mr. H. Langdon Burnage as Sir Guy De Vere is making a conspicuous success with a very clever portrayal. Miss Ernita Lascelles is also prominent with a delightful impersonation of Lady Rowena. Other parts are exceedingly well played by Mr. Chas. Lloyd as Isaac Isaacson, Mr. H. Winton as the Hon. Chas. Widdicombe, Mr. Colin Johnston as the Rev. Peter Pottlebury, Mr. Gerald Venning as Sir Bryan Ballymote, Mr. E. R. Holloway as Barker, Mr. Lionel Brocknor as Wittle, Miss Ethel St. John as Sarah Isaacson, and Miss Una Tristram as Alice Barker. Millie's Mother precedes.

Theatre Royal.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Allerton Turner.—The Melodrama Production Syndicate, Ltd., are presenting here Hush Money; or, The Disappearance of Sexton Blake.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—Free trade being in vogue in the Leicester vaudeville theatres, Mr. Oswald Stoll is enabled this week to present to the patrons of the Palace Mr. Ernest Stevens' fairy pantomime Cinderella, a most enjoyable and well-staged "show," which has drawn crowded houses, and has created endless laughter among both old and young. The two principal comedy parts of Hercules and Tiny, the Baron and Baroness, are played by two old pantomime favourites in Mr. E. Statham-Staples and Mr. Alfred Clark, who keep the ball of merriment continually on the move. Mr. Harry Ongar displays great smartness in his dancing as Dandini, and Mr. W. Leopold, jun., as Capers, is also funny and a clever acrobat. Miss Agnes Tandy is a handsome Prince Casimar, with plenty of "go." Miss Ethel Ramsay and Miss Marianne Carozzi fill the parts of the Baron's daughters in a capable manner, and Miss Felicia Firman as Cinderella also deserves a word of praise; the speciality dances by the Lottie Stone troupe are most attractively and cleverly performed. The pantomime has been produced by Mr. Stanley Rogers, and is beautifully dressed and staged, several of the scenes being really gorgeous. The latest songhits are introduced, and the orchestra, always a fine institution at this house, are to be praised for their work under Mr. Ernest Wolfe.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—There is an excellent programme here, at the head of which are the Four Janowskys, who give a really fine gymnastic display. At the other end is Esther Phillips and company in the dramatic episode, being a dark chapter in a woman's life, entitled An Eye for an Eye, in which Miss Esther Phillips deservedly scores with a clever portrayal of Margaret Grantham; Mr. H. Denton as Henry Caston and Miss Millie Phillips as Helene Grantham are also very good. A real treat is afforded the "Pav." patrons by the appearance of three of the leading ladies from the recent Opera House pantomime in Miss Madeline Rossiter, a delightful vocalist, and a dancer in the first rank; Miss Jessie Wilton, a dashing burlesque actress, who is full of vivaciousness; and Miss Sissie Brand, an attractive comedienne, who sings well. Frank Coyle, the continuous singing comedian, is a favourite, and Willie Long, a comedian full of humour, are also in the bill. The Bioscope projects the usual entertaining films.

LEIGH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. W. Heath.—Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's The Prince and the Beggar Maid company is paying a return visit here, and was accorded a hearty reception from a full house on Monday. Mr. Ernest H. G. Cox is entitled to high praise for his clever impersonation of Prince Olaf; Mr. Victor Rao gives a creditable account of himself as Prince Michael; and the cynical Prince Hildred is admirably portrayed by Mr. Alfred Goddard; Miss Ethel Bracewell makes an ideal Princess of Illyria, and quickly wins the sympathy of the audience; Captain Hector has a capable exponent in Mr. Burton; Mr. Sidney Bayliss is successful as Nathan, Miss Verity Page displays grace and ability as Camiola; Miss Mona Hall is a dainty Viola, and Mr. Vyvyan as Lieut. Stromberg is satisfactory.

Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Secretary and Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstencroft.—The Havanas top the bill with a clever acrobatic turn; Canard, comedy contortionist, is a great success; Martin Henderson, blind musician supplies a good turn; Mr. Walter Ainscough has a tenor voice of good quality; W. F. Frame, Scotch comedian sings songs that are richly enjoyed; the Sisters Lindos, singers and dancers, are successful; the Sauteron Wonders supply a clever jumping act; the sketch by Tom and Eileen Melbourne is very acceptable; and the pictures depicting the Paris floods are greatly appreciated.

LEITH.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Mr. C. Watson Mill's interesting dramatic romance For Love and the King has been the attraction here this week, and a capable company, furnished with an excellent equipment of scenery, have presented the piece in an admirable manner. Mr. Watson Mill and Miss Rosalind Tate acquit themselves well in the leading rôles of Gerald and Edith Meredith; Miss Joan Elliss is prominent as the peasant girl Natila; and Princess Milania and Grazia Obrenovic are suitably portrayed by Miss Laura Munro and Miss Marie Danvers Smith. Mischief has its due representative in the Vladimir of Mr. Fred J. Webb; a good character-part is found for Mr. Alfred Maurice as Michael, the Outcast; and Mr Oscar Power provides the lighter element in his rendering of Carl Oppenheim. Capable support is further given by Mr. Stanley Weston, Mr. F. K. Wicksteed Mr. Alex. Jones, and Mr. Geoffrey Chate, who respectively impersonates King Kara, Prince Uros, Kosto Murko, and Duke Fernand; and the cast is efficiently completed by Mr. Jack Litchfield as Vitomir Ladie, Mr. Geo. Jones as Captain Krelio, and Mr. D. Adams as Vadoc.

LIVERPOOL.—Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—On its first visit to Liverpool The Bad Girl of the Family is being received with much satisfaction. Mr. Frederick Melville has sent an excellent all-round company, with the result that the new play is being presented in pleasing fashion. Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves looks the part of the manly sailor Lieut. Marsh, and Miss Daisy Cook, in the rôle of Gladys Erskine, his sweetheart, is particularly pleasing. Miss Violet Crossley works hard and effectively as Bess Moore, showing high qualities as an actress; Mr. Luke Forster makes several strong points with his well-finished character part of Barney Gordon; Mr. George R. Montford is a telling Harry Gordon; Miss Margaret Tueskie does credit to the character of Honour Moore; and plenty of excellent comedy is provided by Mr. Tom May (Sammy Snozzle), Mr. George Belmore (Jerry Holmes), and Miss Amy Randolph (Sally Smithers).

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—After its first production at Belfast last week, Mrs. Morton Powell's new play Driving a Girl to Destruction is being presented here, and public patronage is great. It is staged in capital style, and played by an able company engaged by Mr. Morton Powell. As the persecuted Ruby Wright Miss Maud M. Powell shows high histrionic powers, and makes an impression upon her audience; Miss Kate Sydney affords much support with her telling portrait of the unfortunate Ruth Wright; Miss Ana Corri handles the rôle of the villainous Mme. de Moral with ability; as the heroic Robert Ray Mr. Charles Stafford earns rounds of applause; Mr. F. Cyril Leighton stands out prominently as the rascally Lucas List, acting with a deal of naturalness; Mr. Henry Scratchard's iniquitous school official Screws is capitally given; Mr. William Berson meets with considerable favour for his naturally presented Vicar; and Miss Eva Norman is a sympathetic crippled boy Ned. There is an abundance of good comedy supplied by Mr. Edward Swinton and Miss Maggie Stewart.

Kelly's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant.—Good business is being done here with a smart pantomime, Babes in the Wood, brought by Cullen and Carthy. It is presented in good style, and fun is a big feature. Miss Bessie Cohen makes a dashing Robin Hood; Miss Maudie Ford proves a delightful Maid Marion; the Babes are nicely represented by Dollie Cullen and Elsie Jordison; Miss Marie Fern looks exceedingly pretty as the Fairy Queen; and uproarious laughter follows the antics of Cullen and Carthy (the Robbers), Arthur Stratton (Baron), Little Cluley (Bantam), Master A. Cope (Village Idiot), and Tom Drew (Dame). Some smart specialities are brought in by Miss Bessie Cohen, the Granada Quartet of lady dancers, Dolly and Elsie, Cullen and Carthy, and Little Cluley.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—The top-liner here is La Tortajada, the celebrated Spanish singer and dancer, whose protean sketch, The Début of Dolores, is watched with delight; Lottie Bellman, assisted by Bay Russell, has a neat little trifle, Bits from Vaudeville; Les Romanis have a musical turn which provokes loud applause, the cornet playing being especially appreciated; John Macauley renders several ballads with much taste; the popular Horace Wheatley meets with a rousing reception; a pretty Old English pastoral entertainment of song and mirth comes from Sydney James's Strolling Players; some remarkable work on the flying trapeze is performed by the Clement Trio; Frank Maura goes through a smart turn as a foot equilibrist; and Leonie Dixon proves a dainty comedienne and dancer.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Many a laugh follows the antics of Harry Grey, who is here with his "North Pole Scena"; Rex Fox supplies a smart ventriloquial and musical act on the wire; Sid Bedford and company raise endless laughter with their funny sketch, The Second Mrs. Chester; a neat comedy act is provided by the Hargreaves Trio; the Three Orleans have a nice turn of harmony and dancing; Cestria pleases everybody with his expert and amusing juggling; and also in the list are Olive Armadale, soubrette, and Bessie Lind, comedienne. The Thursday matinées continue successful.

Royal Hippodrome.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Top of the bill here is Paul Conchas with his remarkable exhibition of strength; Fred Winn and company present a smart naval sketch, Treachery; Tony Black, Scotch comedian, proves very diverting; the Juggling McBanns are accorded rounds of applause for their really fine work; a graceful athletic act comes from the Paolias; Fred Russell has a cordial reception for his able ventriloquial show; The Last of the Desmonds is a telling sketch, presented by a company; Miss Adah Payne, possessed of a rich soprano voice, sings popular ballads to the general satisfaction; and Phil Herman, vocal comedian, and Beatrice Allen, comedienne, also contribute.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The Gamester of Metz, presented here by the able stock company, is proving highly popular. Included among the popular artists are Messrs. Harry Tresham (Baldot), Sydney Grant (Captain Badaire), Leo Montgomery (Louis Badaire), E. D. Allen (Lieut. Herve); Miss Gertrude Gilman (Gwendoline), Miss Lilian Radbourne (Countess Baldot), and Miss Gertrude Entwistle (Lucia). Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope shows The Lazy Boy.

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Lelia Roze is delighting everybody with her pretty musical scena, A Dressing-Room Rehearsal; the always welcome Dutch Daly has a rousing reception for his fine conecrtina-playing and patter; Barton and Ashley repeat their humorous farce, Canal-Boat Sal; the Soho Trio dance and sing in a style which earns for them rounds of applause; Miss Maude Edwards has a cordial reception for her smart ventriloquial turn; a clever and funny cycle act is provided by the Westwoods; John Warren affords general pleasure with his able musical mystery, The Conjuror at Home, in which he is assisted by Miss Mollie Wynter, Frank Morton, and F. G. Fenn; Walker and May, coloured singers and dancers, have a good turn; and also in the list are the Four Regals, with an exhibition of strength; and Katie Moss, pianist, vocalist, and violinist.

Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. George F. Slatter.—Heading the bill here is Karno's Football Match, with Gilbert Childs as "Stiffy" and Will Poluski, jun., as "Ratty"; The Daughter of the Regiment, a military operatic sketch, given by Ernest Charles Gittins's company, is warmly appreciated; an interesting football match, played by Velanche's dogs, meets with applause; Metz and Metz are a couple of comedians with some smart dancing; as horizontal-bar performers Milton and Horton afford much pleasure; Burns and Bentley dance in good style; and Will Willis, comedian, also appears.

MAIDENHEAD.—Town Hall.—Secretary, the Town Clerk.—Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company, playing Miss Hook of Holland, gave two very successful performances to good houses on Monday and Tuesday. Mr. James Harcourt is excruciatingly funny as Mr. Hook; Mr. H. Hardy Jackson is energetic as Captain Adrian Paap; Mr. Sam Lockridge sings and bears himself well as the Bandmaster; and Mr. Reginald Hunter gives a good impersonation of Simon Slinks. Miss Muff Carew's quaint style takes well with the audience as Mina; and Miss Kathleen Starling is dainty and winning as Miss Hook. The chorus and dances are excellent.

MAIDSTONE.—Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Baskerville.—A good programme is contributed to by Charburn's Young Stars in a vocal and dancing act; the De Breans are clever Oriental jugglers; E. Montefiore and company appear with success in The Little Colonel; Ted Karno's company in The Hotel de Quick are popular; and Bert Brandon (comedian and dancer), Allsopp and Beckwith, Ruby Emerson, and the Palace Pictures complete the bill.

MANCHESTER.—Prince's Theatre.—Owners, The United Theatres Co.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—Mr. George Edwardes's company, in what may be termed the new Dollar Princess, is playing to packed houses. It is greatly improved since originally produced in Manchester, and is delightful from start to finish. Miss Clara Evelyn is altogether charming as Alice; Miss Norma Whalley as Olga is highly successful; and dainty Miss Mabel Russell is pleasing as Daisy; Mr. W. Louis Bradfield as Harry Conder plays with his usual distinction; Mr. Leonard Mackay acts, looks, and sings well as Freddy Fairfax; Mr. Paul Plunket is suitably placed as the Earl of Quorn; Mr. Howard Cridland is capital as Dick; and last, but not least, that popular comedian Mr. Eric Thorne is vastly amusing as Mr. Bulger. The singing throughout is of a high standard, the dresses are beautiful, and the scenery exceedingly pretty. A full chorus and augmented orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Thomas M. Tunbridge.

Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—The Silver Box is played with the success that characterised its production by practically the same company some time ago. It is preceded by Makeshifts, the clever one-act sketch by G. L. Robins. Two special matinées are included of Miss Nellie Chaplin's revivals of ancient dances and music, which are representative and entertaining in a high degree.

Royal Osborne Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Messrs. F. Marriott Watson and Jas. Ussher's company are presenting an effective, emotional drama Only a Little Boy. Mr. O. Douglas plays the heroic Steve Kingdom with the requisite ability, and is well assisted by Miss Florence E. Florence as June. On the sinister side of affairs good work is done by Mr. F. Marriott Watson as Jim Bragstone, and Miss Flo Norman as Mona O'Flinn; Miss Dot Forde as Billie Bragstone well sustains the title-rôle; and Miss Hettie Senior as Tag-Rag has a good part. The humour of the play is in the capable hands of Miss Connie Meadows as Deborah, Mr. Cecil Raymond as Joshua Snell, and Mr. J. Abbott as Daniel Dust.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company are still entertaining local audiences with their attractive play Little Phil's Mother, which was seen last week at the Grand Junction Theatre.

Grand Junction Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—A very pleasing attraction here is Seaweed, played by a company under the direction of Mr. J. R. Cassidy. Mr. Cassidy is very amusing as the Hon. Algernon Fitzhugh, Mrs. Cassidy being seen to great advantage in the title-rôle. Mr. Tom Roydon as Duke Sergius makes good use of his opportunities, and Mr. Villiers Stanley is quite successful as the revengeful Allen Armstrong. Other parts are well handled by Miss Ada Roscoe as the Countess Olga, Miss Isabel Hunt as Maggie Bolton, Mr. William Mervyn as Harry Lortimer, and Mr. David Douglas as Abraham Bolton. The scenery and dresses are pretty.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—An excellent programme is headed by Tovlitsky. Hyman and Franklin's successful sketch: the Five Bohemians are prominent also in a nice harmonious interlude; Zanora and Berg, the American comedy cyclists, are much enjoyed; and Bonair and Tess give an excellent quick-change Japanese scena. Other smart turns are Lew Peterman, Hebrew comedian; Alf. Mendies, the musical burglar; Tony Friedman, light comedian; and Stanley and Vandyke, the comedy duo.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The principal turn here this week is provided by Raymond, who presents some wonderful illusions in a mystifying style; Harry Allister, impersonator, is also well received; and other entertaining items are the Lukushimas, in their wonderful Japanese act; Mlle. Marjutti, a pleasing artist; Ross and Lewis, the American comedy duo; Harry Bedford, a quaint comedian; The Three Thieves, a dramatic episode; Tom E. Finglass, the coon delineator; and Lily Palmer, a smart comedienne and dancer.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Lady Beerbohm Tree is the chief attraction here this week in a powerful and effective playlet The Sirocco, which is followed with great interest; the Will o' the Wisps are excellent entertainers; Carney and Armstrong have some really funny business, and make a decided hit; the Barowskys' acrobatic act is exceptionally smart and full of new tricks; lovely, lively Lily Burnand, the favourite comedienne, is as vivacious as ever; Harry Leybourne scores as a mimic; Millie Engler, Louie Tiss and T. W. Watts are very good in Beauty and the Burglar; and the Glenroy Troupe are capital dancers; Signor Rosi's Italian ballet Uncle Isadore, with Signorina Louisa Patti and Signorina C. Mosetti, remains a second week with great success. The American Bioscope completes.

Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—The star turn here is The Miracle, played successfully by John Lawson and company. Popular also are J. W. Rickaby, the well-known comedian, and the mimetic comedy business of Cissie Curlette. Capital work is added by Minnie Mace, comedienne and dancer; the Three Stewarts, acrobatic trio; Maria Gabalda and troupe in The Smuggler's Dream; Fred Hastings, comedian; and the O-K-Dians, a miniature musical comedy.

Tivoli.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Meredith Meredro, the charming vocal comedienne, meets with a deservedly good reception; The General's Word, a dramatic episode of the Napoleonic wars, is well played by a capable company; John Le Hay, supported by Norah Le Hay and Chas. Cautley, is highly successful, as usual, in that capital sketch Poor Beggar; whilst other enjoyable items are provided by May Baskerville, soprano vocalist; Bert Smith, an American comedian with smart talk; Jean and Josie, in a clever and sensational contortionist act; Harry Mackenzie, Scotch comedian; and Millicent Marion at the piano. Ruffell's pictures complete.

King's Theatre, Longsight.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—Mr. William Holland's pantomime Aladdin is being played here, having already made acquaintance with local audiences. The production goes with a nice swing, the principal parts being in the hands of Miss Helen Charles (Aladdin), Mr. Robb Wilton as Widow Twankey, and Mr. Bob Selvidge as Abanazar. Good dancing, nice singing, and bright staging distinguish the show.

Hulme Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Owen.—Spissel Bros. and Mack, American eccentrics, top a good bill here this week; and capital turns are added by the Two Kays, good singers; Johnny Holland and company, comedy sketch entertainers; Seeley, West, and Rhodesia, in juggling, mirth, and music; the Society Idols, in up-to-date vocal comedy; Geo. Payne's Wanderers, in their caravan scene; and Dora Barrington, operatic vocalist.

MANSFIELD.—Grand.—Managing-Director, Capt. C. Clayton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Fred Clayton.—Mr. J. A. Campbell presented The Old Folks at Home on Monday. Miss Warburton played Dorothy in a winning and sympathetic manner; Miss Kate Froud tellingly enacted Patricia Bathurst; Susan Giles was well presented by Miss Ada Froud, ably assisted in comedy by Mr. George Scully as Ben Jolly. Mr. Frank Liston was responsible for good work as Lord Kenilworth; Mr. George Steel gave a capital portrayal of Andrew Ross; Mr. Ian Fleming was good as Hugh Lovell; Miss Clara Stanley and Mr. Henry Sainsbury gave a pleasing rendering of the "old folks"; Mr. Vincent Wardle was extremely good in the difficult part of the dumb Hunchback. The scenery was pleasing, and the effects were realistic.

MARGATE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Weathersby.—On Monday evening Mr. John E. Watson's company opened here with The New Boy, which was repeated on the two following evenings. Mr. F. G. Thurstans was a most amusing Archibald Rennick, Miss Phyllis Manners a delightful Mrs. Rennick, and Miss Evelyn Ormonde a dainty and vivacious Nancy. Mr. T. Weldon Atherstone played the part of Dr. Candy effectively; and Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood was remarkably good as the unctuous Felix Roach. As the fiery French master, Theodore de Brizac, Mr. Alfred Field Fisher sustained his part particularly well; Mr. Leo G. Lilly was capital as Bullock Major; and Miss Vera Wallace as Susan, and Mr. H. F. Wildy as Mr. Stubber were well placed. On Thursday the company appeared in A Country Mouse.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Mayall.—An exceptionally strong variety programme here is headed by Captain Taylor, with his cleverly trained dog, pony, and baboons; Lilian Rose, comedienne, also proves a good turn; Mather and Mayer, eccentric comedy entertainers and quaint dancers, have been vociferously applauded; the Brothers Tarrant, comedians and dancers, have been amusing; and Dot Moss, the toy comedienne, banjoist, and dancer, has pleasing and successful appearances. A remarkably clever performance has been given by the Keamars, telepathists.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Mother, presented by Mr. Harry Foxwell's company, is here this week. Mr. J. O. Stewart submits an excellent impersonation of Duncan Fairweather; as Frank English Mr. A. J. Haviland is seen to advantage; Mr. Reginald Brown as Stephen Carrington scores a success; Jasper Rawden is well played by Mr. Harry Foxwell; and Mr. Teddy Myles is full of humour as Tommy Noblets. Miss Grace Jones is natural and sympathetic as Nelly; and Miss Amy Wood shows ability as Martha.

Temperance Hall.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—Sydney Mason and Theresa Moore head the bill in Dr. Parker, Poisoner, and score a success; the Hersleb Bros. are quaint comedians; Musical Sylvio presents a pleasing entertainment; W. C. Webber gains applause for his vocal numbers; and Lilla Morton is well received.

METHIL.—Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietors, The Methil Theatre Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. John C. Burnett.—The attraction here this week is provided by Messrs. Auguste Van Biene and Son's company with Man and Wife. Mr. Jerrold Ord as Paul Revere and Miss Kate Hallam as Marcelle sustain the title-rôles in a clever manner; Mr. George Over's portrayal of Jean (a cripple boy) is deserving of praise; Mr. George H. Child as Capt. D'Esparre gives a good study of unscrupulous villainy; Mr. Henry Compton is well placed as Colonel Latour; Mr. Ambrose Horton as Sergeant Jacques shows to advantage; a lighter vein is supplied by Messrs. E. Hall Eldon and Edwin Helm as Bimbo and Bambo, supported by Miss Lucy Fitzroy as Rosette; and Miss M. Thorne as Ruth Revere plays in a capable manner.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. K. Chatto.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge presents The Arcadians to large and delighted audiences. In the character of James Smith Mr. Walter Passmore is irresistibly droll; and equally successful is Mr. Oliver J. Round in the part of Peter Doody; whilst as Jack Meadows Mr. Harold E. Pearce meets with well-deserved approval. Miss Ethel Erskine as Sombra scores a distinct success; Miss Billie Sinclair as Eileen Cavanagh is pleasing; and the part of Mrs. Smith is admirably sustained by Miss Veronica Brady. The numerous other characters have been placed with unerring judgment, the chorus and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Edwin Thornton, command high commendation, and the bright musical comedy is beautifully staged.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Manager, Mr. George Imeson.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty are appearing with much success in The Eyes of the World. Miss Praagh is seen to great advantage in the trying part of Helene de L'Orme; as Esme de Carnac Miss Flora Hastings does well; Mr. Charles O'Connor plays Hector de L'Orme with distinction; Mr. Whitty is a praiseworthy Archille Fanfarade; and the Gaston de Carnac of Mr. Will Casey is a capital delineation.

Empire.—General-Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—The wonderfully clever and daring cycle acrobatic performance submitted by the Bellong Brothers meets with unqualified approbation; the Five Vernons are expert xylophone players; J. C. Scatter is an amusing Tyneside comedian; and Ray and Calden, comedians; the Sisters Belmont, dancers; Edmond Morrisey, balancer and musician; Hal Brennan, comedian and dancer; Dare Austin, in his comedy duologue; and the Empire pictures complete a capital programme.

MORECAMBE.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Julian.—Mr. H. Leslie Bell's smart and genuinely funny pantomime Cinderella is being greatly appreciated; Miss Winifred Ray makes an ideal Prince Charming, and Miss Lilly Pearl is a dainty Cinderella, singing and dancing with taste and ability; Miss Annie Craig looks well as Dandini; Mr. Barry Bond heads the comedians with first-class business and smart gags, and he is ably seconded by Messrs. Tom Veronique (Buttons) and Eno Davys and Pat Yost (Ugly Sisters); capital speciality and acrobatic dancing is introduced by the Kitina Dancing Girls; praise must be given to Miss Daisy Rhyl as the Fairy Godmother and Mr. David Donaldson as the Demon, these artists having some capital duets, which are well rendered. The chorus is strong and well trained and the entire production is conceived on first-class lines. Mr. Godfrey Whittington is in charge of the orchestra.

MORLEY.—Alexandra Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Izon.—The attraction here this week is undoubtedly Judge's cockatoos—a wonderful exhibition of bird training, for which appreciation is unbounded. Another very successful turn is the Bros. Harrison, comedians and dancers; and Mr. Tom Ashby, comedian, causes amusement.

NELSON.—Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Benson.—Yamamoto and Miss Koyoshi, the celebrated Japanese equilibrists, head the bill here this week; Charles Ulrick, the barrel king, adds to his many laurels; and other interesting turns include Williams's Royal Welsh Minstrels, the Whitworth trio of trick cyclists, Maude May Murray in her brilliant electrical dances, and the Redfern Sisters, premier banjo duo. In addition, there are Phil Coleman, a bass singer, assisted by Miss Lydia Alexandra; and Arthur Stacey, eccentric comedian and dancer; whilst capital pictures are shown by the Palascope.

Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Charley's Aunt is here this week. Mr. Stanley Cooke plays the rôle of the old lady from Brazil admirably; Mr. Charles King and Mr. Robert Burnett as Jack Chesney and Chas. Wykeham, the youthful and boisterous undergraduates, are excellent; Mr. T. MacCausland Stewart makes a gay and dashing Colonel; Mr. R. Byford's Stephen Spettigue is very acceptable; and the part of Brasset is well played by Mr. Sydney Compton. Miss Enid Ross has a part in which she is eminently suited in Donna Lucia; and Miss Ruth Newton and Miss Phyllis Beck are charming as Spettigue's ward and niece.

pany is presenting Robinson Crusoe here this week, which has been warmly greeted by large audiences. In the title-rôle Miss Dulcie Lawrence has made a hit; Miss Isa Gibson is a smart Polly; Miss Nina St. Elmo a dashing Captain Kettle, Miss Ivy Boulton a good Dolly Dimple, and Miss Maud Hastings a capital Fairy Sunbeam, her excellent singing being greatly admired. As Billy Mr. Teddy Worth causes much merriment; Mr. Fred Boulton makes the most of Will Atkins; Mr. J. H. Booth is clever as Dame Crusoe; and Messrs. Will and Harry Elton cause much laughter as Dick and Peter. The various specialities include the Three Eltons, comedy bar performers; Miss Bartenelli, contortionist; Mr. Carson Hicks, coon delineator and dancer; the Marbleesque Trio in living statues; and the Lottie Stone troupe of dancers.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The attractions here are Hall and Wilson, trick cyclists, with an excellent exhibition; Ella Blair and her American Bowery Boys in their vocal and dancing speciality act; Tom Bassett, the popular actor-vocalist and comedian; Sands and Vincent, a good comedy duo; Charles Lestree, in Bits and Pieces; the Kennerleys, comedy singers dancers, and patterers; and the Rinders.

NORTHWICH.—CENTRAL THEATRE.—Manageress, Miss S. Golden.—Napoleon the Great is being presented by Mr. Herbert Vere's company. Mr. Herbert Vere gives an artistic rendering of the title-rôle; in the long and trying part of Marie Walewska Miss Kate Walfred scores heavily; Miss Katie Norris plays Leonie Marbœuf in a charming manner; Paul Lasinska is acted in capable fashion by Mr. Edwin Firth; Mr. Chas. H. Lincoln handles the part of Colonel Lavarennes admirably; Mr. Vivian Charles as Colonel Mouron is interesting; Mr. Frederick Biron submits a fine character-study of Sergeant Choupin: and Miss Nancy Roberts makes a dashing vivandière.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Keith G. Kenneth's company in The Woman of Kronstadt is here. Mr. Kenneth excellently presents the part of Colonel Bonzo; Mr. Horace Sinclair is a successful General Nicolai Stefanoff; Mr. Bernard Copping does well as Captain Paul Zassoulic; Miss Ida Chapman deserves much praise as Marian Best; Miss Betty Fairfax is a good Olga; and the same may be said of Miss Isa Billington as Vera. Miss Edith Vogne deserves compliments as Princess Mary of Hesse. Collaborators is the curtain-raiser.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Heading a strong programme is Gus Elen, the famous coster comedian, who makes his first appearance here, and is immensely popular; Mendel, now on a return visit, astonishes all with his clever pianoforte playing and marvellous memory; Wilton Heriot and company create much laughter in their sketch Father's Footsteps; Edith Chantler is a pleasing soprano vocalist; the Melba Twins as harmonising vocalists have a good reception; Guy Ryder is good both as a whistler and a vocalist; Gladys and Albert are successful in their comedy, singing, dancing, and acrobatic act; and the Hippo Bio exhibits a pleasing selection of pictures.

AGRICULTURAL HALL ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Mr. E. V. Barr continues his pleasing exhibition of animated pictures here. This week the principal ones are Through the Breakers, illustrating the story of the Sins of Society; The Dance of Fire; a comedy film, When We Called the Plumbers In; Arnold, the Traitor; and Judgment. Mr. Tom Taylor and Miss Bessie Hardman please with their vocal items.

NOTTINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—Our Miss Gibbs pays its initial visit, and is drawing huge houses. To the title-rôle Miss Blanche Browne brings a charming presence and sweet voice, her success being assured from the start; Mr. George Gregory has a part in Timothy Gibbs that suits his mercurial nature, and his efforts to amuse are always effective. The duets between Miss Browne and Mr. Gregory are especially clever and droll. Mr. Lionel Mackinder is well suited as Hughie, singing and dancing in a thoroughly appreciative manner; Mr. W. E. Richardson offers a quiet but humorous portraiture of the Earl of St. Ives; and Mr. H. V. Crop makes a capital Eynesford. Miss Marie Wilson looks and acts well as the ingenuous Lady Elizabeth Thanet; Miss May Martin as Mrs. Farquhar succeeds in her broad comedy; Mr. Robert Nainby as Slithers and Miss Dora Sevening as Jeanne give excellent performances; and Miss Florence Phillips dances gracefully. The chorus numbers are spiritedly rendered.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—The Fair One With the Golden Locks still continues to draw large audiences, who bestow applause liberally on the various artists.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The weirdness of the "Vampire" dance, with its wonderful setting, is attracting large audiences, and a big reception is accorded the executants, Alice Eis and Bert French; the excellent illusions by Oswald Williams are as startling as they are clever; the Empire Comedy Four sing and fool as smartly as ever; the acrobatic cycling of the Cumberlands gains appreciative applause; Victor Widdicombe and company present a pleasing sketch; Barnard's Mannikins are a source of merriment; as also are Harry Anderson and Walter Curtis, comedians; the Three Welsh Girls sing with charming taste; and an expert mimic is heard in Takio.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—The nonchalant manner in which the Pasquali Brothers get through their intricate and sensational acrobatic feats excites the admiration of audiences; Mr. Leonard Mortimer's company present an excellent rendering of the sketch, Captain Kettle; a gymnastic turn by Natalia and Diana is much admired; and an amusing production, The Toy Shop, is well carried out by Viviana and company. James and Jennie Jee supply a smart act on the tight wire; and other contributions by Mark Leslie, coon singer, the Sages, dancers, Kitty Cameron, comedienne, and Jack McKenzie, comedian, are well received.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietors, Theatre and Entertainment Co.: Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brown.—Mr. Leonard Boyne's company opened here on Monday evening with a first-rate performance of Raffles. Mr. Reginald Dance in the title-rôle plays in a masterly manner, and makes much of the fine opportunities offered him; Mr. Arthur Willoughby puts the necessary feeling of dignity into the character of Lord Amersteth; Mr. Harold West gives an able performance as Bunny; Mr. Oswald Griffiths portrays Crawshay in a realistic and effective manner; the Curtis Bedford of Mr. Edward Irwin is a distinct success, and leaves little to be desired; Miss Mollie Tremaine contributes sound and convincing work as Mrs. Vidal; Miss Frances Titeradge acts successfully as Gwendoline Couran; Miss Marjorie Unett fills the rôle of Lady Ethel with charming grace. The other parts are well represented.

OLDHAM.—GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Smiley.—Pantomime is staged here this week, Mr. R. C. Buchanan's company appearing in Aladdin. Miss Mabel Hind acts the title-rôle in a dashing manner; Miss Lily Lonsdale is charming in the part of the Princess; Miss Evelyn Desa makes a smart Pekoe; and Miss Nita Glen as Hi Toff and Miss Ethel Barton as Chin Chin are both good. Miss Margaret Vincent as Electra has a fine presence, and takes well; Miss Bee Sutherland and Miss Kitty Kennedy as the Maids of Honour are good; Mr. Ernie Myers plays Abanazar cleverly: the Brothers Fiman are smart and amusing as Bo-Ko and Bo-Bi; and Mr. K. Bernard is a capital Wishee Washee. Mr. T. Carrick a droll Widow Twankey, and Mr. R. B. Beaumont as the Emperor Ski Hi is excellent. Mr. J. G. Aitken as So Long sings good Scotch songs, and Mr. J. G. Lowther as Kasrac is a smart Slave of the Ring.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—The Luck of Roaring Camp is here, this being the first visit of Miss Ida Molesworth and Mark Blow's company. Mr. Douglas Murray plays the part of William Gordon in manly style; Miss Elizabeth Dundas as Nell Curtis acts cleverly and sympathetically; Miss Doris Gilham as Jovita de Sutro is a forcible adventuress; Tom Barnes is well played by Mr. Chas. E. Johnstone; Mr. Ernest Clarke makes a capital Gonzales; and Mr. Arthur Redmond does well as Old Pard. Mr. J. O. Cuthbertson is a good Sheriff; Baby Audrey as Tommy is most successful; Miss Mary Morrell is an amusing Mrs. O'Flynn; and some smart comedy is introduced by Mr. Harry Benson as Paddy McGinty and Mr. Horace Stewart as Ebenezer.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Good business has been attracted by Mr. Harry Roxbury's company in the pantomime The Sleeping Beauty. Mr. Tubby Edlin in the part of the Great Unknown keeps the "house" in good humour; Miss Lillian Elliott is a dashing Prince Fearless; Miss Ivy Moore as Princess Beauty sings capitally; Miss Nellie Valentine is an excellent Viscount Broadlands; and Miss Eva Beechey a charming Clonette. Miss Winnie Acton is a dainty Fairy Benevolent; Mr. Frank H. Morton as Demon Malevolent sings with success; Mr. Tom Shenton and Mr. Willie Black as the King and Queen are a capital pair of comedians; and the King's trumpeters are well played by Miss Mabel Keith and Mr. John Leick, who also introduce cornet duets. Some smart dancing is also seen by Tom Shenton and Chicks and The Eight Oowama Girls. The Three Martinettes are funny in their comedy business, and a capital chorus is well directed by Mr. Forshaw Kershaw.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Sharrocks.—Charles T. Aldrich tops the bill in his clever protean act, which gains hearty applause; Les Alex. Carangeot appear in clever and artistic novelty dances; Jewel St. Leger sings dainty songs; and Arthur Aldridge scores in his tenor songs. Lillian Neville uses her fine soprano voice with good effect; the Maltons are amusing in a comedy sketch; Tom Kelso and company appear in a funny farcical absurdity; Blair and Allen sing and dance well; and the Palace Pictures complete.

OXFORD.—NEW THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—For the first three nights of this week Frank Curzon's company was here with King of Cadonia. Mr. Bertie Wright kept the whole house in a continuous roar of laughter with his irresistibly funny performance as the Duke of Alasia; while Mr. Edward Thirlby was decidedly humorous as Bran. Mr. J. Warren-Foster was all that could be desired as Alexis; Mr. Cameron Carr made a smart Captain Luski; and Mr. Jack Martin an admirable General Bonski. Good work was done by Mr. E. Hartley-Summers as Panix; and also by Mr. Cecil Tresilian as Laborde. Miss Molly Keen made a bright and attractive Militza, and danced with considerable skill; Miss Olga Marsden was a success as Stephanie; and Miss Florence Lelgarde a very stately Duchess of Alasia. As Princess Marie Miss Alice Moffat was a decided acquisition with her graceful performance and attractive singing. On Thursday Mr. F. Hamilton Stewart's company was here with Sherlock Holmes.

EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart; Acting-Manager, Mr. Julian Graham.—Mr. E. H. Knight's company is here with The Lighthouse Robbery. Mr. Percy Beresford gives a powerful rendering of Tom Manly; Mr. J. Summerville does well as William Ferren; and Mr. Polson Turner is a convincing villain as James Hammond. Mr. Rupert Talbot succeeds in being highly amusing as Sam Kidder; and Mr. J. Cameron is natural as David Morris. Miss Clarice Jenna makes a diverting Ruth Manly; Miss Alice Deane is capital as Mrs. Manly; Baby Freda scores a great success as Little Nellie, and sings very effectively; whilst Miss Hilda Baynton shows histrionic skill as Rose Prescott.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—For the first three nights of the week Mr. Louis Calvert's production of Sunday was staged. Miss Janet Lind showed considerable skill in her interpretation of the title-rôle; Mr. Pennington-Gush as Colonel Brinthorpe gave a thorough and convincing impersonation; Mr. Robert Borlande played the villainous Arthur Brinthorpe in commendable style; as Tom Oxley Mr. Richard Trieve was impressive; Mr. Richard F. Symons gave a natural portrayal of Towzer; Davy was judiciously treated by Mr. Launcelot St. G. Lowther; an admirable touch of comedy was afforded by Mr. James Hussey as Lively; and Mr. George Marriott, jun., was a manly Jacky; Miss H. Graham Edwins efficiently represented Mrs. Naresby, and Miss Gladys Ford Howitt as a Nun added her quota to the interest of the play. For the remaining three nights of the week Mr. George Edwardes's company in The Merry Widow was billed.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack R. Bostock.—The chief attraction this week is the Sutcliffe Troupe, Scottish pipers, dancers, and acrobats, who perform in really smart style; Roma and Romani are in the front rank of instrumentalists, and give the greatest pleasure; Miss Teddy Edmonds' company effectively present a sporting farce, The Lady Jockey; J. A. Wilson, comedian, is exceedingly popular, and with his performing dog contributes an excellent entertainment; the Brothers Dean excel in the terpsichorean art; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde submit a clever and interesting exhibition of shadowgraphy; Patty Yole sings and dances satisfactorily; and the Bioscope concludes.

PETERBOROUGH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. Darville Vernon.—Messrs. Alban and Bernard Limpus's company in The Thief opened on Monday to an enthusiastic audience. Mr. Bernard Limpus played the stirring part of Richard Chelford with great power; Mr F. Morland gave a fine interpretation of Raymond Leyton; Mr. Carl W. Lindsey as Harry Leyton was equally successful; Mr. W. Somerset was very effective as Mr. Protheroe; Miss Georgina Wynter gave an admirable interpretation of Marise Chelford; and Miss Mary Forrester as Isabel Leyton was very good.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—The top line of an interesting programme is this week occupied by Vesey and Ramsey in the comedy act Jakes the Butler; Marie Blythe, contralto, is well received; Louis J. Seymour, a clever chorus singer, makes a decided hit; Jules Kiaro, equilibrist, is applauded; Harley and Melton, comedians, take well in several songs; Henry Bekker, conjurer, gives a smart turn; the Missouris, introducing doubles and twisting somersaults, create much laughter; and the Karnoscope completes, with good films.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Signor C. F. Castellano's company is here. On Monday Cavalleria Rusticana was performed. As Santuzza Signora Desio was superb, doing full justice to the part; Signora Massior scored brilliantly as Mamma Lucia; and the representation of Turiddu by Signor Foles held the audience enthralled. On Tuesday Rigoletto was performed. Signors Azzolini and Folco as Rigoletto and the Duke of Mantova shared honours, the former being the possessor of a rich baritone voice, and the richness of the tenor voice of the latter evoking universal admiration; Signora Gavlosca as Gilda acquitted herself excellently; and Signora Rocco ably filled the rôle of Maddalena. The repertory includes Carmen, Faust, and Il Trovatore.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—The Jan-Kwai troupe of Chinese do a marvellous acrobatic and pot-pourri turn here; Petro and Leon's sensational and comic gymnastic business finds great favour; Drum and Major create plenty of fun by their sketch The Broker's Man, some fine songs rendering it additionally attractive; Dolly Golden earns high encomiums as a dancer; and the Two Errols are genuinely funny in a leaping act. Other contributors to the programme are Walter Wade (comedian), Josie and Frances Jonghman (a well-trained pair of vocalists), and Harry Leaton (character vocalist).

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Mr. R. Nightingdale's company is here in the pantomime Aladdin. Miss Edna Latonne makes an ideal Aladdin and Miss Jenny Hackett is a charming Princess. The Sisters Rivers as Pekoe and Caramel are a success in the songs "Silvery moon" and "Mr. Schneider"; Mr. Arthur Pier as the Emperor finely renders "Somewhere"; Mr. Walter Bishop is responsible for the part of Abanazar, the Magician; Mr. Laurie Oban as the Grand Vizier and Mr. Joe Perth as Wishee Washee are expert dancers; France and Francis as Flip and Flop perform a clever knockabout act; Mr. Harry Albery as the Widow is a decided success; Miss Amy Pauline Gradwell as the Genius of the Ring and Miss Marie Radcliffe as the Slave of the Lamp render some excellent duets; and the speciality turns include Max Merlin (the human crocodile), the Brothers Lloyd (in a sensational double bounding cable act), and the Alexscope. The piece is well mounted and the dresses are elaborate.

PORTH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—A great attraction is furnished in Harvey's American Boys and Girls, including Miss Daisy Dennis and Mr. Frank Victor in original songs and dance; Stidder and Dunbar, a South African comedy duo, win rounds of applause; Master Sam York presents a smart vaudeville act; the Sisters Williams deputise for Blanche and Diacoff, who are unable to appear; the Mars Trio have a clever military trapeze act; Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard in a screamingly funny sketch, Coming Home, makes the audience roar; and the Palascope presents the latest pictures.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Another of Mr. Frank Curzon's companies is here this week with the picturesque musical play Dear Little Denmark. The chief fun-maker is Mr. Arthur Staples as Hans Hansen, the comic rôle among the ladies being cleverly sustained by Miss Joan Penrose (Ophelia); Mr. Conway Dixon (Conrad) and Miss Netta Lynde (Christine) harmoniously vocalise and forcibly sustain their important impersonations; Mr. Henry Kitts presents a highly humorous rendering of Duke Ernest; the portly Burgomaster is well suited to Mr. Tom Redmond; and a pretty Xandra is seen in Miss Claire Lynch.

PRINCE'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is here in Her Second Time on Earth. Mr. Wingold Lawrence gives a clever reading of the part of Jack Carlton, and Miss Marie McAulay is admirably cast as Dora Gray.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—The entertainment here opens with Trixo, "the man-monkey," whose speciality is rope-walking; that amusing comedian Charles Grantley follows; clever jugglery feats are performed by Mozetto, and Spry and Austin amuse with their comedy business. There are some sensational acrobatic feats by the Borghetti Troupe; Gladys Archbutt sings and dances; Arthur Prince is a popular ventriloquist; Harry Brown, a coloured comedian, renews his popularity; and The Pawnbroker is presented.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Captain E. H. Warren-Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Jock Whiteford heads the bill here. Maud Lordys presents with success her performing dogs; Alfonso Silvano performs sensational equilibristic feats, his hand-balancing on the top of a pyramid of chairs being a marvellous piece of work; Doughty and Laney are successful in a comedy sketch entitled A Woman's Way; and other turns in the programme are Ethel Christie, comedienne; Arthur Harris, vocal comedian; the Frohmans, musical entertainers; Barrie and Wood, comedy duo, and Payne's Bio-Photoscope.

KING'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner.—Crowded houses testify to the popularity of this week's programme. Prominent is the series of artistically arranged living pictures posed by Mlle. de Verneuil and her assistants. The manœuvres of the Tennessee Coloured Guards and their wall scaling attract keen attention; the singing and dancing of the Sarnthaler Sextette of Tyrolean vocalists are novel; a pathetic sketch is ably presented by Willie Lee and Ellen Bentley, The King's Counsel; a wonderful exhibition of roller skating is provided by the McLellan Carson Duo; Bessie Mackenzie admirably renders "Angus Macdonald"; the banjo is expertly manipulated by Brent Hayes; an attractive equilibristic act is submitted by the Alberto Troupe; and an amusing picture is displayed by the Barrascope.

PRESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Executors of the late Mr. W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's production, The Arcadians, is doing record business here. Mr. Gus Oxley convulses the house with his drolleries as Simplicitas; Mr. Frank Collins as Peter Doody has to respond to several encores in his song in the last act; Mr. Roy Sidney is good as Jack Meadows; and the Bobby of Mr. Roy Lorraine and the Sir George Paddock of Mr. C. Herbert Hewetson are capital presentations; while Messrs. Frank Henry and W. Dawson are exceptionally good as the two Arcadians, Astrophel and Strephon. Miss Madge Haines is to be congratulated on her clever presentation of Mrs. Smith—a really clever bit of acting; Miss Mysie Devine, a captivating Eileen Cavanagh, sings and dances most tastefully; and as Sombra Miss Marion Edwardes is excellent.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—John Tiller's pantomime, Jack and Jill, is here. The Gathering of the Clans ballet, as is always the case with John Tiller's productions, goes with a swing. The principal characters are presented by Harry Colton, Bruce Green, Horace Jones, the Le Crens (F. H. and Adah), Alice Maude, Nellie Grimshaw, Nellie Rodney, and Harriet Fawn. Mention must also be made of Lilian Doris and Francis Delane. Specialities are introduced by the Tiller Troupe of dancers, Alice Maude, the juvenile Vesta Tilley, the Imperial Ballet Troupe, Bruce Green, Harry Colton, and Horace Jones.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Clarkson.—"The Lyceum Tours," under the direction of Mr. Henry R. Smith, are this week producing Pete at this house. The company, a strong one, includes Mr. Austen Milroy in the title-rôle and Miss Malcolm Barnett as Kate.

RADCLIFFE (near Manchester).—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner, Mr. Geo. Testo Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—The Idol of Paris is admirably staged by Mr. James Bell. Miss Annie Bell as Flare-Flare acts with power and success, and the villainous Philip d'Esterre is ably personated by Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee; Mr. A. Claude Clark as Victor Cashello makes a distinguished hero, and Mr. H. Vivian Thomas as young Tatave is very entertaining, and is ably supported by Miss Annie Megson as the Quakeress Ann; Mr. Gordon Robey as Prince Sergius Loresky is good; and Miss Frances Bruce as Mme. Sancterre portrays a typical prude.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL PALACE THEATRE.—Sole Director, Mr. Charles Evans; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—There has been a good and popular programme put on at the Palace this week, Mrs. Frank Bateman and company having appeared in the dramatic play The Way Women Love on the first three evenings. Mrs. Bateman as the leading lady has demonstrated her capability as an actress of much power, her Verena Alabra being admirable; Mr. F. W. Goddard has played Captain Howard Tremaine in a thoroughly successful manner; and Mr. Percy Shaw (the whistling comedian) has added much to the attractiveness of the show as Dick Palmer. Sapho and Camille have also figured in the week's répertoire.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Benton.—Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sidney Cooper's company is paying a welcome return visit with The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Edgar Kent acts with much dash and vivacity as the light-hearted and chivalrous Lascelles; Miss Dorothy Riply plays charmingly as Lady Hermione; Admiral Wynne is "admirably" played by Mr. George Mallet; Miss Florence Jackson makes a witty and genial widow in the part of Mrs. Cameron; Mr. Montagu Love is a manly Major Thesiger; and all the other parts are in good hands.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco; Stage-Manager, Mr. A. Burridge.—This week an attractive programme is presented. Walton and Lester, "The World's Worst Wizards," give an amusing "spoof" performance; An Extra Turn is the title of a pretty domestic incident which depicts the disappointment of a flower girl at not obtaining a music-hall engagement. In this sketch Miss Maggie Shaw, Mr. Paul Mill, Mr. Lawrence Emery, and Mr. Robert McCaig all act with ability. King and Queen display agility in a comedy act; Harry Maynard and Charles Bignell are good comedians; Radie Stuart appears as a dashing member of the Girls' Brigade; Pueblo and Cropp, American speciality artists, sing well and also execute a clever sand dance; The Courtiers appear in a pretty illuminated scene and give a refined concerted musical performance; and an amusing scene is depicted on the Palace Bioscope.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Hardy.—Messrs. George A. De Gray and Harry Masterman's company is here in The Angel of His Dreams. Mr. George A. De Gray is highly successful as the Rev. Christian Esdaile and Mr. Wallace Campbell is very smart as Major Dudley Ferrars. Mr. Charles Arnold is seen to advantage as Sir Francis Tregarthen, and Mr. Robert Hall scores as Roy Ferrars. Mr. Mayo Stanley is very humorous as Sam Tippett, and Mr. Will Thornton deserves mention as Frank Roberts, Detective Smart being capably enacted by Mr. Charles Wakefield. Miss Doris Brookes as Molly Vernon has a difficult part, which she fills admirably; Miss Maggie Hobart is good as Rose Seymour; and Rev. Robert Everton is admirably portrayed by Mr. Vincent W. Carlyle. The play is excellently staged.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. R. Colin; Resident-Manager, Mr. Joe Hastings.—There is a return this week to the pictures which, however, are interspersed with some fine turns. A. G. Spr is a versatile comedian who sings well; Mlle. Ogilvie is a clever impressionist; Jack Trevor introduces a smart roller-skating turn; and the Laurie Bros. are clever acrobats; James Browntree sings well; and the Haydn Trio provide a novel musical act.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Grand.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Granville.—Mr. Fred Karno's company, in His Majesty's Guests, is once more visiting here. Mr. George Hester as Sergeant Lightning keeps his audience in one continued roar of laughter; Miss Winnie Bradfield is excellent in the character of Lady Maud; Mr. E. O. Freshwater is capitally suited in the part of Lord Easem; and some first-class character work is done by Mr. G. Gordon as the Rev. Mr. Minks and Miss Annie Wright as Miss Manley.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—W. Selkirk's company, of some hundred children and pipers, in their performance are thoroughly enjoyed; Lydia Yeamans, ever popular, is adding a host of admirers to her already great number; the performance of the "Lucky Tramps," Heeley and Meeley, contains much that is original; Sammy Shields' football monologue is simply irresistible; Edie Reynolds's violin solos are exceptionally refined; Harry Simms, light comedian, entertains well; Arthur Slater's whistling scena, Morning, Noon and Night, is very pretty and effective; and another attraction is the bioscope.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. A. Austin's company is here with Cinderella. Miss Mabel Austin makes a dashing Prince Charming; as Dandini Miss Phyllis Leslie excels; Miss Eva Swinbourne is fascinating as Dabette; Miss Gertrude Bond sings with expression as the Queen of the Fairies; Miss Gladys Liggett's terpsichorean efforts as Woodbine (the principal dancer) are really clever; Miss Maidie Harrison makes a dainty Cinderella; Mr. Tom Read is a comical Pickles; Mr. Newhan is extremely good as Seraphine; and equally successful is Mr. Latimer as Bedella. The Baron finds a worthy exponent in Mr. F. E. Ellis.

WHITEHAVEN.—New Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jacques.—Messrs. J. C. Lodge-Percy and James Martin's company is appearing here in Sir Arthur Pinero's famous piece The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Mr. Andrew Money cleverly enacts the character of Aubrey Tanqueray; and Mr. J. C. Lodge-Percy makes an easy-going Cayley; Mr. F. Douglas Howard is capital as Sir George Orreyd; and Miss Marie Ramuz is good as Lady Orreyd; Miss Veronica Clinton is a charming Eileen; and Miss Nellie Statham as Mrs. Cortelyon is excellent; Miss Henrietta Schrier appears in the title-rôle, and her performance is of high artistic merit.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. Thos. Swinton.—Claudian is being presented by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Maclaren's company. Mr. Maclaren's performance in the title-rôle is wholly successful. Miss Lily C. Bandman, the daughter of Mrs. Bandmann Palmer, presented the rôle of Almida with much success.

Co-operative Hall.—Lessees, Messrs. Hamilton and Hughes.—An excellent cinematograph and variety entertainment holds sway here, with crowded houses. The artists appearing are Ryde and Beeman, grotesque eccentrics; Carlos Menard, trick violinist; the Tymes, in novel song scena The Enchanted Clock; and Alsopp and Beckwith, in comedy duo.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard.—Although this is the third visit to the town of H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company with Lucky Durham, a crowded house gave both play and players an enthusiastic welcome on Monday. Mr. Edmund Kennedy gives a remarkably fine portrayal of John Durham, the intensity of his acting at times holding the audience spellbound; Mr. Arthur Leigh is in every way excellent as the Hon. Reginald Steighton, a part with which he has long been associated; Lord Mountfallon and Mr. Vallerton have effective representatives in Mr. William Calvert and Mr. Charles Wemyss; Mr. John Hartt submits a clever character study as Tasker; Mr. W. F. Clitherow plays Ben Vernstein with effect; and Mr. Frank Elton is a success as Arthur Walcombe; Miss Nellie Bonser is simply perfect as Mrs. Durham; Miss Florence Tressilian does full justice to the rôle of Helen Vallerton; Miss Frances Wolvison is good as Lady Mountfallon; and Miss Dorrie Turner is a pleasing Margaret Steighton.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—The leading attraction here is provided by the Bros. Horne in The Biter Bit; Orpheus proves his versatility as a musician by some excellent instrumental solos, including the new ecclephone; Owen McGiveney is a protean artist of no mean ability; Amber Austa scores heavily with her song, "Oysters," and eccentric dance; Cissie Lupino is a clever transformation dancer; another pleasing saltatory turn of a different type is furnished by Harold Heath; and Charles Denton, comedian, and Will E. Harries, vocal character comedian, are also in the bill.

WORKINGTON.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—Messrs. Glenville and Osmond present Aladdin this week. As Mrs. Twankey, Mr. Clarence Turner is decidedly droll; Mr. Pulo as Wishee-Washee is responsible for some clever juggling; the Brothers Lavelle do some excellent tumbling as Pee Lah and Kopp-all, and Mr. Charles H. Gallier makes an excellent Emperor; Miss Hettie Zillwood is a charming principal boy; the Sisters Wingrove are a clever pair of duettists and dancers; Miss May Wyatt as a 'cello soloist wins applause; and the Venester Troupe of dancers also put in some good work.

Carnegie Hall.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—The films are a good set, including In Little Italy. The variety is good also, with Harry Harvey, Tyneside comedian; and Cliffe and Vauston, comic patterers.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Mack.—Boreskis with comic concoctions, are a clever turn; the Kurious Kenmores make everybody laugh; and Edward Hope, tenor, sings well.

WORTHING. — Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold.—An exceedingly rich treat was provided during the first three nights of the week and at a matinée on Wednesday, when Messrs. Sylvanus Dauncey and H. Browning presented their company, including Mr. Rutland Barrington, in the society play The Walls of Jericho. Mr. Barrington delighted audiences as the Marquis of Steventon; Mr. Ethelbert Edwardes gave an admirable impersonation of Jack Frobisher; Mr. F. Bridgeman was excellent in the part of Harry Dallas; and in the rôle of Hankey Bannister, Mr. Russell Barry established himself a favourite; Miss Gwendoline Hay was clever as the Lady Alethea; and Miss Ethel Trevor Lloyd scored as Lady Westerby; the character of Lady Lucy Derenham was in the good hands of Miss Hilda Sims; and Tiny Mornington was acted with skill by Miss Doris Digby. On Thursday evening and during the remainder of the week the same company presented A Member of Tattersalls.

WREXHAM.—Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—The Three Rochesters (Betty, Adolph, and Babs) top the bill here this week and give an entertaining drawing-room performance, in which the smallest barefoot sand dancer in the world, it is claimed, appears; the next biggest attraction is a répertoire and humorous sketch produced by the Vaudevilles, who are well received; Harry Waldon, a versatile comedian, causes considerable amusement; and Miss Gladwys Marion is a dainty comedienne and dancer. The Bioscope pictures maintain the high reputation aimed at by the management in this part of the entertainment.

YORK.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Still another pantomime, Aladdin this time, capitally played by Mr. Chas. Elderton's excellent company. Miss Maudie Vincent is particularly pleasing in the title-rôle, singing with much dash and go; Miss May Gibson gives an artistic rendering of the Princess, using an excellent voice with great effect; the Sisters Terry are great favourites in parts which give ample scope to prove their worth as entertainers; Mr. Harry Harrop gives a distinctly humorous impersonation of Abanazar, indulging in numerous well thought out witticisms; Mr. Will Beanland is immense in every sense as the Widow; Billy Melia is lively and funny as Wishy Washie, dancing cleverly; and Messrs. James and Alexander as the Policement are clever comedians, and make a decided hit, their dancing being of a high order of merit. Special business is introduced by Li Chang-Hi, magician; the Cameron Quartette of male voice singers; Claremont and Victor, comedy acrobats; Stean and Melia, song and dance; the Mimosa Troupe of Juveniles; and the clever Lottie Stone Quartette of excellent dancers.

Opera House and Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Ernest Shand's efforts have delighted large audiences; Howard and Harris repeat their clever and amusing sketch; the musical items presented by the Carina Sisters never fail to please; Master Edmund Kershaw uses his fine voice with full effect; Neville and Moss present a popular operatic duo; Les Supriskis are attractive lady gymnasts, who give a startling turn; Rauschles, Duncan, and Brasque, in the burlesque scene My Lancashire Wife do well; and Mr. Harry Wenburn's absurdities go well.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—A capital show is presented to large houses. Kitty Hildrew, a charming soubrette is well received; Barry Mills is a taking comedian; Snowball and Mac are humorous; and Freddy Mavis dances himself into favour. Of the pictures, An Alpine Echo and A Corsican Romance are, perhaps, the pick of a fine series.

On Monday night Mr. Clifford Alderson's company, in The Coal King, opened to a crowded house at the Hoyland Hippodrome. Mr. Henry Deane is a manly Tom Roberts, and a sinister Walter Harford is found in Mr. Robert Faulkner. Mr. Frank Dalton as Dick Shirley, the villain's unwilling accomplice, is excellent, and as Sir Reginald Mr. Hartford is all that can be desired. The humorous element is introduced by Mr. Sam Roberts as Jim Williams, ably assisted by Miss Effie D. Crawford as Araminta Green. Miss Winifred Love is a sweet and sympathetic Grace Shirley, and Miss Dennis Duncan as Mad Ann is excellent.

On Wednesday afternoon a special matinée was given at the Hippodrome, Southampton, for the Mayor's fund in aid of the sufferers from the Paris floods. A capital programme was supplied by the full Hippodrome company, supplemented by artists from The Dollar Princess company, Hippodrome, Portsmouth, and Hippodrome, Boscombe. Excellent pictures of the Paris floods were shown, and the entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by a fashionable and crowded audience, including the Mayor and Mayoress (Alderman C. J. and Mrs. Sharp). Over £100 will be handed to the Mayor's Fund as a result of this effort.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION.

For nearly three hours at their meeting on Monday the Barry Urban District Council had under discussion the question of permitting Sunday amusements in the district. The matter arose from an application by Col. J. A. Hughes, C.B., solicitor, on behalf of Mr. Sidney Bacon, both gentlemen being in attendance, for a licence for the holding of Sunday cinematograph entertainments at the Romilly Hall, Barry, which building has recently been opened by Mr. Bacon as a cinematograph show. Mr. F. P. Jones-Lloyd, another leading local solicitor, also attended, and made a similar application on behalf of Mr. Leon Vint for the old Salvation Army Hall and Barracks, Thompson-street, Barry Docks, which will be opened as Vint's Electric Palace on Monday (Feb. 21).

At the outset Mr. W. R. Lee (vice-chairman) said that the councillors had visited the Romilly and Thompson-street Halls, and found nothing structurally to prevent them being duly licensed under the Cinematograph Act.

Colonel Hughes thanked Mr. Lee, and asked that permission be also granted for the holding of Sunday concerts. He pointed out that for the past nine Sunday evenings entertainments had already been held at the Romilly Hall, and the attendances thereat had been the greatest of the week. He desired the permission for three months as a trial, and Mr. Bacon was prepared to submit the programme week by week for approval by the Licensing Committee. He (the speaker) had no desire to introduce a Continental Sunday at Barry, but the young people of the district wanted somewhere to go to on Sunday evenings, and these entertainments were certainly more desirable than the political clubs or walking about the streets. The entertainments would be held after the places of worship were closed, and Mr. Bacon was quite prepared to abide by whatever decision the Council came to as to what hours the place should be opened.

On behalf of his client Mr. Jones-Lloyd agreed with everything Mr. Hughes had said.

Mr. C. B. Griffiths proposed that the necessary licence for three months be granted both parties, the programme to be submitted week by week for the approval of the Licensing Committee.

Mr. J. A. Manaton seconded.

Mr. John Williams, chairman of the Committee, moved that the matter be referred back to the Licensing Committee for further consideration.

FILM GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

Sunday Picture Shows to Stop.

THE London County Council on Tuesday decided that cinematograph shows should be allowed on Sundays only when given by some recognised society or organisation unconnected with the premises concerned, and then not for private gain or by way of trade. Mr. Montgomery was in favour of allowing premises in respect of which licences are granted under the Cinematograph Act to be open on all days, including Sundays, provided that the employees are given one day's rest in seven. He said there had been a good deal of disappointment in London that the present Council had not thrown off the incubus of Sabbatarianism which had prevailed during the previous life of the Council. He understood that something like 500,000 people patronised these cinematograph entertainments in London on Sundays, and it was quite certain that they could not be there and also in the public-houses. On the moral question he could not grasp the distinction which made it quite proper for people to look at the pictures on the walls at the National Gallery on Sundays and quite wrong to look at moving pictures elsewhere. The Rev. Stewart Headlam was of opinion that there was nothing in the Christian religion to prohibit people from going to see a cinematograph show on Sunday afternoon, but the Rev. J. Scott Lidgett thought the great development of this class of amusement was harmful to the public mind, and damaged the power of serious attention to serious subjects. Mr. W. R. W. Peel said that the Municipal Reformers were determined to do nothing to encourage Sunday labour or weaken quiet and restful observance of the day.

Film House Headlines.

A NOTEWORTHY feature of the month's output of the Film House firms is the strength of the comedy element. There is no need for a showman to deplore the dearth of good laughter-producing films when he has such excellent examples as The Terror and the Terrier, Aspirants to the Hand of Helen, and the "Foolshead" series to choose from. One of the largest buyers of London expressed the opinion, on seeing the first-mentioned film, that it was destined to be the comic success of the month. By common consent "Foolshead" surpasses himself in his current contribution. A record has already been made by this series, by the way. Some thirty odd films have been issued, and yet each new subject is looked forward to with the keenest expectation by public, showmen, and renters alike.

Foolshead at the Ball.

THIS is an Itala film, 640ft. in length. Foolshead assumes the character of an impecunious young man who picks up in the street an invitation to a ball. A call on an artist friend quickly solves the costume difficulty. Foolshead selects an evening suit which has only one drawback—it is white in colour instead of the conventional black. A detail like this does not for long present any difficulties to a gentleman of so inventive a disposition as our hero, and the artist is soon busily engaged in applying a generous coat of black paint to the suit, and Foolshead sets out for the ball a perfect model of a well-dressed man about town. Foolshead knocks accidentally into a butler, and leaves a black smudge on that functionary's irreproachable white waistcoat. Foolshead's painful wrigglings to escape contact with his fellow-guests, his refusal, even at the call of supper, to leave his chair, lest he disclose the black stain he knows his clothes have made on the white upholstery, and his extraordinary behaviour in sticking like a leach to the side of a lady in order to cover the stain he has made on her white costume are among the funniest things even this popular favourite has done. Uproarious laughter will greet the further scene in which, having left a silhouette of his figure on a piece of white tapestry, he is forced to remain with his back against the wall until a number of guests have passed. The responsibility for the black marks on costumes, furniture, and walls is rightly laid at Foolshead's door. Another laugh will greet the last scene, in which he is thrown out of the door and leaves a long black smudge on the pavement.

A Cow as Cupid.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF THE MILK is a Markt film, and a biograph comedy of a modern Hero and Leander. The Leander of our story is named Hiram Hopkins and Hero, Sophia Simpson. The housemaid at the Simpson villa is taken sick, and Miss Sophia, the young lady of the house, essays to do her work. Donning the maid's long apron, she busies herself amongst the pots and pans of the kitchen. Not far away there is a building in progress, and Hiram is the contractor of the work. That he may the better inspect the progress of the work, he attires himself in a suit of overalls. At noontime he expresses a desire for some milk, and his foreman offers to get it, but he asks the way and goes himself. Here he meets the pretty little Sophia, for it is from Simpson's maid that they have procured milk. Of course, he thinks she is the maid, and she thinks him one of the labourers. He gets the milk habit, coming over for the milk as often as is consistent. He is always sure to be garbed as a labourer for fear of frightening the little maid off, and she is always alert to be attired in the maid's apron, fearing if her labourer-lover knew her station he would be inclined to discontinue his visits. The contractor's mother arrives at the building with a message calling him to the city. Before he goes he must say good-bye to his little housemaid sweetheart, so he calls and tells the gardener, who loves the real housemaid, he wants to see the maid. The maid is called, and, of course, she knows him not, nor does he know her. This is a relief to the gardener, but the mistress, Mrs. Simpson, views him with suspicion, and orders him from the place. As he leaves, Sophia espies him, and rushing into the kitchen, snatches up the maid's apron, putting it on as she chases after him. The gardener from a distance thinks her his sweetheart, dashes up, only to be embarrassingly mistaken. However, while telling the kitchen maid the experience Sophia's mother appears, and, overhearing, at once starts out after her daughter, who she hears is in the arms of a common labourer. Hiram's mother has gotten impatient, and has started out to look for him, coming upon the trio just as Mrs. Simpson is pitching into Hiram. There is at once a mix-up between the two materfamilias until suddenly the two recognise each other as old-time friends. It may be recorded as the first time that a cow has played Cupid.

The Bioscope Novel.

MR. A. G. HALES, whose record as war correspondent and novelist is well known, is to have some of his "Poems and Ballads" reproduced on the Bioscope. The scheme has all the marks of a twentieth-century success. The thing, indeed, has almost been done already: some of the more elaborate French and German Bioscope arrangements are in the nature of short stories. Mr. Erskine MacDonald is acquiring a number of cinematograph theatres in London and the provinces, as an adjunct to his publishing business, and at these picture palaces he intends to publish pictorial representations of novels and poems which admit of illustrative treatment simultaneously with their appearance in print in the ordinary form.

Some Commonsense Remarks.

WRITING to the Scotsman, Mr. Wm. J. Hay sensibly remarks that "nothing seems to me more absurd than the clauses of the Act dealing with cinematograph entertainments, by which the operator is to be enclosed in a ponderous and unwieldly structure. It shows that the framers of the Act never had to deal with panic in an audience, for no possible protective isolation can prevent the panic in case of accident, except the coolness of the operator. Should he lose his head for one moment, the catastrophe of a panic would be accentuated by the fact that the audience were in ignorance of what actually was taking place in the event of accident. I had the experience last night of keeping an audience in good humour while trying to repair a leak in an acetylene gas jet. It took close on half-an-hour to get things so that I could proceed with my exhibition of slides. The coolness of my assistant and myself passed the accident off as an unexpected and trivial affair. My advice to all operators is—Work in the open. When they see that you keep cool whatever accident occurs they will be so interested in what you are doing that all thought of personal safety is forgotten, and thus panic is prevented."

Telegraphing Living Pictures.

SOMETHING rather more tangible than television has been devised by a French inventor, Edouard Belin, who is making an apparatus by which a series of photographs can be telegraphed one after the other instantaneously, and reformed so as to give a cinematograph reproduction of an event at any distance away. M. Belin uses a paper photograph of quite an original type as the sending "record." M. Belin's paper records consist of innumerable perforations in a sheet of paper, each hole of a certain size and corresponding to the dots of a half-tone photograph. This is laid on a metal base and drawn along under a set of metal brushes; the wider the hole, the more contact there is between the brush and the metal underneath. By this means the amount of electric current sent to the distant viewing screen is varied. The currents of various strengths are made to illuminate more or less strongly small portions of the viewing screen, each of which corresponds to a perforation in the picture transmitted. By passing a series of cinematograph photographs under the brushes at the transmitting station a reproduction would be seen with all the original life and motion in it. The practicability of the idea has already been tested between a suburb of Paris and a station in Paris itself.

La Pia's Pictures.

A WONDERFULLY fascinating series of dances have been added to the already strong programme at the Palace Theatre this week. These are presented by La Pia, a French dancer of exquisite charm and grace. La Pia's fire dance is one of her most effective achievements, while her last dance of the series, "The Spirit of the Waves," in which she appears bathing in the sea with the waves, admirably reproduced by means of the cinematograph, realistically breaking over her, was deservedly applauded by the crowded audience.

French and Germans.

ALTHOUGH the cinematograph seems to please most persons, the films emanating from French houses seem to be giving offence in Germany. Some of the French pictures depict the war of 1870, and it goes without saying that the German is not painted more beautiful than he really is. The consequence is that patriotic Germans are incensed. They say that these pictures libel the Fatherland throughout the world, so they call upon their countrymen to boycott all French cinematograph establishments.

A Novelty for Picture Palaces.

THE manager of the Shaftesbury Hall, a new palace to be shortly opened in the Kingston-road, Buckland, has hit upon a unique advertisement. Outside the hall is placed one of Mr. Lonsdale's pictures, "Find Who You Know," and across the frame a slip is printed to the effect that a prize will be given to the person who sends in the most names correctly of the artists whose portraits are in the picture.

Cinematograph of Murder.

THE Japanese military photographer, who, prepared merely to record Prince Ito's reception at Harbin railway station, actually cinematographed his assassination, has sold his film for £1,500 to the Japan Press Agency. The film will be shown to the Japanese Imperial Family and Prince Ito's relatives before exhibition in public.

New Companies.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE CINEMATOGRAPH THEATRE (LTD.).—Feb. 10. £10,000, in £1 shares. Dewar House, Haymarket, W.

NEW EMPIRE ELECTRIC THEATRES (LTD.).—Feb. 8. £500, in £1 shares.

CINEMATOGRAPH INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION (LTD.).—Feb. 11. £2,000, in £1 shares.

CONSOLIDATED CINEMATOGRAPH CO. (LTD.).—Feb. 12 £47,000, in 40,000 10 per cent. Pref. shares of £1, and 140,000 Def. shares of 1s. 5, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, S.W.

SHIPTON ENTERTAINMENTS (LTD.).—Feb. 12. £500, in £1 shares. 26, High-street, Andover, Hants.

KINO HALLS (LTD.), CINEMATOGRAPH ENTERTAINERS.—Feb. 14. £2,000, in £1 shares (50 Def.).

One of the Pike Circuit.

ONE more attraction will be added to the many attractions of London by the opening of a Cinematograph Theatre in Oxford-street, close to the Tottenham Court-road "Tube" Station. The new establishment belongs to the circuit controlled by Mr. Montagu A. Pyke, who already has cinematograph houses at Finsbury-park, Edgware-road, Walham Green, and Ealing. Another house will be opened in Windmill-street, Piccadilly, next week, and it is hoped that the series may ultimately extend to the number of twenty-five. The Oxford-street Theatre, which is under the management of Mr. Lynd-Martin, is a tasteful building in the Renaissance style, decked out in white and gold. Accommodation is provided for an audience of 450. There will be a continuous performance each day from one o'clock till eleven.

The L.C.C.'s Weak Spot.

A CORRESPONDENT suggests that before shutting up Sunday cinematograph shows in order to give employees one day's rest in seven, the L.C.C. should begin with their own staff, amongst whom (particularly the tramway employees) the seven days week is greatly in vogue.

A Fine Travel Film.

AT the Kensington Picture Theatre this week one of the remarkable films presented gave most interesting views of Washington (U.S.A.) and district. It comprised a panorama of the Potomac River front and its traffic; the outskirts of Washington; a coast defence battleship; passenger steamers which ply between Washington and New York; the Capitol, Washington—a grand view of the great Parliament House; the White House, residence of the President, and its grounds; Ford's Theatre, scene of President Lincoln's assassination; the house where President Lincoln died; house of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-spangled Banner"; panoramic views of Mount Vernon, General Washington's home; and the tomb and shrine of General Washington, first President of the U.S.A.

Picture Palace with Private Boxes.

THE Cinema de Paris, off Leicester-square, opened last Saturday under the management of Mr. Markwell, and has been well patronised since. The hall has been specially built by Mr. Henry Bey, the managing-director of the Casino de Paris in Oxford-street. The hall has a 90ft. throw and seats 400. One of the novel features in its construction is the incorporation of three splendidly upholstered and fitted private boxes. The charge for these is 8s. and 6s. respectively. This latest addition to luxurious "picture palace-dom" is also fitted with sliding roofs, specially contrived to admit air and not light, so that when the balmy summer evenings, to say nothing of hot days, arrive, the place may be as cool as cool can be. Pathé films have been shown this week and are an excellent selection. We wish Mr. Markwell and his directors every good fortune. Their enterprise deserves it.

Pictures for Kingston.

PLANS have been submitted to the Kingston-on-Thames Corporation, and approved, for a picture theatre, which is to be erected without delay upon a commanding corner site on the Richmond-road with a return frontage to Cromwell-road, and exactly facing Kingston railway station. Mr. Walter Phillips, of 48, Bishopsgate-street Within, is the architect, and he has designed a hall which will hold nearly 400 people, and precise regard has been had to the new Home Office regulations. A private company, with a capital of £20,000, is being formed to erect this and several other new picture theatres in Surrey and Sussex.

ALDERSHOT.—WIDE WORLD PICTURES—Proprietors, Messrs. J. Golder and B. Sloman.—There is a capital selection of films at this hall in Station-road, and the management deserve the support, for they are certainly bidding for patronage in a way that will bear fruit, by putting forward a good programme. Several pictures are shown, including dramatic, instructive, and comic, amongst those being: In Memory of His Mother, Servant to an Acrobatic Family, Sold to Thieves, The Gambler's Wife, Ice Industry in Sweden, Braving Death to Save a Child, and Dying of Thirst.

ALEXANDRA PICTURE PALACE.—Proprietors, Carpenter's Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. H. Crocker.—The management reproduce a series of very interesting Bioscope pictures of the recent Paris Floods. Another scenic reproduction of beauty and interest is the film, The Gorges of the Aude, whilst other pictures are The Antiquarian's Tricks, Tickling the Servant, The Death Disc, Simone, &c. Fred Leslie sings and helps in the success.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THE NEW PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—Good business continues to be done by the Messrs. Broadhead with animated pictures. This week's bill begins with a "rib-tickler," What Happened to Brown. If you want a good, hearty laugh, come and see! Her Sister's Sin appeals to the sympathetic and tender emotions. It is a soul-stirring drama. Love and Treason is also a very exciting series of happenings. In the domain of humour there are several very good films. In a Chalk Quarry is, perhaps, rather of the series of films that is informative and educative. The comic section includes the Runaway Stove, very ludicrous; Unlucky Dog and A Quiet Honeymoon are also provocative of hearty merriment. Mr. Alan Wright, lecturer and baritone vocalist, introduces several songs.

ODDFELLOWS' HALL.—Lessees, the Ashton Entertainments Syndicate; Acting-Managers, Mr. and Mrs. J. Marks.—This week's films are attractive in various ways. The Russian Girl's Heroism is a familiar story, but it is worth reproducing again and again; it is so full of human nature, and touches humanity at all points. A Case of Cowardice is also a very exciting film—the details arrest and retain attention; The Little Foundling has its touching phases, although on the whole it is a pleasing story; Lancelot and Elaine is a Tennysonian poetical romance of the days of chivalry—King Arthur and his knights. Elaine loves Lancelot, a knight who goes forth to battle and is slain, and Elaine dies from grief. Face to Face is a story which has many hard phases. Mr. Marks has secured as a special vaudeville turn for the week the remarkable-voiced Australian male soprano, whose ballad singing is a real treat.

THE PICTUREDROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Leckie.—The leading film for the week at Messrs. Weisker Brothers' Picturedrome is Lieutenant Rose, R.N., and the Robbers of Fingall's Cave. This is a naval subject, picturesque and highly dramatic. It recalls the thrilling adventures of some of the heroes of the Waverley Novels. The Fresh Air Fiend pictures in a very comic way the adventures of a man who would have fresh air. Frances Hanlow, coon singer and dancer of varied styles, won favour; Mme. Angelina, a noted juggler, shows skill with the cup and balls, knives, cannon ball, &c.; two youthful assistants do some clever acrobatic work.

AYR.—PICTURE PALACE.—An excellent programme of pictures is submitted this week. The White Sea Fisheries is wonderfully realistic, and is considered the best film ever seen here. A Mother's Love is a show in itself. For the last three nights of the week The Floods in Paris are to be shown, and should be highly interesting in view of the recent happenings in the gay city.

BIRMINGHAM.—KING'S HALL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—Animated pictures are always a big draw at this hall, and in spite of numerous rival attractions, the popularity of the programme is unaffected. There are several first-class dramatic subjects on the bill this week, including A Drama at Sea and The Pet of the Ranch, which excite keen interest. A plethora of amusing films is also a strong feature, the programme in this respect being right up to date. Edie Le Brunn, child juggler and dancer, and Marie Taft, serio, are well received in vaudeville items.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. B. Kennedy and J. P. Moore.—The entertainments given here are of a bright and attractive order, and the hall is still growing in popularity. The best of a good series of pictures shown this week is a dramatic subject entitled Lieutenant Rose. There are also numerous interesting comic films, including An American Marriage, Ma Learns to Ride, and interest is added by clever music-hall turns.

CANTERBURY.—THE PICTURE PALACE.—The great fight between Johnson and Burns is attracting full houses at St. Margaret's Hall, while Thursday's novel competition—guessing the number of the audience present for a real live pig as the prize—caused great amusement. The varied dramatic and humorous films are all good.

CARLISLE.—NEW PUBLIC HALL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Sydney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Peter Mooney.—Into the Shadow is a picture of great pathetic interest; The Captive is full of stirring incidents; A Tale of the Olden Time also appeals to lovers of adventure. Some good humorous films are A Journey to the Middle of the Earth, and The Short-sighted Sportsman. Other good films submitted later in the week are Mr. George Grossmith and Mr. Edmund Payne in scenes from Our Miss Gibbs, The Poacher's Revenge, The Test, and Grandfather's Story.

CHELMSFORD.—THE PALACE.—General Business-Manager, Mr. Charles F. Meadows.—Jury's Imperial Animated Pictures provide an exceptionally good programme this week. The subjects, both grave and humorous, receive continuous and well-merited applause. The pictures deserving of special mention are A Duel in Mid-Air, The Drunkard's Son, Watchmaker's Invention, Bear Hunting in the Arctic Regions, and Father Christmas.

DARWEN.—ALBERT HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Holden.—Crowded houses are the rule here. This week among the principal films are The Stage Driver, The Garibaldian Boy, Scrogins puts up for Blankshire, and Love of Mother. Jackson and Marte, patter comedians; Stayart, musical specialist; and Tom Bradley, bass vocalist, also appear.

DEWSBURY.—INDUSTRIAL HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. J. Christian.—A very interesting series of animated pictures are shown here this week to very good audiences. The principal picture is a very fine one of the Flood in Paris, which is is a very lengthy and attractive film; Senorita is a thrilling Mexican drama; The Acrobat—one of the Nick Carter series—is a fine picture and very popular; Tempered with Mercy is a splendid dramatic picture, and the same must be said of The Mountaineer's Honour, a story of the Kentucky Hills; and a most interesting picture, A Gold Mine Exploited by Hydraulic Pressure, was well received. The Winter's Tale is a laughable comic, and a Sticky Proposition is another one; Best Man Wins is also an amusing film.

DONCASTER.—NEW HIPPODROME AND ELECTRIC PICTURE PALACE.—At the Sanitary Meeting of the Doncaster Corporation last week the plans for the new building in Printing Office-street, at the corner of Pells-close were finally approved. It is proposed to commence building operations at an early date.

DUNDEE.—PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—The reputation of the B.B. Picture Company is upheld this week by another magnificent programme. The majority of the views depict in realistic manner incidents in the lives of inhabitants of the various parts of the world, and prove both interesting and instructive. A finely coloured film, entitled The Ranchman's Rival, reveals a love-making episode in the Wild West, the showing up of a false suitor for the hand of the ranchman's daughter forming one of the features of this film. Taming Wild Horses in Buenos Ayres is a most exciting picture, showing the hardy horsemen mounting and subduing the fiery steeds of the plains. Other pictures include The Engineer's Daughter, What Happened to Brown, and Choosing a Mother-in-Law.

EDINBURGH.—PRINGLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Edmunds.—On the Big Horn is an outstanding film here this week. It is a story of General Custer's last stand, one of the most heroic deeds in America's Indian warfare. Lieut. Rose, R.N., is a strong, effective representation of kidnapping, and To Save Her Soul gives an opportunity for a dramatic series of pictures. The humorous subjects are varied, that of Found in a Taxi being especially funny. Cavalli proves himself to be a smart conjurer, and Miss Nettie Hawthorne sings well.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. J. H. Sanders.—Mr. Sanders again provides his patrons with a programme, in which the dramatic and humorous are admirably blended. Several of the pictures are as fine as anything to be seen in this class of entertainment, and the musical part of the performance is exceedingly good.

FOLKESTONE.—The Town Hall is filled twice daily by enthusiastic audiences, to witness the fine exhibition of life motion pictures given by T. J. West's No. 1 English company of West's pictures, under the direction of Mr. T. W. Kingston, the operator is Mr. Ernest J. Whiteley, and the capital incidental music arranged by Miss Violet G. Head. The new English violinist, Miss Ethel Mouland has excited universal admiration in the musical circles of the town. The star film is a most realistic series of views of the Floods in Paris.

GATESHEAD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Acting-Manager, Mr. Steve Smith.—The principal items on this week's bill are Two Women and a Man and The Cursed Cage. Bell and Lawson, two clever song and dance artists, are also in the bill, and make an entertaining turn.

RAVENSWORTH HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. Allan and McDonald; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. S. Newton.—Two "strong" pictures, in The Señorita and A Woman's Repentance, together with the "turn" of Jack Barrie, an amusing Scot, are the chief items on "show" here.

BLACK'S PICTURE PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Black; Acting-Manager, Mr. Victor Carter.—A picture of special merit, named To Save Her Soul, has created a great impression here this week. Another dramatic item, Saved from the Sultan, is highly approved also. Capt. Alex Fox ventriloquist, and Olive Lizette, a local songstress provide enjoyable interludes.

GLASGOW.—GAIETY.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dickinson.—A bright and entertaining programme of pictures, humorous and dramatic, is provided for the patrons of this house by the B.B. pictures. Bessie Lawn, vocalist, and Harry Wright, extempore vocalist, add to the pleasure of the evening.

GLOUCESTER.—THEATRE DE LUXE.—Another good picture show; going well.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—THE GEM.—Managing Director, Mr. E. V. Barr.—A very entertaining set of pictures is being exhibited this week. A dramatic subject, entitled In Little Italy, the scene of which is laid in the Italian Colony of New York City, is very stirring; Messrs. Grossmith and Payne appearing in an excerpt from a well-known musical comedy is the subject of a very amusing film. Miss G. Vane contributes two excellent songs.

GREENOCK.—EMPIRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank L. Clayton.—Some interesting and attractive pictures have been exhibited here, including "A Corner in Wheat, The Dance of Fire, Custer's Last Stand, Adventures of a Smoker, The Cure of Cowardice, The Arrest of the Duchess De Berry, and The Grandfather's Story; while the singing picture, My Rainbow, proves a very popular item.

HANLEY.—KING'S.—Lessee, Mr. J. P. Moore; Manager, Captain F. Shaw.—The pictures shown this week are fine, and include The Two Brothers, A Pair of Shoes for Nothing, His Reformation, The Way to the Cross, After Twenty Years, and A Midnight Adventure. Walter Ford, the popular light comedian, is received with great favour.

HARTLEPOOL.—EMPRESS.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Maxted.—Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope continues to provide the sole amusement here, and is immensely popular. Fools of Fate is a splendid picture replete with dramatic interest as also are The Bunch of Violets and The Love that was Lost. There is much to attract in The War of 1912, which suggests many possibilities in warfare. There are many films of a lighter character, principal among which are The Detective's Bag and A Cycling Honeymoon.

KIRKCALDY.—CORN EXCHANGE PAVILION.—Licensee, Dr. Walford Bodie; Manager, Mr. G. Lee.—Ever up-to-date, the London Safety Bioscope Co. are placing before their patrons films of the Paris Floods, which give a most realistic idea of that terrible catastrophe; An Auto-Heroine is a most thrilling picture; Foolshead as Sportsman. The Grafter, Mireille, The White Nigger, Towards the Moon, The Fool's Revenge, are the most important of the other spools. Jessie Star is accorded a most flattering reception at every performance.

LEAMINGTON.—ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Gillsmiths, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Harry Plant.—The entertainments here increase in popularity, and again this week we have to record splendid business. A first-rate programme of all-round excellence is provided. A grand dramatic production entitled Lieut. Rose, R.N., provides some thrilling incidents, whilst A Cowboy Romance is also another beautiful film, very sensational and exciting. Other pictures of unusual interest and amusement include The Dance of Fire, Paris from the Eiffel Tower, Into the Shadow, Not What He Expected, and Little Toy's Dream. Miss Mina Langton, who has been most popular whilst here, concludes a successful engagement. She sings illustrated songs, displaying a beautiful soprano voice of wide range and flexibility. Mr. Bert Williams adds to his previous triumphs by his clever reciting of "A Midnight Charge," which he gives with remarkable effect.

LEICESTER.—EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. R. Craig.—The Consequences of a Lie and The Road to Love are the two star pictures at this home of animated photography, which are supported by The Street Waif, The Convict's Dream, Picturesque Tiflis, Robson's Heel Pads, The Slave, My Word, if I Catch You Smoking, The Hunting Meet, Left Out, A Pig Chase by Aeroplane, and The Strong Arm of the Law. Tom Desmond, tenor robust, a local turn, is fulfilling a second engagement.

MAIDSTONE.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—This new electric theatre opened its doors this week, and has been attracting large audiences with some up-to-date films, and should prove successful.

NORTH SHIELDS.—BOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. George Black; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Black, jun.—An interesting and up-to-date programme is presented here this week. Pine Ride Feud is a fine picture; An Indian Wife's Devotion is also well received; and Captain Devereux and his clever dogs appear, and win hearty applause.

GAIETY PICTURE HALL.—The management here again provides a good bill of fare, which includes The Ranchman's Rival, The Late Guest, Choosing a Husband, &c. Master Isbister appears in illustrated songs, and is warmly greeted.

OLDHAM.—ROYAL THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—A capital programme is provided, the principal film being a very fine one entitled Adrienne Bertraux. Taming of Wild Horses is a picture full of daring, and a good description is shown of Dutch Types. Thelly's Heart is excellent, and a Good Winning is also very good. Father Milon is a fine picture, as is The Stepmother. Some amusing films are given, Golf Mania being very good, and include several others of merit. Mr. Don Cameron also contributes "Bombardier."

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lester King.—The Blind Farmer is a good dramatic film, as is A Life for a Locket. The Indian is a picture full of life, the subject being well studied; Foolshead Wrestling is very funny; and Juggins at the Photographer's causes amusement. Amongst others are You Will Pay for It, Herring Fishing, The Runaway Stove, and Terror and Terrier. Mr. King sings with success.

BROWN'S ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Brown.—Business is very good here. The topliner is a strong dramatic picture, The Madwoman of the Ruined Castle, and The South Before the War is descriptive of the old slavery days. Servants and Masters is a picture full of comedy, and Nick Carter as an acrobat is very funny. Other films are shown with much success.

OSBORNE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Hughes.—The first anniversary of the opening of this hall occurs this week, and the programme is a very good one.

RAWTENSTALL.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees, the Manchester Electric Theatres Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Renshaw.—This theatre was opened on Saturday evening last as a "Picture Palace." The exterior and interior of the theatre have been artistically beautified, and now present a most attractive appearance. Both houses on Saturday was excellent, and predicted a successful time for the management. The films shown were: Change of Heart, Little Willie's Trip to the North Pole, The Dragoon's Helmet, A Dangerous Pair, How the Cook Got Married, The Life of the Bee, Dolly's Double, The Paris Floods, and Logging in Canada.

SALFORD.—OPERA HOUSE and ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—The Regent new animated pictures this week include A Daughter of Shylock, The Five-Storey House, Leopard Hunting in Abyssinia, The Young Rascal, and Noel (a drama). Mr. Tom Sherlock also sings two popular songs.

NEW CENTRAL HALL.—Proprietors, Matt Raymond; Company Manager, Mr. A. H. Gilbert.—The Poacher's Revenge, Soldier Turns Servant, William Radcliffe, The Cowboy's Sweetheart, Incorrigible Mary, Mother of the Condemned Man, Mr. Porlock's Marriage, Foolshead, and the Timid One are among this week's films, interspersed with "She's the queen of the factory," and "You all want something to cuddle," sung by Mr. Gilbert.

SPENNYMOOR.—PICTURE PALACE.—Another good programme is put forth for the patrons of this building during the week, which is highly appreciated by the gatherings. The films of note are Comedy and Tragedy, Red Wing, Gratitude, Sweet Revenge, How Mr. Brown Married, and Woman's Repentance.

TOWN HALL.—Manager, Mr. Arthur Sleep.—The speciality at this place of amusement is undoubtedly the fine display of pictures, which have given general satisfaction. The principal subjects are Story of a Circus Life, Boy Hero, Duel in Mid-Air, and Blind Man.

SUNDERLAND.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Hamilton's Pictures and Variety Company.—Foremost among the pictures here this week are Fenton of the 42nd, and a humorous item, Choosing a Husband. The variety is also of a high order. The Five Olracs, acrobats, perform daring and amusing feats with equal ease; the Millwards give a pleasing novelty entertainment; and the Godfreys provide an acceptable musical act.

SWINDON.—COUNTY ELECTRIC PAVILION.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur E. Melborne.—This house, which is undoubtedly an acquisition to the town, was opened by the Mayor of Swindon on Saturday last, and large business has since been done. A high-class cinematograph entertainment portraying all the latest events will be given each week, with an entire change of films on Mondays and Thursdays. The programme for the first portion of this week is excellent, and includes films of Don Cæsar de Bazan, Pygmalion, and New South Wales.

TODMORDEN.—TOWN HALL.—A fine programme is presented this week by the Martell Vaudeville Company, the house being packed on Monday evening. An instructive film, showing the gold mining industry in all its branches, is shown; A Bunch of Violets is a fine drama; while the Lessons in Wrestling are very humorous. The Troubadour is a beautiful pantomime, the castle scenery being magnificent; a pretty scenic picture of the Valley of the Matterhorn, in Switzerland, is also shown.

WALLSEND.—PREMIER PICTURE HALL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. McDonald.—Excellent business is being done here, and the new gallery recently added to this commodious hall has met with the approval of Mr. McDonald's numerous patrons. Chief among the pictures this week are Building a Trans-Continental Railway, a Butcher film of excentional interest; Three Reasons for Haste (Essany); Hayman and Haughton, comedians, are appearing this week, and on Monday night received a flattering reception.

WARRINGTON.—CENTRAL THEATRES AND ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, the Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Lieutenant Shackleton's pictures depicting the South Polar Expedition are proving a great attraction here this week, and they are certainly very instructive. Other views showing The Bandit's Daughter, Father has Gone to Sea, are good films. Capital turns are supplied by the Merrions, versatile entertainers, La Bella Greta, comedienne, and Laurie Leighton, boy ventriloquist.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Black; Manager, Mr. F. G. Hill.—Black's Pictures continue to be a household word here, their popularity is maintained, and ever on the increase. One film this week, Cleopatra, is magnificent in its arrangements and exceedingly artistic; Her Sister's Sin is another excellent picture, which meets with considerable appreciation; Basket Making is a subject of considerable interest and particularly clear; Blissville, Incorrigible Mary, and The Labour Dispute are really funny and well carried out. A picture intensely dramatic and thrilling is The Ranchman's Rival. The Marvellous Howards in a second-sight entertainment, and George Battle, character vocalist, contribute enjoyable variety to the programme.

WHITEHAVEN.—MARKET HALL.—Some really excellent films are being shown here this week, prominent amongst them being Through the Breakers, A Cowboy Romance, A Corner in Wheat, Judgment, the Widow's Reward, and the Best Man Wins. Steve and Dunn, comedy artists, also appear with considerable success.

WIGAN.—PAVILION.—Lessees, the U.S.A. Animated Picture Co.; Manager, Mr. Fletcher Sansome.—An excellent display of pictures is shown here this week, the chief one being The Pet of the Big Home Ranch, an American romance; a very interesting picture is The Bride and Bridegroom Visit the Zoo. Others include The Little Teacher, a story of school life in America; The Scarf of the Lady, The Chase for Wealth, and Leather Stocking. The comic films are Grin and Win and The Theatre Cat. Songs are rendered during the evening by that charming vocalist, Miss Freda Hardeen.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Proprietors, The London and Provincial Electric Theatres, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. W. Reynolds-Benjamin; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hickman.—There is another splendid programme here this week, and excellent business is the result. Saved by His Sweetheart is one of the finest dramatic pictures seen here; Toilers by the Sea is full of interest to the spectator; A Russian Girl's Heroism depicts a dramatic story; The Captive is a sensational picture of high-class merit; A Trip Through North Wales proves of more than usual interest to the many patrons; and plenty of fun is provided in Are you John Brown? Suicide as a Profession, and Little Bengy's Hypnotic Influence. Within sixty seconds of the goals being scored at the football matches at Molineux Grounds on Saturday afternoons, the result is shown on the screen here, and during certain intervals during the day the correct time is also thrown on.

YNYSHIR.—WORKMEN'S HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Manager, Mr J. W. Bynorth.—An excellent array of pictures is again shown. An exciting and magnificent picture is Western Bandit, a Tale of the Wild West, and The James Boys of Missouri, which shows the outlaws' exciting incidents with great effect; and Onowanda, an Indian Love Picture; a splendid picture is Motor Boat Racing; the amusing element is given by Stolen Favourites, Betty's Choice, and An Uncontrolled Motor Cycle; An Electric Transformation is a beautiful picture. Miss May McPherson and the Cinephone, as usual, have excellent songs.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Farce, by R. C. Carton, entitled

"MR. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS."

A booking on which the enterprising Mr. J. B. Mulholland can be cordially congratulated is that of Mr. Weedon Grossmith and his carefully-selected company in Mr. R. C. Carton's cleverly-written and droll farce Mr. Preedy and the Countess, and large audiences have this week revelled in the funny situations and witty lines contained in this most mirth-provoking piece. The all-important part of Hamilton Preedy is fortunately undertaken by the creator, Mr. Grossmith, who gives a perfect character-study of the nervous but chivalrous little man who is placed in such an awkward predicament through befriending "the Countess." His impersonation throughout evoked the heartiest laughter, and is quite one of the best this clever comedian has ever given. An excellent selection is that of Miss Ruth Mackay for the difficult part of the Countess, the actress being admirably suited in every way for the rôle of the calm, resourceful woman of the world, and giving an easy and finished performance, on which she can be heartily complimented. The over-bearing, burly Bounsall was an impersonation that could not be improved upon in the hands of that experienced actor Mr. Murray Carson; Mr. Ronald Squire was an aristocratic and admirable Earl of Rushmere; the Hon. Robert Jennerway was amusingly portrayed by Mr. Edward Bonfield; Mr. Oswald Marshall cleverly suggested the senility of the aged Lord Kinslow; and Mr. George A. Seager as the solicitor Mr. Sidgrave was excellent. Mr. Frank H. Denton as Reginald Saunders and Mr. Arthur B. Murray as Preedy's manservant Bilson contributing effective impersonations. Miss Lydia Rachel and Miss Evelyn Kerry made the most of their opportunities as Mrs. Sidgrave and Emma; and the lady's maid Harriett Budgen was cleverly enacted by Miss Lynn Fontaine. The farce was mounted and dressed in quite the West-end manner. It was preceded on Monday by a playlet, seen for the first time on any stage, by Robert Lascelles, entitled

"A BALL OR A MOTOR."

Algy .....Mr. Lyonel Watts
Elfrida .....Miss Marjorie Dore
Filmer .....Mr. Oswald Marshall

This amusing trifle mainly consists of a discussion between a young couple, Algy and Elfrida, as to whether they shall buy a motor or give a ball to their many acquaintances. They are evidently not sufficiently affluent to indulge in both luxuries, and eventually come to the conclusion, somewhat reluctantly, that they will give the ball, and name the many guests to be invited. Being novices at the business, they think it wise to ask the advice of their manservant Filmer, a very superior person, who has been in more aristocratic service, and is continually letting them know it. He sneers at their modest proposals, and the result of his suggestions is that the couple will have to spend at least £500 on their reception and dance instead of the £200 they estimated. Finally they are so irritated with Filmer that they discharge him, and, coming to the conclusion that their acquaintances are not worth the expenditure of such a sum, decide on the motor, and the chauffeur shall look after the car and wait at table. The playlet was admirably enacted by Mr. Lyonel Watts as Algy and Miss Marjorie Dore as Elfrida, Mr. Oswald Marshall contributing a capital study of the suave and superior Filmer.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Four-Act Drama, by Hall Caine, entitled

"THE CHRISTIAN."

Mr. Wentworth Croke presents the Lyceum version of The Christian at the pretty Notting Hill Gate theatre this week, and very excellent fare it is for the commencement of the Lenten period. The piece is well mounted and staged, and in many cases excellently acted. The Hon. John Storm, the warm enthusiast and eventually fanatical preacher of the Gospel of Christian conduct in deed as well as in word, who blows the trumpet and causes the walls of conventionalism and the whited sepulchres of hypocrisy to crumble and fall, is exceedingly well played by Mr. Henry Wolston. He acts with much latent strength and impressiveness, and carries the audience with him in his varying moods and fierce emotions, just as the hero of the novel is supposed to have led captive his converts. Miss Gladys Purnell is equally charming and delightful as the romantic and ambitious girl, Glory Quayle. Mr. John Hastings Batson has a fine attractive part as good old Father Lamplugh, and he makes the most of the part, his fine resonant voice and gentle manner being exactly suited to the part. Mr. Charles E. Dering as Archdeacon Wealthy, the very antithesis of his gentle and conscientious fellow-worker in the vineyard, is entirely excellent in this unthankful part. Mr. Fred Morgan is duly sinister and saturnine as the thorough-paced scoundrel, Lord Robert Ure, and Mr. Wilfred Noy is quite satisfactory as the well-meaning but wild and misled Horatio Drake. Miss Mollie Hayden rejoices in the crisp, incisive strength of Mrs. Callendar's character and utterances, and Miss Alice Leigh is good as Jennie. As poor Polly Love, the victim of baseness and unscrupulous worldliness, Miss Gladys Vernon is pathetically powerful. Mr. Roger Milton as Lord Storm, Mr. Arthur E. Maskell as Parson Quayle, and a host of others are efficient in minor rôles. Mr. Frank Brandon is business-manager for the company, acting with Mr. Eade Montefiore, the clever and courteous resident-manager for Mr. Robert Arthur, and Mr. Louis R. Fergusson, who enacts the small part of Mr. Buckley, undertakes the duties of stage-management.

"LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD."

Pantomime, by Newman Maurice, Produced at the Brixton Theatre on Monday, Feb. 14.

Robin Hood .....Miss Maud Esmond
Red Riding Hood .....Miss Dorothy Millar
Granny .....Mr. Newman Maurice
Jack and Jill .....Sisters Yorke
Fairy Bluebell .....Miss Grace Rosaire
The Wicked Wolf .....Mr. King Penrhyn
Lawyer Fox .....Mr. Charles Leverton
Baron Badlot .....Mr. Nat Lewis
Pen and Ink .....Messrs. Cedar and Algar
Margery Daw .....Miss Florence Harriss
Miss Muffet .....Miss Chrissie Higham
Dolly Dimple .....Miss Sylvie Silver

A season of pantomime at Brixton has been succeeded by another, Little Red Riding Hood following immediately in the footsteps of Jack and the Beanstalk. The production is limited to one week, and crowded audiences have hastened to renew acquaintance with their favourites, many of whom are appearing in the present piece. The pantomime is in eight scenes, chief of which is the Elfin Dell in Summer, which is changed with marvellous rapidity to the Dell in Winter, wherein a pretty Snow Ballet is performed amid a cloud of descending flakes. The Village of Rusticano and the Forest Glade are also charming sets, and the Interior of the Palace provides a brilliant spectacle, the stage being thronged with a gorgeously-arrayed crowd, who move in a mazy dance.

The artists who have secured such favour during the recent pantomime were enthusiastically welcomed, Mr. Newman Maurice, who again figures as the Old Woman, coming in for a particularly warm welcome. He was the means of unceasing merriment as Granny, whom he decorated with locks of extreme ginger hue, and his acting, singing and dancing throughout were irresistibly quaint. Miss Dorothy Millar retains her part of principal girl, and her refinement and grace as Red Riding Hood are as agreeably conspicuous as ever. She shared in the success of a lively song and dance with Mr. Maurice, and her solo "I used to sigh for the silv'ry moon" was encored.

A fresh principal boy, but an old pantomime favourite, is seen in Miss Maud Esmond, who received a right hearty welcome. She is a bonnie and blythe Robin Hood, ever alert and vivacious, commanding admiration in many tasteful costumes. Her voice is heard in many songs, "Charlie Brown" early appealing for favour, which is enthusiastically accorded. "Sea, sea, sea" is equally well received, and the melodious refrain "I can picture Polly" so takes the ear of the audience, that it is sung all over the house, and has to be many times repeated. New-comers also to Brixton are Messrs. Cedar and Algar, who are liberally supplied with opportunities for fun as Pen and Ink, and take full advantage of them, with a corresponding access of laughter. The clever comedians have a medley in which the titles of plays are wittily adapted to different meanings, and for their "Forty Years Ago" duet they receive overwhelming applause. Mr. Nat Lewis is again fitted with a part as Baron Badlot in which his individual humour is given full play. He scores repeatedly throughout, and makes a particular hit with his "See-Saw" song, in which aid is lent by a gentleman in a private box, with whom the comedian carries on a diverting conversation. Mr. Charles Leverton is a sly and sinister Lawyer Fox, and gives a droll rendering of "I love to be beside the sea." Miss Grace Rosaire is again the leading spirit of the fairy realm, and once more delights the audience with her singing, rendering "Violets" in cultivated style and with much expression. Mr. King Penrhyn represents the opposing forces as the Wolf, whom he acts with dramatic force. A number of juveniles accomplished in song and dance contribute a series of turns, in the Bedroom scene, which arouse enthusiasm, and a speciality of the Palace set is the remarkable performance of Edward Levano, who turns somersaults with one hand holding a knife pointed to his cheek and the other firing a revolver. It is a thrilling performance, and one that meets with an ovation. The members of the chorus do their work thoroughly, and the music, which is arranged and composed by W. T. Gliddon and Frank Bradsall, is smartly rendered by the orchestra.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 14,

"THE FIRES OF FATE."

That stirring play, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, The Fires of Fate has proved a strong attraction at Kennington Theatre this week as presented by Mr. Vedrenne's company. In its representation by the company under the direction of Mr. George Parrington the interest is sustained to the full throughout the four acts. In the part of Colonel Egerton Mr. Stephen T. Ewart makes a distinct hit, his remarkably able impersonation winning the warmest praise; Miss Ruth Bower makes a fascinating and lively Sadie Adams, the heroine; and Miss Lydia Hayward is a bright figure as Mrs. Belmont. Mr. Charles Francis gives a clever sketch of the character of Dr. Roden, the eminent physician; whilst the part of the sturdy, if eccentric, Congregational minister, the Rev. Samuel Roden, who will not palter with his faith either in freedom or captivity, could scare be more vividly portrayed than by Mr. Herbert Vyvyan. Mr. Alfred Sandoe furnishes a splendid study of Abdulla, the philosophic Dragoman; Miss Gwendolen Floyd is well placed as Miss Adams, Sadie's aunt; and Mr. Frederick Worlock is exceedingly effective as Captain Jack Archer, the leader of the rescue party. Mr. Stanley Logan supplies an element of humour as Cecil Brown, in which direction he is supported by Mr. H. Maule as Mr. Brodie, the Scottish tourist, and Mr. Gerald Mirrielees, the excitable Frenchman. Mr. G. T. Lambert interprets the somewhat difficult rôle of Sidi Mohammed, the Dervish spy, with great skill, while Mr. Everard Vanderlip and Mr. Dennis Bryan are imposing and picturesque figures as Arab chiefs. Mr. Arthur Ansell is rather good as the fussy old butler, and Mr. Edward Coventry deserves mention as Mr. Thomas Belmont. There is quite a cloud of Dervishes, Soudanese soldiers, and negroes, whose efforts materially assist in the success.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Drama entitled

"THE PRODIGAL SON."

Mr. Wentworth Croke's full and efficient company worthily presented Hall Caine's powerful drama on its return visit here, and succeeded in giving the greatest point and interest to all its many strong situations. The special scenery and Icelandic dresses gave much local colour to the production. Mr. Ernest Rivarz as Stephen Magnussun, the Governor of Iceland, invested his part with dignity and pathos, and Miss Barbara Gott as Anna, his wife, was able to introduce some pleasing comedy into her acting, especially in her scenes with Margaret Nielson, a peppery yet frisky old lady, ably depicted by Miss Marie Harcourt. Mr. S. H. Humber was quite equal to the rôle of Oscar Stephensson, the prodigal, whose weak yet artistic nature leads him into such sorrow and unhappiness. The virile rendering of Magnus Stephensson by Mr. H. Montgomery was excellent, his fine voice and manly appearance well fitting him for the part; his grief and passion were strong and moving, yet without exaggeration. Miss Betty Castle made Helga Nielson an unprincipled siren, and her by-play and expression were most effective. Miss Valerie Crespin imparted much pathos to the part of Thora Nielson, the wife of Oscar, and her reappearance as the daughter Elin was also a success. Mr. Fred Manners was good as the Sheriff who reads the betrothal contract, and Mr. George W. Hewetson looked well and acted judiciously as the Pastor. Dr. Olsen was cleverly portrayed by Mr. Charles Brownless, and the sinister Director of the Casino was appropriately enacted by Mr. Bernard Merefield. Mr. Arthur Hall gave a weird sketch of Eric Arnasson, the broken-down gambler, and Mr. Fred. Ritchen was natural in the small part of a croupier at the Casino. Miss Beatrice Sinclair made a smart serving-maid in national costume as Gudrun, and Mr. Bertie Murray as Neils Finsen was good. Mr. G. R. Goodfellow as John Vidalin and Mr. Harold Dobson as an American senator did well, and Miss Dorothy Harding was a dashing Lady Slingstone. Mr. J. M. Glover's incidental music was efficiently rendered by Mr. Leonard Gautier's orchestra.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Melodrama, by Walter Howard, entitled

"THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING."

After a week of Italian grand opera there was a return to melodrama at the Kingston playhouse on Monday night, when The Midnight Wedding was staged by a capable company under the direction of Mr. Alfred Paumier and Mr. Walter Howard. Melodrama is always to the liking of a Kingston audience, and the house was in consequence well filled, the patronage given being also satisfactory during the rest of the week. The romantic story of the adventures of the dashing young Paul Valmar was followed with keen interest, Mr. Alfred Paumier, who appeared in the part of Paul, making hosts of friends in every part of the house by the fine portraiture he presented of it. Almost equally successful was Miss Margaret Brodie, who presented a powerful impersonation of the Princess Astrea; Mr. A. B. Winnington Barnes acquitted himself with remarkable ability as Capt. Rudolf von Scarsbruck; and a similar remark is applicable to the acting of Mr. Charles Whitlock, who appeared as Lieut. Eugene von Streisburg, and to Mr. John Nesbitt, who impressively portrayed the Crown Prince. Good work is also done by Miss Jessica Black as Kathie and by Messrs. J. E. Page, St. George Freer, and Algie Spalding. The play was admirably mounted in every detail.

DALSTON THEATRE.

Once more patrons of the popular theatre at Dalston are taking advantage of enjoying some of the best-known musical works which are being performed by members of Mr. J. W. Turner's English Opera Company, with full band and chorus, under the direction of Mr. T. Lawson. There was a full house on Monday evening, when Tannhäuser was given and much appreciated. The Tannhäuser of Mr. F. J. Hargrave gave the greatest satisfaction, and the fine voice of Mr. T. Griffiths was heard to advantage in his assumption of the part of Wolfram. The Landgrave of Mr. Harry Reynolds and the Biterolf of Mr. George Ridding were also excellent; Miss Jeanne Jeune was Venus, Miss Doris O'Brien was the young shepherd, and that popular singer and actress Miss Sarah Williams was cast for Elizabeth. Balfe's Bohemian Girl, which formed the programme for Tuesday evening, proved as popular as ever, Miss Grace Parish appearing as the Gipsy Queen, Miss Beatrice Hill as Buda, and Miss Jeanne Jeune as Arline. The part of Thaddeus was undertaken by Mr. E. McIntyre, Mr. Frank Clarke was Count Arnheim, Mr. George Ridding was Devilshoof, and Mr. P. Newton Florestein. The operas in connection with which Mr. J. W. Turner's name is associated are The Lily of Killarney, in which for Wednesday evening he was cast for Miles na Coppaleen, and Maritana for this evening, in which the name of the popular tenor is underlined for Don Cæsar. Il Trovatore and Faust also figured in the week's bill.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Drama,

"THE GIRL WHO WENT ASTRAY."

After a very successful pantomime run Mr. Charles Barnard opened his dramatic season with the above-named drama, presented by a capable company under the management of Mr. Fred Bulmer. Mr. Louis Lingard distinguished himself by a straightforward and manly rendering of the heroic Capt. Frank Julian. Mr. Austin Mortimer imparts a sufficient amount of villainy to the character of Rupert Murdoch; and Mr. Evan Roland provides a good study and causes much amusement in the important character of Adolphus Boomer; Mr. Reg. Oldroyd gives a droll impression of the lackey, James Yellowsocks, and Mr. Ernest Dare as the blind Sergeant John Harvey, V.C., is responsible for a subdued yet interesting performance. Miss Lalla Stanhope plays the part of Violet Harvey in a simple but impressive manner, and Miss Sybil Houghton is to be congratulated upon a good study of the dipsomaniac, Eleanor Merton. Miss Mary Dalby is amusing as Molly Smart; and Miss Chrissie Dunbar gives an excellent performance as Madge Harvey (the girl who went astray). The play is well staged, and the minor characters are well played. The tuneful selections by the orchestra and the animated pictures shown on the Bioscope at the end of the performance form welcome extra attractions. Mr. Sydney Barnard is in command in front.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Musical Fairy Play, entitled

"PINKIE AND THE FAIRIES."

There seem to be still enough clever children about to enable Messrs. Montessie and McLeod to produce a capital replica of Sir H. Beerbohm Tree's successful fairy play. With the new dresses and the remarkably pretty scenery the touring company is handsomely fitted out. Master C. Haviland Chappell as Tommy and Miss Hermione Gingold support the leading rôles with great success, and the latter little lady is a graceful dancer. The Three Elfs are well taken by Miss Faithful, Miss Rae, and Miss Yorke, and tiny Miss Dolly Sommers acts the Herald with delightful gravity, and wins deserved applause. Miss Hetty Kenyon makes a most dignified and gracious Queen of the Fairies, and dances wonderfully. Miss Lucie Caine is good as a very modern Cinderella, and Miss Estelle Thebaud is a charming Sleeping Beauty, while both sing well. Miss Haidee Gunn acquits herself well as Aunt Imogen, and Miss Lucie Evelyn as Aunt Caroline and Mr. Ribton Haines as Uncle Gregory are (appropriately) very much "grown up." Miss Muriel Halston looks well as Molly and acts with charm. Mr. T. P. Haynes is very humorous as Mr. Irons. A word of praise must also be given to the Cat of Mr. Sam Wilkinson and the Beast of Mr. Laurence Utley, while the parts of Prince Frog (Master Cecil Twentyman), Dick Whittington (Miss Joan Maitland), and Beauty (Miss Clara Milvain) were satisfactorily filled. The music was ably directed by Mr. Alfred Rayner.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Drama, entitled

"HERITAGE."

The Marylebone playgoers still keep up a sustained interest in their weekly dramatic fare, so admirably diversified, with a constant change of the latest, instructive, and amusing pictures. Mr. Harry Calden and his efficient company are seen to much advantage throughout the five scenes of Heritage, which playlet fairly bristles with excitement from start to finish. As the old nigger, Josephus Orangeblossom, Mr. Harry Calden carries all before him, and his portrayal of the kindly old coon is most praiseworthy. Mr. H. Buxton puts plenty of hard work into his impersonation of Hiram Slowthorn, and his nefarious schemes are ably backed up by his confederate, Moss Cohen, a part suitably handled by Mr. H. Henson in the usual conventional style. Mr. Tom Calden makes a good impression as Ralph Harland; and Miss A. Luxos winningly and sympathetically portrays Ivy Broughton.

Amongst the most popular films screened are A Lesson to Husbands, Uncle Reuben's Courtship, The Little Violet-seller, and Matrimonial Shoes. Appropriate music is played from time to time by the band, under Mr. Ward Bailey's skilful direction, and Mr. J. H. Shotton courteously sees to all in front.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled

"THE SINS OF SOCIETY."

It is no light nor easy matter to adequately present a Drury Lane drama outside the theatre of its original production, for there is no gainsaying the fact that the play is not altogether "the thing," but that scenery also plays a very important part in the series of dramas emanating from the National Theatre. Nevertheless, the difficulties have been skilfully and cleverly overcome in the production of The Sins of Society, which is being presented by Mr. F. W. Bolam's company at the Alexandra this week, and those who did not witness the original production can here see the very next best possible to it, for the play is most completely and elaborately staged, and the big effects are graphically and realistically depicted, those representing the Weir and the sinking of the s.s. Beachy Head being, perhaps, the most striking. As Lady Marion Beaumont Miss Grace E. Leslie is to be congratulated on the cleverness with which she handles this by no means easy part. The good-hearted and go-ahead Lady Goldberry has an excellent exponent in Miss Cissie Carlton, who misses none of her many opportunities, and scores all along the line. Miss Rosamund Bunton easily gains for Lady Gwendolen Ashley the sympathy of the audience by her pretty and graceful rendering of the part. As Sir Dorian March Mr. H. Honhote Wilson makes a manly and vigorous hero, and is very much in earnest. An easy and polished performance comes from Mr. C. F. Collings, who makes of Noel Ferrers a most plausible villain, and a neat and finished sketch of Mr. Morris is contributed by Mr. Sidney C. Sinclair. In James Hogg Mr. Maitland Marler has a part in which he evidently revels, and, needless to say, this experienced comedian extracts every ounce of humour from it, and presents it in its most amusing light. The Reverend Martin Hope is impressively played by Mr. Edwin Palmer, and there are many commendable sketches among the minor parts which complete the cast. The play is handsomely dressed, and is equipped with an attention to detail seldom met with in a travelling production.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Drama, entitled

"HER MARRIAGE VOW."

Mr. J. Forbes Knowles' company is presenting Her Marriage Vow here this week, and it is proving considerably attractive to patrons of this house. The book is written by Mr. Owen Davis, and the stirring situations, which are numerous throughout the play, are emphasised and appreciated. Nevertheless the comedy portions are in no way neglected, and many merry moments occur in which laughter, both loud and frequent, is heard. The scenic arrangements are all that could be desired. Mr. Edward Avinal depicts the rascally and scheming Gilbert Carlton boldly, and successfully, and meets with suitable recognition. Ned Benton has a capable representative in Mr. Percy Maitland, who acts in a manly style, and who delivers his lines impressively. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles supplies a clever and realistic portrait of Daffy Dan, and does ample justice to this prominent part. Mr. James Skea contributes a fitting impersonation of William Walters, and acts with conviction. Mr. Richard Nugent as Larry Leary supplies the fun of the evening, and makes the most of many favourable opportunities. He is very ably seconded in mirth-provoking by Miss Nancy Lawrence, who as Maggie Clare soon becomes a favourite. Miss Violet Lytton gives a pathetic rendering of the rôle of Kate Walters, and earns much applause. The rôle of Hester Norton is dramatically undertaken by Miss Nellie Shirley, who is seen to advantage in the part. Mr. H. Keith is suitably placed as Jim Burke.

OPERA HOUSE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Comedy, entitled

"THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY."

On Monday Mr. Norman V. Norman, who is again paying a welcome visit to this theatre, started a week's repertoire by the presentation of the amusing farcical comedy, The Marriage of Kitty, a play which has strong claims on popular favour. It is rendered by an excellent cast, every member of which lends admirable assistance to the representatives of the two prominent characters. In The Marriage of Kitty Mr. Norman V. Norman is in his happiest vein as Sir Reginald Belsize, and gives an extremely diverting study of the polite and well-groomed aristocrat. He is rewarded with hearty and well-deserved applause. Miss Beatrice Wilson as Kitty maintains her reputation as an amusing comedienne, and is seen to particular advantage in this character, which suits her admirably, and in which she scores successfully. Mr. Frederick Lock imparts much humour to the part of John Travers, and merits commendation. Mr. W. Dillon, Mr. Norman Leslie, and Miss Betty Stannard as Hampton, Norbury, and Rosalie respectively do all that is required of them. The comedy is preceded by a one-act play, entitled The Man on the Kerb.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Comedy, in Four Acts, entitled

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS."

Large and delighted audiences have enjoyed this smartly-written and admirably-acted comedy. First honours, of course, belong to Mr. Charles Esdaile, whose Montgomery Brewster was full of life and spirit. He played throughout in a manner which carried all before it. Miss Cicely Stuckey as Peggy was pretty, earnest, and sympathetic. Miss Pauline Strauss was very pleasing as Mrs. Dan de Mille, and her gentle womanly style was very winning. Miss Francis Davie gave a capital rendering of the high-spirited Janice Armstrong. Archie was excellently enacted by Mr. Henry Hampson; Miss Dorothy Whitaker was well suited to the part of Barbara Drew; Miss May Seton played Trixie Clayton vivaciously and well; and Miss Phyllis Stuckey was a satisfactory Miss Boynton. Mr. Frank Hill gave a fine character sketch of Rawles, the butler. Mr. Gordon Ash was a manly and earnest Charlie Harrison; Mr. Robert Forsyth's Mr. Grant was ably acted, and he played with all the ease and effect of long experience. Mr. A. Andrews was a satisfactory Colonel Drew, and Joseph McLeod was well depicted by Mr. Aubrey Mather. Mr. Percival Madgewick was a satisfactory Frank Brogden; Mr. A. Robins made a capable Horace Pettinghill; Mr. H. Douglas Greet gave a good account of Tommy Smith; the rôle of Jack Gardner was in the capable hands of Mr. M. F. Plinge; Mr. A. P. Kaye gave a clever rendering of Monsieur Baye; Mr. George Salven as Captain Perry looked and acted well, and the remaining parts were well handled by Messrs. Green, Harris, Forbes, Richmond, and Yates. The play was admirably staged, and was preceded by Chalk and Cheese, in which Miss May Seton, Miss Pauline Strauss, and Mr. A. P. Kaye appeared.

Mr. T. N. Walter brought The Flower Girl on a return visit to the Theatre Royal, Lincoln, for the first three evenings of the week, and the event is of special interest, as it was here the piece had its première in May, 1908. It has improved considerably, though always bright and attractive. Miss Lena Brickwell is now the exponent of the title-rôle, and fills it very charmingly. Mr. John MacCallum succeeds in constantly entertaining the house as Joe Wheeler, and Mr. Henry Adnes combines direction of the show with an altogether funny performance as Alphonse. Mr. J. Burlington Rigg's dude is clever; Mr. Cyril Delevanti is good as Reginald; and Miss Elen Brettingham is an attractive Lizette; while Miss Eva Brickwell's Suffragette is far more attractive than the average real thing. Miss Idelia May's pas de seul is one of the prettiest bits of the evening. Lucky Liza finishes the week.

The attraction at the Grand Theatre, Lancaster, is Mr. Chas. Frohman's company, under the direction of Messrs. Williams and Dunn, in Are You a Mason? Mr. William Lockhart makes a capital Amos Bloodgood; Mr. Archie Selwyn does exceedingly well as George Fisher; and as Frank Perry Mr. Guy Leigh-Pemberton is all that could be desired. Miss Grace Denbigh-Russell gives a skilful portrayal of Mrs. Perry, and as Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood Miss Agnes Maude is very good. Miss Peggy E. Yeoman is to be complimented upon her rendition of Lottie. My Lady Help forms a curtain-raiser, in addition to a Vampire Dance by Miss Alice Lyal and Mr. Eric Bert.

Mr. T. Arthur Jones's company, in his own drama, When Other Lips, has been well received at the Perth Theatre, Perth. Mr. John Davidson is a gallant Ted Daunton; Mr. Juan D'Alberti an effective Basil Cunningham; and Mr. T. Arthur Jones a quietly powerful Dr. Jenkins; being well supported by Miss Jane Watson as his evil star, A Woman in Black. Miss Marie Daventry plays sweetly as Ruth Lingley; and the humorous element is excellently accounted for by Mr. Charles Preece and Miss Emily Wilson.

"PINNACLES OF THE FUTURE."

Play, in Four Acts, by Daisy Halling, Produced, for the First Time, at the Pankhurst Hall, Hightown, Manchester, on Saturday, Feb. 12.

John Hardy .....Mr. John Donnelly
Ralph Belvedere .....Mr. Eric Crowther
Eric Woodstock .....Mr. Alfred D. Blanks
Mr. Belvedere .....Mr. Sam Kauffmann
Horatio Baldwin .....Mr. Alex. Cochrane
Dr. Udloff .....Mr. Walter Hind
Ned Marks .....Mr. Fred Farnell
Mrs. Belvedere .....Miss Elsie Furlong
Mrs. Martyn .....Miss Annie Pickard
Sarah Marks .....Miss Evelyn Garner
Mrs. Brixley-Taunton .....Miss Daisy Halling

(from our own correspondent.)

"The pinnacles of the future shine through the dawn of a new age." These are the prophetic and inspiring words which John Hardy (otherwise Lord Carthage), the Socialist of the play, writes in the autograph album of Mrs. Brixley-Taunton, in whose drawing-room he has been persuaded by the lady to deliver a short address. Clever and well argued as Miss Daisy Halling's play is, there is something wrong with the idea, which, we venture to think, will scarcely commend itself to the more rational sympathisers with the cause of Socialism as a helpful piece of propaganda.

We are introduced to the chief characters in the shipping office of the wealthy Mr. Belvedere. These are Ralph, the shipper's son, a brainy young man of a sensitive disposition; Sarah Marks, the pretty typist, quiet and self-possessed, whose heart and soul are in Socialism, and among whose acquaintances is the notorious John Hardy himself; and Horatio Baldwin, an amorous old Crœsus of Park-lane, who desires Sarah for a wife. Miss Marks, goaded by the manners and the talk of Mrs. Belvedere, Mrs. Brixley-Taunton, and Eric Woodstock, a dudish aristocrat, involuntarily betrays her politics by a scathing remark; but this by no means prejudices her in the eyes of Ralph, who at the first opportunity enters into intimate conversation with her on the subject of her convictions. As a matter of fact, Ralph is in love with her, and presently makes little ado about asking her, plainly and simply, to marry him. Sarah, however, refuses; all she lives for is Socialism. Ralph, anxious for her sympathy, undertakes to study the subject. In the meantime, a colossal scheme is on foot to acquire a large tract of land in Canada, at a cost of a hundred thousand pounds, for the purpose of a Socialist colony; and it appears that if Ralph were in a position to assure the whole or a considerable portion of this sum for the object in question, Sarah might reconsider her refusal. The discussion is terminated by the advent of Belvedere senior, who strenuously objects to the attitude of his son toward the young lady. Off goes Ralph to buy a parcel of Socialist literature, and the next important thing that happens to the girl he loves is a visit from Mr. Baldwin. This jocose old suitor tempts Sarah with his riches; love for him is out of the question, and it does not take long to settle the matter. For the sake of the cause, she decides to sacrifice herself, and wait for the death of her husband-to-be with what patience she may. The notion is not heroic; it is essentially unfair to both contracting parties, and nothing but dissension and unhappiness could be foreseen in such a resource. The sequel is indeed wretchedness for the woman, for she has now realised that she loves Ralph Belvedere, who has gone abroad in despair; while the torment of her dislike for her husband is increased by the latter's suspicions of her secret preference for John Hardy, who is in the habit of visiting the house on Socialistic business with the lady. A climax arrives in due course. Recurrent fits of apoplexy, accompanied by hallucinations, drive the old man to extremes of jealousy and spite. One day more, and he will baulk his wife's desire for his money by willing it away from her. She, angry and dismayed, follows to his room, and there poisons him. Ralph Belvedere is now once more upon the scene, and it is to him that she makes an immediate confession of her act. Appalled by the upshot, and realising that he has lost her for ever, he eventually adds to the disaster by poisoning himself, having first written a false confession that it is he who has done the old man to death. This writing, however, falls into Sarah's hands, and she destroys it, so that she may confess to the police and take her punishment. The pith of the matter lies in her justification of the act. She has achieved an object which otherwise had been in jeopardy. Her next thought is to go to John Hardy, and justify the thing to him. At first he is revolted, but finally he consents to apply the money that is to come—blood money, as he calls it—to the promulgation of the Colonisation scheme.

The play seems to have been in the hands of no less a personage than Mr. George Bernard Shaw, for the following paragraph is quoted from his opinion of the work:—"It shows a great deal of talent for the stage; there is plenty of fun in it—effective stage fun—and that counts for a good deal. The serious parts are neither false in feeling nor wanting in dramatic force. The different characters are varied, and quite distinctly sketched." Broadly, one may agree with this. As for the acting, Miss Daisy Halling herself sustained the rôle of Mrs. Brixley-Taunton, moving through it with an ease that denoted the accomplished actress. The part, however, is concerned only with the inveiglement of the foolish Eric Woodstock, who found a good exponent in Mr. Alfred D. Blanks. Clever comedy distinguished Miss Elsie Furlong's impersonation of Mrs. Belvedere, while a robust foil to the Socialist element was furnished by Mr. Sam Kauffmann as Mr. Belvedere. John Hardy, a quiet, strong, sympathetic sort of individual, was well delineated by Mr. John Donnelly, the character of the man being further enhanced by the case of Mrs. Martyn, whom he befriends, and whose sorrows were effectively told by Miss Annie Pickard. Mr. Walter Hind played well as Dr. Udloff, and the small part of Ned Marks was acceptably filled by Mr. Fred Farnell. Quite a good performance was submitted by Mr. Eric Crowther as Ralph Belvedere, a clear, crisp, and commendably intelligent impersonation; and this was well matched by the unaffected sincerity and emotional appeal of Miss Evelyn Garner as Sarah Marks. The best dramatic chance, however, was in the hands of Mr. Alex. Cochrane as Horatio Baldwin, and he realised the possibilities of the part, by no means a simple one, with outstanding success.

Mr. Wilson Benge and Co. are presenting The Sinner at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Mexborough. Mr. Benge gives a finely-studied rendering of Monk Stretton; the false friend, Edgar Thornhill, is vigorously played by Mr. Chas. Burdon; the nondescript Paul Levaine is cleverly presented by Mr. Alex. Finlayson; Mr. Ulick Burke is a dignified Lord Ewen; Mr. Frank Radcliffe makes a typical fisherman of Bill Stanton; Mr. Jack Kay does well as Chris; Miss Sadie Smith displays dramatic instinct in her treatment of Honor Thornhill; Miss Mona Gray is effective as Meg Thornhill; Miss Jean Wigley makes the most of the part of Vera Ewen; and Miss Dora Ogley cleverly portrays Little Ned.

Mr. Editor.—Sir,—Your Grimsby correspondent's report that I was playing the part of the Earl of Kerhill in A White Man there last week is incorrect, as I have for some weeks been engaged in Mr. Cyril Maude's company at the Coliseum, and also in The Arctic production at the Hippodrome. I played the part mentioned in the last tour of A White Man, which probably accounts for the mistake.—Yours faithfully, Cecil Bevan, 12, Durham-terrace, W., Feb. 14, 1910.

"THE EXCELSIOR DAWSONS."

A Comedy of Glasgow, in Four Acts, by R. K. Risk, Produced for the First Time at the Royalty Theatre, Glasgow, on Monday, Feb. 14.

William M'Taggart ..... MR. GEORGE TAWDE
Mrs. M'Clintock ..... MRS. SEPHTON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The latest production of the Repertory Company here provided a night's hearty laughter and amusement to a large and demonstrative audience. Of plot, in the ordinary sense, there is little, but the play is full of interesting touches of character. The Dawson family are in comfortable circumstances, and living in the genteel suburb of Pollokshields, but the aspirations of the female members are towards the more aristocratic district of Dowanhill, and the first act is devoted to the task of converting Mr. John Dawson to their views. After much debate he yields, on the sole condition that he will not be asked to give up his "meat tea" for a seven o'clock dinner. Prior to entering on their new home the family spend some time at the Clydeview Hydropathic, and Act 2 shows them meeting a wide variety of people, ranging from a loquacious K.C., and a lady, Bougon by name, who claims to be of Huguenot extraction, to Minnie M'Clintock, a rather vulgar young lady, to whom Dawson's son Arthur had written several affectionate letters in his law student days, when he had been a lodger in the house of Mrs. M'Clintock. Finding that Arthur is now in love with Florence Gordon, the vindictive Minnie tries to set them at loggerheads, and for a time succeeds.

The later acts show the Dawsons in their new home being visited by their numerous acquaintances from the hydro. and by the sharp-tongued Aunt Mary Dawson, whose scathing comments on the art decorations and modern gimcrack furniture are most amusing. The climax is reached when Aunt Mary recognises a former Scarborough landlady in the supposed Huguenot descendant, whose name is not Bougon, but Buggins. The discovery rather spoils the harmony of the Dawson's "At Home" day, and a further exposure takes place in Mr. Arthur's law office when Mr. Matthews, K.C., is forced to acknowledge that he is a retired chemist with an income of 52s. 6d. per week. However, all ends happily. The masquerading K.C. and the Bougon lady pair off, and retire to spend their combined annuities in a giddy round of hydropathics. The tell-tale letters being got rid of, Arthur Dawson is free to marry his later love; and Miss Violet Dawson, who in the earlier acts would have nothing to do with a love-sick plumber, Paterson by name, consents to wed him when she finds he is now an "art plumber." Old Dawson has been approached by a political agent with a view to his obtaining a seat in Parliament, and possibly a baronetcy in the future, on condition of his making a handsome donation to the funds of his political party, and the curtain falls on the Excelsior Dawsons with every prospect of their soaring away from even Dowanhill, Park Lane being mooted as their ultimate resting place.

The new play again provided an excellent part for Mr. M. R. Morand, whose acting as Dawson was convincing and finished to a degree. His quick-witted daughter Violet was cleverly played by Miss Muriel Pope, and Miss Alice Mansfield made a charmingly natural and lovable Mrs. Dawson. The vinegar tones and look of Miss Elspeth Dudgeon as Aunt Mary emphasised the smart dialogue of the part. Arthur Dawson was made an interesting type of character by Mr. Campbell Gullan, and his fiancée, Florence Gordon, was sweetly played by Miss Irene Clarke. One of the hits of the play was the office-boy of Mr. George Tawde, a grimly-realistic portrayal of the cigarette-smoking youth with a fondness for the reading of "bloods." Mr. D. Lewin Mannering made a clever study of the supposed Matthews, K.C.; Misses Irene Francklyn, Norah Delaney, and Lola Duncan showed three interesting varieties of lady visitors at the hydro.; and as old Mrs. M'Clintock Mrs. Frank Sephton again contributed a clever and pathetic study. Mr. P. Perceval Clark as Sutton, Mr. Cecil Brooking as Vincent Barker, Mr. Lawrence Hanray as Paterson, and Mr. Cyril Griffiths and Miss Evans as servants completed the cast. The play was well staged, and at the conclusion the author was called to bow his acknowledgments of the hearty applause bestowed on his work.

A good reception was accorded at the Theatre Royal, Glossop, to Mr. Morton Powell's company, in How Girls are Brought to Ruin. Mr. Edward M. Heanley, in the dual part of Philip Edge and Philip Dare submitted a fine piece of acting; Mr. Alaric Burton made Solomon Sleek a veritable wolf in sheep's clothing; Mr. Harry Scott did justice to the part of Harry Hailing, the lover; and Mr. Julien Mitchell as Mr. Sterling was very good. Miss Isla Garnet Vayne invested the part of Jessie Burton with pathos and power; Mrs. Morton Powell gave a very effective rendering of Minnie Waters; while Miss Addie Cuthbert, in the character of Mrs. Slutt was excellent.

MR. HAMILTON STEWART AND COMPANY paid a return visit to the New Theatre, Cambridge, on Monday, with Sherlock Holmes. To the rôle of the renowned detective full justice was done by Mr. Stewart; Professor Moriarty was cleverly played by Mr. Chas. Brandon; Miss Faulkner was sweetly rendered by Miss A. Bruce-Joy; Mrs. Larrabee was effectively given by Miss May Beatrice; Larrabee was well represented by Mr. Arnold O. Raper; Cragin was powerfully impersonated by Mr. G. Potter; Therese was made the most of in a charming manner by Miss Maisie Richardson; Mr. Eric Morgan was also good as the Doctor.

MR. EDMUND TEARLE'S repertoire company is at the New King's Theatre, Kirkcaldy. In The Three Musketeers, given on Monday, Mr. Tearle played the part of D'Artagnan, in his usual accomplished style; King Louis XIII. was well portrayed by Mr. P. P. Millar; Cardinal Richelieu received a fitting interpretation at the hands of Mr. Horace Price; and the intriguing of Count de Rochefort was well done by Mr. Leon Courtville. Athos, Porthos, and Aramis were skilfully represented by Messrs. Stuart Black, Ernest Lodge, and Henry Petitit. Miss Kate Clinton cleverly enacted the rôle of Miladi; Miss Mary Campbell imparted dignity to the rôle of Anne of Austria; and Miss Constantia Brooks was a successful Constance.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. W. Ruddle Brown, general-manager for Mr. F. J. Little's Forty Thieves company, was the recipient on the last night of the tour of a handsome case of pipes, tobacco-pouch, and silver match-box from the members of the company, a box of cigars from Miss Marie Reeve, a similar present from Mr. W. B. Parker (musical-director), and a silver match-box from Mr. Harry Maxim and Mr. J. Johnstone.

THE King and Queen, with Prince Henry of Prussia and suite, were present at the performance of The Importance of Being Earnest at the St. James's Theatre on Thursday evening.

MR. F. R. BENSON AT DUBLIN.

At the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, on the 4th inst, readings from Shakespeare's works were given by the members of Mr. F. R. Benson's company and the members of the Dublin Branch of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, under whose auspices the entertainment was held. Sir Andrew Reed, K.C.B., presided. Those taking part in the readings were provided with seats on the stage. Amongst those present in the boxes were the Dean of St. Patrick's, Captain Bryan Cooper, M.P., and Professor Tyrrell, F.T.C.D.

The chairman said that they who represented the Dublin branch of the Society were honoured with the presence of Mr. Benson and the members of his company, who had come to help them.

Mr. F. R. Benson, who was received with applause, said he appeared before them that afternoon rather as grace before meat; but when he remembered his own inadequacy to fufil his task, he would rather say as a sort of disgrace after supper. Their chairman differed somewhat from another chairman, on a somewhat similar occasion, whom he once heard open the proceedings in the following fashion:—"I don't know much about Shakespeare. I have never read him. I am a busy man, and have not had much time for the likes of that; but my children tell me he is interesting and amusing, and, therefore, I think for anyone who has nothing else to do they might find some profit and a little pleasure in occasionally studying his works." Well, his experience had been different from that chairman, though he believed that in the eyes of the law himself and his company would count as rogues and vagabonds, and when he looked at that house and those reading he was confirmed in his experience that those had most use for Shakespeare who led the busiest lives, whether the lives of statesmen, judges, generals, or merchants; and that, he took it, was one of the reasons why the inauguration of such societies was progressing as it was. He thought that some people might be inclined to say that England, Ireland, and Scotland were not exceptions to what a Frenchman said—that there was no writer of similar prominence, of such admitted prominence as the master writer, whose works were so neglected, and the knowledge of whose writings was so astounding. He was rather inclined to agree with that writer to a certain extent, and that added to one's pleasure at being present on such an occasion. He believed that there was something in that Frenchman's view. When he was passing the theatre on one occasion a man turned to his neighbour and said—"What's on at the theatre?" The other said—"Twelfth Night." The first said that he was going, as he saw a play the previous week called The Eleventh Hour, and thought it was some sort of sequel or concluding chapter. On another occasion they were going to play The Merry Wives of Windsor in a town, and he heard a lady at the box office order a large number of seats, because she loved Shakespeare, and had such pleasure in hearing one of his works called The Merry Widow, and she thought it was a preface to that entertaining work. He was talking to a celebrated educationist, a man not unknown in the political world and the educational world, and he hazarded a proposition, with which he (Mr. Benson), for one, ventured to disagree. He said that in Ireland for the next few years people would be busy with the development of a national drama, that they would have no time or attention or thought for Shakespeare. They knew that during the last hundred years many of the best actors and a majority of the best plays had been acted and written by Irishmen. He was aware that this particular age differed from the age of Shakespeare in having become more self-consciousless in Ireland than in England; but, to a certain extent, in this city, they had lost some of the un-self-conscious, free, joyous spirit of life and sympathy with nature. He knew that was the mainspring of Irish literature and Irish poetry, but in many of the problems of to-day, and in a good deal of the philosophy of to-day, a cloud had come between their vision and the sun of that inspiration. He believed in that word "British" Society. They had two things—first, the great benefit and the eternal charm and power of drama, for it enabled them to enter into the life, the thought, and the feeling of pain and joy. It was a joy to him as an Angle to stand before them in that City and take a part, however insignificant, in the study of a man whose books contained the answer to many problems worrying them to-day, and the solution of many political and social difficulties. "The best will predominate," Shakespeare said, and discovered the essence of a highly-specialised type, as a contrast against the exaggeration of one narrow type. That was the type destined to pass away. The type destined to remain was the type which was the most versatile, containing the best points of other types.

Mr. Benson was loudly applauded at the conclusion of his speech.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The programme of the students' concert on Wednesday evening opened with a piano solo of Moszkowski's "Valses in A minor and A Major," carefully played by Miss Edith Ballard. In Landon Ronald's song "O lovely night" and "Au Printemps" (Gounod) Miss Mary Anderson greatly pleased the audience; while Mr. W. J. West was successful in his 'cello solo "Arlequin" (Popper). Gounod's aria "O ma lyre Immortelle!" (from Sappho) requires more dramatic treatment than Miss Lilian Maud Allen has at present at her command, but she sang with much intelligence. Miss Jessie Attwell, who proved herself a clever executant in Liszt's Rhapsody No. 12; and Mr. Harold Lopresti sang "Take a pair of sparkling eyes," from Sullivan's Gondoliers, with much spirit and admirably clear enunciation. The young vocalist also joined Miss Gladys Scott in the pretty duet of Goring Thomas, "Dear love of mine," a welcome feature in a students' concert, where duets are somewhat rare. The solo violin Allegro Moderato from Second Concerto Op. 22 (Wieniawski) was well played by Miss Olive H. Kershaw and artistically accompanied by Miss Jessie Attwell. A very promising pupil of Mr. B. Soutten, Miss Vera Jones, gave a classic dance with much grace. In the course of her performance Miss Jones slipped on the platform, but the little lady fell as lightly as she danced, and, in no way disconcerted, brought her dance to an effective conclusion. Although the Prologue to Pagliacci is rather hackneyed, Mr. Victor Schroeder sang the music in quite the right spirit, and displayed a voice of excellent quality.

The programme was completed by an admirable monologue from Rebellious Susannah, given in costume, and cleverly acted by Miss Enid Cummings, a pupil of Miss Kate Rorke.

MR. FRANK ADAIR'S company is at the Theatre Royal, Macclesfield, with The Heathen and the Christian. In the rôle of Lieut. Allendale Mr. G. Shirley displays ability; Admiral Freebold is capably enacted by Mr. G. Turner; Mr. Frank Adair gives a clever representation of the avenger Li; Mr. F. Waring is a capital Joshua Sampson; and Mr. J. Campling as George Berresford does well. Miss Louie Adair acts with power as Mira Sampson; Miss S. Burt as May Beresford deserves praise for her careful rendition; and Miss Eva Reed is decidedly good as Becky Fibbins.

THE KING, accompanied by the Queen and Princess Victoria, went to the Adelphi on Monday, and saw The House of Temperley. On the same evening the Prince and Princess of Wales and suite witnessed the performance of Smith at the Comedy Theatre.

MR. WILLIAM BARBOUR.

The many friends of Mr. William Barbour in London and the country would regret to hear of his untimely death, which occurred on Saturday, Feb. 5. After an illness of some weeks it was thought that he was quite out of danger, and, on the day he died, had only just written a letter to a friend saying how much better he felt. Half an hour later he was dead.

The funeral took place on Friday, Feb. 11, at Wimbledon Cemetery. Among the large number present were Mrs. George Alexander, Mr. E. V. Reynolds (the stage-manager), Mr. Whitaker (the treasurer), Mr. A. P. Horne (secretary) Mr. E. Arnold (box-office keeper), Mr. James Cullen (master carpenter), and the staff, back and front, at the St. James's. Among many personal friends was Mr. C. T. Cory, master carpenter at the Vaudeville Theatre. The chief mourners were Mr. Barbour's mother and three sisters, Mr. Frank Horne (brother-in-law), Mr. Raphael, scenic artist, Mr. Culen, and Mr. Horne. There was a large number of beautiful wreaths from friends present and absent.

Mr. W. Barbour came of a theatrical family. He had thirty-four years' experience in the profession. His father was gasman at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, for twenty-five years. Barbour senior invented the limelight tank and the medium sliders now used for footlights in place of the old argand burners.

Mr. W. Barbour commenced his theatrical career at thirteen years of age, first as "call boy" and then as gas boy at the Royal Theatre. He was there for six years, and went from that house to the Royalty, where he was gasman for six years. While at the Royalty he got employment with the old Brush Electric Light Co. to learn something of electricity. He left Glasgow to take charge of the electric lights for Howard and Wyndham at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh. While at the Lyceum he was engaged by Mr. Loveday to join Sir Henry Irving's staff for an American tour, and was in charge of the lime and electric light effects in Faust. He was with Sir Henry about four years. He left the Lyceum to take up his position with Mr. Alexander, with whom he had been nineteen years.

He toured four times with Sir Henry Irving and about a dozen times with Mr. Alexander through the United Kingdom. He was a week at Sanringham with "H. I."; and went to Balmoral with Mr. Alexander. In 1890 he accompanied Sir Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry on an eight weeks' reading tour through the Provinces, when they recited the tragedy of Macbeth. The footlights and battens that Charles Dickens used in his tour round the world were used in this tour. On the termination of the tour he received a present from Miss Ellen Terry.

Mr. Barbour was unmarried. A man of considerable practical experience, the scientific and artistic side of his profession strongly attracted him. With the mind of a student he had reached the age of true wisdom, when to know how much one knows is to realise how much there is yet to discover. Amiable and conscientious, in character and disposition he was one of those who reflect credit upon the craft.

Mr. Barbour was the hon. secretary of and one of the founders of the Heads of Departments' Association. He was also one of the founders of the Dramatic and Variety Theatres Employees' Provident Fund and a member of its finance committee. He had also been for some years a trustee of the National Association of Theatrical Employees, and was a member of its National Committee. He took a great interest in the affairs of these Associations, and also in the Annual Theatrical Sports, of which committee he was a member.

THE LATE WILLIAM BARBOUR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—

"We are such stuff as dreams are made on,
And our little life is rounded with a sleep."

The Tempest, Act. IV. Scene 1.

All those who had the privilege of knowing William Barbour, and counting him as a friend, will be deeply grieved by his sudden and untimely death.

I myself only heard of it on my return to London on Friday, and though I am but poorly qualified to write this appreciation, still, it was my privilege to be associated with him for some eighteen months, and during that time I learned to respect him as a man and value him as a friend. A reserved, quiet Scotsman, devoted to his art—and with him his work was indeed an art—he was liked and respected by all who came in contact with him, and his death leaves a blank which will not easily be filled.

"Finis" is written to his work here, but his memory will remain for ever green, and we lay upon his grave

"Rosemary—that's for remembrance."

Yours faithfully,
MONTAGUE WIGAN.

MR. GASTON MAYER'S company, with Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, is at the Opera House, Burton-on-Trent, this week. Mr. Sophie Lingwood portrays, as to the manner born, the domestic, and altogether lovable character of Mrs. Wiggs, and is frequently recalled; the idiosyncrasies of the depressing Miss Hazy are faithfully repicted by Miss Rita Carlyle; the Lovey-Mary of Miss Ruhamah Catton is a pleasing performance; clever and amusing is Mr. Fredk. Forrest as the typical Yankee, Stubbins; Mr. Ernest Ruston is dignified and convincing as Mr. Wiggs. Other characters are creditably represented by Miss Beatrix A. Bell, Miss Violet Vivian, Miss Roda Berresford, Mr. Norman Clifton, Mr. Walter Hicks, and Mr. Sydney Carlyle. A group of clever children are included in the cast.

"THE SUPERIOR SEX."

A new and clever comic opera of the above title was produced at the Crippiegate Theatre on the 9th and 10th inst. by the London Operatic and Dramatic Society, an extremely capable body of amateurs, whose previous performances have been confined to Gilbert and Sullivan work, and whose excellent productions have very successfully reproduced the Savoy traditions. The new opera is written by H. D. Banning, and composed by J. H. Maunder. The fantastic story, which is set somewhere about A.D. 2000, deals with the possible outcome of the present-day woman question, and the probable eventual relation of the sexes as regards domestic work, &c. The book is interesting and at times very funny, but it wants boiling down, being too verbose and elaborate. The story is well told throughout, and the lyrics have quite a grace of their own, and form the basis of some beautiful numbers. Taken as a whole, and subject to the revision which possibly these performances have already suggested to the author and composer, the work has in it all the elements of a good success. There is a popular ring about the general design, and though this may be commercially an advantage, it has not been attained by a sacrifice of musicianship, for some of the most popular items reflect the thoughts of the artistic composer, and will be admired in this respect by the serious musician. Mr. Maunder's church work, by which he is chiefly known, has a dramatic intensity about it apart from its devotional value, and in this piece for the stage there is the same wedding of the music to the words, and a sympathy of expression which is bound to make its direct appeal to the intelligent listener. The solos especially have much significance for their skilful combination of melody and effect; the concerted numbers are written with a full appreciation of vocal part writing; the clever orchestration is descriptive, often very humorous, and always appropriate. It is, unquestionably, a clever work. The performance was extremely good, and one which must have gladdened the hearts of Mr. Stanley Verde, who was responsible for the production, and of Mr. A. O. Butler, his capable stage-manager. The chorus and orchestra was animated by a fine, earnest spirit of enthusiasm, and really sang and played with a professional efficiency. Amongst the ladies the honours were about equal with Miss Frances Glenister and Miss Rhoda Whiley. Both have beautiful voices, both know well how to make the most of them, and both have a convincing stage manner and diction. Special praise may be offered to Miss Kate Hedges for her useful work as Aurora; to Miss Jessie H. Rose for some capital singing as Daphne; and to Miss Bertha Sandland for a restrained and funny comedy sketch of the Matron. Of the male characters the best impersonation was the Colonel Faddes of Mr. A. H. Phillips. He enacted the irascible and touchy officer to the life, and infused a keen sense of humour into the work that was most successful. Mr. T. J. Cook as an Irishman was also extremely funny, and used a good voice effectively in the concerted numbers. Mr. Cuthbert Sledmere sang with a good deal of finish, and acted well. Mr. Theo. Ager as the fussy Algernon was fairly successful, as was Mr. Stanley Ridout as Private Bill Blogg. But where everybody was working so earnestly for the success of such a plucky affair it is scarcely necessary to go into details. We congratulate Mr. Stanley Verde on putting up so good a show, and the author and composer must have been warmly encouraged by the general excellence of the production. It was creditable to everybody concerned.

GLASGOW THEATRICAL SPORTS.

After having been postponed from the previous week, this interesting event took place on Tuesday, and at first it seemed as if the function was to be honoured with "King's weather," but after the procession had reached Celtic Park, and a number of events had been decided, a severe storm of snow and sleet terminated the proceedings abruptly. The meeting-place was Blythswood-square, and from there the cavalcade made their way through all the principal streets till Celtic Park was reached, an enormous crowd lining all the route, and responding with cheerful alacrity to the smiling requests of the ladies in the procession for contributions to their charity boxes. Several bands gave brightness and animation to the scene with their up-to-date musical selections. Brake-loads of ladies—members of the chorus and ballet in the pantomimes—horses, dogs, decorated lorries, with bands between, passed in regular order. And moving about in the crowds were all sorts of grotesque and comically-attired persons armed with collecting boxes.

All the "stars," of course, were in evidence. Harry Tate was seen at his favourite pastime—motoring, though in more dignified style than usual. Neil Kenyon and Jack O'Connor raked in the shekels from a little wooden hut mounted on a lorry; Miss May Moore Duprez passed smiling in her motor-car. On another lorry the lie was given to both Cook and Peary, for there was a Scotchman, in kilts and glengarry, with a flagon of the wine of the country, seated on the Pole. Mr. Hengler himself drove a splendid team of horses, while behind him came the gaily-dressed members of his staff, followed by horses, dogs, and a troupe of asses. All the theatres were represented, and all were busy working for the cause, plying their collecting boxes assiduously under the direct supervision of the many comic policemen.

In the ideal weather conditions the procession was a great success. There might have been a little more of it, but the promoters were wise in reserving many of their attractions for the sports field, and the large crowds following the procession presaged plenty of business for the turnstiles.

Pleasant weather conditions prevailed when a start was made with the sports programme at Celtic Park. The attendance was most gratifying, and the stands were exceptionally well patronised.

AT the Gaiety Theatre, Ayr, Mr. W. Graham Arthur's company present the thrilling drama The Mockery of Marriage. Mr. Arthur himself is seen to advantage in the part of Sir Montague Jephson, alias Dick Kenyon; Seth Pearse, Dick's colleague in villainy, is played by Mr. Fred Bently in a commendable manner; the part of Rose Verham is well acted by Miss C. Middleton; and the part of Alva Kenyon has a capable exponent in the person of Miss Mable Liston. Mr. David Phillips as Toby Wright provides the humour of the piece. All the other parts are in capable hands.

THE inhabitants of Whitchurch, Salop, had a great treat on Monday evening, Feb. 14, when Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company (by arrangement with Mr. George Dance) gave Miss Hook of Holland. The room was packed, and the piece was given from beginning to end in a manner that reflected the utmost credit on all concerned, and the audience were delighted.

MR. GEO. EDWARDES'S company makes a welcome return visit to the Theatre Royal and Opera House, Bournemouth, with The Merry Widow, with Miss Sylvia May an attractive and successful Sonia. Mr. Fred Leslie is most successful as Prince Danilo; and Mr. Edward D'Arcy makes an excellent and amusing Baron Popoff. Mr. Ripley Evans as Jolidon, with a fine voice, sings his songs with artistic success; Miss Ada Thomas as Natalie is all that could be desired; Miss Katie May as Frou-Frou executes some clever dancing.

THE O.P. Club patronised the successful pantomime The House that Jack Built at the Marlborough Theatre on Tuesday. The run terminates this (Saturday) evening.

Scarborough is a most appropriate place to produce a new play with a title appertaining to the sea, and possibly this accounts for the launching out of it at the Theatre Royal. The play deals with the career of a young Princess of Slavonia, daughter of Duke Sergius. To avenge his daughter's betrayal by the Duke, Allan Armstrong, an English shipowner, who makes a yachting voyage to Slavonia for the purpose, steals the young Princess. She is handed over to British sailors, taken to England, and placed in a workhouse. The man who stole her, after a term of imprisonment for his crime, wants to make reparation, and traces her to England. Duke Sergius (the heir), failing to trace the lost child, divorces his wife (Duchess Olga), and comes to England disguised as an artist to find a new wife. In this quest he succeeds, and marries the lady to whom "Seaweed"—the long-lost Princess—is acting as handmaid. In the third and fourth acts we see Seaweed in her own home and accepted by the King. Her father, the Duke, in his jealousy, poisons the King, who, with his dying words appoints Seaweed—now Princess Henri—his successor. The Council of Nobles meet. One half vote for the Duke, and the other for Seaweed, who offers to abdicate on condition that her father and mother (Duchess Olga) marry, and live together again. The Duke refuses to accept these terms. The nobles take sides, and civil war follows.

In the last act there is a conspiracy, headed by the Duke, to induce the Nobles to desert Seaweed's cause. They have secretly agreed to divide Slavonia into halves, and have separate rule. The plot is overheard by Seaweed. Lots are drawn for her life, and she enters in the midst of the discussion. She demands that the lottery shall be continued, but that the traitors must take sides and draw for their own lives. Moulet, one of the Duke's minions, finding that his life is to be forfeited, while the Duke goes free, tells the Council, in his fear, that it was the Duke Sergius who poisoned the King's wine, whereupon the Nobles all support Seaweed. As a last effort the Duke tries to kill her, but is himself killed by the man who stole her.

In the title-rôle, and in her work as a whole, Mrs. Cassidy achieved a triumph. The rôle of the Hon. Algernon Fitzhugh was excellently filled by Mr. Cassidy. The scenery throughout is very good. The Throne Room is an imposing spectacle, the ladies' dresses being of great beauty. As a whole, the production is an unqualified success.

MASONS AT WORK.

A meeting of the Dramatic Mark Lodge was held at the Mark Masons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on the 10th inst. Mr. W. J. Keen presided, and admitted Messrs. Percy Plowman (Kent Lodge, No. 15) and Albert H. Collings (Eccentric Lodge, No. 2,488) to the privileges of the advanced degree, assisted by Messrs. G. A. Keen, I.P.M., Dr. W. Hotten George, S.W., W. H. White, J.W, Chris Hilton, M.O., Major G. S. Beeching, V.D., acting as S.O., Randulph J. Corbet, acting as J.O., Will Sparks, Secretary, James Powell, S.D., W. H. Roberts (Atlas), acting as J.D., W. Edwyn Holloway, Steward, acting as I.G., Douglas Gordon, Steward, and F. Banchini, Tyler.

The following Past Masters of the Lodge were present:—Messrs. Harry Nicholls, P.G., Std.B., Thomas Fraser, P.G.Treas., E. H. Paterson, the Right Hon. the Lord Athlumney, P.G.W., and Clarence T. Coggin; and also Messrs. Edward Humphrey, William Lawrence, C. Wyndham-Quin, Frank H. Callingham, Stanley F. Fitch, Frank Tebbutt, and Cecil Burton.

Messrs. Arthur W. Doune, Arthur Helmore, and D. Price Powell attended as visitors.

Mr. John Reginald Jewsbury Neild, of the Tuscan Lodge of M.M.M., No. 454, having been proposed as a joining member, was balloted for, and his name inscribed on the register.

At the dinner at the Hotel Cecil which followed an excellent programme was provided, contributions being made by Miss Edith Payne, Major G. S. Beeching, V.D., and Messrs. Frank Callingham, Arthur W. Doune, Arthur Helmore, Chris Hilton, Ed. Humphrey, Harry Nicholls, Percy Watson, Will, H. White, and Frank Tebbutt.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

In Beethoven's Quartet for Strings in E flat, given first in the programme of Thursday evening's concert, Feb. 3, the executants, Mr. Philip Levine, Mr. Thomas Peatfield, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Mr. Cedric Sharpe, were very successful in the spirited Scherzando vivace. Mr. E. Norman Collie, who played the organ solo, from Sonata No. 7, in F minor (Rheinberger), deserved great credit for his refined performance of the beautiful Andante. Two vocalists were forthcoming on Thursday evening. Miss S. Gwendolen Allport sang "Death in Love" (R. Vaughan Williams) and "In April," a very pleasing song by Ernest Austin, which Miss Allport rendered with purity of tone and expression. "Death in Love," a musical setting of Rossetti's sombre poem, did not prove so attractive. It might have been through nervousness that Miss Winifred Boult's intonation was not entirely satisfactory in Schubert's song, "Margaret at the Spinning Wheel"; in a less exacting air the young artist would no doubt be heard to greater advantage. The concert concluded with Quintet for Strings, in C major, Op. 163 (Schubert), ably performed by Mr. Sidney C. Bostock, Miss E. Muriel Pickup, Mr. Frank Bridge, Mr. Cedric Sharpe, and Miss Ellen Bartlett. Miss Dorothy Beeman and Mr. Herbert Arnold Smith were the accompanists.

MR. AND MRS. H. B. LEVY and Mr. J. E. Cardwell's company opened at the Blyth Theatre Royal on Monday to a full house with the pantomime Hop o' My Thumb, which is excellently staged, beautifully dressed, and accompanied by bright and sparkling music. The juveniles gave evidence of much careful training, every part being rendered to perfection. In the principal rôles Little George Harriss, Kitty Trewhitt, and Rafferty were much applauded. Mr. Wakeman as the Dame created much fun. Silversheen and Goldstein were safe in the hands of Messrs. Alf E. Rick and Tom Cowley.

IN consequence of the generous support accorded to the Cavaliere Castellano's Italian Grand Opera company at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames last week, Mr. Peter Davey, the managing-director, who made a bold experiment in bringing the company to the riverside town, has arranged for its reappearance for another week, commencing on Easter Monday.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. George Alexander has arranged to pay a flying visit to Birmingham on Thursday, March 10, when he and his company from the St. James's will present at the Prince of Wales's Theatre The Importance of Being Earnest.

Miss Madge Titheradge, the charming actress, and Mr. Charles Quartermaine, the popular Don at the Kingsway, are to be married at Holy Trinity Church, Sloane-square, on March 8. A charming conceit of the bride-elect is to have for bridesmaids four of the prettiest young actresses that grace the London stage, and for that distinction she has selected Miss Marie Lohr, Miss Stella Patrick Campbell, Miss Beatrice Terry, and Miss Rosalie Toller. Mr. Cyril Maude will give the bride away.

Mr. Martin Harvey and company travelled last Sunday from Southport to Aberdeen, and were welcomed by a crowded house at His Majesty's the following evening, the opening bill being The Breed of the Treshams, which was greeted with remarkable enthusiasm. The Corsican Brothers, which enjoys the rare distinction of having, at Mr. Martin Harvey's hands, been twice "commanded" by the King, was played to an overflowing house on Wednesday evening. Mr. Harvey will be in Scotland for five weeks in all, and the fact that practically every moment of spare time is being given to Richard III. rehearsals augurs well for the perfection of the big revival at Dublin on April 13.

Among the audience at the Playhouse on the production of Tantalising Tommy on Tuesday were Sir Arthur Pinero, the Countess of Lathom, the Hon. Mrs. Anstruther, the Hon. Mrs. Bertram Smith, Sir Anderson Critchett, Sir Douglas Straight, Sir Frederick Macmillan, and Lady Maclean.

Mr. Edward Compton played the part of Davy Garrick for the 1,600th time at Her Majesty's Theatre, Dundee, on Monday evening. The celebration was made the occasion of the presentation to all ladies occupying reserved seats of copies of a dainty Compton Birthday Book, and of a speech in Mr. Compton's most graceful style.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson and their company concluded a most successful three weeks' engagement at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, on Saturday, Macbeth being given in the afternoon and Richard III. in the evening. At the conclusion of the second performance Miss Genevieve Ward, who had assumed the rôle of Queen Margaret, and Mrs. Benson, who had appeared as Lady Anne, were each presented with a beautiful bouquet.

In answer to prolonged calls of "Speech," Mr. Benson said he desired to return sincere thanks, on behalf of Miss Ward, his wife, himself, and his company, for the splendid reception given to them that evening. He did not think it was necessary for him to say that they were always glad to come there, and always sorry to go away; he believed they were all aware of that.

"One of the things that make it pleasant to come to Dublin," continued Mr. Benson, "is the kindliness of the audiences. You step on to the Gaiety stage, feeling tired, perhaps, and not quite at your best, and lo! a friendly invisible hand is stretched out to you, with the result that you play better than ever in your life before." He thanked them for that kindly hand, and he hoped that it would be the privilege of his company and himself to feel its influence again. It was very welcome to the company to find that the people of Dublin had still a corner in their hearts for them, and for the works of the poet that they put before them.

It sometimes seemed in these days that people wanted to emphasise points of difference rather than points of agreement, and it was, therefore, most pleasant to find numbers of people still agreeing with themselves that Shakespeare's plays were still worth playing. Especially was that the case since it was the fashion of some latter-day critics to find a good deal of fault with Shakespeare. He ventured to say that it was with Shakespeare's works, as with most works of art, that when certain critics brought with them certain weaknesses they liked to find equal defects in those they were criticising.

Mr. John Galsworthy's play Justice, with which Mr. Chas. Frohman's repertory season at the Duke of York's is to be opened on Monday, will be produced the same evening at the Royalty, Glasgow, by the Repertory Company which is proving such an attraction in the northern city, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Wareing.

Mr. Alfred Brydone underwent a very severe operation for appendicitis just before Christmas, and will not be able to work for some time, but is allowed out for a little while each day. Progress towards convalescence seems slow, but as at first he was hardly excepted to recover at all, Mr. Brydone acknowledges that he has much to be thankful for.

Mr. Charles Frohman had the elements against him in his endeavours to inaugurate a sea-going theatre, and was obliged to abandon the project of presenting Miss Marie Doro and her company in The Climax at sea. The following message was sent by wireless telegraphy to New York via the White Star liner Baltic and Cape Race:—"Star ill, also passengers. First performance in London."

Mr. Frohman reached London on Tuesday, and is busy with preparations for the inauguration of his Repertory Theatre, which begins operations at the Duke of York's on Monday with Justice. He has by no means abandoned the idea of the ocean theatre, and is endeavouring to arrange with Sir Charles Wyndham, who is returning at Easter, to produce The Mollusc at sea under his direction.

The second production of Mr. Frohman's repertory theatre will be Misalliance, the new play by Mr. Bernard Shaw, which will be presented for the first time on Wednesday evening. The play is described as "a debate in one sitting." "As the debate is a long one," adds the author, "the curtain will be lowered twice. The audience is requested to excuse these interruptions, which are made solely for its convenience." The cast will consist of Miss Lena Ashwell, Mr. C. M. Lowne, Mr. Frederick Lloyd, Mr. Donald Calthrop, Miss Miriam Lewes, Miss Florence Haydon, Mr. Hubert Harben, Mr. Charles Bryant, and Mr. O. P. Heggie.

Mr. Charles Frohman has, in conjunction with Mr. Arthur Chudleigh, decided to put Mr. Edward J. Locke's play, The Climax, into the evening bill at the Comedy, in place of presenting it, as first arranged, at a series of matinées. The first performance of the piece will take place next Saturday, with Miss Marie Doro in the principal part.

Mr. Norman V. Norman will not commence another tour before Easter, and is at liberty to make arrangements to play between now and then. Mr. Norman has just been elected a vice-president of the Bournemouth Hockey Club, and is now a vice-president or honorary member of twenty-two clubs in different parts of the country.

Mr. Percy Hutchison, who is now recuperating at Brighton, after his operation, makes his reappearance as Monty Brewster, in that supreme success, Brewster's Millions, at the Marlborough Theatre, N., on Feb. 28, and is sure of a huge welcome. Additional pleasure will be evinced also in the fact that Mrs. Percy Hutchison (Miss Lilian Earle), who has been in constant attendance at her husband's bedside during his illness, again takes up the part of Mrs. Dan de Mille.

Mr. Arthur Shirley has again taken up his prolific pen and has written for Miss Madge Crichton a new farcical-comedy called The Artfulness of Ada, "a piece of deception in three acts." The first performance will be given at Folkestone on Feb. 28. The company will include Miss Kate Kearney, Miss Valerie Crespin, Miss Nellie Shirley, and Messrs. Tom Sidney, J. Forbes Knowles, and Alec Chumley.

The heroine of the new farce is a London actor-manager's wife, who gets sent to prison as a suffragette (which she does not happen to be) and greatly imperils her husband's chances of knighthood thereby. How she gets out of Holloway and how he comes into his title forms the plot. The piece claims the distinction that no "legs or tomfoolery" will be found in it, neither will any managerial withers be wrung during its progress. Should it prove successful the play will presently be brought to a West-End theatre.

Mr. Daniel Frohman has disclosed a project which seems to have been conceived in a spirit of rivalry to the New Theatre, New York. A huge building, which will probably cost about half a million dollars, is to be erected in the vicinity of Central Park South, for the purpose of housing under one roof the several charities connected with the dramatic and musical professions. The building will also comprise a "non-commercial" theatre for the testing of new plays and a general booking agency, as well as meeting-rooms for actors and managers, and the business offices of an old-age pension fund. There will also be lecture-rooms, where critics and professors of dramatic literature will be invited to deliver addresses on topics of interest to the profession and the public. In making the announcement Mr. Frohman said: "There will be a stimulus to culture which the New Theatre may affect but cannot attain. It is not, and cannot be, broad enough in its scope. Its appeal is too limited." Mr. Frohman is president of the Actors' Fund of America. Part of the proceeds of the big fair to be held in the spring for the benefit of the fund will be devoted to the carrying out of this vast plan.

The Queen visited the Haymarket Theatre on Saturday evening and witnessed the performance of Maeterlinck's fairy play, The Blue Bird. Following a practice usually adopted at Drury Lane, a special box was built at the back of the stalls to accommodate the Royal party, who were thus enabled to view the play to the best advantage.

Mr. James Welch will lecture on "Fools" before the members of the O.P. Club at the Criterion to-morrow (Sunday) evening. Miss Lottie Venne will occupy the chair.

Mr. James Carew had an exciting experience at his house at 215, King's-road, Chelsea, where he dwells with his distinguished wife, Miss Ellen Terry, on Wednesday. About nine o'clock a servant noticed a man leave the front garden, in the centre of which stood a valuable antique Chinese vase, and afterwards saw him with the bowl of the vase on his shoulder, its great weight somewhat retarding his movement. Mr. Carew was hurriedly called, and rushing after the accused overtook him a hundred yards away still carrying the bronze, and gave him into custody.

The sequel was seen at Westminster Police-court on Thursday, when a Boer named Paul Saunders, aged thirty, pleaded guilty to stealing the flower bowl, a portion of a vase valued at 100 guineas. The magistrate declined to deal with the prisoner until inquiry had been made as to his antecedents, and he was remanded in custody.

Miss Lilian Dod, the manageress of the Ipswich Lyceum, has had the pleasure of receiving from the Editor of London Opinion a cheque for £5, being the third prize in an "Echoes" competition. The "echo" was thus neatly constructed: "Love leaves by the lattice when lack of lucre lifts the latch."

Mr. Wallace Stranack concludes to-night his fifth consecutive pantomime season with Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens. He proceeds at once to Southampton to take up his duties as business manager of the Lyceum production of The Proud Prince, that management having kindly kept the post open.

A new play, to be performed entirely by children ranging in age from five to nine, will be one of the features of Lila Field's dramatic and musical matinée at the Playhouse on March 3. The piece is a one-act fairy play, named The Goldfish, and is written by Miss Field.

At Marylebone Police-court on Thursday Edward Maitland, a powerfully-built young man, was charged on remand with attempting to rob Miss Alice Hornsby of a bag-purse and contents to the value of £3, in Clifton-road, Paddington, on the night of the 9th inst. The prisoner bumped against the actress from behind, and then made a violent tug at her purse, and ran away. She raised an alarm of "Thief!" and after a sharp chase he was tripped up, caught, and handed over to the police. The prisoner was sentenced to one month's imprisonment.

The Glossop-Harris Shakespearean Company has been secured by Mr. Peter Davey for the Shakespeare Commemoration Week at the County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames. No less than eight Shakespearean plays will be performed during the week.

Mr. C. Leveson Lane has returned to town from West Dean Park, Chichester, where he has been stage-managing The Marriage of Kitty for Mrs. Willie James.

"Lucky Durham," Wilson Barrett's last play, will be presented at Fulham Theatre on Monday for the 1302nd time by Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company. Mr. Edmund Kennedy still appears in the leading part of John Durham, which he has played almost continuously since August, 1905, and Mr. Arthur Leigh repeats that of Reggie; whilst Miss Nellie Bonser will be seen as Mrs. Durham, the part she created with the late Wilson Barrett. The cast also includes Miss Florence Tressilian, Miss Frances Wolviston, Miss Dorothy Turner, Mr. William Calvert, Mr. Chas. Wemyss, Mr. W. F. Clitherow, Mr. John Hart, and Mr. Frank Elton. The hold that Lucky Durham retains on playgoers may be estimated from the fact that within the last five years it has visited Liverpool sixteen times, and the other large cities nearly as frequently. The wonder is that it has never been tried in central West-end.

Messrs. Henry R. Smith and Fred Carpenter have decided upon Cinderella for their next Christmas pantomime at the Lyceum. Meanwhile Aladdin is still drawing prodigious audiences, but will have to be withdrawn on Saturday next in order to make way for Messrs. Edward Ferris and B. P. Matthews's four-act play The Fighting Chance, which is to be produced on a magnificent scale on March 5. The story is set in a military environment, and stirring scenes will be enacted.

The principals of the new piece have already been enumerated here, but the full cast is to hand, and is found to consist of Messrs. Frederick Ross, Robert Minster, Eric Mayne, Arthur Royston, Halliwell Hobbes, George P. Polson, Cecil Kinnaird, Cecil Saunders, Hastings Lynn, Vivian Gilbert, Hubert Willis, A. V. Bramble, Percy Rhodes, Sidney Vautier, Charles Calvert, Wilton James, Henry Armstrong, and Arthur Stone; and Misses Phyllis Relph, Blanche Stanley, Marjorie Chard, Mary Forbes, and Ruth Maitland.

Mr. W. W. Kelly has secured some attractive bookings for the spring dramatic season at his Liverpool and Birkenhead theatres. The season at the Birkenhead Royal will be opened on Monday by Mr. Ian Robertson in The Passing of the Third Floor Back, closely followed by The Arcadians, the Moody-Manners Opera Company, The Merry Widow, King of Cadonia, The King and the Unknown Woman, the Birkenhead Amateur Operatic Society in The Yeomen of the Guard, and the local A.D.S. in a new play.

Forthcoming attractions at Kelly's, Liverpool, include Raffles, The Luck of Roaring Camp (next week's attraction), Sunday, Sherlock Holmes, The Gay Gordons, and a grand opera company, with performances twice nightly.

The One-Act Theatre is shortly to become an institution, and will be inaugurated at Terry's by Mr. H. Holding, the promoter of the enterprise. Every evening five short plays—lasting not more than half an hour each—will be performed.

A feature of the theatre will be the absence of "stars," the company engaged being made up of well-known actors and actresses, all being given equal prominence. Mr. F. D. Bone, who has won conspicuous success with one-act plays, will be responsible for two items of the opening programme—Smiler's Watch, a nautical thriller, and Topside Dog, which was seen last year at the Court. The Night Before, by Mr. Edgar Wallace, Priest and Man, by Mr. Henry Murray, brother of the late David Christie Murray, and The Toy, by Mr. Augustus Moore, complete the list.

Miss Marie Lohr is daintily arrayed in the name-part of Tantalising Tommy at the Playhouse. She makes her first appearance in a pale pink gown of silk spotted chiffon, the bodice of which is quite simple but for an incrustation of pink guipure lace cut in deep Vandyke points. The slightly gathered skirt is treated in the same style, being encircled with a broad band of guipure lace cut in Vandyke points on either side and then finished with a deep hem of pale pink satin. With the costume is worn a long motor-coat of white cloth lined with white satin cut to fall in graceful folds, which are caught in with a stitched strap of the cloth. The wearer's smart toque is of black Tegal straw heavily trimmed with rich crimson roses, and her motor-veil is of flame-coloured mousseline to match the roses.

In the third act Miss Lohr has a lovely confection, in which old rose satin, chiffon, and embroideries are united in charming harmony. Soft veilings of chiffon drape the satin bodice and the upper part of the skirt; while heavy floss silk embroideries appear in the form of bretelles, a high waistband, and as a wide band round the skirt. Soft grey is the chosen tint of the graceful wrap worn with the gown, which is composed of tulle edged with fringe; and in the colour scheme of the hat grey and pink are happily combined in the form of pink roses and grey tulle draperies. Miss Lohr's gown in the last act has a quaint fichu bodice and full skirt of grey ninon, its dainty collar and cuffs being white embroidered lawn.

The part of Huguet in Mr. Robert Hilton's revival of Richelieu at the Strand was taken by Mr. Norman Wrighton. Owing to a change in the casting of the play Mr. Wrighton was down for the Duke of Orleans.

Miss Marie Dagmar will have the sympathy of many members of the profession in the loss she has sustained by the death, at the early age of thirty-nine, of her husband, Mr. Fred C. Somerfield. The sad event occurred on Tuesday last at Warrington, the cause of death being cancer and heart failure. Miss Dagmar and Mr. Somerfield, it will be remembered, were married a little over two years ago.

The dramatic reading of Romeo and Juliet by the British Empire Shakespeare Society at the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday, March 8, will commence at 3.30 instead of 3 o'clock, owing to the engagement of Mr. Lewis Waller (the Romeo) at the Hippodrome. Mr. Arthur Bourchier will be the Mercutio and Miss Evelyn D'Alroy the Juliet. The cast also includes Mr. A. E. George as Friar; Miss Adeline Bourne as Lady Capulet; Mr. Fisher White as Capulet; Mrs. E. H. Brooke as Nurse; Mr. Arthur Wontner as Tybalt; Mr. Godfrey Tearle as Paris; Mr. Athol Stewart as Benvolio; and Messrs. Halliwell Hobbes, J. Henry Twyford, Ross Shore, Maurice Elvey, George Owen, and Tom Heslewood, Miss Dora Josslyn and Miss Mary Webb. The matinée is under the direction of Mr. Acton Bond. Mr. George Alexander has kindly promised to speak at the conclusion of the play.

A number of well-known artists appeared at the Press Club at the monthly house dinner and smoking concert on Saturday evening, when the Hon. Harry Lawson presided. Among the artists who contributed to a well-varied entertainment were Mr. Watkin Mills, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Herbert Grover, Mr. W. J. Samuell, Signor Percichine (mandoline), Mr. George Snazelle, Mr. Soar, Mr. Edwin Barwick, Mr. Gilbert Girard, Mr. James Chilcot, Mr. Charles Coborn, Mr. T. Maxwell, Mr. George Buck, Mr. Frederick Frith, Mr. Jackson Potter, Mr. Ronald Greene, Mr. Rome Attwell, Mr. C. Bale, jun., and Mr. Arthur Helmore. Mr. Sinclair Mantell and Mr. Alfred Smythson presided at the piano, and Messrs. J. W. Bickell and H. Jewell were efficient stage managers.

A return visit will be paid by Cav. Castellano's Italian Grand Opera Company to the Crystal Palace Theatre next week. The company proved an immense success on their appearance in October last, and many will welcome their return. It is interesting to learn that Cav. Castellano enjoys the distinction of having never disbanded his troupe since the commencement of his tour fourteen years ago. The week's programme will be as follows: Monday, Il Trovatore; Tuesday, La Traviata; Wednesday matinée, Ernani; Wednesday evening, Faust; Thursday, Rigoletto; Friday, Cavalleria Rusticana and I Pagliacci; Saturday matinée, Lucia di Lammermoor; and Saturday evening, Carmen.

The full cast of The Tenth Man, Mr. W. Somerset Maugham's new play, which Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Arthur Bourchier will produce at the Globe on Thursday, will consist of Mr. Bourchier, Mr. Edmund Maurice, Mr. A. Holmes Gore, Mr. A. E. George, Mr. Godfrey Tearle, Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, Mr. Frank Atherley, Mr. George Bealby, Mr. Douglas Imbert, Mr. Dallas Cairns, Miss Kate Sergeantson, Miss Daisy Markham, and Miss Frances Dillon. Acts 1 and 2 are laid in the drawing-room of Lord Francis Etchingham's house, in Norfolk-street, Park-lane; and Act 3 in a sitting-room in the Palace Hotel at Middlepool. In the third act the curtain will fall for two minutes, during which twelve hours are supposed to elapse.

The children taking part in The Forty Thieves at the Prince's Theatre, Bradford, distinguished themselves by appearing in the principal rôles of the pantomime, in which they have hitherto taken only a subsidiary part. Mr. Francis Laidler's experiment proved so complete a success that it was decided that the performance should be repeated at the three remaining matinées, and also on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. The dresses were exact replicas of those worn by the principals, and the children were supported by the usual chorus. The theatre was crowded, and every song was encored, while each diminutive artist was enthusiastically applauded in the final parade.

The honours of the afternoon undoubtedly went to little Lena Booth, who played Ali Baba, and proved herself quite a miniature comedian. Little Alice Pemminton as Ganem, and Marjorie Holmes as Morgiana, the principal boy and girl respectively, made a charming couple, the latter's dancing being especially clever. Minnie Grossman, as Abdallah the captain of the thieves, thoroughly entered into the spirit of the part, and her dramatic scene with Cassim Baba (Amelia Marsden) showed how carefuly the children must have been trained. The remainder of the juvenile cast consisted of Amelia Reynolds, Minnie Clementson, Ellen Forrester, Margaret Beadle, Elsie Thornton, and Doris Hartley. The real principals appeared in the children's song "If you should see a little soldier."

Miss Ellen Terry was among the audience at the Strand Theatre on the opening night of Richelieu, and was the victim of a humorous accident. Seated in the stalls, Miss Terry became aware of a sudden descent of chocolates, which rained on her head and face, and fell into her lap and on the floor around her. For a moment Miss Terry was startled; but, realising the humour of the situation, she laughingly shared the chocolates with other occupants of the stalls around her. Taking advantage of the opportunity thus afforded them, a number of her immediate neighbours induced the distinguished actress to sign their programmes as souvenirs.

Miss Ethel Irving, now fully restored to health, will shortly start Saturday matinées of Dame Nature. Playgoers will learn with great interest that Miss Ethel Irving intends to appear as Millament in Congreve's Way of the World at some special matinées which will be given at the Garrick Theatre during the run of Dame Nature.

Miss Miriam Lewes will play Marguerite de Valois for the remainder of the run of Henry of Navarre at the New Theatre, Miss Julia Neilson having relinquished the part in consequence of the strain of rehearsals for The Popinjay. Miss Lewes, it will be remembered, acted Miss Neilson's parts for a considerable period during her illness some time back.

Through the kindness of Mr. Harris Fineberg, proprietor of the Liverpool Star Theatre, the Jewish Sheltering Home in that city has benefited to the extent of £150. Last week a matinée was given in the popular Williamson-square house, when a host of artists from the pantomimes and variety houses put in an appearance; while Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company played an act of With Edged Tools. The event was a big success, a ladies' committee, headed by Mrs. Fineberg, doing valuable work in the direction of selling programmes and sweets.

York City, which has not had a musical festival since 1835, is to revive that form of celebration this year, and will have a two days' festival the third week in July. Sir Edward Elgar has offered to assist the festival and conduct some of his works, whilst promises to take part have been received from Mme. Agnes Nicholls, Miss Phyllis Lett, Mr. Gervase Elwes, and Mr. Herbert Brown, all singers of the first order, and Miss Fanny Davies, the eminent pianist. The chorus will consist of 400 voices.

"Peter Pan" brought its sixth consecutive season to a close at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday night amid a scene of great enthusiasm. Thimbles, little bunches of violets, boxes of sweets, and little toys fell on the stage when Peter and Wendy took their "call" at the finish. Miss Pauline Chase and the Duke of York's Theatre company started on Sunday for Newcastle, where they opened on Monday in Mr. Barrie's perennial play.

The Play Actors are producing to-morrow (Sunday) evening at the Court The Marriage of Columbine, a four-act play by Harold Chapin, whose one-act piece, Augustus in Search of a Father, given on Jan. 30, revealed so much promise, that a more ambitious effort from his pen will be awaited with unusual interest. The play will be produced by Mr. Lewis Casson, and the cast will consist of Mr. A. S. Homewood, Miss Sybil Thorndike, Mr. H. K. Ayliff, Miss Agnes Thomas, Mr. Ernest Young, Mr. A. L. Burke, Miss Lorna Lawrence, Miss Irene Moncrieff, and Miss Gwladys Morris.

The Prince and Princess of Wales visited the Globe Theatre on Saturday night, and witnessed Arsène Lupin.

The engagement is announced of Miss Eleanor Robson, the favourite American actress, and Mr. August Belmont, a well-known banker of New York. The bride-elect, who was born in England, but was taken to America when a child, has paid a few visits to this country, and in 1904 played the heroine when Merely Mary Ann was brought to the Duke of York's Theatre from New York. She is the daughter of Mrs. Madge Carr Cook, who popularised Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch on both sides of the Atlantic.

The final competition for free open scholarships in the Royal College of Music took place on Thursday. The following are the names of the successful candidates:—Composition, Elliot R. Thompson; pianoforte, Norah M. Cordwell, Muriel E. Berry, Kathleen I. Long; singing, Alice G. Gear, Lilian J. Burgiss, Thomas G. Walters, William H. Green; organ, Reginald J. Foort, Douglas G. A. Fox; violin, Samuel Nagley, Francis P. Warren, Edward S. De Groot, Dora Garland; violoncello, Helen I. F. Beeching; double bass, James W. Merrett; harp, Catharine M. Johnson; flute, Arthur Hedges; hautboy, Harold G. Foreman; trumpet, Alexander Hall. The Pauer Memorial Exhibition (£7 10s.), for the student of at least one year's standing in the College who attains the highest position among the proxime for the pianoforte, was awarded to Gladys M. Cawston.

"Why Smith Left Home" will be taken on tour at Easter by Mr. Eric H. Albury, by arrangement with Mr. Lionel Rignold. A company of artists of repute has been engaged for the tour, which will continue right through the summer, a considerable number of season dates having already been secured. Novelties are being introduced in the shape of songs and dances particularly appropriate to certain of the scenes of the celebrated comedy. Mr. Albury will repeat his successful impersonation of the German count. The business-manager for the tour will be Mr. W. H. Pierpoint.

Miss Irene Desmond, who adorned the cast of The Merry Widow at Daly's, and also appeared in The Belle of Mayfair and Les Merveilleuses, was married at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, on Tuesday, to Sir Richard Levinge, Bart., of Knockdrin Castle, Mullingar. Sir Richard is the tenth of his line, and is a descendant of a famous Irish lawyer, Sir Richard Levinge, Lord Chief Justice of Ireland. Lady Levinge will not again be seen on the stage, and will with her husband spend a good deal of time at their place in Ireland.

"The Eve of the Wedding," a one-act play by Fanny Morris Wood, will be produced at the Rehearsal Theatre on Sunday evening. The cast will include Miss Joy Chatwynd, Mr. Warburton Gamble, and Mr. James Gelderd. The programme will also include Kitty Clive, by Frankfort Moore, the title-rôle in which will be played by Miss Fanny Morris Wood. Tickets are procurable from the New Frances Club, 425, Strand.

Mr. Charles Frohman intends to duplicate the present Paris production of Chantecler, presenting the play in New York, Boston, and Chicago next season. Mr. Frohman has secured the rights of M. Rostand's play for the English-speaking world, in association with MM. Hertz and Coquelin, of the Porte St. Martin Theatre, in Paris. The play, as produced in the principal cities of England and America, will be translated by M. Rostand's son. The first performance of Chantecler in English will be given in New York by an entirely American company. The costumes and scenery will be made in Paris.

An application was made to the Worthing magistrates on Wednesday for a stage licence for the St. James's Hall by the secretary of the local amateur operatic society. It was stated that the licence was required for the last week in April, when it was the intention of the society to produce Olivette. After giving the matter careful consideration, the magistrates decided not to accede to the request for the licence on the grounds that the lessees had refused to carry out certain alterations which had been previously insisted upon by them, when a former application for a licence was made and refused.

From South Wales comes news of a curious exchange. In opening the former Salvation Army Hall and Barracks, Barry, as a variety and picture house on Monday evening, Mr. Leon Vint has converted a place of worship into a theatre, while in the Cadoxton parish, at the same place, the opposite state of things exists. What was originally built for, and for years used as, the Theatre Royal was last week opened as St. Aidan's Church.

In consequence of Mr. Wm. H. Armstrong, the well-known solicitor and advocate, having been ill for some considerable time recently, certain unprincipled persons have circulated the news that he is still unable to attend to his business. These reports are wholly untrue. Mr. Armstrong is now fully restored to health, and is able to transact business as heretofore, at his two offices at 1, Renfrew-road, Lambeth (opposite the Lambeth Police Court), and at No. 3 Flat, 300, Kennington Park-road, S.E. (opposite Oval Station, City and South London Railway).

Another appreciation of the value of The Era as an advertising medium comes from Mr. W. Downes, who writes as follows, from Drury Lane Theatre:—"Dear Sir,—I feel I must let you know how pleased I am with the results of my advertisement in your highly esteemed paper, re dates for my 'Merry Hunters' Concert Party. It has only appeared in two issues, and my bookings have increased wonderfully. I am pleased to inform you that both Miss Mena Brae (who will be one of my "Merry Hunters" party) and myself have been re-engaged by Mr. Arthur Collins for next season's pantomime at Drury Lane."

Mr. Edward Marris has arranged with Mr. Frank Weathersby to send a company to the Channel Islands for a short stock season, opening on Monday next with Two Little Drummer Boys, which will be followed by Flying from Justice.

At the Globe Theatre on Monday a performance was given, for copyright purposes, of a new play in three acts, entitled Her Husband's Wife, by A. E. Thomas.

Members of the Woolpack Musical Society occupied the greater portion of the seats in the circle at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, on the evening of the 11th inst., the occasion being known as "Woolpack Night." There was a full house, and the performance went with a swing that highly delighted the visitors. During the evening a member of the Society, Mr. Algate, rendered a song in good style, and a highly successful feature was the presentation of baskets of fruit and flowers to leading ladies in the cast, and silver match-boxes to the comedians.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Ashley Richards has now practically recovered from the broken jaw he sustained at the charity match between Mr. Croke's Aladdin company and the Fulham Football Club. The pantomime tour finishing to-day, Mr. Richards will return on Monday to his accustomed place as musical director of the Lyric, Hammersmith.

Messrs. Stedman, having been unable to secure a suitable West End theatre, have abandoned their contemplated Easter revival in London of Alice in Wonderland, and will instead commence a spring tour of the principal provincial cities on Feb. 28, at the Court Theatre, Liverpool. The admirable production lately seen at the London Court will be sent out complete with additional chorus, dances, &c., the company being headed by clever little Miss Ivy Sawyer. The general-manager on tour will be the veteran H. Cecil Beryl.

Mr. Frank Curzon has finally decided to produce his new musical play, The Balkan Princess, at the Prince of Wales's Theatre this (Saturday) evening. The curtain will rise at eight sharp.

A wealthy man from the City, dining one day at North End, was every now and then boasting, with all the insolence of prosperity, of his many thousands in the funds, his capital in trade, mortgages, annuities, &c., when Foote cut him short by saying "he was very sorry for the circumstance." "What!" exclaimed his guest, "do you envy me my prosperity?" "No, my good sir," said the other; "but you talk so much of your riches that I am afraid the company (who don't know you as well as I do) will think you are going to break."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Not to Crow.

"It has not entered into my thoughts," said Sir Herbert Tree to a Chronicle man, "to do Chantecler myself at His Majesty's. If I do anything in the matter—though this, of course, is a premature idea I am expressing—I might invite Chantecler to come to His Majesty's for a fortnight as he stands, or as he struts. But I am speaking now out of the immediate moment. I might invite Chantecler to London, and I might not. One thing is very certain, and that is that I have nothing to do personally with the report that Chantecler is going to crow in English at His Majesty's Theatre."

A Witty Mimic.

MR. PERCY FITZGERALD'S biography of Samuel Foote, which has just been published by Chatto and Windus, is entirely readable and amusing. In the chapter on Foote as "Wit and Humorist," Mr. Fitgerald quotes some of Foote's best things.

If he only could.

A MAID came into the room to look for her mistress. "What do you want your mistress for?" asked the master. "Why, indeed, sir, to tell you the truth, she scolds me so from morning to night, I came to give her warning." "What, then, you mean to leave us?" "Certainly, sir," said she, shutting the door after her. "Happy girl!" exclaimed Foote; "I most sincerely wish your poor master could give warning, too."

The Real Complaint.

AN artist was eternally complaining of illness, but could never tell what was the matter with him. At last he married, which being told to Foote, he exclaimed: "I heartily wish him joy, for now he'll readily find out what's the matter with him."

A Mean Observation.

WHEN someone asked why Garrick did not take the beam out of his own eye before finding fault with the mote in another's, "Because he is not sure of selling the timber," said Foote with instant readiness. One night at his theatre Garrick twitted him. "So you have to fall back on one of my farces!" "Why, yes, Davy; I must have some ventilator in this very hot weather."

A Merry Life.

A DULL dramatic writer, who had often felt the severity of the public, was complaining one day to Foote of the injustice done him by the critics, but added: "I have, however, one way of being even with them, which is by constantly laughing at all they say." "You do perfectly right, my friend," said Foote, "for by this method you will not only disappoint your enemies, but lead the merriest life of any man in England."

Not there.

"THE gentleman in the orchestra stalls," writes M. Maurice Dekobra, in the Paris Revue, quoted by the correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, "would like to applaud eloquent pleading against popular prejudices, and even enjoys the peculiar fun of certain situations and the suggestiveness of certain dialogues. If he were alone, he would applaud; not being alone, having that man and woman on his right and left, he does not applaud, but appears shocked. It is unbelievable that the English public compels its actors to temper the living and picturesque language of Shakespeare. For instance, when Martin Harvey and H. B. Irving play Hamlet, they are obliged to cut from the last scene of the third act the forcible language used by the Prince of Denmark to his mother: 'Let this pot-bellied king . . .' Yet the same spectator, who watches so jealously over the morality of his own theatre, is the first, we are told, to laugh and to applaud the vaudeville abroad that he apparently detests at home." Mr. Harvey and Mr. Irving do not cut these words, for very good reason. The words do not occur in the text.

A Suggestion.

MR. HUGH TURNER writes from the Ipswich Lyceum: When at the present time we see the leading actors and actresses appearing on the music-hall stage, the old distinction between a theatre and a music-hall looks like disappearing, and we shall have places of entertainment in the future, call them what you will, only differing in the class they cater for. This being the case, it seems there is room in the provincial theatres for touring companies of, say, half-a-dozen or so educated, clever people who could provide a high-class entertainment on the lines of the Follies and the late German Reeds. I believe the majority of theatre managers, where, perhaps as here, there are a hippodrome and a picture palace catering for a certain class, find it difficult to fill their dates with sufficiently good attractions, who would be glad to book such a company as indicated, and that the innovation would be welcomed by their audiences.

Actors' Hands.

"IT is far from easy to discuss the importance the hands play in any part," says Mr. H. B. Irving in the Strand, "for, truth to tell, the hands, after all, merely follow out the dictates of the brain. By this I mean to say that, obviously, every movement of the hands is governed by the brain, and on this account a great deal must depend on the individual reading of a part. For instance, there can be little doubt that half a dozen actors, if left to themselves to study any particular part, will read that part in half a dozen different ways."

Manual Labour.

"To all who will reflect for a moment it must be clear that men and women use their hands in a greater and lesser degree according to the force with which any particular emotion tears at their hearts. That is the actor's difficulty so far as his hands are concerned, for it is very largely by the use of his hands that actually—although they probably do not know it themselves—the most lasting impression of the truth of a reading of any particular character is impressed upon an audience's mind. And probably, as the highest art lies in the concealing of that art, the actor who most clearly realises the real innermost meaning of the words of the author which he is expressing will use his hands to the best advantage."

Correct Behaviour.

"THE hands of the actor can be used in what is really nothing more or less than a downright contradiction to the reading of his brain. But that is bad art. The hands should follow the dictates of the brain; in fact, if the brain clearly grasps the idiosyncrasies of any particular character it may almost be taken as a hard and fast rule that the hands will behave themselves in a manner entirely true to life. On the other hand, if the brain is groping for the author's meaning, the hands, too, will grope for that expression which the author has intended to be represented."

Seriously Scorned.

IT is useless to talk of the glorious and brilliant and witty French stage, writes Mr. Arnold Bennett in the Chronicle, and to argue that a play which has so enthralled "the metropolis of dramatic art" must necessarily be a work of commanding genius. I may tell you that the serious young man of to-day in Paris only refers to the modern French stage with contempt. For myself, I went to Paris in 1903 full of beautiful ideas about the French stage. I assiduously followed the activities of the French stage for five years, and in 1908 I left Paris convinced that, broadly, the serious young man was right.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

WHY YOU SHOULD BECOME A MEMBER.

Of late the world in general, as well as the profession in particular, has heard a great deal concerning the Actors' Association. We are likely to hear a great deal more of this body in the very near future, for a talk with Mr. Duncan Young, the secretary, reveals the fact that hustling is in future to be the order of things.

Some people imagine that where hustling or energy prevails comfort must vanish. A visit to No. 32, Regent-street dispels any such idea. Here the new quarters of the "A.A." is established. There is another Association with the initials "A.A."—that is the Automobile Association—and its aim and objects are similar to those the council of the Actors' Association would apply for the benefit of its members—both "A.A.'s" are in existence to safeguard the interests of those entitled to display the sign when "on the road," either in town or country.

The Actors' Association headquarters are the cosiest imaginable, and partake of the nature of a club-house rather than official offices. There is a beaming janitor with a marvellous memory "on the door"—or, rather, stairway—and a notice confronts members that it is necessary to record signatures before entering the "A.A." rooms.

Just to the right of the stairway is the Council Chamber. There we find Mr. Duncan Young seated at a business-like table-desk. The room is a triangular-shaped one, but with a "Be Brief" aspect about it that intimates in no uncertain way that the worthy secretary has a lot to do, that he is very pleased to see you on the business of the "A.A.," and to give you every information concerning it; but if you have merely lounged in to kill time, or imagine that yours is the only business he has to attend to, then the sooner you disillusion yourself the better.

That the present secretary is urging things along in no uncertain style is evident from the fact that since June last 102 new members have been enrolled, and he is rather proud of the achievement. In fact, he makes no secret of the fact that a great crusade among the rank and file of the profession has been started, and it is evident from an hour's stay at No. 32 that the "A.A." has a great mission to fulfil, and will play an important part in the destiny of those men and women who belong to it.

Hard by is a "Ladies' Room," a "Silence Room," a smoking lounge, and below a "Gentleman's Room." Nearest the sky is the rehearsal room, a fine, light, business-like chamber to be had for one shilling an hour, gas-heater, gas T piece and all, and what more could actor or actress want?

It is almost inconceivable that anyone exists who does not know the aim and objects of the "A.A."—in fact, all about it. But in case anyone has forgotten the inducements held out by Mr. Duncan Young and his council, it may be wise to remind the reader of a few great points why everybody in the profession should hasten to become enrolled under the banner—if it has one—of the "A.A."

First of all, the entrance fee is merely 5s., and the annual subscription 15s., payable Jan. 1, or 4s. 6d. payable quarterly on Jan. 1, April 1, July 1, and Oct. 1. One gets a free £100 insurance thrown in, and, if one likes to avail oneself of the institution, the services of the Actors' Association Agency, charging the following fees:—5 per cent. or 1s. in the £ on salary received until an amount equal to half a week's salary has been paid. No engagements are negotiated which offer less than £2 per week salary.

The members of the "A.A." get the privilege of being permitted to play over various golf links, either at greatly reduced charges, or else without charge at all. For instance, no charge is made to "A.A." members at Burnley, Cambridge, Sedgley, Bradford, and Eastbourne, and at many other places half fees only are charged.

There are three of the articles of Association that call for especial attention. These contain the information that the "A.A." is established to encourage and promote the art of acting; to establish (if thought desirable) a school where elocution, dancing, calisthenics, fencing, and other accomplishments may be taught; and if thought desirable, to publish a directory of theatres, managers, and actors, and of persons connected with the theatrical profession.

Two appeals—both very fine ideas—will be sent out broadcast by the "A.A." The first is addressed to every actor and actress working to-day at a London theatre. It reads as follows:—

"The council of the Actors' Association, feeling that the time is now ripe for an earnest attempt to carry out some of the reforms of which the profession stands in need, urgently petitions you to enrol yourself as a member of what is now the only official organisation of actors and actresses.

"The Association, with twenty years' existence to its credit, is now approaching its majority, and the council is anxious to signalise the event by extensive work of a constructive nature. The actor-managers, who resigned in 1907, have now, by a resolution carried out at the Annual General Meeting, been invited to return; but in order that real reforms may be successfully undertaken, the Association needs your help. It needs not only the numerical strength, but also the weight and experience which your position in the profession would confer upon it.

"The Association is not appealing for charity. It has done good work in the past, but it must do infinitely more in the future.

"The measure of its usefulness to the individual should be of secondary importance, besides its incalculable power for good in ameliorating the lot of thousands of your brother and sister artists in the provinces. Moreover, in view of approaching legislation, which will in all probability result in the establishment of one licence for theatre and music hall, it becomes more than ever necessary for actors to safeguard their interests.

"There is no reason why the Actors' Association of England should not be a strong and powerful institution representative of a great profession.

"Will you help to make it so? If you are willing would you kindly sign the enclosed nomination form and leave it with the stage doorkeeper. It will be called for in the course of a week.

"The subscription is 15s. You are urgently begged not to cripple the work of the actors' organisation by withholding your support.

"Should you care at any time to look over the new premises you will be heartily welcome."

A similar appeal to that addressed to London actors will be sent to the provinces. It sets out in detail, as can be seen from a perusal of our advertisement columns, a few of the reforms the actor must bring about, and the evils that must be abolished. These include:—The standard contract, payment for matinées, payment for rehearsals, the bogus manager question, and the reduction of railway fares. "America and Germany," says the appeal, "have strong Actors' Associations—why should not England? If only 50 per cent. of the artists at present playing in the provinces would join the Association, it would be a powerful body."

THE COUNCIL CHAMBER OF THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Give Mr. Duncan Young a call. He will be very pleased to have a chat with you. And go to-day!

At the Council meeting of the Actors' Association held on Tuesday at 32, Regent-street, there were present: Mr. Clarence Derwent (in the chair), and Messrs. Cyril Cattley, Langford Reed, F. J. Arlton, H. Le Grand, Lewis Casson, E. Morgan, R. Greene, F. H. De Quincey, Leonard Shepherd, C. F. Collings, and Murri Moncrieff, and Misses Rose Cazalet, Beatrice Chester, Vita Spencer, and Joan Pereira, and Mr. D. Young (secretary).

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Mr. Leonard Shepherd was co-opted a member of the Council. The chairman read a letter from Miss Norah Mahone asking their acceptance of a handsome Oriental rug for the lounge in the rooms. The secretary was instructed to thank Miss Mahone very cordially on behalf of the Council, and to say they had much pleasure in accepting her charming gift.

The Finance Committee's report was submitted by Mr. Arlton, and was adopted. Further applications for debentures were reported as follows:—Miss Chester £5, Mr. Chris Walker £5, and Mr. Arlton £5. The secretary was instructed to see that a circular was prepared drawing attention to the fact that subscriptions for 1910 were now overdue and to have a number ready for dispatch prior to the seventy days' grace.

The chairman drew attention to the disastrous season at the Strand Theatre, and the secretary was instructed to write to all the members of the Association who were connected in any way with the company and to say that the Council deplored the extraordinary result of the season, and ask them to be good enough to give full information, so that a record might be placed in the books of the Association.

Mr. C. Derwent drew attention to the further progress of his advertising scheme, and said that matters were in progress by which all the actors and actresses in town would have the appeal left at the different theatres, and that the appeal to the provincial members of the profession would be in the printer's hands the following day.

The House Committee tendered their report, and it was agreed to accept all the recommendations. Mr. Murri Moncrieff and the secretary were requested to make arrangements towards securing the pianette for the rehearsal room.

The Social Committee recommended that a social be held on March 5. After discussion it was arranged that the date should be altered to Sunday, March 13, and that Mr. W. Devereux be asked to take the chair on that occasion.

The following letters were received from Mr. Bourchier and Sir Squire Bancroft:—

"DEAR MR. DUNCAN YOUNG,—Many thanks for your letter of the 9th inst. I have discussed the matter with Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Irving, and cordially agree with them in their attitude with regard to the question contained in your letter. Like them, I shall be only too pleased if the Actors' Association succeed in numbering us, as well as all the other leading members of our profession, in their Association.—With kind regards, yours sincerely,

"ARTHUR BOURCHIER."

"MY DEAR SIR,—I thank you very cordially for your kind invitation, but my desire now is to lessen rather than add to my obligations; also I am much absent from London, so I cannot see my way to accepting it.—Believe me, with all good wishes, yours faithfully,

"SQUIRE BANCROFT."

Elections.—Josephine Middleton, Mabel Letham, Paul Beckett, and Cicely Wade. Nominations.—Rose Edouin, F. Manning Sproston, Arthur Stanley, Kirsteen Graeme, and Margaret Omar.

The Council of the Actors' Association has issued the following appeal: "The Council of the Actors' Association makes this special appeal to every actor and actress at present playing in the provinces simultaneously with a similar appeal to the members of the profession in London.

"The Actors' Association is now the only official organisation of actors and actresses. It has important work to do, not in the vague future, but here and now. Many reforms must be introduced, many evils abolished. To instance only a few: The standard contract, payment for matinées, payment for rehearsals, the bogus manager question (both in and out of London), reduction of railway fares for A.A. members, establishment of a provincial branch. These are all matters calling for immediate attention.

"It will be seen that a large programme of reform lies before the newly-elected Council—a programme not impossible of attainment, but one which needs unity of purpose supported by numerical strength. It is often urged that the Association does not do enough for the provincial actor, but it is obvious nothing can or will be done until the complainants step inside the ranks and add their numerical strength to the cause instead of incessantly criticising from without.

"If only 50 per cent. of artists at present playing in the provinces would join the Association it would be a powerful body.

"The annual subscription is 15s. For this there is free medical advice throughout the United Kingdom, free legal advice, a permanent address for letters, an agency, free golf links, a spacious club-house next door to the Criterion theatre, in the very heart of theatrical London (eight rooms, including large rehearsal room, and refreshments at popular prices).

"America and Germany have strong Actors' Associations; why should not England? To the hard-working provincial actor and actress the Association makes this appeal. Do not hesitate. Send in your names to the Secretary, and so, by co-operation and enthusiasm help the important work of actors' organisation."

THE PUBLIC ROOM AT THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Just to the left of Mr. Young's room is the public room. It is a long irregular-shaped apartment, with writing-tables in convenient nooks, large lounge chairs here and there, a small library of the kind of reference books actors require, the latest papers, and even a piano. It is a desirable lounge, the walls of which are hung with rare, and, in some cases, exclusive steel prints of bygone Thespians.

The commissariat department, under the management of Mrs. Cooper, is on the floor above, and adjoining the kitchen is a dining-room, white with napery and perfumed with the fragrance of a choice collection of table flowers. Many old framed play-bills are hung on the walls. There is a Drury Lane day-bill of 1845, one of the Queen's dated 1850, an 1846 Haymarket bill, on which is starred Lend Me Five Shillings, a Lyceum bill when under Fechter's management, and a Princess's Theatre announcement of Mr. Phelps. An 1839 Surrey bill stars Hell's Belles, and as showing that even these up-to-date cinematograph times could be anticipated sixty years ago, we are informed that the magic-lantern "will throw beautiful pictures upon a screen at every performance."

One of the earliest bills issued by Sadler's Wells is one in which Richelieu tops. Macready's Benefit Bill is there, side by side with the signatures of those present at the Ellen Terry Jubilee performance.

CHARLES MANNERS AT BELFAST.

After the curtain fell on La Tosca, at the Hippodrome, Belfast, on the 11th inst., Mr. Charles Manners made a speech in response to demands from the big house. He apologised for using instead of the Italian chapel in the first act of Tosca the Nuremberg church out of The Mastersingers, and explained that the former had been burnt recently, with many tons of his scenery. It would be replaced as soon as possible. He went on to say that if he had been producing musical comedy or comic opera, or something of that sort, he would have felt it an impertinence to address them, but it was different in the case of grand opera. Other forms of entertainment lasted only for a day, but a work like The Mastersingers would be a delight for centuries. He felt that those who had attended during the week were at one with him in his endeavour to establish opera on a sound basis. He alluded to the curious fact that Belfast, a city teeming with wealth, could not in the matter of opera compare with Continental towns of one-half or one-quarter its size. A poor country like Italy had 360 operatic companies constantly giving performances, whilst Great Britain had no more than four, and some of those were not very remarkable. They were probably doing as well with the chances they had as with the chances he had. It was a pity that English-speaking people paid so little attention, and took so little interest in grand opera, leaving it entirely to professional travelling managers. If reform was to come it must come from the people themselves. In this connection he would like to point out that during the past few years he had offered to come to Belfast if some committee would take up the matter. He had said he would give free use of his scenery and costumes, the assistance of his wife and himself free, charging only his out-of-pocket expenses, and sustaining a loss, if one were incurred, while any profit that was made was to go to any cause that the committee desired. Unfortunately the project, for some reason or other, had never come to anything. Then at length the management of the Hippodrome stepped in and offered him terms that at the worst would have made his total loss only a few pounds. As it turned out, he was not only making a good profit, but he was delighted to say the proprietors of the Hippodrome were thoroughly satisfied with the result of the week. Naturally he was pleased from a monetary point of view, but he was still more pleased from the point of view of the success of grand opera. He was glad he had been able to produce there six operas, but it was nothing like what he wanted to do, and on his return visit, which would be as soon as he could arrange the dates, he hoped to be able to give them a very pleasant surprise. He trusted that his audiences that week would help them in his efforts. After acknowledging the assistance of the local Press, he said there was one without whom all his work would be unavailing, and he wished to have the pleasure and honour of introducing his wife.

Madame Moody, on coming forward, received an extraordinary ovation.

On behalf of the audience, Sir Otto Jaffe spoke of the keen pleasure derived from that week's performances. Belfast had supported the company in a way that reflected credit on the city. He called for three cheers for Mr. Manners and Madame Fanny Moody, and three rousing cheers were spontaneously given.

A Striking Personality.

THE orchestra is not quite ready, and Mr. Beecham is human, says the Express in an account of the rehearsal of Elektra. He stretches out his long, lean arms and yawns with a deliberation which is almost ostentatious. Then slowly he draws himself upright in his chair and reveals his personality. He is a remarkable man to look at—tall and slim, with a thoughtful, brooding, ascetic face. His appearance suggests a religious-minded Cavalier. He is instantly reminiscent of Charles I. His head is dome-shaped, and his forehead high and white. Gentle, reflective eyes look out from either side of a strong, hawk-like nose. His thin-lipped mouth is half-hidden by a Cavalier moustache, and his thin, pointed chin is decorated with an imperial. Leaning forward, he bends his reflective gaze on the vast music score which lies gleaming before him beneath the concentrated glare of shaded lights. Then he looks round and seems to count his flock.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

THE SUNDAY OPENING QUESTION.

The weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. Melvill Beachcroft (chairman) presiding.

SUNDAY OPENING OF CINEMATOGRAPH SHOWS.

The Theatre and Music Halls Committee brought up the following report:—

The Council, on Dec. 21, 1909, decided that the licences granted by the Council under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, should be subject to a condition that the premises should not be opened on Sundays, Christmas Day, or Good Friday. On Feb. 1, 1910, we reported that this condition had not been favourably received by the proprietors of the premises, and that we had under consideration representations made by a deputation from the Cinematograph Trade Protection Society, Ltd., and the Cinematograph Defence League, Ltd., which had appeared before us, and urged that the condition might be withdrawn, and also representations made by a deputation from the Variety Artists' Federation, the Actors' Association, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union, the National Association of Theatrical Employees (including cinematograph operators), and the Imperial Sunday Alliance, which had appeared before us and urged that the prohibition against Sunday opening should be maintained, and that no relaxation of the prohibition should be allowed except under the same conditions as those insisted upon in the case of premises licensed for music, viz., the conditions laid down by the Council on May 4, 1909. In support of the request that the prohibition should be withdrawn the deputation from the Cinematograph Trade Protection Society and the Cinematograph Defence League urged that cinematograph displays should be regarded not as entertainments but rather as a form of education for persons who were not able to obtain instruction and amusement in other ways, and that it was better that people should spend Sunday evenings in a cinematograph hall than in the streets. On the question of Sunday labour, we understand that the whole of the staff employed by the proprietors represented by the deputation are at present employed at a daily wage under a seven days' contract, and are given one day's holiday every fortnight, but that if the Council permits the premises to remain open on Sunday, the proprietors will allow one day's holiday a week if the employees are willing to forego their wages for one day. The deputation representing the Variety Artists' Federation, the Actors' Union, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union, the National Association of Theatrical Employees (including the cinematograph operators), and the Imperial Sunday Alliance in supporting the Council's action stated that if permission were given for cinematograph halls to open on Sundays, similar facilities could not reasonably be withheld in the case of theatres and music halls, and the result would be detrimental to persons employed in the entertainment business and to the public interest. They also expressed the opinion that the proprietors in engaging employees would make Sunday work a condition of employment, and that ultimately wages would be less in proportion.

We have given careful consideration to the representations made by both deputations, and can see no reason for advising the Council to depart from its present policy with regard to Sunday entertainments. If cinematograph halls be allowed to open on Sundays under the same conditions as on week days, many of the theatres and music halls licensed by the Council will no doubt be used for cinematograph entertainments on that day, and the proprietors may reasonably ask to be allowed to use the premises for music also. Having regard to all the circumstances, we think that the condition inserted in the licences granted by the Council should be adhered to, and that the opening on Sundays of premises licensed for cinematograph exhibitions should only be permitted on the same conditions as are enforced with regard to Sunday concerts. We recommend—

That no application for permission to use premises licensed by the Council under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, for cinematograph entertainments on Sundays or other days prohibited by the licence be considered unless the application be accompanied by an undertaking from some recognised society or organisation, unconnected with the premises concerned, to the effect that—(i.) The entertainments will be properly conducted and not for private gain or by way of trade; (ii.) the licensee or his servants will have nothing to do with the arrangements for the entertainment (i.e., the engagement of operators or employees, &c.) beyond being responsible to the Council for the observance of its regulations; (iii.) none of the persons employed at the licensed premises on week-days will have any pressure put upon him or her to assist at Sunday entertainments; (iv.) an audited balance-sheet will be submitted to the Council at the end of each series of entertainments; (v.) the rules required to be observed on week-days for securing the safety of the audience will be complied with; (vi.) the heads of the society or organisation will hold themselves responsible for seeing that the assurance given to the Council is adhered to.

Mr. Greenwood, chairman of the committee, having moved the reception of the report,

Mr. Montgomery moved as an amendment: That the recommendation be referred back to the committee, with instructions to reconsider the resolution (No. 2) of Dec. 21, 1909, with a view to allowing premises in respect of which licences are granted under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, to be open on all days (including Sundays), provided that the employees are given one day's rest in seven. He said that, in the first place, he wished to state he had no interest in any cinematograph performances whatever. The question he wished to raise was one which seemed to him to be of vital importance to the amusement world of London, and he thought it was a matter for the consideration of the new Council rather than for the Council that was on the eve of dissolution. The proposal he had brought forward would, if carried, have the effect of shelving the question until after the new Council was elected. He felt that the majority of the present Council had been inoculated with the prudishness and the priggishness of its predecessors. Many of them had great hopes three years ago that the present Council would throw off the incubus of Sabbatarianism which had prevailed so long, and it was a grievous disappointment to the people of London that these hopes had not been realised. It was usual for the party he was associated with to be called the friends of the brewer, but he thought they had now an opportunity of proving themselves the enemies of the brewer and the friends of temperance, because he was informed that something like 500,000 people patronised these cinematograph entertainments in London on Sundays, and it was quite certain they could not be there and also in the public houses, increasing the enormous profits of the brewer. He hoped, therefore, that his friends on the left would assist the cause of temperance by supporting his amendment. The staff which had charge of these cinematograph entertainments was quite a small one—the average was about ten per week; and when they considered that one hall sometimes contained as many as 2,000 people on one afternoon he thought that a very good case had been made out for the cinematograph entertainment. But it was necessary to safeguard the interests of the mechanics and other employees. He suggested that if a licence were granted on the lines he proposed a clause should be introduced in it to the effect that if entertainments were given on Sunday a separate staff should be engaged for that day. By this means they would not only safeguard the interests of the employees, but also provide employment for a larger number of people. With regard to the moral question, he could not see the distinction which made it quite proper for people to look at pictures on the walls of the National Gallery on Sundays and quite wrong to look at moving pictures in a hall. The attitude of the Council towards Sunday entertainments was most Jesuitical, for they said in effect, We don't see any harm, or anything wrong or immoral, if Sunday entertainments are given for charitable objects, but if given for personal gain then they come under our ban. There was one more point. Were they to say that of all the countries in the world their own attitude towards Sunday amusements was the correct one? Were they still to maintain the idea that the strict Sabbatarian way of keeping Sunday was the only proper one? He hoped that both the anti-brewers and the so-called pro-brewers on the Council would support his amendment, which he believed would secure the approval of all right-minded men. Many of the members of the Council had privately expressed their approval who would not do so publicly. (Cries of "Name.")

The Rev. Stewart Headlam, who seconded the amendment, accused those who had brought forward the recommendation as being Sabbatarians for political purposes only.

The Chairman: That is rather a sweeping statement.

The Rev. Stewart Headlam: Then I'll withdraw

What I want to make clear is that it is brought forward by people who will not allow golf to be played on our links on Sunday, but take care to play golf themselves. What you want to do is to insist on one day out of seven for rest, and you do a great deal of harm if you insist that that day must be the Christian Sunday. There is nothing in the Christian religion to prohibit us from going to see a cinematograph show on Sunday afternoon.

The Rev. J. Scott Lidgett said he earnestly hoped the Council would adopt the recommendation of the committee. He did not think they should follow the example of the previous speakers and discuss the subject from the point of view of Sunday observance, or Sabbatarianism as it was called. A particular trade interest asked the Council to treat them in a totally different way from the way others were treated. To make an exception in favour of one of these trade interests would, he thought, be contrary to a sound policy. He asked in vain what was their particular claim to this specially favourable treatment. He thought that the great development of this class of amusement was harmful to the public mind and damaged the power of serious attention to serious subjects. He could give evidence that those shows—even those given on religious premises—justified this contention, and he sincerely regretted the vogue for this kind of entertainment. He declined to admit that a case had been made out for any exception to be granted to this particular trade. It was a very significant fact that while two trade protection societies had asked the Council to permit Sunday opening, the societies representing the whole body of employees had opposed. As a matter of fact, it was on the poor wretched people employed by the proprietors of the shows the whole burden would fall. It was said that the proprietors would not employ people more than six days in the seven; but the Council would have no control in regard to the wages and probably no knowledge of what was done. To make an exception in this particular case would be the most short-sighted action the Council could possibly take. He had no desire to force Sunday observance upon people contrary to their own tastes, and he thought that the present arrangements were to the general interests of the people. In conclusion, he appealed to the Council to adhere to a rule which he believed was not only the dignified but also the the safe course to pursue.

Mr. Saunders said he desired to join with Mr. Scott Lidgett in urging the Council to reject the amendment. He was as anxious as Mr. Stewart Headlam that the people should have a day of rest that would allow them to exercise their religious observances and at the same time afford them opportunities for reasonable relaxation. As Mr. Scott Lidgett had already pointed out, whatever might be their religious views with regard to Sunday or any other points of religion one was absolutely sure that keeping Sunday as a day of rest, although it might be dull to people who did not have to work hard for six days of the week, was an exceedingly fine sanitary arrangement, which he did not mean to see disturbed without making a protest. They had been told that a fresh staff would be engaged for Sundays. That one statement was alone sufficient to condemn the proposal, because it meant that if a staff of men were engaged for one day in the week they would also work the other six days. Besides, what right had the Council to give the monopoly of Sunday entertainments to one class of entertainers alone? He held no brief for theatre or music hall proprietors; but to give a monopoly to one of the latest forms of entertainment would not be right on the part of any public body, and he hoped that the Council would follow the advice of Mr. Scott Lidgett and reject the amendment.

Mr. W. Peel said he wished to state, on behalf of his own party, that no party was so determined to keep Sunday free for the workers of all classes. He sympathised heartily with what Mr. Scott Lidgett had said, for he could not see why, if the Council were going to make any exceptions to their rule, that the cinematograph shows should be specially favoured. So far as he was personally concerned, he should offer a vigorous opposition to the proposal, and he believed its supporters in the Council would be extremely few.

Mr. Gosling, speaking on behalf of the Labour Bench, said he feared that if such a proposal as that of Mr. Montgomery were adopted they would next have the workshops, &c., open on Sundays, and they were dead against it. The present policy of the Council with regard to Sunday opening of places of amusement had been decided upon entirely apart from party. A matter of so much importance should not be left to a new Council. When the present Council came into office it was thought that the old Progressive policy on this matter was going to be opposed, and some of them were very pleased to find that they were all practically of one mind in regard to the conditions on which licences to places of amusement were granted. There was all the difference in the world between the proprietors of places of amusement lending them for purposes of charity and letting them for their own gain. He did not want to see the home life of the country upset by too much entertainment, and he believed that in the interests of the profession and of the people themselves it would be better to leave well alone.

Mr. Greenwood said he was rather surprised to find this amendment on the agenda after the acceptance of the recommendation of his committee that the licences of cinematograph halls should be subject to such conditions as were imposed upon all other places of amusement in London. The committee's recommendation did not find favour with certain interested parties, who were invited to come before the committee and state their views. The committee, however, were by no means impressed by the statements made by the representatives of the Protection Society and the Defence League, for their arguments amounted to very little beyond this, that they were desirous of making the best success possible in the enterprises in which they were financially interested. On the other hand, the arguments used by the representatives of the Actors' Association, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union, and the Imperial Sunday Alliance impressed the committee very strongly, and they felt that if by any chance the Council removed the restrictions on the Sunday opening of places of amusement they would be doing a very grievous injury to a very large body of people. And, moreover, they felt that if they made an exception to the rule they would be showing an inconsistency that the Council would have every reason to deplore. If this amendment were carried they might have in the future between five hundred and six hundred places of entertainment in London open on Sunday. Although there were some who sneered at the Sunday as being dull, he hoped that the day would be far distant when, by any action on the part of the Council, the restrictions which helped to preserve it as a rest day were removed. He trusted that the Council would uphold the decision of the committee.

The amendment was then put, and only the mover and seconder voted for it. The recommendation of the committee was then agreed to.

DRAWINGS APPROVED.

The committee reported that they had considered drawings with regard to the undermentioned premises. The arrangements shown on the drawings appeared to be satisfactory, and the applicants have been informed that, subject to certain conditions being observed, the Council has no objection thereto:—

Elephant and Castle Theatre.—Installation of new heating apparatus.

Holborn Empire.—Rearrangement of the exit on the prompt side of the stalls and formation of a new refreshment saloon.

Holland Park Skating Rink.—Daily Mirror Exhibition, May, 1910.

Shaftesbury Theatre.—Improvement of the sanitary accommodation.

PREMIER ELECTRIC THEATRE, EARLSFIELD.

The committee had considered drawings and a specification, submitted by Messrs. Emden, Egan, and Co., of the Premier Electric Theatre proposed to be erected in Garratt-lane, Earlsfield. The premises will have accommodation for about 780 persons, and it is intended to apply for a music and dancing licence. Subject to certain conditions being complied with, the premises appear to be suitable for the purpose for which the licence is desired, and the committee recommended the Council to grant a certificate on being satisfied that the premises have been completed in accordance with the drawings and specification and the regulations of the Council. Agreed to.

THE FIASCO AT THE STRAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—May I, through your courtesy, offer my sincere and heartfelt apologies to the public and the artists and the staff who so loyally supported me for the sudden termination of my season at the Strand?

It was represented to me with most solemn assurance by one whom I had hitherto regarded as a friend, and on whose word I could place implicit reliance, that I had at least a backing of £14,000, and from sources which I considered were as reliable as though the money was in my pocket. After I had depleted my own resources in providing the necessary preliminary expenses, I found, to my intense despair, that the friend on whose word I had relied had grossly misrepresented the position, and that in respect to the promised capital the statements made to me were practically a tissue of lies. Hence my terrible position and the consequent distress which I have unwittingly caused to my staff and company—a distress which I confidently hope to relieve; and to this end I am now making arrangements which will undoubtedly place me in a position to do in the very near future. Believe me, I shall never know one moment's peace or happiness until all those who have claims on me through this most unfortunate business are satisfied.—Yours faithfully,

ROBERT HILTON.

London, Feb. 16, 1910.

The King and Queen, Princess Victoria, Prince Henry of Prussia, and the ladies and gentlemen in waiting witnessed the performance of The O'Flynn at His Majesty's Theatre on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Charles Hartley and Miss Ethel Gordon Paull, who have returned from a long European tour with their entertainment, left Southampton last Saturday by the Armadale Castle for Madeira. They appeared in the island on Wednesday and Thursday evening, and yesterday (Friday) set sail for Teneriffe. Santa Cruz, Laguna, Orolara, Las Palmas, Tajira, and Monte will be visited for one night each in the order named. After fulfilling some engagements in Scotland at Easter Mr. Hartley and Miss Paull will visit Australia.

On Tuesday night about sixty members of the Birmingham Athletic Institute visited the Prince of Wales' Theatre, and they had a jolly good time. They heartily sang the different choruses, and during the evening presented about a dozen gifts, including boxes of chocolates and bouquets, to the leading artists.

Mlle. Florence, who is appearing this week in The Sleeping Beauty at the Jersey Opera House, on Monday gave a public display by walking on the globe through the streets of the town. She careered jauntily along, attired in a dainty white yachting costume, her progress being witnessed by a big crowd of people.

Master Lionel Bastow, the thirteen-year-old son of the well-known comedian, is a Boy Scout, and was with his patrol in a field adjoining the scene of the Stoat's Nest disaster at the moment of the accident, and he and his companions were conspicuous by their cool aid with their ambulance amid scenes sufficient to make the hearts of full-grown men quail.

At the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, which is one of the latest acquisitions of Moss' Empires, Ltd., Mother Goose still continues its remarkably successful career, Mr. Fred Karno's pantomime proving one of the greatest successes ever known at that house. After ten weeks' run, business still continues to be enormous, Neil Kenyon as Mother Goose, May Moore Duprez, Lily Morris, Jack O'Connor, and Fred Allandale all continuing to be prime favourites.

A 'Varsity night, arranged last week by the students of Glasgow University, passed off without a hitch, and was generally voted one of the most successful Students' Nights in the annals of Glasgow. In connection therewith the following letter has been received by the resident-manager:—In a letter of thanks and appreciation received by Mr. Christie Grant, the resident-manager of the Grand, from Mr. R. R. Archibald, president of the Union, the following passages occur:—"I think that the artists, staff, and students can, without fear of contradiction, congratulate themselves on having taken part in the most successful 'Students' Night' that has been held in Glasgow for a very long time. I would specially ask you to convey our special thanks to Mr. Albert Orton, the manager of the company, who left nothing undone, that we might be happy, and also to accept yourself our sincere gratitude."

Mr. Bransby Williams was at Toronto on the 1st inst.—once more under the Union Jack, which he saluted on arrival. He has rejoiced in big receptions and exceptional honour. He has been favoured with a public reception, and was down to address the Dickens Society, who kept the master's birthday on the Saturday because of his presence in the city. The society numbers one thousand. He went to Boston last week, and will be three weeks in New York, coming home again for Easter. One night during his speech of thanks a voice called out "Give us 'The Old Showman.'"

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

The programmes at this popular hall continue to represent the high-water mark of excellence, and audiences severely taxing the capacity of the house are the reward of the managerial enterprise. The place of honour this week is occupied by Herbert Darnley's company in his new production Private Potts. When it is mentioned that this military character is sustained by Mr. Fred. Kitchen, it will be recognised that there is plenty of amusement provided for the audience. Certainly Mr. Kitchen has a part in which his inimitable comedy finds full play. The audience are kept in a perpetual state of merriment when he is on the stage, and they accorded him a great ovation at the conclusion. Capital support is forthcoming from Messrs. W. Wilbey, Jack Williams, and Harry Lappo, and Mrs. Herbert Darnley and Miss Jessie Crammond both do well in the feminine rôles. The show is very elaborately staged, the three scenes by Sidney E. Pyne and Co. being effective, and the military uniforms worn by the fifty performers completing a bright and animated stage picture. A very long and prosperous run for the production is assured.

Johnny Fuller in his feline act is as entertaining as ever. He reproduces with remarkable fidelity the characteristic attitudes of the animal, and his wire act and acrobatic dance complete a thoroughly entertaining turn. Edith Heron-Brown, the musical slavey, who opened the programme, did well and gained a good reception. Rhoda Paul, male impersonator, made a successful appearance; clearer articulation would greatly add to the merit of her act; the dance, however, with which she concluded, was clever. Clark and Hayden, musical and comedy artists, give a really bright and pleasant show. The lady possesses a soprano voice of great power, and the gentleman is a clever comedian, and a very efficient accompanist. They were speedily on good terms with the house and gained a flattering reception.

The Abdullah Arabs in a pyramid building and tumbling act displayed great agility, the various items in their act calling for both nerve and exceptional skill; they gained several calls. Arthur Ferris, a new character comedian, made quite a hit. He sang two songs, the first in the character of a swell, and the second as a slightly elevated gentleman returning from a Covent Garden ball. In both of these he has some very amusing patter; his methods are original, and altogether he seems to be an artist of whom more will be heard in the future. He gained one of the receptions of the evening, taking some four or five calls. Cliff Dixo, in a couple of songs, was well received.

The bottom of the bill is filled by Alice Raymond and her players in A Night in Egypt. This is a capital musical act. Miss Raymond contributes solos on the keyed trumpet, horn and cornet, and displays great ability in each. She has the assistance of a wind instrument quartette, and the selections performed include the Grand March from Aida; the William Tell overture; and the Soldiers' Chorus from Faust. A special word is due to her conductor, who, in addition to his onerous duties, sang with great effect "The Bedouin Love Song." Altogether it forms an admirable addition to any programme, and the Egyptian scenery and costumes add to its stage effectiveness. Miss Raymond had an enthusiastic reception. The Bioscope is, as usual, excellent.

SADLER'S WELLS.

A most enjoyable programme for the most part has been presented at Mr. Frank Macnaghten's Islington house this week, and doubtless the hearts of the artists engaged have been gladdened by the unstinted applause that has greeted their efforts. The patrons of Sadler's Wells to-day are keen critics, but they are just ones, and never fail to recognise true talent, at the same time being just as quick to resent bad showmanship. Although not occupying pride of place in the bill, there can be no doubt but that "The Metablescope" is the finest item. It is clever, artistic, and we do not remember to have seen anything like it before in London. Briefly, it is the living-picture idea presented in a novel way, and reminiscent of the devices employed by the mock monks of Montmartre to delude the unwary British tourist when that individual seek the sensational in Paris. In Signor Arvi's presentation, however, there is nothing that offends. The statuary and famous pictures copied seem to be mysteriously produced from thin air in full view of the audience. Living models are employed, which makes the delusion the more remarkable. There can be no question of trap-doors, cloth coverings, screens, or the hundred and one devices of the stage magician. One sees a shadow at first materialise into a beautiful living woman—there is no mistake about that as the lady steps on to the stage—and afterwards she disappears in just the same uncanny way as she arrived. The illusion is a very remarkable one, and deserves to be seen on the very best stages of the Metropolis. The subjects chosen include "The Bath of Psyche," "Wedded," "Ayesha consumed in real Flames," "Venus la Milo," "Salome," "Bathing," "The Last Shot," "The Soldier's Friend," "Bubbles," "Rock of Ages," "Justice," "Hope," and "Galatea." Signor Arvi and his clever and beautiful assistants were deservedly recalled again and again.

The Eight Merry Marvels are eight vivacious little maids, dressed as baby girls in white. They have improved considerably since we saw them at Collins's some time ago. In their opening chorus they tell us to "Smile, smile, smile—keep on smiling all the while," and we did. And it was because of their youth and their daintiness and the freshness of their young voices—in fact, the act was remarkable for its all-round youthful vigour. The young lady who does the 40-second impersonation of Sam Mayo is especially clever. In direct contrast with these sweet-faced damsels are the Three Torontos, a trio of—if we are not greatly mistaken—Teuton Goliaths, magnificent specimens of men whose every movement was a pleasure to watch. Their feats of strength were cleanly and neatly done, as much with the manipulation of human weights as with the great barbells they handled. Sadler's Wells liked the Three Torontos.

No. 3 was Will Avis, magician. Very smart and clever. The choruses of Ray Royal's illustrated songs were well taken up, and Harry Bland, Dorothy Dare, and Sid Kemp come in for a fair share of appreciation.

CHELSEA PALACE.

It is a striking tribute to the management of this comfortable house of amusement that not only are the cheaper parts of the place crowded at every show, but that a very large proportion of the artistic fraternity for which Chelsea is famous are among its regular patrons. This week's programme is typical of the high standard of excellence maintained. Topping the bill is Joe Elvin, always a favourite with the Palace-goers. With a strong company he presents the sketch Paying the Bill, and the house rocks with laughter while Joe plays Bill Buggins, a piano mover, a part which affords him full scope for his wonderful powers as a mirth-provoker. Other parts are taken by Miss Leonora Castelle, Messrs. George Denham and Kenneth Altamont, and the piece goes with a rare swing. Equally funny and enjoyable is France and Stewart's presentation of their American comedy sketch, The 100 to 1 Chance. The scene is laid in Coney Island, and there is an originality and freshness about the item which finds great favour. To the people who love a chorus Lil Hawthorne is all that a music hall artist should be. Her song-scena, "Little Maid of Monte Carlo," is charmingly staged and just as charmingly sung, and there is a haunting refrain about it which finds a lively echo up in the gallery. Miss Hawthorne has been particularly successful this week, and so, too, have been the Lyons Trio, whose dancing display has always aroused much enthusiasm. Charles Banks has had plenty of honours to share with his dog Woof, a clever animal, which does the most amazing things, and Will Godwin's new song, "The King's Reserve," has served to enhance the already high reputation he enjoyed in Chelsea. Hanid Alexander, Tate and Tate, and Frank Lynne, all clever turns of more than average merit, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope complete the programme, and over and above all this there is the first-class playing of one of the best of the London suburban orchestras, and the pleasure of sitting in a house where everything possible is done to study the comfort of the public.

TOTTENHAM PALACE.

Good low comedy free from vulgarity will always find a welcome place on a variety bill, hence the popularity of Miss Kate Carney's latest mirth-moving scena All the Fun of the Fair. What strikes one particularly in this sketch is the strict attention which has been paid to detail and local colouring, in which the fair-ground scene is rich. At the Tottenham Palace this week big audiences, twice nightly, are the rule, and one of the best companies Mr. F. S. Mayne has been privileged to handle here is billed. Reverting to All the Fun of the Fair, this number forms the leading feature of the programme. In it we see Miss Carney at her best in the part of Carmen, the queen of her gipsy tribe. The plot has already been detailed in these columns, so that it would be superfluous to report it, but one cannot help recording the fact that many improvements have been wrought in the sketch since its bow a few weeks back. It was then an instantaneous success which brought many congratulations to Miss Carney. She is to be further complimented on her "winner" as it is now presented. The part of the hog is splendidly characterised by one whose name is worthy of mention on the programme. Miss Carney is also running a singing competition here amongst local aspirants.

Another act reminiscent of showman life is vouchsafed by Chas. F. Best. He gets no end of fun out of his tricks and turnings. As a contortionist and equilibrist, too, he shines conspicuously, and his ludicrous "get-up" creates plenty of diversion amongst his audiences, thus helping to gain applause of the right kind. The Mackies stage an elaborate musical set, and work energetically and tunefully round an act which they entitle The Professor's Studio. Melodious combinations on the glasses, accompanied by the piano and one-string fiddle, and a William Tell overture skilfully performed on ordinary bottles depended in an electically-fitted frame by Mr. Mackie, constitutes a highly acceptable turn. Deputising on the night of our visit for Miss Hilda Jacobsen, that lady being indisposed through a severe cold, Miss Lucy Clark, a vocalist from Erin's Isle, in the rich brogue of her country sang "Rory O'Moore" and "Katie" in pleasing style. My Fancy, ever popular, is a picture in each of her dances; her every step seems to reflect each note of the melody to which she dances. My Fancy is everybody's fancy at Tottenham. Mons. Foot-gers, with his portable piano and stool, hits off his compatriot Fragson to a nicety, and gives a delightful burlesque impersonation of G. H. Elliot. Edie Gray and Coons are strong favourites with their fine vocalism, and Frank H. Fox, though early in the programme, is by no means the least appreciated turn of the evening. He has a catchy song in "What I want's a Girl." The Gothams are also on the bill. Ruffell's Bioscope rounds off the list in fitting fashion.

Mr. Archie Howells, the popular variety conductor, is now recovering from a bad attack of influenza, and will go away for a fortnight's recuperation before returning to his duties.

Mr. Wentworth Croke has secured the services of the Brixton principal boy, Miss Maud Esmond, to play a specially-written part, Dandini, in his next year's pantomime at Hammersmith.

The Sabbatarian cranks and faddists of Bath have failed to prevent the renewal of the licence to give cinematograph exhibitions in the local theatre on Sundays.

At Leeds, on the Market-ground, are Messrs. Jameson, Vanner, Turner, and Guthrie, with hoop-las and other games. At the Mearwood-road pitch are located T. Burgin's steam swings, A. Rhodes' throwing games, and J. W. Burgin's hoop-las and Emma sheets.

Since Thursday (the 10th) Miss Nell Emerald, the sprightly principal boy of the Bradford Theatre Royal pantomime, has been indisposed. Miss Nelly Black, the representative of Percy, however, has proved a most capable understudy, winning hearty marks of appreciation.

Vowles and Bryan make a welcome return to the Hippodrome, Lowestoft, this week in their scena Song and Story in a Garden. The Monckton appear in a humorous sketch A Woman's Curiosity, and Sergt. Bert Powell provides an illustrated sketch. The pictorial subjects, as usual, are distinctly good.

La Milo and Cruickshank will reopen at the London Pavilion on Monday next. Since she made her début at this house some four years ago, La Milo has visited practically every town of importance in the United Kingdom. She will present on Monday several classical studies for the first time in London.

Mr. Pete Murray, the manager of Sadler's Wells, whom we saw on Monday evening, was, we were glad to hear, not so seriously injured as was at first feared. At the Clerkenwell Police Court on Monday he was able to appear to prosecute his assailant, who, it was remembered, was being removed from the theatre when the assault took place. Mr. Murray gave it as his opinion that the blow was an inadvertent one, and the prisoner was merely bound over.

Before Mr. Egerton S. Grey the creditors met on Thursday under the failure of Jesse Sparrow, music-hall manager, of Love-walk, Camberwell, who returned his liabilities at £629 and his assets at £20. The debtor attributed his failure to living beyond his income, to depreciation in the value of certain securities, and to interest on borrowed money. There was no proposal before the meeting, and, the debtor consenting to an order of adjudication, the estate remained in the Official Receiver's hands.

At the last performance of The Babes in the Wood at Norwich Theatre, marking the conclusion of the tour of Mr. Arthur Carlton's company, the conductor was presented with several handsome presents, whilst he in turn distributed choice flowers to members of the company.

Messrs. A. R. Dean and Sons, of Birmingham, who are by far the largest manufacturers in the world of every description of seating, tip-up chairs, &c. suitable for theatres, music halls, picture palaces, skating rinks, town halls, hotels, and billiard saloons, last year executed 134 contracts for theatres, music halls, town halls, picture palaces, and skating rinks, and this year intend to leave last year's record far behind. Already they have in hand for immediate completion a number of furnishing, seating, and carpentering contracts too numerous to detail. Messrs. Dean and Sons make a special feature of fibrous plaster fronts and decorations for picture palaces and skating rinks, and are at all times pleased to prepare and submit designs and schemes of decorations free of all charge.

W. V. Garrod—Friday, Feb. 25.
Dorothy Marsdin—Friday, Feb. 25.

THE popular Miss Alexandra Dagmar, at the Hackney Empire next week, will be singing new songs interspersed with a collection of bright and breezy stories.

IN the suit of Mr. Charles Dare, music-hall proprietor, for money due to him from Mr. Daniel O'Connor, at the City of London Court on Thursday, the dispute, which only involved 7s. 6d., turned on the question whether artists or proprietors of troupes paid for band parts.

GUS DANIELS, a member of the profession, testified that it was the rule for artists to supply their own band parts if they were doing a single turn; but if they were performing with a troupe, then the "boss," or proprietor, of the troupe had to provide everything necessary for the show. That was if they were going on tour. Judge Lumley Smith gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, with costs.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS FOR BUSINESS MANAGERS.

How the Affairs of a Theatre can be most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.

By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.

Price, 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business-Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts" (The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.), we should say, is a very useful compilation for business-managers of our places of amusement. It is practical, exact, and analytical; it should stop leakages, and needs only good houses to keep it fully employed.—Sportsman, Feb. 8, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business-Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (3s 6d., The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.). The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

Skeleton schemes of book-keeping, &c., with explanations, showing how the affairs of a theatre can be efficiently managed by the adoption of systems of internal check in all departments. Contains also a draft agreement as between manager and artist.—Birmingham Daily Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts," by Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.), shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

1910—THE ERA ANNUAL—1910

PRESS OPINIONS.

DAILY TELEGRAPH, Feb. 2, 1910.

Once more "The Era" Annual justifies its claim to a place which is unique in the theatrical literature of the year. It contains a record of all the new plays and important revivals produced at the London theatres and in the provinces during the twelve months ending Nov. 30 last, arranged in two lists, one according to the theatres and the other alphabetically according to titles. Then another carefully compiled section gives the casts concerned in these productions. The principal sketches put on at the London and provincial variety houses are treated in the same thorough-going manner, and lists of the plays produced in Paris, Berlin, and New York complete a remarkably comprehensive survey of the doings of the theatrical year. It will be clearly seen, therefore, that to the "profession," the student, and the theatrical enthusiast "The Era" Annual is indispensable. But the casual reader is also skilfully catered for in the series of articles and stories contributed by many favourites of the stage, including Sir Herbert Tree, Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Dan Rolyat, Miss Louie Freear, and Miss Vesta Tilley. No conscientious theatre-goer can do without his "Era" Annual.

THE ROAD, February, 1910.

"The Era" Annual for 1910, illustrated (1s., The Era Office), always one of the best theatrical volumes of the year, this time excels itself. It gives a dramatic and musical calendar (each day recalling some event of importance in corresponding years); a number of short stories, each by some well-known actor or acting-manager; new plays and important revivals in London and suburban houses for 1909; the same in the provinces; an alphabetical list of plays, both London and provincial, for the whole year; the casts of new plays; plays produced in New York; new pieces at the Paris theatres; the same at Berlin; principal sketches at London variety houses, and casts thereof; separate lists of theatres and music halls in the United Kingdom; a theatrical, musical, and equestrian obituary; and, last and saddest, the deaths of the year illustrated, brought down to so late a date that it includes photos of Mr. E. H. Carpenter, who died on Dec. 23, and Mme. Meta Illing, who died on Dec. 26 last past. It is a veritable mine of information between two covers, and makes us wonder how so many valuable facts can be published at the low price charged for this. Our sincere congratulations to the editor and publisher thereof.

MORNING ADVERTISER, Jan. 20, 1910.

"The Era" Annual (price 1s.) is always welcome in stageland and among the theatre-goers. This year's issue maintains the reputation of the publication for amusing reading and useful information. A number of lively contributions from well-known actors and actresses fill nearly half its pages, and the rest of the book is devoted to particulars as to the new plays and revivals of the year 1909, a list of theatres in the United Kingdom, and a full obituary list of artists who, having "fretted their hour upon the stage," are heard no more. "The Era" Annual is an invaluable reference book to all concerned with the stage.

REFEREE, Jan. 30 1910.

About this time of year players and playgoers alike begin to look for the works of theatrical reference to which they are accustomed. Again we welcome that old-established useful shillingsworth, "The Era" Annual, or "Almanac" as it was wont to be called. As of yore, "The Era" Annual contains articles, anecdotes, and pictures galore, Sir Herbert Tree (with portrait) leading off with that new Shakespearean conundrum, "Where was the Old Globe Playhouse?" Among other well-known people contributing are Messrs. Fred Terry, Willie Clarkson, Rutland Barrington, J. H. Barnes, John Le Hay, Harry Nicholls, John Lawson, Charles Collette, Arthur Williams, Alfred Lester, Dan Rolyat, and Henry Neville. The lady story-tellers include Louie Freear, Vesta Tilley, and Miss Edith Cole. The lists of new plays in London and the provinces, Paris, New York, and Berlin, and the catalogue of new sketches (with casts thereof) are admirably compiled.

THE FINANCIER, Jan. 20, 1910.

"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual (5, Tavistock-street, Strand, 1s.), is a full and accurate record of the past year's productions and a calendar of theatrical events. It also contains a feature of wide public interest—namely, "Stories Told by Well-Known People." The story-tellers are, for the most part, the bright, particular stars of the stage, whose recollections, sketches and poetic interludes—these last by Messrs. J. H. Barnes, Charles Collette, and Tom Craven—are likely to command wide attention. The Rev. T. Horne, chaplain of the Showmen's Guild, also contributes an in memoriam tribute entitled "Faithful Unto the End." The opening contribution is by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, and deals with the problem concerning the site of the old Globe playhouse of Shakespeare's day.

FINANCIAL TIMES, Jan. 24, 1910.

"The Era" Annual, 1910, 1s., 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. As usual, this well-known annual of the theatrical profession contains a complete record of the plays and sketches produced during the year, in this country and abroad, a record, with photographs, of stage celebrities whose deaths have taken place during the period, directories of theatres and music-halls in the United Kingdom and a well-arranged dramatic and musical calendar. The ever-popular series of good stories told by well-known people, and illustrated by the author's photographs and autographs, is led off this time by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, with "Where was the old Globe Playhouse?" and the reputation this symposium has gained for humour and wit is thoroughly maintained. The Annual will make a strong appeal, not only to members of the profession, but to all theatre lovers.

EVENING NEWS, Feb. 9, 1910.

"The Era" Annual, issued at a shilling, has been complied with care and is replete with interest for all concerned in the personalities and the events of stageland. In addition to the diaries of theatrical productions, there are short stories and reminiscences by well-known actors and actresses. This section is led by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, who raises again the disputed site of the old Globe playhouse. The latter part of the book deals with the deaths of the year, with excellent photographs of the artists who have passed away.

SUNDAY TIMES, Jan. 23, 1910.

"The Era" Annual (1s.) continues to swell in bulk. In addition to the dramatic and musical calendar, are alphabetical lists and full casts of the new plays and important revivals produced in London, New York, Paris, and Berlin, and of new sketches in London and the provinces; there is a series of stories by well-known members of the profession with portraits and autographs of the authors. Sir Herbert Tree answers the question, "Where was the old Globe Playhouse?" and other contributors include Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. John Le Hay, Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Dan Rolyat, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Harry Nicholls, Mr. Will Clarkson, Miss Louie Freear, and Miss Vesta Tilley.

PELICAN, Jan. 27, 1910.

"The Era" Annual is full of interesting matter from cover to cover to all who are in any way connected with the theatrical profession. To familiar "Era" Almanack features are added stories by well-known members of the Profession, and there is a very interesting series of portraits of the many well-known actors and actresses who have died within the past twelve months, starting off with an admirable and characteristic picture of dear old Lal Brough. Mr. Pedgrift is to be congratulated upon a shillingsworth of characteristic excellency.

YORKSHIRE POST, Feb. 2, 1910.

"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual (The Era Office, 1s.) as usual contains stories and short articles by many well-known people of the stage, in addition to a list of London and provincial productions in 1909, and many other items of interest to the theatrical world.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE.

A balance-sheet of Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER's celebrated season at the Court Theatre would be a very valuable document bearing on the taste of the British public and the numbers of the minority to whom the kind of entertainment presented at the Court during Mr. BARKER's season appealed. The only fact known to us outsiders about the Court management was that it ceased to exist; and, as it is not usual for a manager to abandon an enterprise while it is profitable, the conclusion which was inevitably drawn was that the experiment was financially a failure. If we have been informed correctly, the only plays which "paid" were those of Mr. BERNARD SHAW. It seems, indeed, that "names" are necessary to attract the public to an artistic or intellectual theatre; and we are glad to see that Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN, for the programme of his Repertory Theatre which opens its season at the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday, has secured some very notable dramatists. A repertory which includes Messrs. J. M. BARRIE, GRANVILLE BARKER, HADDON CHAMBERS, GILBERT MURRAY, JOHN GALSWORTHY, LAURENCE HOUSMAN, HENRY JAMES, JOHN MASEFIELD, GEORGE MEREDITH, SOMERSET MAUGHAM, ARTHUR PINERO, and BERNARD SHAW needs no flourish of trumpets. With his accustomed business acumen, Mr. FROHMAN has decided to depend partly on what in the case of Italian Opera is called subscription. The following form is issued, to be filled up by persons who desire to support the enterprise and afford themselves delicate delight at the same time: "Please reserve me a box or —— seats in the stalls, balcony stalls, dress circle, or upper circle for the first or second (cross out one of these) performances of the first ten productions of the Repertory Theatre. I prefer to have Nos. ——. If these are unavailable, let me know how near that position you can place me." Then follow the prices for one private box for ten performances, one stall for ten, one balcony stall for ten, one dress circle for ten, and one upper circle for ten performances.

The only principle on which an art theatre can logically be based is, that if people really want a thing they will always be found to be willing to pay for it. There is a good deal, however, in the way in which payment is required; and the system of guarantee by which we are able to have a season of grand opera at Covent Garden is one equally applicable to an "art for art" theatre. As we have often pointed out, the financial success or failure of a play simply shows how many people were willing to pay money to see it. It does not at all follow that if, by the aid of endowment, the entertainment had been offered to them gratis the attendances would have been any larger. Neither the atmosphere of the average playhouse nor the effect of three hours' confinement in a more or less comfortable seat are sufficiently agreeable to induce an individual to voluntarily come from his happy home to be "bored," even without charge. Pushed to its logical conclusion, the principle of the endowed theatre might lead to paid audiences; a commencement has already been made on the Continent in the shape of the claque.

The system on which the Repertory Theatre bill has been arranged also resembles that adopted at Covent Garden. Next week there will be two performances of Mr. JOHN GALSWORTHY's new play Justice, then the production of Mr. BERNARD SHAW's Misalliance, then two more performances of Justice—afternoon and evening—two of Misalliance, and one of Justice. Thus admirers of the advanced school of drama will be able to go to the Duke of York's twice next week, and to see two new plays—a quite sufficient supply when the intellectual strain of listening to an "up-to-date" drama is taken into consideration.

It is a great advantage to the enterprise that it is in the hands of a manager as well known and as substantial as Mr. FROHMAN. So sudden is the closure in the case of theatrical failure that many would hesitate to put down £30 in a lump sum for a private box for even ten performances under an unknown entrepreneur; but Mr. FROHMAN's name is sufficient guarantee that the experiment will have a fair chance and be carried through quand même.

It is, indeed, on the prestige and stability of such an enterprise that most depends. If once a Repertory Theatre of the sort Mr. FROHMAN projects becomes an established and permanent fact, it will be a rallying-point for all that is original, intelligent, and artistic. The rewards of the artist are not only pecuniary rewards. "You and I are here for one thing," said DISRAELI to JOHN BRIGHT in the House of Commons: "we are here for fame." Without in any way belittling either the interesting productions of the Stage Society or those of Mr. BARKER at the distant temple of the drama in Sloane Square, we may say that to have a play produced at the Duke of York's under Mr. FROHMAN's auspices would be a more famous thing than a production by a private society or under a junior management. Several of the authors whom Mr. FROHMAN has enlisted are world-famous; and a success at the Repertory Theatre would be a crown of laurel which would be competed for eagerly by aspiring dramatists seeking the bubble reputation and desperately desirous of distinction. And so, the demand for intellectual plays increasing with the quality of the supply, and the supply responding in its turn to the demand, we may hope to get as far towards a National Theatre as we are likely to go for some time to come.

"THE GREEN HELMET."

A Play in One Act, by W. B. Yeats, Produced at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, on Thursday, Feb. 10.

Cuchulain ..... MR. J. M. KERRIGAN
Conal ..... MR. ARTHUR SINCLAIR
Laegerie ..... MR. FRED O'DONOVAN
Emer ..... MISS SARA ALLGOOD
Conal's Wife ..... MISS MAIRE O'NEILL
Laegerie's Wife ..... MISS ETHNE MAGEE
Red Man ..... MR. AMBROSE POWER
Laeg ..... MR. SYDNEY J. MORGAN

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The above play is founded on the same author's work The Golden Helmet, only the dialogue of this has been written in ballad metre. The piece was capitally staged, and the audience highly appreciated the author's excellent work. The piece deals with the valiant heroes of the old Irish legends. Conal and Laegerie have forfeited their lives to a mysterious being known as the Red Man, whose head they had cut off a year before, as a sequel to a drunken bet. When the piece opens Conal and Laegerie are discovered awaiting the arrival of the Red Man to claim his due. Cuchulain enters their abode, and to him they tell the strange story. When the Red Man arrives he and Cuchulain have some hot words, and the mysterious one goes away, leaving his green helmet behind for the best man of the trio to secure. A struggle for its possession ensues, in which the followers and the wives of each of the heroes take part. Finally, the Red Man returns, renounces his claim for blood, and places the helmet, which appears to possess some magic powers for good, upon the head of Cuchulain.

In the characters of Cuchulain, Conal, and Laegerie, Mr. J. M. Kerrigan, Mr. Arthur Sinclair, and Mr. Fred O'Donovan acquitted themselves cleverly. Miss Sara Allgood as Emer, wife of Cuchulain, displayed considerable ability; Miss Maire O'Neill and Miss Ethne Magee, as the wives of the other two heroes, were exceedingly good. Mr. Ambrose Power enacted the part of Red Man admirably; and Mr. Sydney J. Morgan as Laeg, Cuchulain's charioteer, did very well.

At the close Mr. Yeats was called before the curtain, and, in response to a very cordial reception, said that he had long wished to put into ballad metre some of the old heroic legends of Ireland, and he was glad to know that his efforts on that occasion had been appreciated.

"JANE SHORE" REVIVED.

On Saturday, Feb. 12, at the Theatre Royal, South Shields, Mr. Allan Wilkie and his powerful Shakespearean répertoire and classical comedy company revived the great historical play Jane Shore to a large audience with the most complete success. Mr. Allan Wilkie made a vigorous and thoroughly repulsive Duke of Gloucester; Mr. Alexander Marsh submitted a refined and powerful delineation of William Shore; Mr. Eugene Wellesley was good as King Edward IV.; Mr. Sinclair Neill, Mr. Stanley Vine, Mr. Francis Roberts, and Mr. John Paley were all well cast as Lord Hastings, Sir Richard Ratcliffe, Sir William Catesby, and Joelbert, the Court Chamberlain. Mr. Frank Fay was quaint as Malbouche, a jester; Miss Carrie Baillie gave an admirable and charming portrayal of Jane Shore; and Queen Elizabeth Woodville was cleverly and powerfully depicted by Mrs. Allan Wilkie. The Lady Wargrave of Miss Annie Jones was good; Mr. Herbert Mansfield was a manly John Milverton. The comedy element was well sustained by Mr. Houston Meharry as Peter Buckram, Mr. Arthur Keane as Simon Muckleburg, and Miss Hilda Plowright as Drusilla. The scenery, mounting, and costumes were excellent.

GOOD FRIDAY concerts at the Crystal Palace bear a high reputation, and this year will prove no exception. Two sacred concerts will be held there on Good Friday. In the afternoon, at 3.30 Rossini's "Stabat Mater" will be sung, the artists including Miss Agnes Nicholls, Madame Edna Thornton, Madame Clara Butt, Mr. Charles Saunders, Mr. Kennerley Rumford, and Sir Charles Santley. There will also be a miscellaneous second part, and the London Symphony Orchestra will assist. For the evening concert, Miss Ethel Wood and Mr. Herbert Heyner will sing, and the full band of the Coldstream Guards will play, conducted by Dr. J. Mackenzie Rogan. Mr. Fred Holloway will be at the organ for both concerts, and Mr. A. Fox at the piano. The whole of the arrangements will be under the supervision of Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock, the musical-director of the Palace.

MESSRS. KIMBERLEY, GREEN, AND HINTON'S company is at the Ashington Miners' Theatre in Was She to Blame? Mr. F. G. Kimberley as William Clark is excellent; Mr. Henry Rutland's impersonation of the Vicar of Beechwood is most interesting; Mr. Geo. Keene as Captain George Courtney is good; Mr. Geo. Langden does ample justice to the part of Frank Rosselle; Miss Jennie Hastings as Lillian Norman is a pleasing heroine; Miss Ellen Beverley as Mary Norman, the Vicar's wife, does well; Mr. Kenneth Black, jun., as Timothy Swales; and Miss Nita Owen as Sarah Swales supply the comedy. Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, the authoress, gives a particularly fine performance of the part of Mrs. Kate Rossells.

STAGE SOCIETY MATINEE.

On Monday Afternoon, Feb. 14, at the Shaftesbury Theatre, a New Play, in Three Acts, by Lady Bell, entitled

"THE WAY THE MONEY GOES."

Mrs. Riggs ..... MISS AGNES HILL
Mrs. Holroyd ..... MISS HELEN HAYE
Mrs. Tarlton ..... MISS MAY CONGDON

Tom Tarlton ..... MR. ARTHUR CURTIS
Jim Bates ..... MR. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Yock Denny ..... MR. REGINALD DANE
A County Court Bailiff ..... MR. HOLLIDAY ATTLAY
Newspaper Boy ..... MR. WILLIAM H. BROWN

Lady Bell's play is a "slice out of life," a most interesting and touching picture of the proletariat in the factory districts. In addition to drawing attention to the two great evils of betting and dealing with tallymen, Lady Bell has written a drama of humble life which goes to the heart, and her personages are real, human, and well-observed. John Holroyd and his wife are a model couple. John is an honest, industrious, thrifty fellow, with a kind heart, somewhat concealed by his theories of marital superiority. His wife has wanted to start a small shop; but John has told her that this is impossible, at the same time starting secretly to save money for the purpose. Mrs. Holroyd feels the monotony of her life, and is sorely tempted to do as other wives do. One of her neighbours, Mrs. Tarlton, joins with her husband in betting. Another, Mrs. Riggs, buys of a nawker at the door, on the principle of "payment by instalments." There is a very natural and simple scene, in which Mrs. Holroyd, who has set her heart on a showy looking-glass offered by the tallyman, is hurried by him into paying an instalment of one shilling on the article, which subsequently becomes a "white elephant," and has to be pawned to conceal it from the stern eye of her husband. Beginning with a small bet in imitation of her neighbours, Mrs. Holroyd goes from bad to worse, until at last she finds herself in debt for £28 7s., almost the amount of the capital required for the shop. Anxiety makes her ill, and she can hardly bear John's kindness when he announces to her that he can let her have the cash for her little enterprise. A County Court Bailiff serves a summons on John for his wife's debt, and he is terribly agitated and enraged by the shock. At first he is obdurate; but when his employer begs him to give his wife another chance, he consents to do so, and the curtain descends on a hopeful reconciliation. There is a serio-comic scene when the betting couple take their furniture to the pawnshop in order to put the proceeds on a horse, and the domestic details and the local colour are both admirably supplied.

The prominent performance was Mr. H. Nye Chart's John Holroyd. Mr. Chart gave a strong, strenuous, and well-considered impersonation of a self-respecting, affectionate, but slightly tyrannical working-man, and his expression of grief and despair at the news that his wife is a gambler and a debtor was very intense and powerful. A creation touching by its simplicity and truth was Miss Helen Haye's Mrs. Holroyd, which was absolutely natural and real; and a clever character-sketch of a commonplace prolétaire was supplied by Miss Agnes Hill as Mrs. Riggs. Mr. Leonard Calvert was excellent as the polite, but pushing betting agent, Slark; and Mr. Douglas Gordon gave a neat rendering of the rôle of the young employer, Vincent. Mr. Ernest Cosham's Hawker was a quaint bit of realistic comedy; and Mr. Arthur Curtis was effective as the silly gambler, Tom Tarlton, Miss May Congdon being very vivacious as Mrs. Tarlton. Miss Mabel Adair, Miss Estelle Stead, Miss L. M. Revell, and Miss Elly Malyon gave distinctive and intelligent embodiments of the other wives; and Mr. Holliday Atlay was commendable as Jim Bates and the bailiff, minor characters being conscientiously rendered by Miss Evelyn Kirkby, Master Guy Helbrough, Miss May Kendal, and Miss Helen Boucher. A special word of praise must be spared to Mr. Alfred Harding for his stolid, ponderous policeman; and Mr. Reginald Dane as Yock Denny and Mr. William H. Brown as a Newspaper Boy were quite satisfactory. The Way the Money Goes, which was ably produced by Mr. E. Harcourt Williams, was preceded by a new play, in one act, by Fred D. Barker, entitled

"A LIONESS AND HER WHELP."

Mr. Smith ..... MR. PHILIP KNOX
Mrs. Smith ..... MISS ESMÉ HUBBARD
Mrs. Kent ..... MISS FLORENCE LLOYD
Parker ..... MISS EVELYN MARTHESE
Mr. Kent ..... MR. REGINALD DANE

This proved to be a variation of the well-known saying that one should never interfere between man and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are discussing economics when a "flighty" friend, Mrs. Kent, comes to tell them that she can no longer put up with the deceit and extravagance of her husband, who has married her for her money. Smith readily agrees to protect her against him. Kent is heard at the door, and Mrs. Kent seeks refuge in an adjoining apartment. Smith tells Kent bluntly that he shall not see Mrs. Kent, and adds an uncomplimentary estimate of the "waster's" character, ending by ordering him off the premises, when Mrs. Kent comes in, takes her husband's arm pityingly, tells the Smiths that her acquaintance with them must cease, and goes out, leaving the others in utter astonishment. Miss Florence Lloyd gave a most amusing impersonation of a silly, feather-headed, chattering woman; Mr. Reginald Dane's Mr. Kent was admirably made-up and dressed, and he acted with easy finish; and Mr. Philip Knox and Miss Esmé Hubbard gave sound and clever embodiments of the two Smiths. The piece was carefully produced by Mr. A. E. Drinkwater.

PANTOMIME once more holds sway at the Crown Theatre, Eccles, and Mr. J. Gar Kiddie's company in The Babes in the Wood provides a capital entertainment. Robin Hood has a capable representative in Miss Marion Scott; Miss Mary Dene as Maid Morion shines conspicuously by her dainty treatment of the part, her songs and dances being redemanded. Little John and Allan A'Dale are a very handsome pair in the hands of Miss Kathleen Goggin and Miss May Barraclough; Miss Emmie Mappin as Sylvania, the good fairy, is responsible for charming singing; Mr. Edwin Webb as Infernalito proves himself the possessor of a tuneful and powerful voice; Mr. Brinsley Smith, an excellent humorist, as the Baron, is ably assisted by Mr. Harry Rousby as Araminta and Mr. Oliver Conroy as Soft Sammy. Messrs. Gee and Atkins as the Robbers are an amusing couple; and Millie and Lilly as the Babes delight everybody by their unaffected and natural acting and singing.

A GRAND concert will be given at the Crystal Palace on Wednesday evening next, by the Upper Norwood Prize Band. A good programme has been arranged. The Upper Norwood Prize Band Quartette Party and selections will be given by the band itself, conducted by Mr. W. W. Grant.

Tommy ..... MISS MARIE LOHR

M. Paul Gavault's comedy, La Petite Chocolatière, which was produced at the Renaissance Theatre, Paris, on Oct. 23 last year with Miss Marthe Regnier in the leading female part, bears adaptation well, and Mr. Michael Morton has done his work neatly and judiciously. Though some alterations may have been made, the general idea and the main incidents are identical with those of the play as described by our French correspondent after the Paris production of M. Gavault's piece. Tantalizing Tommy is a bright, lively, and amusing play, with plenty of innocent diversion in it, and it receives at the Playhouse the admirable representation which is indispensable to its success. The heroine is a pretty and bewitching young lady, who is used to having her own way in everything, is bored to death by the adoration she receives from everybody, and falls in love with the first man who scolds and bullies her. This revival of the old Taming of the Shrew motive is combined with some droll incidents, in which James Cottenham, a rather opinionated clerk in the Colonial Office, figures amusingly. The first scene is a room in a pretty country cottage. Cottenham and his friend Killick, an artist, are preparing for bed, when Tommy's motor-car breaks down outside, and she comes in to rest while it is being mended. Killick, knowing that Tommy is the only daughter of a very rich tea merchant named Pepper, manages, on pretence of repairing the tyre, to injure the others, and make it impossible for her to leave that night. She makes herself very much at home, and occupies Cottenham's bedroom, he having to pass the night on a chair. Next morning, Cottenham's prospective father-in-law, and official superior, Eustace Tathem, arrives on a long-promised visit with his daughter Elsie, a vapid and silly young person, who faints on the least excuse. Meeting Tommy, Tathem takes her for Cottenham's mistress, and indignantly departs, after breaking off the engagement between the Civil Service clerk and Elsie. Cottenham's dislike for Tommy increases with his annoyance, until, at the end of the second act, he bursts out into a violent denunciation of her egoism and wilfulness.

In the third act, Cottenham is in his room at the Colonial Office. By explaining to Tathem in a lengthy document the presence of Tommy at the cottage, he has partially reinstated himself in Tathem's good graces; but his troubles recommence when Tommy, who is now deeply in love with him, calls at the office. Convinced by the artful diplomacy of Killick that "Jimmy" adores her, and is only concealing his passion for fear of being taken for a fortune-hunter, she encourages him in every way, until at last, after a glass of brandy, he goes so far as to swear friendship with her, and kiss her hand. But Tommy's wilfulness spoils all. Cottenham's telephone is "rung up" in his absence, and Tommy answers the Chief of the Department in such impertinent style that Cottenham is called down to the Chief's room, and ordered to send in his resignation. He does so, denouncing Tommy even more bitterly than before. Tathem now casts him off for ever as a son-in-law, but Cottenham has at last fallen in love with Tommy.

In the last act, which takes place at a studio hired by Killick to paint the portrait of the rich tea-dealer—who is so struck by the result that he decides to place a copy of the picture on each packet of his tea—Tommy appears dressed in a nun-like costume, and assumes an air of pious resignation. Killick fancies that he has a chance of winning the heiress, but she and Cottenham quickly come to an understanding, and the usual embrace ends the comedy.

The selection of such a pretty and charming actress as Miss Marie Löhr for the part of Tommy went a great way towards securing the success of the play, and she made the self-willed heiress a very vivacious and captivating personage. Her beauty was embellished by some exquisite costumes, and she acted throughout with delightful animation, archness, and delicacy. Mr. Cyril Maude as the slightly stiff and unimpressionable Cottenham gave a most humorous and natural performance, every detail being carefully studied, and the quaint peculiarities of the personage being indicated with great sharpness and skill. The scenes between Mr. Maude and Miss Löhr evoked hearty laughter, and the piece was practically a "two-part" one. Able support was rendered by Mr. Kenneth Douglas, who, as the ingenious and diplomatic artist, Harry Killick, acted with his usual ease, firmness, and activity. Mr. Fred Lewis gave a solid, unctuous, and very agreeable impersonation of Thomas H. Pepper, and Mr. John Beauchamp was sharp, incisive, and active as the uncompromising Tathem. The part of Tommy's aristocratic fiancé, Lord Enderby, was played very neatly and naturally by Mr. Robert Averell, and Mr. John Harwood contributed a droll sketch of comic character as the chauffeur Jennings. Mr. M. Wetherell and Mr. A. G. Onslow being efficient as Jack Mason and Frank Ricketts, and Mr. C. B. Keston doing useful work as Simpson. Miss Sybil Ruskin gave an intelligent impersonation of the indefinite Miss Tathem, and Miss Maidie Hope showed genuine comic power as the amorous and lackadaisical servant Bertha, whose account of her nocturnal adventure with the chauffeur Miss Hope delivered with real humour and originality. Miss Eva Rowland was commendable as the maid. The piece was admirably dressed and mounted. Mr. Bruce Smith's scenery being excellent, and it was received by a fashionable audience with great hilarity and every expression of keen enjoyment.

"A DESTROYER OF MEN" is finely portrayed at the Marina, Lowestoft, this week by a highly-talented company. The staging, mounting, and dressing adds much to the general success. Chief honours undoubtedly fall to Miss Hilda Beverley (in the title-rôle), who provides a rich dramatic treat.

MR. STEPHEN PRITT'S répertoire company is at the Bilston Royal and Hippodrome. Almost His Bride was presented on Monday. Mr. Stephen Pritt was highly successful as Simon Simpson, and Miss Nellie Hook made an entertaining Emma Baxter. Mr. Arthur F. Dudley was good as Philip Rowland; Miss Adela Lidden deserves praise for an artistic portrayal of Mrs. Gilcrist. The pair of scheming adventurers, Jasper and Myra Thorne, were admirably depicted by Mr. R. F. Stacey and Miss Lily Prescott. A Woman's Passion and His Wife No Longer are also billed.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"GABRIEL GRANT, GAMBLER."

Play, in Three Acts, by Burford Delannoy, Produced at the Shakespeare, Clapham, on Monday, Feb. 14.

Gordon Rochstetter ..... MR. HERBERT TERRY
Elsie Rochstetter ..... MISS JESSIE DANVERS
Gabriel Grant ..... MR. ERNEST K. NELSON
Louise Cerise ..... MISS MARY RABY
Mary O'Connor ..... MISS LULU BOWES
Matilda ..... MISS BEATRICE BRIDE
Harvey ..... MR. FRANK CUNARD
Watson Ward ..... MR. VICTOR HUNTLEY
Susan ..... MISS CHRISTINE DESCHAMPS
Martin ..... MR. PHILIP DENT
Detective Wilson ..... MR. LIONEL YATES

Sensation is conspicuous by its absence in Gabriel Grant—Gambler, which was produced at the Shakespeare on Monday. The author has succeeded in furnishing only a thin thread of story, which clearly lacks the links of low comedy and excitement which usually connect the incidents of melodrama. As it was, the intervals of changing the scenes ordinarily filled in by the comic men before a front cloth were occupied on Monday by a dreary repetition, in a dim light, of music chords. With a large infusion of genuine comedy, and an added thrill or two, the piece could be made workable in the provincial theatres. There is one scene of singular dramatic strength early in the piece, when Gabriel Grant, gambler, visits Gordon Rochstetter, millionaire, with the object of blackmail. Grant recognises in him a fellow-prisoner at Dartmoor some twelve years before, both being convicted of forgery. Grant calls upon Rochstetter, who has made his millions in Australia, with the view of obtaining hush money; but is so attracted by the innocence of the millionaire's reputed daughter that he resolves to abandon his nefarious project. As the millionaire will not permit him to go until he has revealed his business, Grant's good resolution vanishes, and he demands a loan of some hundreds of pounds, a request to which Rochstetter, fearful of the stigma that would attach to Elsie, accedes.

An elaborate plan is then put into operation by Grant. Despite the fact that he has a wife already in Mme. Cerise, a West End milliner, on whose earnings he has lived for many years, Grant determines to marry Elsie. He packs his wife off to her beloved Paris, giving out that he himself is going to Australia. Meanwhile, he has managed to win at the gaming tables, and much to Rochstetter's astonishment, repays the borrowed money, with the object of gaining his confidence. Under threat of exposure Grant insists on Rochstetter acknowledging him as a friend, and pays marked attention to Elsie. Grant's money runs short, and he determines to make his proposal at once; but his plans are upset by the appearance of Madame, suddenly returned from Paris. Grant makes a bold move by declaring that the marriage between Louise and himself was a mock one, and the former départs bent on revenge. Rejected by Elsie, Grant brings in detectives to arrest Rochstetter as an escaped convict, but that gentleman coolly informs the officers that he is not Grant's gaol companion, but his cousin, who bore a strong resemblance to Elsie's father, long since dead. Grant's discomfiture is completed by the appearance of his wife, who denounces him, and being also "wanted" by the police on another charge, is taken into custody, while Rochstetter and Elsie, who are devoted to each other, are affianced.

The company producing the piece is headed by Mr. Herbert E. Terry, who made the most of his none too profuse opportunities as Rochstetter. He acted with agreeable lightness of touch, and garnished his lines, in spite of a few lapses of memory, with elocutionary graces that were much admired. In a stronger part in the same line Mr. Terry would undoubtedly be very interesting. As the crafty and unscrupulous Gabriel Grant Mr. Ernest K. Nelson acted and spoke with a deliberation that did not serve to lighten an already heavy part. He was very effective, however, in the flashes of humour which the rôle possesses, and his realisation of the villain was on strict melodramatic lines. The experience which Miss Mary Raby has enjoyed enabled her to invest the modiste, Mme. Cerise, with dramatic effect, and the French accent was kept up with quite praiseworthy fidelity. Miss Jessie Danvers thoroughly suggested the sweet and sincere nature of Elsie Rochstetter, her display of affection towards the man she believes to be her father being quite natural. Miss Christine Deschamps is to be credited with a cleverly vivacious performance as the maid Susan; and an equally bright rendering was that of Miss Lulu Bowes as Mme. Cerise's Irish assistant. Miss Beatrice Bride made quite an oddity of Matilda, a domestic drudge, whose humour, however, in stepping into a pail and getting entangled with ribbons and laces, was too obviously intentional to provoke much laughter. Mr. Philip Dent was a characteristic manservant; and the other parts were efficiently sustained.

The principal piece was followed by a new one-act play, by Burford Delannoy, with music composed by Harold Samuel, entitled

"THE IDOL'S EYES."

Roger Bellingham ..... MR. COURTICE POUNDS
Dr. Richard Grane ..... MR. SAM WALSH
Mrs. Grane ..... MISS MYRTIL BLADES
Mrs. Jenkins ..... MISS B. GASTON-MURRAY
Flash Jim ..... MR. DAVID QUINN
Moll ..... MISS MARY FORBES

Except for the means it affords of introducing the famous singer and comedian, Mr. Courtice Pounds, the above piece is not particularly entertaining. It tells the story of an Indian idol, which boasts two priceless rubies for eyes. An account of the idol, published in a magazine, attracts the cupidity of a burglar, who gets his lady accomplice to call Roger Bellingham, a young professional singer, on the telephone, and get permission late at night to visit his flat in order to view the curiosity. To avoid the attention of the other inmates of the house Bellingham lets the lady in by the window, but she is quickly followed by a burglar, who chloroforms him, and departs with the prize, which, however, does not contain the coveted jewels, as Bellingham has substituted for the idol's eyes a couple of pieces of red glass. Mr. Courtice Pounds played in his own cheery fashion as the young singer, and proved that the quality of his voice is as delicious as ever. His singing of "O mistress mine" was enthusiastically applauded. Miss Myrtil Blades joined him effectively in a duet with a waltz refrain that was much enjoyed. Mr. Sam Walsh as an elderly doctor and Mr. David Quinn as a burglar did efficient work in minor parts.

The programme also includes Charles, His Friend, which was produced some years ago at the Palace, Shaftesbury-avenue, and in which Mr. Pounds also appears. It proved the best item of the evening, revealing to the full Mr. Pounds' versatility as a comedian, and giving opportunity of hearing him in those snatches of melody in which he excels, as well as a most artistic rendering of Clay's enchanting ballad, "I'll sing thee songs of Araby." Miss Blanche Gaston-Murray played the rich young widow with irresistible gaiety; and Mr. Sam Walsh acted both the lover and the rustic to perfection, Miss Sheridan making a prepossessing maid.

"HOME, SWEET HOME," excellently interpreted by Mr. Frank Lindo's company, is proving a popular attraction at the Empire and Theatre Royal, Hyde. The dominating feature of the performance is the clever acting of Mr. Frank Lindo as Stephen Armitage; he has an engaging personality which greatly enhances the interest in the character. Miss Marion Wakeford's representation of the heroine Joan merits equal commendation.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

We draw our readers' special attention to Mr. Harry Tate's strong and moving appeal on behalf of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, which we print in another column. Mr. Tate has been elected president of this chief music-hall charity for the year, and he naturally desires to signalise his term of office by creating a record—a most worthy ambition.

It is to be sincerely hoped that the subscriptions announced on Sunday evening will equal the magnificent sum collected at the first dinner in aid of the Fund, two years ago. The growth of the profession is great; the claims on its bounty are yearly increasing; and the more generous the reply to Mr. Tate's petition on behalf of the poor and needy, the greater the honour done to the profession, of which he is a conspicuous ornament.

Mr. Walter De Frece is responsible for the authoritative statement that the Moss' Empires, Ltd., has been notified that the working arrangement between the De Frece Circuit and the Moss' Empires will cease on March 31 next. Immediately after that date changes will arise in regard to certain important variety combinations.

Miss Winifred Emery, for whom there is no part in Tantalising Tommy, at the Playhouse, will make her first appearance in variety at the Hippodrome on Monday, in a new, short comedy, The Dressing Room. This merry play, especially written for the engagement by Mr. Jas. Bernard Fagan, will show Miss Emery as the fascinating Peg Woffington, who has been a favourite character with our leading actresses ever since Charles Reade and Tom Taylor wrote Masks and Faces.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who has arranged for a variety season of three months in the States under the management of Mr. Percy G. Williams, made her début on Monday in a New York music hall in a tabloid Russian melodrama from the pen of Henry Hamilton, entitled Expiation. When this powerful playlet was produced at His Majesty's Theatre in front of Beethoven, with Mrs. Pat as Sonja—the part she is playing in New York—it was called A Russian Tragedy, and is adapted from the German of Adolph Glass. In London she was supported by Mr. Henry Ainley and Mr. Edward Sass.

Mr. George Leyton, who has been responsible for so many stirring descriptive scenas, is this week presenting at the Oxford, where he is such an immense favourite, The Wreck of the Birkenhead. The verses describe the appalling nature of the disaster and the stoical bravery and coolness displayed by the soldiers and sailors at the time of the foundering of the famous troopship. The melody has a capital swing, and Mr. Leyton's powerful voice and fine sense of dramatic fitness enable him to score a most impressive effect, which is much enhanced by the final scene which so vividly illustrates the theme of the song-scena.

The special matinée for the benefit of the Lord Mayor's Fund for the sufferers from the floods in France takes place at the Alhambra on Tuesday afternoon next, when Mr. Alfred Moul will present an attractive programme, to which many prominent artists have promised to contribute.

Miss Annie Hughes, who is now touring in the title-rôle of The Chorus Lady, has been secured by the Syndicate, and will make her début on the variety stage at the Chelsea Palace on May 23 in an original sketch, especially written for her. It is entitled The Belle of the Washtub, and in that character she should have every opportunity for exhibiting her gifts of comedy and pathos, which we remember so well in Sweet Nancy and A Country Mouse.

John Lawson gave the first provincial production of The Miracle to overflowing houses at the Palace, Manchester, on Monday. On Tuesday night the performance was witnessed by the Rev. Valentine and the Rev. Levin, representatives of the leading Manchester Synagogues. Both gentlemen, after the performance, interviewed Mr. Lawson, and expressed the greatest satisfaction at the work, stating that there was not one word to give offence. On Thursday night the performance was witnessed by the Reverend Simon, of the Hightown Synagogue.

Mrs. John Lawson will produce on March 28 a new episode from the pen of Beddow Scott, a young Australian journalist, whose reviews and novels are well known in the Antipodes; but this is his initial production in England. The title of the new sketch is A Woman of Yesterday, and it is founded upon a novel of Mr. Scott's bearing the same title. Mr. Scott's reviews and novels are well known in Australia.

"Hullo! London," by Mr. George Grossmith, jun., is timed for production at the Empire at ten o'clock this evening. Full rehearsals, with scenery painted by McCleery, are now in progress, and everything should be in excellent order for the opening night. The revue will be varied from day to day to keep it abreast of events. Mr. Will Gane, a popular favourite in the provinces, has been engaged, and will make his first West-End appearance in this revue, and Miss Millie Legarde and Mr. J. F. McArdle are provided with good opportunities.

A particularly interesting sketch will be produced by Mr. Alfred Butt at the Palace Theatre on Monday. This is a comedy in one act, I Dine With My Mother, adapted from the French by Mr. Michael Morton, and deals with an episode in the life of the famous singer, Sophie Arnould. The cast includes Mr. Norman Trevor, Mr. Arthur Wontner, Mr. Frank Woolfe, Miss Jean Harkness, and Miss Olga Humphrey, who will sustain the part of Sophie Arnould. The scene is laid in Sophie Arnould's Boudoir at her house in Paris, and the date is 1765.

Miss Vesta Tilley appeared on Thursday, the 10th, at the Chelsea Town Hall, and sang before an audience of four or five thousand of His Majesty's soldiers. Needless to say, her popular song "Jolly good luck to the girl who loves a soldier" was received with cheers which threatened to raise the roof. As a memento of the occasion, Miss Tilley was presented during her performance at the Palace Theatre on Saturday evening with two magnificent stands of flowers with the following note:—"A few flowers for Tommy's Idol. With the compliment and grateful thanks of all ranks of the Royal Engineers of the 2nd London Division.—Fred R. Pullingford, Lieut. Feb. 12, 1910."

A petition has been presented to H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught praying for a charter to be granted for a new Lodge to be called "The Proscenium," for members of the vaudeville and dramatic professions. The petition having been granted, the new Lodge will be consecrated on Tuesday, March 1, by Sir Edward Letchworth, F.S.A., grand secretary, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. The officers designate are: Albert Le Fre, W.M.; Henry Coutts, I.P.M.; W. H. Atlas, S.W.; Frank Hardie, J.W.; Woolfe S. Lyon, treasurer; C. J. Doughty, secretary; Harry Bawn, D.C.; Monte Bayly, S.D.; Andie Caine, J.D.; F. H. Padgrift, I.G.; Ernie Warsaw, organist; and Dan Lipton, John Grant, Harry C. Phillips, and Ben Whitely, stewards.

In our report of the funeral of the late Mr. Thomas Barrasford at Brighton, among those who sent floral tributes omission was made in respect of that from the staff of the Royal Hippodrome, Liverpool, one of the Barrasford houses.

Mrs. Barrasford desires to return her sincere thanks for the many expressions of condolence extended to her in her recent bereavement. Though it is impossible to acknowledge them individually, she has been greatly touched and gratified by the hundreds of letters and telegrams that have reached her from all parts of England, from the Continent, and from America as well, with their messages of sympathy to herself and their tributes of respect and regard to the personal character and professional work of her late husband.

Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son are making extensive additions to their Winter Gardens premises at Morecambe. The firm are laying out gardens adjoining the main building, and al fresco diversions will be provided here during the ensuing season.

There are two important events in Birmingham next Tuesday. In the afternoon Mr. George Robey's international football team will meet the Aston Villa Cup team in aid of the Birmingham Football Club, which is reported to be in a very bad way financially; and in the evening Mr. Albert Bushell will take a well-deserved benefit at the Gaiety.

At the Dewsbury Brewster sessions recently considerable interest was taken in the application by Mr. Claude Shayler, manager of the local Empire Palace, for a full licence. Mr. C. L. W. Nicholson, for the applicant, urged that the application this year was on a different basis, inasmuch as the building was now complete, and one of the finest in Yorkshire.

Mr. H. R. Holcombe, lay assistant to the united Congregational Church, represented the opposition, and the magistrates' clerk announced that he had received a large number of petitions against the application from various churches, temperance societies, religious bodies, and ministers. The application was rejected.

In connection with the Birmingham Theatrical Managers' Billiard Handicap, the semi-final tie was played at the Woolpack Hotel on Tuesday, when Mr. Lester Collingwood (receives 120) met Mr. Philip Rodway (owes 120). Mr. Rodway was giving a lot away, and despite his brilliant play—he making breaks of 33, 22, and 20—he could not reach Mr. Collingwood, who eventually won by 85.

Mr. Oswald Stoll has secured Mr. Samuel Lloyd (recently of the Pavilion, Glasgow) as one of his managers, and allotted him to the fine theatre the Glasgow Coliseum, one of the largest and best-equipped variety halls on the Moss-Stoll circuit. Mr. Lloyd, quite recovered from his recent illness, has been recruiting for a short time at Brighton, and entered on his new duties on Monday last.

Mr. Frank C. Bostock's Jungle and Arena, from Manchester, enter into possession of the Zoo Rink, Glasgow, this week, and the hum of the whirling wheels gives place to another and more varied concourse of "sweet" sounds.

On Sunday last three train-loads of animals reached Glasgow, and their delivery at the Zoo raised excitement to fever-heat, especially amongst the juvenile population, one boy, in his eagerness to see the animals, getting so near that his face and head were badly mauled by a lioness, and he had to be taken at once to the Infirmary. A private view of the Jungle and Arena took place on Friday, and the public opening is today (Saturday).

Considerable interest is being taken in the special performance at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Birmingham, next Wednesday, the occasion being the benefit of Miss Dorothy Ward, the popular principal boy. Miss Ward is a Birmingham lady, and her success in the present pantomime has been most striking. Among those who have promised to augment the programme are Mr. George Robey and Mr. Barry Lupino, of the Theatre Royal, and several vaudeville stars, who will appear at the Birmingham halls next week.

At the Hippodrome, Accrington, on Monday evening Miss Etty Waldron, the highly-popular Mary in Mr. William Watson's pantomime Robinson Crusoe, on the occasion of her birthday was the recipient of many presents from her many admirers in the town and from the various members of the company. The gifts consisted of pretty bouquets, dressing-cases, umbrellas, travelling rugs, chocolate boxes and fruit baskets, &c. The pantomime is having a most successful run, and a large measure of this success is due to the indefatigable efforts of the Waldrons (Etty and Joe).

There was rather an alarming accident at the Grimsby Palace Theatre last week, but it fortunately was not so serious as at first appeared. The Francoli Trio were giving their acrobatic performance, in which they present a bill-posting burlesque. In the course of the turn they climb to the top of a high hoarding, from which they make sensational jumps.

One member of the trio, whilst climbing the ladder, fell to the stage. He was obviously hurt, and the curtain was immediately run down. The artist was picked up insensible, and after recovering consciousness was taken to the Grimsby Hospital. When examined there he was found to have sustained a severe cut over the eye, but, fortunately, no other serious injury. After being medically attended he was able to proceed to his rooms. The other members of the troupe presented the turn at the remainder of the performances during the week, and it was expected the injured artist would be able to resume work this week.

Having carried out very great improvements at the Argyle, Birkenhead, Mr. D. J. Clarke sought to obtain permission to erect a veranda sufficiently long to afford cover, in bad weather, to the large "queues" that assemble nightly, awaiting admission to the theatre. The theatre and the Argyle Hotel form one block. The Justices were willing to sanction the veranda as far as the theatre front was concerned, but not round the portion which was "hotel" pure and simple, although one of the "queues" always extends that way. The application was renewed with fuller cogency on the 9th inst, and by a majority it was acceded to.

It seems only reasonable, having regard to the structure of the premises, that the Justices should have assented. It was urged that, if there was not sufficient veranda protection, waiting people would be inclined to slip off into some hotel bar or other rather than stand in the wet; and doubtless this is true. If a veranda is to be erected at all, commonsense seems to suggest that it should run both ways, as the "queues" always run. Mr. Clarke is so honest and straightforward a citizen and caterer for public entertainment that he may be safely trusted to seek no scrap of advantage from the veranda merely for his hotel.

Mr. George Lashwood returns home on March 5 by the Laurentic, after his enormously successful tour in Canada and the States, opening at Birkenhead on the 14th of that month.

Miss Kittee Rayburn is vastly pleased with the award to her of the Pelican Prize Cake for the best principal boy. The cake was presented to her at the Palace, Bordesley, last night (Friday).

Owing to her great success in pantomime at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, and on tour, Mr. Wentworth Croke has engaged Miss Kittee Rayburn to play principal boy during the season of 1910-11 at that house. This will be the popular artist's third year at the same theatre under the same management.

One was glad to hear the resounding cheers that greeted Peggy Pryde at the Tivoli, where she made an enormous hit last week as the hard-worked wife of a working man, who has many funny things to say, and says them in the drollest possible way. Peggy had to bow her acknowledgments no fewer than four times nightly, and we are not surprised that she has a full date book.

Miss Louisa Peach, who is so well known in the north of London, is meeting with a most enthusiastic reception this week at Collins's with her American episode The Settler's Daughter.

With respect to the benefit matinée to be given to "Johnny" Alexander next Thursday at the Empire, Camberwell, we have received special intimation that a part of the proceedings will consist of a three-round contest with the gloves between Mr. Charles Coborn and Mr. Fred Kitchen. The greatest excitement has been aroused in variety circles by this announcement.

Admirers of the "noble art" should not fail to be present to witness the desperate combat. Coborn is training this week at Walthamstow, and Kitchen is being put through the necessary preparations at Hackney. Sporting and other papers please copy. Tickets may be obtained by applying to Mr. C. D. Stuart, 18, Charing Cross-road, W.C., and from many other quarters. Miss Vesta Victoria, Miss Peggy Pryde, and a number of other eminent artists have kindly added their names to the already long list of those who will appear.

"Escaped," a dramatic absurdity, will be produced at the Surrey on Monday next by Mr. George Conquest, who will be supported by Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, Miss Daisy Gwynne, and Messrs. James Russell, E. J. Carlin, and George Conquest, jun.

After a highly successful month at the Tivoli Miss Millie Payne has joined the Oxford programme this week, where she is repeating her great success. Miss Payne contemplates a short visit to Monte Carlo, previous to opening on her annual Moss and Stoll tour at the end of March.

Owing to the unfortunate indisposition of Mr. Morris Abrahams, who it is expected will be kept from his duties for some time, the entire managerial duties of the Queen's, Poplar, are in the hands of Mr. Ben Abrahams. If artists and managers will kindly note this much inconvenience will be saved.

Both American and English artists have heard with great regret of the loss of Messrs. Derenda and Green, the popular club jugglers, in the wreck of the liner General Chanzy off Minorca. Others believed to have perished in the disaster are Mme. Elise Henry, F. Dufort (French comedian), the Joly Velia duo, Janiot (comic singer), and the Two Stakeleys.

The comedienne in the act of the Sisters Netherland was taken seriously ill last Monday, and was found to be suffering from an abscess in the throat. In consequence, the merry little crowd had to relinquish their engagement for the rest of the week. Thanks to skilled medical attention and nursing the invalid speedily recovered, and the sisters are making a hit this week at the South London.

Miss Lelia Roze, who is playing at Olympia, Liverpool, this week, has introduced another new number into her scena, A Dressing Room Dream. The song is entitled "My Guiding Star," and has a waltz refrain, the melody of which is simply ear-haunting. It met with immediate success, and Miss Roze is congratulated on having added another triumph to her list of personally-composed successes.

One of the most remarkable men in variety is Will Oliver, who on Wednesday next will celebrate his fifty-eighth birthday. Time and again his numerous friends have given him up. About six years ago he passed through an ordeal that not one in a thousand could have overcome, but Will is of a cheerful nature and full of energy, and does not easily cry a go.

To-day he appears younger than he did ten years ago, and to use his own words, feels as fit as a fiddle; in fact, he was never better in his life. He is blessed with a good partner, who also takes a deal of business worries off his mind.

Will would be quite interesting for an hour or two on variety houses of the past. He can enumerate scores of halls now demolished and quite unknown to the present variety world. He speaks with a very natural pride of the kindly feeling shown to him by nearly every proprietor and manager in the business. Amongst his own fraternity, he is constantly receiving proofs of their good feeling. On Wednesday he will be again receiving a host of congratulations from all grades of the profession, of which for forty-three years he has been such a popular and always honourable member.

Miss Ruth Maitland, who is to play the heroine in the new piece, The Fighting Chance, at the Lyceum on March 5, played the leading female character in The Sands o' Dee at the Hippodrome, with Mr. Jack Barnes. She was engulfed by the rising tide of waters twice a day, and this must have been an excellent preparation for her experiences in Mid-Channel, Sir Arthur Pinero's play, which is now making such a hit in America.

Graham, the human marionette, is presenting with a success as genuine as it is gratifying, his entertainment at the Empire. He vivifies memories of the past music hall, with its chairman and its waiters, and, better still, presents us with the counterfeits of the lion comiques of the Victorian era. Versatility marks the entertainment from first to last, and one listens just as eagerly to Mr. Graham's George Leybourne as to his Harry Lauder. He has a capital baritone voice, and is interesting every minute of the time he is on the stage.

Miss Ruth Davenport, who has been touring the Moss and Stoll houses with most gratifying success, opened on Monday at the London Hippodrome in a favourite number from that immensely popular opera Dorothy. "Be wise in time" was one of poor Alfred Cellier's happily inspired melodies, and Miss Davenport sings it with archness and admirable expression. Greater scope, perhaps, is given to the singer in her delightful rendering of the popular song "Nightingale," in which a prolonged shake brings down the house. A very pretty dress, made in the fashion of the days of Goldsmith and Garrick, is worn by the popular singer.

Tickets for the Terriers' annual dinner and ball, to be held on March 5, can be had upon application to Mr. Arthur Were, 69, Kennington-road, S.E.

Mr. T. E. Bates was initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Order on Sunday last. The ceremony was performed by Terrier Ben Obo, assisted by Terrier Jim Obo. V.T. Terrier W. L. Murray officiated as organist. Mr. Harry Cotton has successfully passed the ballot for membership.

The usual meeting of the Terriers' Association on Sunday (to-morrow) will not be held owing to the M.H.A.R.A. dinner and ball. The banqueting hall at the Three Stags Hotel will be open for the use of Terriers who are unable to attend this function. The secretary of the Terriers (Mr. Arthur Were) desires to express his thanks to Terrier W. L. Murray for undertaking the duties of secretary at the meeting on Sunday last. On that day Mr. Were was presiding over the thirteenth annual dinner of the Gallery First Nighters' Club at Frascati's, where he proposed the toast of "The Drama."

Niblo and his wonderful talking bird have been going big at the Zentral Theater, Magdeburg, Germany. They opened on the 16th at the Walhalla Theater, Halla, A.S.

A new dramatic sketch, written by Mr. Dudley Carlton and entitled The Mafia, will commence a week's engagement on Monday at Collins's. The cast includes Miss Eveleen Mills, Messrs. Cecil Bevan, Howard Brennan, Dudley Carlton, and Frank St. Clair (who will stage-manage).

The popular comedian, Sid Cotterell, who has been touring The Substitute with enormous success for the last six years, will produce on Easter Monday, March 28, at the Hippodrome, Rotherhithe, his latest comedy production Phyllis, with special scenery and a special London company.

Miss Henriquette Maude, the "Little New Zealand Travelling Girl," is busy in the preparation of her new act, which may shortly be seen in the West End. The exact date of production depends on the arrival of various costumes and effects from abroad. The "act" may be described as portraying her travelling experiences in an entirely new light, and a distinctly interesting novelty is anticipated.

The world-famous and incomparable Cinquevalli appears at Hackney Empire next week. It is true of him as of no one else that none but himself can be his parallel, and whether it be to witness his wonderful balancing powers, especially when applied to tricks with billiard balls, or the other feats which he accomplishes with such ease and skill, no one should omit this opportunity of seeing the greatest juggler the world has known.

Owing to his unexampled success with Alhambra audiences, De Biere, one of the cleverest conjurers London has seen for a long time, has had his engagement at that house extended for another fortnight. Mirza Golem's Persians, who appeared on Monday night for the first time, caught on at once, their feats as acrobats being wonderful. Among the new-comers next week is Kitty Traney, an old favourite at the Alhambra.

What might have proved a serious accident occurred at the Palace Theatre, Bath, on Friday last week, during the turn of the well-known monopedes, Conway and Leland. While cycling together on one machine they rode too near the footlights, with the result that the machine was caught in the wires, and the bike fell into the orchestra, together with one of the performers.

Fortunately, no harm befell him, but for the moment excitement reigned, and this was heightened by the loud report occasioned by the smashing of an electric lamp, which was dislodged by the fall, but all cause for alarm was soon dispelled. Before he had time to disentangle himself from the medley of music stands and bicycle wheels, the unfortunate artist pluckily commenced a humorous conversation with his colleague, thus allaying the fears of the audience.

The secretary of the Music Hall Home desires, on behalf of the committee, to thank Mr. Deer, Palace, Camberwell, for box collection of 4s.; and Mr. Roy Cochrane, manager of the Surrey, for box collection of £1 7s., and also a quantity of tobacco and pipes which he has kindly given to the old boys in the home. The committee have been pleased to add the name of Mr. Nelson Francis, of the Empress, Brixton, to the list of committee of the Music Hall Home.

The veteran Walter Grace's twenty-eighth annual "Calumetical Concert" which took place at the Holborn Restaurant on Monday evening, was an enormously successful function, and stage-manager Alf. Bishop, with his tireless celerity, put on no fewer than three dozen turns, while that fine accompanist Miss Maggie Godsmark did excellent service at the Erard. Walter Grace was in great form, and sang "I surrender," "The march of the Cameron men," and "Gone away" with all his old verve and fire.

Mr. Charles Coborn has just purchased two new songs, written and composed by Messrs. James Lorrimore, Oscar Schaller, and Clifford Noble. One is entitled "Nothing but girls," with a catchy waltz refrain, and another retails the distressing story of the charming but elderly lady who lost her heart to the "Prince of Peru," which should take a quick hold on sympathetic audiences. In the latter Mr. Coborn will don feminine attire. His Peruvian Highness is probably closely related to the Abyssinian potentates who have just honoured the British Navy with an afternoon call.

Miss Violet Essex, the new soprano who has captured all hearts at the Alhambra, is the daughter of Alderman John Essex, of Islington. For a year or two past her singing has been a feature at charity concerts in North London, in which district she has enjoyed a growing popularity. Her Alhambra engagement is the first public one she accepted, and on Saturday last her singing of Marshall's "I hear you calling me" and Tito Mattei's "No, no, no" resulted in her engagement being extended for another three weeks.

Mr. Allan McAskell, comedy conjurer, has had a run of unusual luck. He fell at Neath some time ago, spraining his right ankle and wrist; got a severe attack of lumbago a week later at Kettering, and was subpœnaed from his engagement there to Lancaster Assizes in the late case Porter v. Hall; was laid up there for sixteen days with rheumatic gout. Travelled to Sunderland last Saturday; his valuable toy terrier died on the journey from gastritis. Though far from well Mr. McAskell resumes business Monday next at the Borough Theatre, Wallsend.

An eccentric elderly little man stepped up to the Cardiff magistrates on Monday at the conclusion of the court and asked Mr. Joseph Howard if he could be given a grant from the poor-box to enable him to leave for Manchester. He informed the magistrate that he was an imitator of animals, and promptly proved his bona fides by placing his ten fingers to his mouth and emitting the whistle of what might have been a Norwich canary. It was checked by Mr. Howard asking him whether he would go direct to Manchester, and upon him giving the assurance he was told his fare would be paid.

The most important judgment that has been pronounced with regard to municipal trading was that delivered by Mr. Justice Joyce on the 4th inst. in the action "The Attorney-General (on the relation of James Lawrence Graydon) v. the Walthamstow Urban District Council, and which we printed in our columns last week. The action was virtually brought by the Entertainments Protection Association to restrain a breach of a statutory provision in the Baths and Washhouses Act, under the terms of which the defendants are able to let their baths for entertainment, but are not allowed to take money at the doors.

His lordship, in the opening of his judgment, said that "no reason for that provision as to taking money at the doors was indicated in the Act." We are quite aware if the construction of a clause of an Act is vague or not clear in its meaning the judge has a right to inquire into the intentions of the Legislature; but in this case, dealing with a clause so worded as to admit of no possible shade of doubt, all that his lordship was concerned with was its administration.

He had been told that it was inserted for the protection of an Association of the proprietors of variety entertainments. To him it was by no means clear why that Association should be protected, nor how the provision in the Act in fact protected them. This statement does not reflect favourably upon the judge's reasoning power. To our mind it seems obvious that the intention of the Legislature was to protect private enterprise from the competition of public bodies with the rates behind them, and also to limit municipal trading.

If this was the Legislature's intention what more natural than the point should be inserted at the instance of an Association which then existed and now exists for the protection of private enterprise. Assuming, therefore, that the insertion of the provision that money must not be taken at the doors was to prevent municipal competition, surely it is only reasonable to hold that municipal bodies which are responsible for breaches by others of terms imposed by the County Council are also responsible for breaches by others of terms imposed by the Legislature itself.

The judge held that to impose such a responsibility would be to read something into the Act which was not there; but with due submission we suggest that it is there by inference. Had the defendants (the Walthamstow Urban Council) let the baths to licensees giving an objectionable entertainment then they would have been liable (in the words of the judge) to sequestration or their members to committal. That much is clear in the statute. Where, then, is the injustice in extending the penalties for breach of these lesser matters to the breach of the greater and all-pervading prohibition imposed by the Legislature itself.

Again, unless one does so, it will render it so easy for municipal bodies in future to evade the Act by letting their baths to all and sundry without comment as to the statutory provision. It is impracticable to suggest in reply that the Association can proceed against the lessees of the municipal bodies, because in the nature of things, and by reason of the provision of the section, these lettings can only be occasional, and the lessees may be irresponsible and difficult to trace, and not worth powder and shot. Besides, the damage would have been done, so far as they were concerned.

Surely the Entertainments Protection Association will appeal. Should they fail to do so, municipal trading in amusements, fortified by such a biased ruling, will crop up everywhere; and in what is the dead season for baths but the busiest season for variety theatres formidable opposition to local variety houses will be rampant on Saturday and Monday nights. Surely music halls are sadly handicapped as it is, without having to fight municipal trading in immense buildings erected and supported by the rates. A great mistake will be made if the proprietors of London and the provinces let this judgment rest. In the interests of their shareholders they are bound to take the case further. There must be no wavering or hesitation in a matter of such unexampled importance to the music hall industry.

Mr. George Elliston and company are at the Empress, Brixton, next week with That Brute Simmons. The cast will include Miss Oliph Webb, Mr. Paddy Dupree, and Mr. George Elliston in his original part (on the variety stage) of Bob Ford. The business arrangements are in the hands of Messrs. Beecham and Wheeler.

Mr. Oswald Stoll has concluded an engagement with Mme. Réjane, who will make her début in English variety at the London Hippodrome in the course of the present season. The precise date has not yet been fixed. The celebrated artist is to be seen in a number of little one-act pieces. It would be interesting to see her in a tabloid version of La Passerelle, in which she is so piquante in the last act.

Mr. Barney Armstrong and his quaint assistant, "Kelly," are stirring the audience up at the Hippodrome, Peckham, and South London, after their successful pantomime season at the Borough, Stratford. The burlesque on the "simultaneous" dance is really the biggest success Mr. Armstrong has ever had. His fame will be spread at the East Ham Palace next week.

The committee of the Johnny Alexander's complimentary benefit begs to inform his friends in the profession that the subscription list is still open, and they would be glad if intending donors would kindly send on their cheques as soon as possible to Mr. Joe Elvin, hon. treasurer, 18, Charing Cross-road. Amongst those who have already subscribed are Sir Edward Moss, J.P., Miss Ada Reeve, and Messrs. Joe Elvin, Horace Wheatley, F. King (of Brighton), Morris Abrahams, J. Atroy, Will Oliver, James Stewart, Mrs. O'Brien, Harry Bedford, J. Kirkham, J. W. Rowley, Fred Griffiths, Fred Anderson, S. Salter, G. W. Hunter, W. F. Frame, the Renads, J. Lotto, Charlie Pratt, Little Ganty, Pat Rafferty, Sammy Shields, G. W. Hunter, H. Darnley, Ben Hyams, W. Dunkley, H. Cory, Woodrow, Abel and Welsh, Lieut. Albini, Fred Kitchen, Mrs. H. Pounds (Dorset Arms), and many others.

The programme arranged for the Johnny Alexander benefit at the Empire, Camberwell, next Thursday afternoon is a very strong one. Space prevents us mentioning more than a few of the many favourites who will positively appear, but amongst others will be Joe Elvin, Fred Kitchen, G. H. Chirgwin, Vesta Victoria, Peggy Pryde, Charles Coborn, Harry Blake, James Stewart, Ted E. Box, Sammy Shields, John Lawson, and Charles Pond. Patrons are requested to come early. The performance will start at two o'clock prompt, as no seats are reserved excepting a few at 5s. During the afternoon a boxing contest will take place between Charles Coborn and Fred Kitchen, who will thus settle a long-standing dispute. Mr. Geo. Harrington will be the referee. A number of charming ladies have consented to sell the programmes, for which a special design has been drawn for the cover by that eminent draughtsman Mr. Rossi Ashton. We understand that the new Australasian act, called the Colonial Quintette, who had promised to appear, have regretfully been compelled to alter their decision owing to not being in town on the date fixed.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MR. CHAS. R. WHITTLE has made a great hit in the provinces, notably at the Argyle, Birkenhead, with "He's a naughty, naughty boy." It is by Dan Lipton and Henry E. Pether, and is published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

BARNEY ARMSTRONG has just purchased two new songs from Glover Kind. "The melody makes the song go" is the one for Barney, who will introduce some business for his funny assistant.

"WHEN MR. SYMPATHY COMES TO YOUR DOOR" promises to be a big number. Miss Lena Brunton (Mrs. Armstrong) is producing it at the Hippodrome, Barnsley, next week.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY'S extensive and ever-growing catalogue is getting portlier with the years. Among the latest additions to its pages are some fine new ballads, which are the pick of the market. The current week has seen many seaside artists fixed up finally for the ensuing summer, and some of the more lucrative engagements were snapped up by those artists who had taken the trouble to visit the professional department of the great firm and armed themselves for the coming fray.

MR. DAVE CARTER has created a profound impression by his rendering of "If I had the world to give you," a ballad which is getting a great hold on hearers, as is evidenced by the universal inquiries for copies. This is one of Messrs. Francis and Day's finest songs.

To hear Mme. Ada Colley sing that charming song "Some day when dreams come true" is an artistic feast, and though few can emulate the artistry of the great vocalist, at whose voice "e'en flutelike Philomel retires abashed," it will be a number likely to be rapturously applauded on every hand when heard at open-air functions. Messrs. Francis and Day are placing it with the élite of the pierrot world.

MISS FLORENCE ESDAILE'S "Love makes the whole year June" is another ballad which has made its mark, thanks to the voice and charm of the artist largely, and Miss Victoria Sievers' delightful rendering of it has been one of the many triumphs of the Lyceum pantomime, where it has been heard by thousands, and sold accordingly. In common with most of Messrs. Francis and Day's popular numbers it is issued in cheap form, and its sales will help to swell the exchequer of many a "pitch" by the sea, where the selling of copies helps in no small degree to pay the rent.

"WHEN YOU ARE GONE," by Charles Wilmott and Hermann E. Darewski, is a song that will be hailed with satisfaction by all who will have the newest material, and the names of author and composer are sufficient guarantee and a sure index of excellence. Messrs. Francis and Day expect a great vogue for this item.

A FINE march song has, like Halley's comet, been looming ahead for some time past, and was produced with triumphant success this week at Manchester by that fine performer Miss Meredith Meredro, who will shortly produce it at the London Oxford. It is entitled "Betsy," and is by R. P. Weston and F. J. Barnes, with music by Hermann E. Darewski. This is being issued by Mr. David Day's firm.

ANOTHER march song of rare merit, and one that is eminently suitable for seaside work, is the infectious "Have you seen my Johnny in his uniform?" with which those charming ladies the Four Netherlands have been setting throats and feet to work at the South London during the current week. It is by those practised hands Barnes and Weston, and is issued already by Messrs. Francis and Day.

THE Anartos have made a great success with Messrs. Francis and Day's new humorous number, "We did enjoy ourselves in London," by E. W. Rogers, J. P. Harrington, and John Neat.

MISS FLORRIE FORDE has expressed her delighted admiration of Lester Barrett and Hermann E. Darewski's new song "'Tis a faded picture," a delightful little cameo of sentiment, and a gem in its way. The talented lady will feature it at Glasgow on the termination of the successful pantomime of which she is the star ornament.

THE stupendous success of the "chocolate-coloured coon" (Mr. G. H. Elliott) at Bristol in pantomime has been as pronounced as it has been deserved, and the four songs of Messrs. Francis and Day in which his fine voice has been heard at all performances have had record sales in the West Countrie. They are Mr. George Lashwood's "One of the girls," "Good-night, Number One," "How d'you do, my baby?" and the enormous hit "I used to sigh for the silvery moon." Mr. George Chapman, the musical director of the Prince's, has been at pains to write a harp obbligato to this renowned number, and it has highly enhanced the beauty of the song when played in the orchestra by Miss Hall, a sister of the great instrumentalist, Miss Marie Hall. It lent an added charm to the beautiful orchestration, and is a feather in the cap of Mr. Chapman, to whom it is a labour of love ever to do his best with and for an orchestra which would give distinction to any theatre.

MANY have been the applications for copies of "—— and just then he fell out of bed!" Messrs. Francis and Day's new humorous song. It is in the press, and due notice of its appearance will be given. This is one of the very best songs of the author of "The 'ouses in between."

SPECULATION has been rife lately as to the probable number of forthcoming Chantecler songs on the tapis. For about two years Miss Kathleen Cogan has been singing constantly a fanciful number, entitled "My sweet bird of paradise," which deals with the charming, and ultimate destruction of, a young cock fowl through the machinations of a ventriloquial fox, who tempts the bird from the parental roost. It was written by Edgar Bateman and Henry E. Pether, and published by Messrs. Francis and Day long ago. The same author was also first in the field with a song about the discovery of the North Pole, having, in conjunction with Will Hyde, submitted to Mr. Harry Lauder quite five years ago the song which the well-known Scots comedian has been singing on his present tour throughout the States. It was originally named "The Scotchman always gets there first." It has been published by the same firm some time now under the title of "The American always gets there first."

MR. EDITOR.—Sir,—Your correspondent for the Tivoli, Barrow, last week mentioned that Geo. Cardale, comedian and dancer, made a big success. It should have been, yours faithfully, GEORGE CASELLI, 15, Harefield-road, S.E.

MISS KITTY LOFTUS and party appeared at the Co-operative Hall, Rugby, on Tuesday night, and had a great reception, Miss Loftus rendering her songs with all her well-known cleverness. Miss Gwladys Cotterell is a violinist of remarkable ability, and Miss Violet Runciman is a talented vocalist. Mr. Oldbury Brough gave several musical monologues and sketches, and Mr. G. F. Boyle did excellent service as accompanist and pianoforte soloist.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE COLISEUM.

The production of plays from the theatres is no new thing with Mr. Oswald Stoll, and never, we think, has this policy been more completely justified than in the case of Messrs. Lloyd Osbourne and Austin Strong's most interesting playlet, which was produced originally at the Comedy Theatre on Nov. 21, 1905, and entitled

"LITTLE FATHER OF THE WILDERNESS."

Louis XV. ..... MR. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Père Marlotte ..... MR. HUNTLEY WRIGHT
Frère Grégoire ..... MR. W. R. STAVELEY
Duc d'Albret ..... MR. ALFRED BEAUMONT
Chevalier Frontignac ..... MR. J. R. CRAUFORD
Mlle. Henriette ..... MISS MAY TAVERNER

The central figure of the pretty little piece is the Père Marlotte, an intrepid Canadian missionary who has worked with unflinching ardour among the aborigines of Canada, the period of the play being the reign of Louis XV., when the French were paramount in the Dominion. The devoted little priest has been called home to his king for an audience, and on the opening of the play he is ushered into the reception-room of the Palace, Versailles, carrying thither a basket containing a racoon as a gift to the frivolous monarch. The timid, shrinking little man expects to be honoured by a bishopric; but he is utterly dumbfounded when he learns from the King's own lips that he has been summoned from across the seas merely to settle a bet as to the height of the falls of Niagara. He gives his verdict against the King, who has to borrow the money to pay his wager with the Duc d'Albret. The "little father" drops the coins thrust into his hand in a tremor of dismay. But he is to have his reward. The Chevalier de Frontignac, as Louis' representative in the colony, has an audience. He brings with him Indian chiefs, who immediately do homage to Père Marlotte. His courage and self-sacrifice are now warmly praised by the Chevalier. The King not only apologises, but makes the astonished father Archbishop of Toulouse, and asks for his blessing. With the reverent tracing of the sign of the cross in the air the little play ends.

Mr. Huntley Wright, whom one is accustomed to see in the frivolous rôles of musical comedy, gives us a master-stroke of pathos as Père Marlotte. The expression of utter despair, with scarcely a word spoken, cuts to the heart; and in the opening of the playlet a quaint touch is given to the character by Mr. Wright's mimic rehearsal of his deportment at a reception by the King—a part in which Mr. H. A. Saintsbury is wholly admirable. He displays to the full not only the frivolous qualities of the monarch, but scores most unmistakably in the final passage of the piece by a demeanour of chastened dignity. Mr. Alfred Beaumont makes the Duc d'Albret a gay and callous courtier; Mr. J. R. Crauford is most effective in the short part of the Chevalier; and Miss May Taverner as the King's favourite, Henriette, is sympathetic, Mr. W. R. Staveley completing the cast in an interesting rendering of Frére Grégoire.

QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

This popular East End hall certainly deserves success, for the management always endeavours to provide patrons with a true variety programme. This week's bill is quite up to the average standard of good quality, and as a result appreciative audiences have filled the house at each performance.

Topping the bill is the dramatic sketch The Steam-Hammer, presented in very able fashion by Wilfred H. Benson's company. The reception accorded to it on the evening of our visit was most favourable, the crowded house following the different dramatic incidents and the almost fiendish machinations of the "villainess" with intense interest. Mr. Wilfred H. Benson soon won the sympathies of the house by a manly and impressive delineation of Mad George. The villainous Mrs. Hugh Drayton was powerfully played by Miss Mabel Wynn. Mr. Harry Gilbey, a humorous Dan Myton, provided the necessary comedy. Mr Basil Reynolds as Inspector Watson, Mr. Dan C. Williams as Brooks, and Miss Dagmar Swinton as Dick each played satisfactorily.

A most interesting and entertaining turn is Kelly and Agnes. Kelly keeps the audience in continuous laughter by a burlesque of the Johnson and Tommy Burns contest, and, in addition, gives a clever exhibition of sand dancing. Another good turn is that of Arthur Astill, the whistling comedian, and Minnie. For many years before the advent of Frank Lawton, of The Belle of New York fame, the variety stage has had many silflers, but few with such powers of imitation as Arthur Astill. In addition to imitating birds, poultry, animals, and instruments, he gave as a solo the "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust, an item greatly appreciated and applauded. Arthur should certainly go well ahead. A clever comedy act is that of Allis and Cassati, the male partner being quite a humorist and a smart dancer. His description of how, through marriage, he became the brother of his own son is very amusing. Dainty Gladys Ray pleases all with "Hullo, Mr. Moon, hullo," as well as with her soft shoe dance. Gordon Stretton, who styles himself "The New Coon," works on lines similar to those popularised by Eugene Stratton. He dances and sings well.

The comedian of the evening is Harry Blake, who has two songs suitable to his style in "Suffragette" and "Booze," the latter being a laughable non-temperance lecture. Cole and Rags proved most diverting in their comedy juggling, and the clever fooling of Rags is greatly appreciated. La Belle Alva, a talented International dancer, in her representations of the different styles of dancing peculiar to Spain, Holland, Ireland, and America, is clever and artistic. The orchestra continues to do good work under Musical Director W. Hinkinson, and the stage-management is ably attended to by Mr. Biegen.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

Theatre-goers can spend their time in no better way than by a visit to this comfortable theatre once during the week, for the management has surpassed itself in obtaining artists who will please, and every one of the thirteen odd turns is an entertainment in itself. To begin with, we have Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery in their successful skit, The Would-be Actors. Many months (one could almost say years) have passed since this sketch made its initial bow to London playgoers, yet it still remains a favourite with everyone, and is as delightfuly humorous as ever.

Then we have Daisy James, fresh from her field of fame, the Brixton Theatre, with her same old irresistible way, and her charming songs. It seems that everyone in Camberwell—as elsewhere—knows the chorus of "Charlie plays the big drum," and the walls of the Palace echo with lusty voices from the "gods" as the gallery boys "help Miss James along." The six Buster Browns in a novel vocal and dancing scena do a turn well worthy of praise. The breezy way in which they sing and dance themselves into the hearts of all proves them at once to be artists of ability. Another turn which pleases the Camberwellites is that of the popular Shirley and Ransome, who give us a new comedy duologue entitled Jim's Pal. They illustrate a typical coster couple in the joys and sorrows of humble married life with considerable ability. Harry Lauder is in America, we are told, but the Yankees have not robbed us of all our Scotch comedians. Donal McDougal is here this week, and nightly rolls out his "r's" to the accompaniment of the hearty laughter of his audience.

Another tip-top number is No. 3 on the programme, Gala and Norris. They are decidedly expert dancers, and their imitation of a roller-skating couple evidently learning the new pastime is humorously clever. The other items are equally as interesting. Fred Arthur, a comedian of no mean order, entertains us by his song "In the West, West, West," and Rosie Ring, comedienne, adds much to the already scintillating list of performers. To close the evening Lew Lake and company are presented. The two perpetual pals Jerry and Nobbler are together again in that screaming farce King Nobbler, and the irrepressible pair make the occupants of stalls and gallery, circle and pit, leave the theatre with tears of happy laughter still glistening in their eyes.

THE SOUTH LONDON.

The mystic element enters largely into the composition of the current bill at the South London, where Spiritualism occupies a portion of the evening. The playlet rather taxes the attention of the audience at first, but ends on a startling dramatic note. It seems that Harry Lestrange was beloved by a passionate woman, who killed herself on his refusal to marry her. Harry blames himself for the desperate act, and in a moment of weakness he had sought the aid of a Hindoo spiritualist, who materialised the dead woman. The theory is put forward that the spirit of a suicide if recalled to the mundane sphere absorbs the vitality of the person by whom it is invoked, and Harry has consequently been reduced to a state bordering on madness, towards which the ghostly visitant has declared he is tending. His friend Jack Harringer determines to cure Harry, and to that purpose arranges a mock séance, inducing his sweetheart, Olga Kay, an actress, to impersonate the dead woman and make Harry believe that the statement that he would go mad was a mere invention on the part of the "spirit." The materialisation duly occurs, and Olga, appearing in a filmy shroud, speaks her allotted lines; but Harry, seeing in the living woman evidence of the vitality which she has robbed him of, and determined to lose no more, shoots her dead, being himself immediately shot by his horrified friend.

The sketch, which is presented by Mr. Jose G. Levy's company, introduces still another West End actress and actor to the variety theatre in the prepossessing person of Miss Janet Alexander, who as Olga plays the actress with much charm and with real dramatic intensity at the close, and of Mr. Lauderdale Maitland, who lately figured at the Lyceum, and now portrays a cheery Englishman in breezy fashion. Mr. Gerald Earle gives an impressive study of the nerve-shaken Harry Lestrange, and an awesome personage is made of a Hindoo by Mr. F. Martin Thornton.

Another weird item is the Vampire Dance executed by Miss Mildred Deverez and Mr. Tom Terriss. Miss Deverez completely realises the siren who first fascinates and then kills, and Mr. Tom Terriss eloquently expresses the various sensations of love and terror which the young artist undergoes ere he succumbs and is pinned to the floor by the feminine vampire. Coloured lights are effectively used, the woman being at times made to appear quite ghoulish.

A scena which provides welcome comedy is that of 'Enery Brown, admirably played by that vivacious comedienne Miss Ruby Celeste and Miss May Hallatt; and in "The shocking tale of a stocking" the possession of parasols enables the Four Sisters Netherland to remove their stockings with all propriety, after which they accomplish a graceful barefoot dance, singing blithely meanwhile. Miss Dora Martini executes expert and graceful feats on the rings and perpendicular rope; Mr. Hal Forde sings the praises of "Girls" and of the thrilling experiences of "A Night Out"; and other contributors to the programme are C. C. Gibbs, the "unbleached American"; Fred Keeton, comedian; and Yvonne Lamor, anecdotal and topical comedienne; Ruffell's Bioscope providing a highly entertaining series of pictures. Mr. William Payne continues to discharge with tact and ability his difficult duties as manager, and derives competent assistance from Mr. William Lynch.

THE METROPOLITAN.

Tiny Town at Olympia having closed down last Saturday, those popular little people the Count and Countess Magri and the baron of that ilk have been able to accept music-hall engagements, and appeared on Monday both at the Oxford and the Metropolitan. The chief novelty presented at the palatial house in the Edgware-road was The Enchanted Statue, in which one of the diminutive gentlemen posed first as Mephisto, then as a Dutch peasant woman, and other characters. The audience on the evening of our visit showed a special interest in the Countess Magri, who explained from the footlights at the first house that she had been on the stage for fifty-two years. Many who are now middle-aged remember her well as Mrs. General Tom Thumb, and also the sensation caused by the appearance of herself and her first husband at St. James's Hall. She treasures the recollection of special performances, by command, before the late Queen, and no more travelled lady exists on or off the stage than this lilliputian countess.

An immensely popular turn at the Met. is Miss Ella Shields, who has returned there this week, after an absence of barely two months. Ella looks tall and graceful in a simple white dress; but she is out to conquer in military undress, in which she sings of her preference for the girl in black. Girls in white may look all right, as well as girls in red or blue; but black is the colour to which this smart-looking young Guardsman pins his faith. Miss Shields is very heartily applauded. Mr. Leonard Barry, whom we know as a character comedian with the rare faculty of being funny in French as well as English, has just now a song that is bound to have a great vogue. "You go where Hugo goes" will, if we mistake not, be one of the hits of the year, and it will attain that position by reason of its cleverly-worded chorus. It is not exactly a tongue-twister, though in chortling the refrain it would be easy to trip. But there is no such thing as "halting" with the gods at the Met., who give it a rousing interpretation, being helped by the tracing of the words on the Bioscope sheet.

The Belle of the Orient, described as an Oriental fantasy, in three scenes, occupies the bottom position on the bill. Mr. Joe Peterman is down for the part of Ike Novinski, a Jew who invites a lady in evening dress to dine with him at a café in Paris, and after ordering a bottle of hair oil from the waiter, asks her if she will have fish and chips—so very funny (?) The crude horseplay prevalent in the sketch is relieved by some bright choruses, and the "bevy of harem beauties" is good to look upon. Mr. Frank Lincoln appears as Lord Exmoor, Mr. Charles Hylton as the waiter, and Miss Rosalie Jacoby as the Belle.

Duncan and Godfrey play to a very sympathetic house their sketch The Coster's Christening, which goes with a roar; Miss Bessie Slaughter meets with a big reception in well-rendered contralto songs; and Dorothy Watson is responsible for an interesting turn with songs at the piano. Mr. Fred Wilkinson, Master H. Clark, and the Sisters Gilbey, in an attractive musical act, are also on the bill, which is further increased in its attractiveness by the exhibition of films on Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope. Mr. Leslie Gooch is the acting-manager here for Mr. Henri Gros, managing-director.

SHOREDITCH OLYMPIA.

The above elegant hall is still offering a performance well worthy of every support, and, as has been the rule ever since the opening night, full houses are very much in evidence. Mr. Fred A. Vernall, the courteous and energetic manager, does much to ensure the success of the entertainment, and discharges all his duties with skill and ability. A prominent feature on the programme this week is the pantomime Dick Whittington, performed by Mr. Dan Thomas and his excellent company. He has secured the services of an excellent body of supporters, who must be congratulated upon the efficient manner in which they work together. Mr. Dan Thomas as Betsy the cook is the life and soul of the piece. His quaint humour is in evidence right through, and the hard work he puts in is largely responsible for the success of the production. An excellent Dick Whittington is found in Miss Daisy Yates; her lively and boisterous manner at once establishes her as an ideal principal boy. She enacts the well-known rôle with vigour, and materially assists in the unwinding of the popular story. Her rendering of the song "All the nice girls love a sailor" is well received, and is made particularly droll by the adoption of the latest craze, a child singing the chorus from the circle, but in this case the child is no other than Mr. Dan Thomas, who officiates in a very unchildlike manner. Mr. Thomas sings the popular ditty "Molly O'Morgan," and also gives a burlesque representation of both the Vampire and Salome dances, each of which creates roars of laughter.

The well-known and popular comedian Mr. Harry Ford is, as usual, well to the fore with funny songs. His drollery is irresistible, and the inquisitive nature of his ditties is humorous to a high degree. "Now do you see what I mean?" is a contribution which raises a hearty laugh; and his further effort, "Don't you think you've overstepped the margin?" would be enlivening even to the dullest soul. The Three Comerfords are acrobats of no mean order, and they perform many clever and hazardous evolutions, each of which earns well-merited applause. Marshall and Parr appear in a refined vocal comedy act, and blend their voices with exquisite taste in their singing of popular ballads and old and new songs. The cross-talk introduced into their turn is sparkling with fun and is much appreciated. A comedy musical act of a novel description is supplied by the Warsaw Brothers. Although most of their performance is of a burlesque nature, their genuine playing is highly artistic and tasteful. Mr. Charles Penrose scores with his laughing song "That was me," of which appreciation is shown.

The Three Prestons have found a decided attraction in the scena The Village of Shift 'em, which on the night of our visit created roars of laughter. In this act special scenery is employed, representing two adjoining fields, one quite bare and devoid of any sign of habitation, and the other containing a few houses, a church, a windmill, and a cow. According to the reading of a certain will two cousins are to become the owners of this property; they are to have one field each. Whilst the most fortunate of the two is bragging of his better possession, the other calmly removes the church, the other buildings, and the cow to his own field, much to the annoyance of his relative, and greatly to the amusement of the audience.

Mr. Harry First is quickly becoming a popular favourite, and he, with his company, are having a hearty reception. They appear in the screaming comedy sketch The Matrimonial Fee.

MESSRS. CHARLES W. POOLE'S Myriorama opened at the Town Hall, Bridgend, on Monday, to a crowded house. The panoramic effects are of the usual excellence, and the Bioscope productions are most popular. There is a capital array of variety artists. A star turn is that of the Six Royal Banzais, who perform wonderful juggling tricks, and are equally clever as contortionists; W. L. Rowland keeps the audience in a titter; the Cairo Trio are accomplished musicians; a refined gymnatic performance is given by Inez and Pim; and the Bros. Rees are unique military athletes. A Welsh entertainer, Sydney Bach, naturally proves popular in the heart of Glamorgan. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. F. Mann, enhances the success of the performance.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

During the past week throngs of artists, returning to town after their pantomime engagements, have besieged the Feldman offices in quest of fresh "sinews of war" in the shape of new and up-to-date songs for their forthcoming campaigns on the halls of variety. In no single instance did they go disappointed away, for so magnificent a new catalogue can the Arthur-street firm boast just now that each and every style is catered for and well looked after.

That charming singer Miss Josie Delaine, who has made such an enormous success with two of the Feldman numbers, "Pretty little girl from nowhere" and "Come along over the garden wall," at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, and elsewhere in pantomime, has just introduced a new number, published by the same firm, entitled "Just as the brook flows," which promises to be one of the biggest "hits" with which this clever performer has yet been associated.

Among the biggest successes of the Granville, Walham Green, programme recently were a couple of Feldman numbers, "Hold me just a little bit tighter," by Macdonald and Tate, and "My sweet garden queen," by Harrington, Rogers, and Neat.

Miss Lillie Lassah, fresh from her pantomime triumphs, is about to feature on the "halls" two fine songs published by B. Feldman and Co., entitled "Rain, rain, go away," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, and "Ring up, lucky boy, London," by Letters, Lawrance, and Gifford, with both of which she is certain to score very big successes, as they fit her like the proverbial glove.

At the Surrey Theatre and the Battersea Empire during the present week Fred Godfrey and Fred D'Albert's great chorus song, "Put on your old plaid shawl," yet another of the popular Feldman publications, has found thousands of willing singers whenever the chorus was repeated. This catchy song is undeniably one of the present season's big winners.

On Monday next, at Croydon, will be specially featured Messrs. John P. Harrington and Fred Godfrey's charming song "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" published by Feldman and Co. She has a certain success.

One of the principal themes of conversation this week in professional circles has been Feldman's new Irish cowboy number, "Santa Fé," by Williams and Van Alstyne, the fame of which has already spread near and far, and many enquiries have been made at Arthur-street respecting this great characteristic song of the prairies. This may be earmarked as this season's greatest song of its kind, the lilt of the ear-haunting chorus being simply irresistible in its catchiness.

That the charms of Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's delightful song "Old French bonnet" have not yet waned is evidenced by many letters received by Messrs. Feldman and Co., its publishers, recording the phenomenal success the song is making this week at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne. It has been a special favourite.

At the Palace, Plymouth, Harry Leaton is making a most pronounced hit with Wallis and Terry's song "Put off all your troubles till to-morrow," published by Feldman and Co. This is undoubtedly one of the finest motto songs that has been written for some time, and the audience at Plymouth enthusiastically join in the catchy refrain.

An eminently successful Feldman publication is "It's hard lines if you only get a living"; and two excellent vehicles for the vocal and acting powers of a comedienne are to be found in the songs "Have you met a girl named Mary?" by Fred Godfrey and Fred D'Albert, and "Every time the clock goes 'Tick, tock,'" by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, also published by the go-ahead Arthur-street firm.

Messrs. Fred Murray and Chas. Hilbury have written another excellent number, viz., "Chanticler; or, Eggs for your breakfast in the morning," for Miss Millie Payne, who is creating such a sensation in the West-End at the present time. They are the authors of her "Lady Godiva" burlesque and her famous "Directoire" satire, which was so successful.

"THE THREE LIGHT FITTING."

Produced at the Royal Victoria Hall, Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Tom Richards .....Mr. Fletcher Lightfoot
Sarah .....Miss Marion Turner
Prof. Von Heem .....Mr. Wm. Felton

There was a goodly array of booking managers present at "the old Vic" on Tuesday to witness a sketch by Mrs. E. Haslingden Russell and Mr. Percy Fullerton entitled The Three Light Fitting. Mrs. Russell is the daughter of an old journalistic friend and dramatist, Mr. J. W. Robertson, and has contrived to give us an interesting little story in which mechanics and love are blended. We would suggest to the joint authors that the title is not a happy one, and does not do justice to the sketch. Tom Richards, in the hands of Mr. Fletcher Lightfoot is a very sympathetic character. He is an inventor, and, like most of his kind he has stuck fast for an idea when an invention of his which is to startle the world is all but completed. Tom has a sister Sarah (Miss Marion Turner), who loves him very dearly, and would do anything to help him to success if she could. Now it so chances that they are to have a guest, Prof. Von Heem, also an electrical engineer, and when that gentleman arrives he is full of talk to Sarah concerning a wonderful new invention of his that is to revolutionise the electrical world, and even goes so far as to show the girl plans of it. Can it be that two great minds have simultaneously conceived the same idea? Thinking this, Sarah determines to steal the plans and does so when the Professor has fallen asleep. When her brother returns and recommences his experiments she contrives to place the plan before him in such a way that he imagines he is working out one of his own. The result is success. Elated with his discovery, when the Professor comes into the room Tom proceeds, with all the ardour of the born inventor, to disclose his discovery to the older man. Von Heem listens attentively, and when Tom unsuspectingly shows him the plan, the Professor denounces him as a thief. An angry struggle takes place between the two men, and Tom gets his hands entangled in the battery in a way which threatens him with slow electrocution. Happily, his sister arrives in time, switches off the current, and confesses that she, and not her brother, is the culprit. But as Von Heem is in love he finds it an easy matter to forgive, and so there is a happy ending unexpectedly. Mr. Felton may be congratulated on having made an earnest study of the Teuton engineer. His broken English is very good, and he held the sketch together several times when it would otherwise have dragged. It was apparent that the three actors lacked rehearsal, and that cohesion which is necessary to make a fifteen minutes sketch bright, brisk, and snappy. There is all that and much more in The Three Light Fitting. Much of the dialogue is very humorous and there should be every prospect of seeing this sketch on the big "tours" and "circuits."

The attraction at the Exchange Hall, Wellingborough, this week is Scottie's Variety Combination.

"OLGA'S OATH."

Dramatic Sketch, in One Scene, Played for the First Time in London at Collins's Music Hall on Monday, Feb. 14.

Sergeant Orloff .....Mr. J. G. Grahame
Ivan Petroff .....Mr. J. Montgomery
Capt. Drackovitch .....Mr. W. Thornton
Countess Lavinsky .....Miss Flo Hamilton
Olga Orloff .....Miss Zerlina Harrington

Messrs. Grahame and Harrington have secured in the above a well-written sketch and one of much interest. It is an episode of Russian life among the Nihilists, and the story is full of power and excitement. Olga Orloff and her husband, Sergeant Orloff, are connected in some way with a Nihilistic plot which has been discovered by the authorities, and warrants for the arrest of those implicated have been issued. Sergeant Orloff, to obtain passports to leave the country and to rescue his wife, the woman he loves, from the clutches of the law, turns traitor to the cause, and supplies the police with the names of those connected with the plot. On the fulfilment of these conditions two passports have been granted to him. As the scene opens, Olga Orloff is discovered packing her trunks for the journey, and whilst busily engaged the Countess Lavinsky enters, and Olga mentions her intention of leaving Russia. Suddenly Ivan Petroff rushes in with the news that the authorities are on the threshold with a warrant for the arrest of the Countess. Without thinking of her own safety, Olga gives her own passport to the Countess, who escapes while the soldiers are searching the premises. Satisfied that no one is there, they leave; and Olga swears to be revenged and to kill the person who has betrayed her friends. Little does she know that she has sworn to kill her husband, whom she loves more than life itself. When she discovers that he is the traitor the fight between love and revenge takes place; and in the end love conquers. Ivan, who has overheard the Sergeant's confession, takes it upon himself to put an end to the traitor, and shoots him dead.

Mr. J. G. Grahame plays with force and feeling at Sergeant Orloff, and supplies a capital reading of the rôle; as Ivan Petroff Mr. J. Montgomery does all that is necessary in the part; Mr. W. Thornton scores well as Captain Drackovitch; and Miss Flo Hamilton plays with genuine skill as Countess Lavinsky. Much praise is due to Miss Zerlina Harrington for her capital interpretation of Olga Orloff. She enacts the part with much power, and her efforts are appreciated. The piece is admirably staged, and is applauded with enthusiasm.

Good business is being done at the King's Palace, Wellingborough, Walturdaw pictures being varied with capital turns by the Three Veras.

HARRY TATE AND THE V.A.B.F.

PRESIDENT'S APPEAL.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—It is my pleasing duty as your president to bring before your notice the Benevolent Fund of our profession. During the short time this fund has been in existence it has done much good, but there is much more to be done, and the need is urgent.

You who are called upon to help so many charities, and who do so willingly, even at considerable inconvenience, do not need to be pressed. You only require to have your attention drawn to the fact that some of the fathers and mothers of our own profession—some who fought for the privileges which we now enjoy, and who were broken in the struggle—are in need of a little assistance. It is to help those who have been wounded in the fight—artists who have amused us when we were young, who may have inspired us in our present work—unfortunate comrades who may have been on the same bill with us only a few weeks ago—it is to help these that I ask your assistance. Everyone feels that such a fund is necessary, and everyone knows that such a fund is impossible without contributions.

All honour to our big donors. They have made the work possible, but there are many amongst us not able to put their names to big cheques, but who are willing to send a small postal order. By all means send it. It will be gratefully received, and I promise you it will be well spent. It may provide a dinner to a deserving veteran; it may provide a bed to an old pal. I appeal to you, ladies and gentlemen, believing that you will realise your duty to such a worthy fund, and I sincerely trust you will never require its aid.—I remain, yours faithfully,

Harry Tate.

Mr. Eugene Stratton writes:—

"Dear Boys and Girls,—

"At the desire of my dear old friend, Joe Elvin, I have consented to take the chair at the M.H.A.R.A. dinner and dance next Sunday night, at the Criterion, in aid of our two charities, the V.A. Benevolent Fund and the proposed Benevolent Institution. I shall take it as a personal favour if you will strain a point to rally round me on that night, and make it a record in the annals of music hall history. Come yourselves and bring all your friends with you. I'll promise you a right good time, and you will meet all your old pals at this reunion, including Joe Elvin and George Chirgwin, and a host of other 'bhoys' and 'gals.' Write and enclose your half-guinea for tickets to Douglas Stuart, 18, Charing Cross-road, and remember that of that amount 2s. 6d. goes direct to the Fund. It's a good thing. Push it along. Stand on me for a jolly evening.—Genially yours,

"Eugene Stratton."

THE BEDFORD.

Mr. B. P. Lucas and his able manager, Mr. Arthur Edwards, have a capital programme on hand this week, consequently excellent business is the order of the day. Herbert Darnley's company are presenting the lively musical comedy concoction The Brigands of Tarragona, which has had many improvements made to it since we last saw it, and it is funnier than ever and causes the audience endless amusement. Mr. Chas. H. Bell is a host in himself as Pepo, while the rest of the company lend valuable aid in making the success of the piece. That admirable comedian Leslie W. Harris is back again, and increasing his popularity with a couple of excellent songs, especially the one "Oh, send me to China," which is a very catchy number. Hodgson Lowther and company appear with their comic sketch, Barmaids, which is of the liveliest description. The waiter is especially funny, and the fun is kept going at a furious pace right along, and the sketch is highly successful.

Some wonderfully clever feats on the rings are given by the Victoria Trio, who are extraordinarily clever athletes, whose business is for the most part of a new and novel description. Morriss and Mills indulge in song and cross-talk, and finish off with a very neat simultaneous dance which earns for them great applause. Nora Guy, a charming young lady, sings delightfully and scores very heavily with her song "Ask her when the band is playing," which has a most taking refrain. Character impersonations from Dickens are always popular, and a new impressionist to us is Mr. Thomas Bentley, who portrays several of the best-known characters from "The Old Curiosity Shop." Mr. Bentley has devised a clever scheme for presenting his show, and his delineations are decidedly clever, though he is inclined to be a little indistinct at times. A word is due to the very young actress who so cleverly assists him in two of the scenes. The 'Varsity Girls are as melodious as ever, and their turn always pleases.

A stirring dramatic sketch, The Poor of the Streets of London, is capitally played by the Francis Harrold company. It is full of thrilling episodes, and only needs a little compression to make it more telling. The final scene of the rescue from the burning house is most realistic, and causes much excitement. Miss Suzie Doll, comedienne, and Manek Shah, the illusionist, also contribute to the programme, in addition to which the usual Bioscope pictures are shown. Mr. Josiah Law and his orchestra are deserving of a word of praise for their share in the evening's entertainment.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"FORTUNE'S FOOL."

Dramatic Episode, by Henry Hamilton, Performed for the First Time on the Variety Stage at the Hippodrome, on Monday, Feb. 14.

The failure of The Strong People at the Lyric has afforded Mr. Lewis Waller some relief for a time from the strenuous cares of actor-managership, and he has been persuaded by Mr. Oswald Stoll to take up a lucrative engagement at the Hippodrome. He is reproducing there the powerful monologue or dramatic episode, from the pen of Henry Hamilton, who has done much excellent work since he wrote that fine play Harvest, produced at the Princess's in September, 1886. The recent suicides of Mr. John Davidson and Mr. St. John Hankin, the former a gifted poet-dramatist, and the latter a novelist, dramatist, and satirist of originality and humour, brought into vivid relief the deep sensitiveness of the artistic temperament, and though it is not exactly the despair engendered by unrealised hopes with which Mr. Hamilton endows Philip Challoner, novelist and poet, yet the deeps of morbid melancholy in which he has sunk beyond redemption are only too similar in their overstrain upon a delicate mental organisation. Philip cannot bear the pangs of despised love, and is determined to seek "the undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveller returns." George Wither's philosophy, "if she be not fair to me, what care I how fair she be?" for him has no meaning. His heart's idol, the daughter of a viscount, has disappointed him, and consented to a match—approved by her parents—with Lord Amesbury. Challoner confides to an imaginary figure of Death, whom, in his capricious fancy, he admits to his room, and gives him a resumé of his career. He has been a medical student who failed in his profession through indolence and extravagance. But—like many another man who has become penniless and is thrown on his own resources—his better nature prevails; he shows grit and pluck, and has climbed the ladder of success as a novelist and journalist. One would think that Challoner, who has borne the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, would take life more philosophically. But, no. Burning her letters and apostrophising her photograph, he sits down at the piano and sings a song of which she was very fond. Then the poison is swallowed. The action of the deadly drug is not instantaneous, and he has time to receive and open a letter from his still adored Mabel announcing that she has only wavered for a moment from her allegiance, and is coming to him immediately. But it is too late. As he falls in the throes of death her knock is heard at the door. The lover lies still on the floor, alone with Death, the King of dry bones and dust.

The difficulty of sustaining so exacting a rôle for so long a time without intermission is in itself almost herculean; but the power, the pathos, the scorn, the satire of the part, are all presented with the perfect finish of a fine actor. The magnetic personality of Mr. Waller counts for much, too, in such a part. He holds Hippodrome audiences at one time by the terse nervousness of his style; at another by its virility and alert energy. It is good to find such art as Mr. Waller's on the variety stage—so all-embracing in its scope.

"BROKEN FETTERS."

Sketch, in One Act, Written by Geraldine Campbell, Produced at the Woolwich Hippodrome on Monday, Feb. 14.

Lord Elton .....Mr. Graeme Campbell
Dick Trench .....Mr. Ronald Bogue
Barbara Hurst .....Miss Hester Newton
Inspector of Police .....Mr. C. M. Hulse
Maid .....Miss Grande

Mr. Graeme Campbell has written a very attractive sketch, which has won for itself a very hearty welcome. The story is of an exciting nature and takes a strong hold of the audience. The cast is a strong one, and every character is well depicted, and the mounting is admirable. The scene is laid in Paris, in Barbara Hurst's flat. Barbara has a very shady past, but she has turned over a new leaf, and under the name of Ester Vaughan has become engaged to Lord Elton, who is secretary at the British Embassy. Barbara, who has been wearing jewels presented by, and heirlooms of, her fiancé, removes them, declaring they are unlucky if worn before marriage; but she had been seen wearing them by her aforetime confederate in crime, Dick Trench, who is now supposed to be undergoing a term of imprisonment.

In the course of conversation Lord Elton, who is totally unaware of any previous intimacy between the pair, mentions that a famous criminal, Dick Trench, has escaped and is at large, and proposes to take charge of the jewels himself; but at that moment he is called away on urgent business, and so leaves the jewels, saying he will call for them later on. In his absence Dick Trench makes his appearance, orders Barbara to hand over the jewels, and endeavours to persuade her to renew their old companionship and fly with him to America. Barbara rejects all his advances, and endeavours to raise an alarm, but is unsuccessful; and Dick Trench, becoming desperate, threatens to inform the police of her past, and eventually possesses himself of the jewels.

When Lord Elton returns he finds Barbara in a high state of excitement. Dick Trench is hiding behind a screen. Lord Elton requests Barbara to give him the jewels, and she refuses; but on Lord Elton insisting, she locks the empty box and hands it to him. But he, becoming suspicious, opens the box by a secret spring, and finds the jewels gone. He thereupon accuses her of theft, and leaves her. Dick Trench comes from his hiding-place and threatens to shoot either Barbara or her fiancé; but during this exciting controversy Lord Elton has entered unseen, and has discovered how matters stand. He is just in time to save Barbara from shooting herself.

Being confronted with Trench, Lord Elton recognises him as a man who saved his life some ten years previously, and on that score forgives him and buys his own jewels back, so that Dick may start life afresh in another country. Barbara, who has been wanted by the police, is recognised by an inspector, who has come in in search of Dick Trench; but Lord Elton assures him that Ester Vaughan is to be his future wife, and thus Barbara is made aware that her past is forgotten and forgiven.

Mr. Graeme Campbell sustains the character of Lord Elton in a dignified and easy manner, and is the recipient of emphatic expressions of approbation. Mr. Ronald Bogue as the escaped convict Dick Trench supplies a powerful rendering, and is quite convincing. Miss Hester Newton is seen to advantage in the rôle of Barbara Hurst, and deserves praise for an impressive study. Mr. C. M. Hulse is also good as the Inspector of Police, and Miss Grande lends useful assistance as the Maid.

Miss Della Ray, who has been scoring a gratifying success this week at the Empire Palace, Dudley, opens on Monday at the Alhambra, Openshaw, in a capital song as a principal boy, for which rôle her neat figure is eminently suited.

Miss Winifred Ward heads the bill with a pleasing turn at the Palace, Lincoln, and H. C. Lovell and company fulfil a thoroughly successful return visit with Mlle. Pom Pom; J. H. Greener, the singing pit lad, confirms the impression made on his last visit, and Bert Maddison, Jock McNeil, Victor and Louis, and Gena Manon all have something entertaining to offer. The Palace Perfection Pictures are still a big feature.

MUSIC HALL HOME SHILLING FUND.

2,480 SHILLINGS.

We are again making an appeal on behalf of the Music Hall Home Era Shilling Fund, and with that appeal we have very great pleasure in associating the name of Miss Vesta Tilley, who will for the next few months act as a sort of fairy godmother to the fund. "I think," said Miss Tilley, in conversation with our interviewer the other day, "that the Music Hall Home is a very deserving charity and a very excellent thing. Something of the sort was certainly wanted for the poorer professionals. Every week of my life I give pounds away at the stage-door to numbers of the profession who call upon me for assistance. Now this year I want to create a record in the matter of collections for the fund, and I personally shall work my very hardest for it. In everything I wanted before the profession has always come forward very generously, and I hope that they will help me all they can now. I have a number of private friends who are going to work for me, too. I think, however, that most of the support should come from the professionals themselves. Outside people have their own charities to look after. I have asked my husband if he can arrange special matinées at each of his halls for the benefit of this fund, and he thinks that he will be able to do this. A great deal in that case will rest upon the artists, and if they would turn up we should be enabled to augment the funds of the Home very considerably. Wherever I am now appearing I am fixing up cards so that members of the same company for the week may put their names down for a subscription. I also hope by the sale of autograph postcards in the front of the house to collect a still further sum for the same purpose."

As was arranged last year, a solid gold medal will be presented by The Era to the collector who obtains the largest amount for the Fund up to March 31, 1910, the lists closing on that date.

MOSS' EMPIRES, LTD.

ALLEGATIONS REFUTED. REPORT ADOPTED.

SIR EDWARD MOSS occupied the chair at the eleventh ordinary general meeting of Moss' Empires (Limited), held on Tuesday, in Dowell's Rooms, Edinburgh. There was a crowded attendance of shareholders, who included a number of ladies.

The report was held as read.

TRADE DEPRESSION AND SKATING RINKS.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, said: Ladies and Gentlemen,—The past year has not been so satisfactory in its results as we could have wished. In our report we have referred to what we consider to be the chief causes of the fall in our profits—viz., a continuance of trade depression throughout the country and the competition of skating rinks. Both these causes we regard as temporary, and there seem to be already signs both of some improvement in trade and of waning popularity of the skating rinks. It is obvious that when people have less money to spend, and when other attractions are competing, our drawings should suffer, and I may point out that a very slight increase in the weekly drawings of each of our houses will make a very substantial addition to the amount available for dividend, for, after the paying stage has been reached, any increase in drawings is all profit. An extra £1 per night at each of our houses is equal to 1¼ per cent. per annum on our Ordinary share capital, so that with improved times it should not take us very long to get back to a more satisfactory dividend. There are two matters I might mention at this stage. One is that the second half of last year showed better results than the first, and the other, that so far as the present year has gone our results are better than in the corresponding period of 1909. I would draw your attention also to the amount set aside out of last year's profits for the redemption of the Six per Cent. Debentures—viz., £10,029—in itself a small dividend. This affects our dividend-paying powers in the meantime, but you must keep in mind that the result will be that in a dozen years we shall have cleared off the whole of these Debentures out of revenue, which will really form a reserve of £200,000, thereby very substantially improving the position of both Preference and Ordinary shareholders. With regard to the Finsbury Park Empire, I have every confidence that this building will yield a handsome contribution to our profits. It is being erected on an exceptionally fine site, which we acquired some years ago, and we all hope for excellent results from it.

There is one other matter to which I want to refer. Advertisements have appeared in the newspapers—one, an anonymous one, so recently as yesterday—which seem calculated to excite uneasiness and distrust among our shareholders. I do not know whether the anonymous advertisement proceeded from a shareholder or not. If it be a shareholder, he is certainly not a friend to his interests as a shareholder, nor a friend of yours or mine. I do not know what is at the back of such an announcement. It has been suggested to me that some of you desire to appoint some sort of committee. Well, if the result of such a committee were merely to go into the company's affairs, and, as I know they would, report satisfactorily on these, we should all welcome that. But you cannot limit the results of such a step as that. We have our opponents in business, and our enemies, and it would be the best news they have had for many a long day that a committee had been appointed by the shareholders of this company. Such a step, for one thing, would prejudice the value of our shares in the market. That I regard as the least evil that would follow. It would weaken our hands in our dealings with our own employees, and with the artists, and it would have a prejudicial effect upon our business all over the country. I do not want, nor does any of my colleagues want, to remain a day longer than we possess the confidence of the shareholders, and I want to tell you plainly now that we shall regard a motion for the appointment of a committee as tantamount to a vote of want of confidence. I now formally move that the directors' report and the accounts for the year to Dec. 31, 1909, be approved and adopted, and that, in accordance therewith, a dividend be paid for the second half of the year at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of Income-tax.

Mr. OSWALD STOLL seconded the adoption of the report. A 5 per cent. dividend might not be a satisfactory dividend, but all business returns fluctuated. In such a moment unimportant details and idle gossip were given such prominence as to shut out a comprehensive view of the company's affairs. At that juncture it was well to put forward the consideration whether the recent history of the company compared favourably or otherwise with the past. The profits of the company during the past five years had exceeded by nearly £70,000 the profits made in the previous five years, notwithstanding the great increase in the number of variety theatres, the great increase in artists' salaries, the counter-strokes necessary to meet and evade competition, the advent of the picture shows, which were now very numerous in most of the towns, and in 1909 the establishment of sixty-four skating rinks affecting twelve towns where the company had properties. During the last five years a stronger financial position had been created, because there was now no enormous overdraft. Their aim had not been to pay the biggest dividend, but to strengthen the foundations of the company as opportunity offered. They had been dealing one by one with several substantial weaknesses that the company possessed, and, in his view, they had now removed the really material ones, and might look forward to a period of prosperity.

Mr. ABRAHAMS put a number of questions regarding the overdraft and the directors' fees. In 1907 there was a profit of £193,289, and the directors' fees were only £8,008. This year, with a profit of £30,000 less, the directors' fees were more.

Mr. WILLIAM THOMSON, secretary, in the course of his reply, said the fees of the directors were:—Sir Edward Moss, £2,000; Mr. Stoll, £3,500; Mr. Thornton, £500; Mr. Allen, £2,000; and Mr. Houlding, £210. The difference referred to by Mr. Abrahams was accounted for by Mr. Houlding having been added to the Board.

Mr. ABRAHAMS expressed himself as satisfied.

MR. GEORGE GRAY'S ATTACK.

Mr. GEORGE GRAY then moved the following amendment:—"That the report and balance-sheet be suspended pending a committee of investigation of shareholders to be elected by this meeting to inquire into the depreciation of the earnings of this company." He did not do so, he said, with any feelings of indignation, for he had the greatest respect for their directors. He had the greatest respect for all directors. All directors were honourable men. So was Brutus. That amendment would enable him to make a little purview of the circumstances surrounding the Moss' Empires. Proceeding, Mr. Gray enumerated the different companies which had gone to form Moss' Empires, and contended that the profit to the vendors of the original companies was £461,362. Dealing with the co-operative system, he said a director was not allowed to enter into engagements which might conflict with the interests of the company, but they had given their directors power to enter into any other business whatsoever. Whether that was in the interests of their company it was for them to consider. He considered that there were one or two shows in direct opposition and worked inimically to their own. He contended that a profit of £35,000 could be made, instead of being absolutely wasted in gross extravagance at the offices. Enormous offices had been taken, which could have been let, and a profit created of £2,500 per annum. Instead, they had a hundred clerks in extraordinary positions. There was another syndicate outside their own conducted with about eight principals and about six clerks. In their company they had a managers' department, an accountant's department, a stage managerial department, the publicity and Press department, the contract and booking department, the secretarial department, the legal department, and the bioscope department. The manager of each of their halls was absolutely placed in the position of an office-boy. He could do nothing. If a pound of glue was wanted he had to fill up a long schedule and await permission, and by the end of the week a pound of glue at 8d. had cost 3s. 6d. No power was left the manager to alter the programme. That department cost £25,000 per year, and was not at all necessary for the business.

With reference to the engagements of artists, Mr. Gray said he had the proof of many people who went to be booked that they were told they must go through a certain agency. They could draw their conclusions of what he meant by that. That agency did last year £38,000 worth. Another agent told him he had to go to this agency and share commission with them.

A VOICE: Won't you give names?

Mr. GRAY: I have the names, but it would not be fit and proper to give them. The Press department, the singing picture department, and the bioscope department were in turn criticised. Bioscopes, he said, were charged to the firm at £10 per week, and they could be obtained for £20 with all their accoutrement. But they were actually hired from Mr. Tetlow, of Cardiff. The report generally inferred that the depreciation of the profits was in consequence of the popularity of the skating rinks. In Cardiff the skating rinks were under the management of Mr. Tetlow. Giving figures as to possible savings, Mr. Gray contended that on their country accountants they could save £2,200, because they were not needed. The estimated profit on letting the offices as chambers would be £2,500 per annum. If they possessed their own bioscopes, it would work out at £10,576, which they now spent. That made £21,676. Then they came to saving on the staff. He enumerated possible savings, and gave a grand total of £35,126. There were other possible savings. Many directors of companies similar to that worked upon results. If they did not show 10 per cent., they took nothing. He thought that would be a very excellent basis upon which to engage their directors.

Mr. R. W. GARDINER, S.S.C., seconded the amendment. The report, he said, was very disappointing, and from the ordinary shareholders' point of view was anything but satisfactory. It was not in the best interests of the company that Mr. Oswald Stoll was managing director of that company and at the same time managing director of an opposition house. He understood that Mr. Stoll was managing director of five similar establishments. They had heard something of the amount paid to Mr. Stoll. What were the terms of the appointment? Depression in trade and roller skating applied with equal force to the companies which could show a better return than 5 per cent. Some reduction, he thought, could be made on the figure for management. Then, what return was got for the investments entered in the balance-sheet at £30,510? What had the alterations at the Hippodrome cost, and had they been paid for?

Mr. THOMSON, in reply, explained what the position was at the time of the amalgamation. It had been plainly suggested that the vendors made a profit of £400,000, and the meeting was left to infer that the directors, or some of them, pocketed that or a big share of it. The amalgamation was a case of ten separate companies combining to form that company on the footing that the shares they held in the old companies were exchanged for shares in that company, on a certain basis which was put before all the companies and unanimously approved. Not one penny changed hands in connection with the amalgamation arrangements. That was the actual fact of the case, and the suggestion that a big profit was made by somebody or another was absolutely groundless. He hoped that Mr. Gray's other points had been more carefully grounded than that most unwarrantable suggestion.

MR. OSWALD STOLL'S REPLY.

Mr. STOLL, in reply, said that other companies with which he was associated had been referred to. Let him say at once that if they took any but the Coliseum, nobody for one moment would say that they were in any way in opposition. The question of the West End of London was held by him and everybody else in the theatrical and music-hall profession, except Mr. Gray and the other gentleman, to be a distinct area, where they catered for the whole country and the whole of Europe, and it could not be said that the Coliseum and the Hippodrome were really in opposition. He maintained that they could help one another. These charges were directed against him, and with no desire or care for the prosperity of the company. It was a very near thing between himself and Sir Edward Moss who was the largest shareholder, so that his interests were strong with that company.

A VOICE: Perhaps they did not cost you much.

Mr. GRAY: The records say 200 Ordinary shares.

Mr. STOLL (continuing) said his shares were now in the name of a bank. The implication was that he wanted the Coliseum to succeed, and that he did not want the Hippodrome to succeed. The fact of the matter was the Hippodrome as a structure became wholly out of date, but it had now been reconstructed in such a way as to properly accommodate the attractions the people wanted. He said with confidence that both the Hippodrome and the Coliseum had now a double chance of getting attractions. On the question of the bioscopes, Mr. George Gray in his statement practically accused him of being a thief. Mr. Tetlow was merely the machine through which they ran the films to each of their houses each week. The co-operative offices had to deal entirely with the finances of the bioscope. Alluding to Mr. Gray's position, he said it had been considered wise to defer his re-engagement for a certain time.

Mr. GRAY: I am a shareholder.

With reference to the co-operative offices, he was in certain premises the other day in City-road, where a similar organisation for a larger company had three thousand people engaged. It would be quite easy to disband the co-operative offices and incur expenses at the separate theatres, but they would find the expenses infinitely greater. But it was impossible to deal with the garbled account which Mr. Gray had given. They had heard that his statement about the bioscopes was utterly false.

Mr. GRAY: It is not so; the cheques go down to Mr. Tetlow.

THE GLASGOW EMPIRE.

Proceeding, Mr. STOLL said that unquestionably the Glasgow Empire was the most successful theatre in Glasgow. If the profit of the Empire were paid upon the capital of the other place to which he thought they referred, the dividend would certainly not be less.

Mr. GILLESPIE, as a member of the firm of auditors appointed by the company, said Mr. Gray had made a charge against the bioscope department. He was absolutely wrong in what he said. The whole of the bioscopes and the whole of the films belonged to the company.

Mr. GRAY: Since when?

Mr. GILLESPIE: Since the start. I give you my word of honour that to say that the films are not the property of the company or the bioscope instruments is not true.

Mr. MAYBERRY advised that the amendment be withdrawn. The directors, after what had occurred that day, would, he had no doubt, see what reform they could make. It was clear that there had been an honest policy and an honest administration so far as they could make out.

Mr. GARDINER said that after the explanations he had heard he was quite prepared to withdraw from seconding. But he would put it to the chairman and directors whether it would not be in the better interests of the company that it should be controlled by one who would devote his whole time to the affairs of the company.

Mr. GRAY adhered to his amendment, which was seconded in another quarter.

Mr. GRAY said he must ask Mr. Stoll to withdraw the inference that there had been any animus between them. There was no animus whatever. He was merely a shareholder, and entitled to ask questions outside any other business whatever.

Mr. STOLL said he had simply stated the facts. He was quite willing to withdraw any imputation of animus.

THE REPORT ADOPTED.

On a division, about a dozen hands were held up for the amendment, and the report was adopted by an overwhelming majority.

The CHAIRMAN moved the re-election of Mr. Houlding as a director.

Amid laughter, Mr. GRAY seconded, and the motion was carried unanimously.

AN APPEAL DISMISSED.

Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie, known in private life as Mrs. Ethel Rebecca Thackeray, in the Court of Appeal, on Wednesday, before Lords Justices Vaughan Williams and Farwell, appealed against the verdict of the jury in her action for alleged libel against the Encore, Ltd., and others.

The plaintiff is the wife of Mr. Francis Henry Thackeray, a ventriloquist, known as Lieut. Travis. In June, 1908, plaintiff separated from her husband, and on Oct. 15 the following statement was published in the Encore:

"Take notice, that Ethel Rebecca Thackeray (professionally known as Ethel Ra-Leslie), the lawful wife of Francis Henry Thackeray (professionally know as Lieut. Travis), of No. 77, Thornton-avenue, Streatham Hill, ventriloquist, is no longer authorised by him to make any purchase or enter into any contract on his behalf, and that he will not be responsible for the performance of any engagements she may enter into or for any debts she may incur after this date, she having left him and being now located in Belfast."

The plaintiff's case was that the statement would be injurious to her in her profession, and would be likely to prevent her obtaining engagements.

Mr. Jellicoe, in opening the appeal, said plaintiff's case before the jury was that the natural tendency of the publication was to convey an impression in the theatrical profession that the plaintiff was a person of doubtful credit. He complained of misdirection and non-direction by Mr. Justice Walton; he also submitted that counsel for the defendants had cross-examined the plaintiff as to a number of facts which must have influenced the jury. Mr. Jellicoe strongly protested against a letter which had been read in the court below before the jury, written by the husband of the plaintiff, in which he made a number of charges against his wife.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, after looking at the letter, said he was of opinion that it ought not to have been read, because it was in such terms that it might very well have secured the verdict. Mr. Justice Walton had expressed the opinion that as the letter was a painful one it was better not to read it.

Mr. Martin O'Connor (counsel for the defendants) said he was not aware of Mr.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

The Richardson Cup.
The Richardson Challenge Cup has just been delivered to Colonel Cobbett, hon. treasurer of the National Skating Association. The cup will shortly be exhibited in one of the West-End stores, most probably Whiteley's.

A Great Business Expert.
A little timely advice has often in the world's history turned a failure into a success. We have to pay for our experience, but if the payment gives us knowledge that leads to success, the money is well spent. Mr. W. D. Nixon, whose fine work at Olympia was responsible for the great success of rinking at that establishment last year, has now established offices at 110, St. Martin's-lane, and may be consulted there with reference to the supervision, staffing, and general management of rinks and picture palaces. Mr. Nixon's experience has been a unique one, and he is a walking mine of information on the subjects in which he is now specialising. Journalist, theatre and rink manager, and financier, his record shows one long series of successes, and those in temporary business difficulties, or needing advice as to the acquisition of sites, cannot do better than consult him.

Revelry at Earl's Court.
Whether or not in imitation of our Continental neighbours' Mi-carême habits matters not, but in point of fact the carnival craze is particularly rampant in our midst. Two rink masquerades of the first magnitude, and several others of lesser note, have taken place this week. Last Wednesday the Earl's Court rink repeated, if it did not actually surpass, its success of last month. Prizes to the number of fourteen were offered for sartorial talent in ladies and gentleman. As at the last carnival, competitors did not enter their names till they arrived on the evening of the function. Mr. Herbert Izod and his stewards then issued identification cards. The well-known limelight effects enhanced the beauty of the spectacle. The Pall Mall Gazette published a special Rink edition, giving the names of the prize-winners within ten minutes of the judges decisions being made known. Splendid enterprise truly. The revelry culminated in a battle of confetti and serpentines.

The Awards.
During the evening a display of skating was given by Martine, a French-Canadian. His movements were original, and were watched with the keenest interest by the vast assembly. The function was a great success. The judging committee's awards for the various classes were as follow:—Ladies Handsome Costume.—Miss Blake (Forget-Me-Not) 1, Mrs. Uhde (Snowball) 2, Mrs. Snare (Cleopatra) 3. Men's Handsome Costume.—N. Baber 1, S. E. Knapman 2, W. Thorpe 3. Ladies' Original Costume.—Mrs. Isaacs 1, Mrs. Greenfield 2, Miss Samuel 3. Men's Original Costume.—Mr. Draper 1, Mr. Millmaker 2, Mr. Jenkins 3. Ladies' Comic Costume.—No award, all being disqualified. Men's Comic Costume.—Mr. Watts.

Next Week's Racing at Earl's Court.
A match in which several of the leading professional skaters are to take part is arranged for the nights of Feb. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, and 26 at the Empress Rink, Earl's Court, S.W. Mr. P. W. Williard, the managing director of Rinking, Ltd., has offered a purse of £80, which has been deposited with the Sporting Life, and of this amount £60 is to go to the winner and £20 to the loser. Four heats are to be decided nightly, each man meeting the others in turn, the final being run off on the Saturday. There is little doubt that with men competing who have shown wonderful speed on skates there will be many exciting tussles, and that the heats will draw large crowds to the Empress Rink. The professional champions entered are Allie Moore, Rodney Peters, C. J. Wilson, A. H. Bear, J. Plumridge, and Hal Berte.

Gloucester.
Mr. W. T. Cairns, the manager, who is leaving Gloucester to take up another appointment, was the recipient of several presents from friends in the city.

The Olympia Carnival.
Last night, as we were going to press, there was high jinks at Olympia, the second carnival of the season being in progress. The huge rink was crowded, and some remarkable dresses were to be seen. Miss Dorothy Cullum was in the contingent of skaters that came from Brighton. Many of us have pleasant memories of this lady's graceful gyrations at the Brighton rink before her fame as "the Crawford Girl." Those who witnessed her exhibition of skating with Mr. Walter Stanton had good evidence of the power of roller-skating to embody the very poetry of motion. Olympia's divertissement was a sheer delight to all beholders.

New Sport for "Rinkers."
An invention has been tried at Olympia which seeks to combine cycling with roller skating. Attached to a small cycle wheel, controlled by handle-bars, after the fashion of the bicycle, is a little platform on rollers. In this way the pedestrian can force himself along at a great pace, putting one foot to the ground when fresh impetus is required. A speed of twenty miles an hour can be attained, and rinkers who have tried the contrivance declare that the exercise is most exhilarating. "Fripla" is the name given to the new steerable foot carriage, which is intended for use on rink or road.

Date of Holland Park Carnival.
Mr. E. B. Barnes is a great favourite with frequenters of the Holland Park rink, and just now is busy with the details of a carnival he intends holding there on Friday, March 11. Mr. Barnes is in hopes of inducing many of the patrons of Olympia to transfer their affections to Holland Park when the great Addison Road rink closes at the end of the month. But the Earl's Court management has similar hopes also.

C.P. Skating Carnival.
The second fancy dress skating carnival which took place on Wednesday at the Crystal Palace was an even greater success than the first. The many prizes awarded were both costly and beautiful. That wonderful man on skates, Syd Martin, presented an unique and grotesque skating act.

The Turk to Rink.
Messrs. Plimpton, who control Richardson's interests on the Continent, tell us that they have orders now in hand for the equipment of several important rinks in France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Russia, and numerous inquiries from Turkey, Greece, Italy, and Egypt.

St. Valentine at Walpole Hall.
Mr. Byng-Hall is nothing if he is not original, and his grand surprise of "Love in a car" distributing valentines to the Saints' votaries at the Moonlight Carnival on the 14th proved a magnet to attract a merry crowd of revellers. Rainbow marches and two-step competitions prepared the road for the grand event of the evening, and when at nine o'clock Mr. Wallace Taylor's band struck up a fanfare every roller ceased to burr, while the God of Love in the person of Mr. G. C. Birch made a triumphal round of the rink fluttering valentines into the hands of the gay carnival crowd. Miss Martha Byng-Hall, fresh from her Paris engagement, made a bonnie figure in a two-step display, and the excellent work of the graceful young patineuse was greatly admired.

Skates Save Shoe Leather.
American enterprise has brought skates within reach of the youngster. The Yankee has flooded the market with cheap skates, and a skate originally sold at 2s. 6d. is now retailed at 1s. 9d. The juvenile craze found its real opportunity at Christmas, when, as a small suburban shopkeeper delightfully put it, "every mother did her best to put a skate in her boy's stockings." This small shopkeeper alone sold no fewer than 400 pairs for the purpose. The dealer proffered a surprising explanation for the popularity of the roller-skate amongst mothers. "They buy them," he said, "to save shoe leather. When children are on skates they are not wearing their boots out. Metal does not wear so quickly as leather, and a broken wheel or a broken strap can be replaced for a penny."

Dame Fashion at the Rink.
The Princess gown is favoured by many fair rinkers, and this style suits to perfection the slim figure. These dresses have a charming effect on the rink, being accentuated by the graceful movements of the wearer. The short skirt is very popular, being made sufficiently full so as to be comfortable and yet tidy in appearance. Velvet, velveteen, faced cloth, and corded silk are very fashionable materials. Many tailor-made costumes are made with flat, mannish-looking coat sleeves and tight-fitting jackets. Military three-quarter coats are also in evidence, being very heavily braided.

Skating at Sea.
There will be skating rinks provided on the two new White Star liners the Olympic and the Titanic.

The Employment Rinks Give.
It is estimated that nearly 10,000 instructors, male and female, are employed in the existing rinks, not to mention the attendants, doorkeepers, check and money takers, and musicians.

Rubber Rollers.
The Vandora Skate Manufacturing Company have succeeded in obtaining a temporary licence for their rink, about to be opened in Liverpool, although they have to contend with considerable opposition from the different hospital committees, there being no less than three large, important hospitals within the immediate vicinity of the rink in question. The licensing Bench have granted a temporary licence to enable the promoters to prove their assertion that the Vandora skates are absolutely noiseless. We shall watch with interest the progress made by this company, as their skates mark a new development in the rinking world. Their special patent rubber rollers are being fitted to Richardson skates with which the rink will be exclusively equipped.

Meet Me at Finsbury Park.
The new Premier Rink de Luxe at Finsbury Park is already extremely popular, ladies in North London making the rink their rendezvous for meeting their friends and taking tea. A speed and hockey club is being formed, and the number of applications for membership is increasing daily.

Popular Comedian at Finsbury Park.
Amongst the onlookers at Finsbury Park Rink last week was Mr. Edmund Payne. Mrs. Payne was rinking, and, although new to the pastime, she has rapidly become one of the best rinkers at the new skating palace. The popular Gaiety comedian is a good cyclist among other things, and he says that cycling has proved his salvation. Although he is not fit to resume his professional duties, Mr. Payne hopes, after a sojourn abroad, to again appear before the footlights before summer comes again.

Tottenham's Canadian Rink.
Last Monday afternoon the Canadian Rink, High-road, Tottenham, was declared open by Mrs. C. C. Knight, presented by Councillor Lewin. The general-manager is Arthur Granville.

When You Don't Get Wet.
Mr. A. F. Wilson, the general-manager of the Hammersmith and a large number of other rinks, says that rinking at the establishments he controls is "going strong," and that in spite of the cry by editors of some financial City papers that rinks were not a sound investment. Where one hundred persons skated last year one thousand are on the rinks every evening this season. Nothing like the present attendance at rinks has ever been seen before either in the States or England. The people recognise that roller skating is a sport, and a healthful, invigorating sport of the most pleasant type. I myself, after the experience I had at Earl's Court with over 2,000 pairs of Wolf skates, swear by these, and am only one amongst many managers of the same opinion. This season the skating public want something more than continually going round. Half the people who skate can waltz, two-step, and are figure-skaters, whilst many go in for sports. If the rinks are kept interesting, the floors good, the skates good, the place clean and well-managed, it will require one of the wise men to predict the fall of roller skating. We don't get much ice in England now. Well, on the rollers is its equal, if not superior, besides—you don't get wet if you fall."

The World's Largest Skating Palace.
The Maida Vale Roller Skating Palace and Club, of Delaware-road, which is now almost completed, will be officially opened to-day (Saturday), by the Mayor of Paddington. The rink is magnificently appointed, and is the largest the world possesses, for it has a skating area of 39,750 square feet. The structure is even still larger, for it measures 495ft. by 120ft., and comprises in addition cloak-rooms, dressing-rooms, first-aid room, offices, and a splendid restaurant, decorated in oak and mahogany. The catering will be done by French, English, and Continental cooks. The Royal box is situated in the gallery, and is most handsomely furnished. Here a portrait of the king valued at 500 guineas, painted by Doughty, will be hung.

The Reward of Merit.
Owing to the great satisfaction Mr. E. Collini's bands have given at the various rinks, including the one at Highgate, he has been specially engaged to provide and conduct the band for Stamford Hill Rink.

Novel Situation at Kingston.
The sequel to a number of carnivals at the County Rink, Kingston-on-Thames, was furnished at the local Police Court last Wednesday, when Mr. Watson, assistant solicitor to the Surrey County Council, applied for, and was granted, a summons against Mr. C. Byng-Hall, managing director of the Surrey County Rink, for allowing the premises to be used without a licence for public music and dancing. The Court was crowded with those interested in the company controlling the rink, and after considerable discussion on the magisterial Bench, it was decided that the summons should be returnable at the forthcoming Surrey Quarter Sessions.

Aristocratic Rink Party at Windsor.
Among the large company present at the White Hart Rink, Windsor, on Wednesday were: Lord and Lady Edward Spencer-Churchill, Lady St. Leonards and party, Lady Frankland, Lord George Pratt and party, Mr. Oscar Blount, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Benyon, Mrs. E. B. Foster and party, Colonel G. C. and Mrs. Nugent, and Captain and Mrs. Hargreaves.

Higher Prices for Maple.
Messrs. J. C. Plimpton and Co., Lyd., Liverpool, inform us that they are now carrying a very large stock of maple flooring in both prime and No. 1 select grades. We understand there has lately been a serious advance in the price of this material, and even higher prices than those now ruling are freely talked about.

Municipal Rinks.
Municipal skating rinks have been established at Southampton, Bangor, and Yarmouth.

The Belfast Carnival.
A fancy and evening dress ball on skates took place on Monday night last at Cliftonville Skating Rink, Belfast. Valuable prizes were awarded for the most effective, original, and comical costumes for both ladies and gentlemen, and there was also a competition for children. The entire proceedings were very successful, and reflected much credit on the enterprise of the manager, Lieutenant-Colonel F. W. Roberts, V.D.

Birmingham Blesses Rinking Boom.
More than 15,000 pair of roller skates are turned out each week from Birmingham factories.

Rinking in a Reservoir.
At a recent meeting of the Cowes District Council it was suggested that an old reservoir, used only for storing water for flushing purposes, might be emptied and converted into a good roller skating rink.

Hot Time for Visitors.
The management of the Derby Alexandra Skating Rink has been busy re-surfacing their floor, and the results obtained are eminently satisfactory. A Farmyard carnival took place last Wednesday evening. Mr. Leonard S. Innes on Monday evening proved his claim as local amateur champion, after beating G. Warwick, of Nottingham. The winner was also successful in lifting a gold medal from Birmingham, where he was adjudged the fastest loser in the Midland Counties Championship. The hockey team maintains its excellent form, and provides a hot time for all visitors.

Earlstown's New Skatery.
A new rink is now in course of construction at Earlstown, near Warrington. Richardson skates will be used.

"Skates off" at Glasgow Zoo.
Saturday saw the close of Councillor Bostock's large and finely-appointed rink, it having been decided to resume some of the varieties of show business with which the building has in the past been associated. A tremendous crowd assembled on the occasion, and the floor was fully occupied all the evening, while the space devoted to spectators was also taxed to its utmost. The closing attractions included a hockey match and a sack race on skates, both of which evoked much interest and the latter unlimited amusement. To the strains of "Auld Lang Syne," followed by "God Save the King," and three hearty cheers from the audience, the concluding session of the Zoo Rink was reached. On the Friday night Mr. Bostock gave the proceeds as a benefit to his staff.

Riess Goes to Gloucester.
Regret is expressed all round at the Blackheath rink at the departure of Mr. Percy S. Riess, who during the time he has been local manager has not only added largely to the popularity of the rink, but has gained the esteem of many of the patrons. Blackheath's loss will be a gain to Mr. Riess and Gloucester—where he is going to open Gloucester Olympia, one of the largest rinks and picture palaces in the provinces, with a floor space of 35,000 square feet.

Conversion of Kettering.
Avenue Theatre.—This house of amusement has been converted into a skating rink, with marked success.

News from Newcastle.
Satisfactory patronage continues to be bestowed on the Grand Stand Skating Rink at each of the three sessions daily. Business at the Exhibition Hall, St. Mary's-place, was very brisk during the past week; in fact, on Saturday night the management were unable to cope with the demand, and many had to be turned away. At the new Central Skating Rink, which has found its home at the Old Infirmary, a special effort is being put forth to encourage beginners. The Cosy, High Bridge, is also the resort of the learner, and at the same time some of the most efficient of skaters are attracted. A new maple strip floor has been laid.

No Good Friday Rinking.
The Sheffield magistrates on Thursday refused to allow the local skating rinks to open on Good Friday. It was pointed out that football matches are allowed on Good Friday, but the magistrates said that was no concern of theirs. They did not grant licences for football matches.

Successful Shirley Rink.
Ever since this splendid rink was opened on Jan. 12, it has been crowded daily with society skaters, and on Wednesday the first big bal masque was a huge success. There were throngs of enthusiastic skaters, in every variety of costume. Mr. Geo. Leo Lloyd is manager of the rink, and organised the carnival.

Russian Royalty Skate at Stoke.
The Grand Duke Michael of Russia and the Countess Torby and family have been frequent visitors to the afternoon session of the Rinkeries, Stoke, for some weeks. To mark their appreciation of courtesies shown, the Grand Duke on Saturday presented Mr. Swain, the manager, with a handsome scarf-pin with the initials "M. M." in rubies and diamonds, surmounted by the Imperial Crown. Mr. Seaton has also received a letter of thanks for his courtesy during their tuition in the art of rinking. This gentleman leaves this week to take up an important position at the new Maida Vale Palace and Club Skating Rink.

A New Floor at Stourbridge.
After being closed for a fortnight, this rink was reopened on the 5th with an entirely new floor (the old one having given way badly). This has now been well used for nearly a fortnight, and is settling down into a perfect skating surface. It is faster than the old one, and gives general satisfaction. The manager, Mr. H. J. Wharton,, has, unfortunately, been very ill with a complication of winter troubles, but is now back at work putting all his energies into preparations for the great masked carnival to be held on the 24th.

The Watford Rink.
The Watford Theatre and Skating Rink Company, Ltd., has been formed to take over, as a going concern, the Palace Theatre, Watford, and the sakting rink, which is being erected upon the adjoining land in Clarendon-road, Watford. The nominal capital of the company is £20,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £1 each. The present share issue covers 8,500 shares of £1 and the debenture issue, 200 debentures of £25 each, bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum. The skating rink, for which a full dancing and music licence has been obtained, is being so built that it will be available not alone for skating, but for meetings, concerts, dances, exhibitions, games, and such like, and upon this a profit of £2,457 10s. per annum is estimated.

Doing Well at Widnes.
The three Widness rinks are doing exceptionally well. The two principal rink hockey clubs have been seriously engaged with league matches, and on Thursday last the Borough Club achieved a brilliant performance in beating the Albert Hall (Liverpool) Club by 8 goals to nil. The Empire drew with Birkenhead Park, the score being 2 goals each. The Borough at present holds second place on the Liverpool and Wirral League ladder.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE OF VARIETIES.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Metropolitan Theatre of Varieties, Ltd., was held on Wednesday at the registered offices of the company, 1, Durham House-street, Strand, W.C., Mr. Henri Gros (chairman and managing-director) presiding.

The secretary (Mr. Ilford Ibbetson) having read the notice convening the meeting and the report of the auditors,

The chairman said: Dealing with the balance-sheet, and turning to the debit side, you will find that creditors figure for £1,757 4s. 7d., against £4,260 14s. 3d. last year. A further £300 has been spent on additions to the building, and has been added to same. You will recollect, no doubt, that last year I called your attention to the fact that as we had not sufficient liquid assets available, a portion of the building had to be paid out of this year's revenue. This has been done. The amount of £1,757, under the head of sundry creditors, does not represent to any large extent trade creditors, as more than half of this sum consists of apportionments of income-tax and other items which become payable in due course. That we have had to avail ourselves of this large amount for building expenditure out of revenue accounts for the fact that we are not paying you a larger dividend. As the report advises you, we suggest the payment of a dividend of 6 per cent., less income-tax, for the year, and to write £2,000 off from the freehold and leasehold premises account, with your approval. There is very little comment to make on the credit side of the balance-sheet. Fixtures will be reduced by the amount provided out of profit, £570 10s., which you will agree is a liberal allowance. Stock has been reduced. Sundry debtors include the usual provisions. Before leaving the balance-sheet, might I be permitted, even at the risk of repeating myself, to call your attention to the fact that during the ten years of the existence of this company we have paid out of revenue earned £10,934 in rebuilding? We have invested in freehold £2,000 and have reduced the mortgage by £5,600, making a total of £18,534. Beyond all this, we wiped out preliminary expenses, which had been made on transferring the syndicate into a company, and the syndicate shareholders were presented, after twelve months' working, with a bonus of 50 per cent. in shares, raising the share capital from £30,000 to £45,000, on which dividends have been paid to this day. It may seem useless to point all this out to you, but seeing that our shares are quoted at 50 per cent. discount, it may interest you, as proprietors, to know that the reduction on the mortgage and the purchase of freehold of £2,000 stand as tangible assets on your balance-sheet, while the amount of rebuilding expenses represents, at least in my opinion, considerably more in value to your property than the sum expended. While we might have added this fairly justifiably to the building, and spread it over a number of years, we have preferred to pay it out of reserve. Dealing with the profit and loss account, I have taken the twelve months which have just elapsed against the twelve months for 1907, which is a full working year on the one-performance-a-night system, and also a full year on the two-performances-a-night system and as I was the principal culprit in advising that change in view of our near competition I am pleased to report that taking those two years into comparison, the twelve months just elapsed show a profit of 80 per cent. in excess of 1907. (Applause.) Moreover, this is the most profitable sheet we have presented since the year 1904. We have held our own, and I can see signs in our immediate neighbourhood of a circulation of population which will assist the Metropolitan materially. When a tube comes near a West-end house it means, undoubtedly, an increase in the number of visitors and in the profit that it is able to make, because people are drawn from the suburbs to the centre. The Metropolitan is a house easy of access, and, as it is rebuilt, its accommodation and luxurious appointments make it second to none in the metropolis. The manner in which it is lighted is good, the staff is attentive, and the performances are the cheapest in London, for a man can get a stall there for 1s. 6d., and I defy him to get a better stall in the West-end of London for 7s. 6d. I now beg to move: "That the directors' report and accounts for the year ended Dec. 31, 1909, recommending a dividend of 6 per cent., less income-tax, for the year ended that date, writing off the sum of £2,000 from the freehold and leasehold premises, goodwill, and licences account, and carrying forward the balance to the current year's accounts, be, and are hereby adopted."

Mr. Walter Payne seconded the motion.

In reply to a question, the chairman said the amount carried forward, after making every provision and writing off the £2,000 from the leasehold premises, was £4,192. Although the directors hoped to pay a larger dividend in the future, his own idea—and he believed his colleagues agreed with him—was that the main object of the company in the future should be to reduce the mortgage on the premises. Therefore, even though larger profits were earned, he hoped the shareholders would not look for enormous dividends. The board hoped to pay good dividends, but he thought shareholders would agree that this was the policy which ought to actuate the board.

The motion was carried unanimously.

The chairman next proposed the re-election of Mr. Walter Payne, the retiring director. Mr. Payne, he said, joined the board upon the death of his father three years ago, and although not possessed, of course, of the ripe experience of the late Mr. George Adney Payne, he was a man of many qualifications, including accountancy, legal, and commercial knowledge, which made him a valuable member of such an organisation as this.

Mr. W. Millwood seconded the motion, which was unanimously agreed to, and Mr. Payne briefly thanked the shareholders for this mark of their confidence.

On the motion of Mr. V. C. Vologne, seconded by Mr. S. Anidjah, Messrs. Newson-Smith, Lord and Mundy were reappointed auditors.

Mr. Spill proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, directors, and staff, which was seconded by Mr. Vologne and unanimously adopted, and the proceedings terminated.

That diminutive comedian Jack Marks has introduced a policeman's song for the first time this week at East Ham, and Empire, Shoreditch, where he has scored such successes that Mr. Wyndham has decided to give him more character songs. Young Marks will be singing his policeman's song at the Oxford next week. It is entitled "Stop it, or I'll have to take yer."

RICHARDSON SKATES are the BEST in the WORLD.
They have held ALL WORLD'S RECORDS for twenty-four years, and every event of importance during the past few years, either fast or fancy, has been won on RICHARDSON SKATES, including Harley Davidson's victory at Olympia Rink, London, February 26th, 1909.
STATEMENTS WHICH CANNOT BE DISPUTED:
The Richardson Ball Bearing Skate Co. positively equipped 80 per cent. of the Rinks operating in America. Sixty per cent. of the Rinks in this country operated by independent rink proprietors are equipped with Richardson Ball Bearing Skates.
Richardson Skates are the universal choice of, and used by, practically all the leading instructors, unless employed in rinks operated by other skate manufacturers. The Richardson is the most perfectly constructed Skate on the market. The front truck is under the ball of the foot, and the rear truck practically under the heel, which allows the skater to be over his work. This principle is acknowledged to be the best by the leading skaters of the world. Rear trucks extending back of heel only act as a leverage when skaters lose their balance.
The Richardson Ball Bearing Skate Factory have equipped more independent Rinks than all other manufacturers combined.
The repairs of Richardson Skates are 50 per cent. less than those of any other make, and the simplicity of construction makes it an easy matter to effect repairs.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD

The Proclamation of Lynn Mart.

To an accompaniment of quaint ceremonial, the annual Mart was formally proclaimed at noon on Monday. A large crowd congregated to hear the newly-appointed Town Crier (Mr. R. J. Roy) read the ancient proclamation, which he did in approved traditional fashion, with a string of "Oyez-es" and plenty of bell-ringing.

It runs thus:—"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! Whereas by Royal Charter and prescription the Corporation of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the Borough of King's Lynn, and their successors, are empowered to have and hold in perpetuity within the said Borough one mart or fair yearly on the 14th day of February and for six days thenceforth next, and immediately following with all the accustomed liberties and privileges thereto belonging and appertaining. Now the said body Corporate acting by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilmen of the said Borough do hereby by proclamation of their Common Crier publish and make known that the said mart or fair, to be holden this year, doth begin on this present 14th day of February at twelve o'clock at noone, and shall continue for the space of six days from henceforth next following, with all the ancient and accustomed liberties and privileges so far as the same will now apply. And that all persons do forbear to put to sale, or show forth wares on the Lord's Day. And further that all such persons as may be justly suspected of evil behaviour do avoid this Borough and the liberties thereof. God save the King. Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!"

THE formality was invested with civic dignity, for the Mayor, wearing his robe and chain of office, attended, and with him were members of the Corporation, borough officials, and the sword and mace bearers. A little speech-making was indulged in, cheers were given, and then the National Anthem, played on the organs attached to the various roundabouts, indicated that the "Fun of the Fair" had begun.

Enoch Farrar's New Enterprise.

IT is no surprise that the great success of the scenic railway at the White City, London, during the last two exhibitions has caused many adaptors and inventors to consider the possibilities of a portable scenic railway adapted to the exigencies of the fair-ground business. Messrs. Savage Bros., the world-famed roundabout makers of King's Lynn, have made (to Mr. Enoch Farrar's order) a machine for fair-ground purposes that we confidently anticipate will be the big star attraction of every town it visits. The scenic railway embodies all the essential ideas of the White City triumph, with numerous improvements and additions. There is a circular switchback track, with mountain scenery. The cars are propelled by electric motors; the energy is self-contained, each car having its own power. The cars are on the White City model, and splendid specimens of mountain climbers. The frame is the most massive and truly imposing structure ever attempted on a fair-ground. We heartily congratulate the enterprising proprietor and the builders on producing this up-to-date novelty, and sincerely wish every success to the venture.

Notes from Wales.—Maesteg.

THE fine programmes submitted at Messrs. Wadbrook and Scard's bioscope and variety theatre this week are the means of drawing big crowds to this popular place of amusement. Some fine films are being displayed, among which are the following:—The Gold Prospectors, A Cold and Its Consequences, Salome Mad, and The Life of Napoleon, the latter being entirely new to Maesteg. Neilson's Boys and Girls, who form part of the variety entertainment, give one of the best turns seen in this town, their dancing and singing being very much appreciated by the large audiences. Mr. W. Jeffries, elocutionist, is also warmly received.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

DEAR SIR,—Under the heading of the "Showman World" in your last week's issue you mention an old-fashioned merry-go-round on the stage of Covent Garden Theatre. May I be allowed to correct this by saying that the roundabout in question is of the very latest and up-to-date pattern as well as one of the most magnificent machines on the road, and that it is supplied to the Covent Garden Opera company, as are also the twelve splendid horses, shooting gallery, side shows, and all the fun of the fair, &c., by yours truly, TOM NORMAN (Silver King).

54, St. George's-road, Southwark, S.E.
Feb. 15.

Concerns Great and Small at Lynn Fair.

NEXT to E. Farrar's mammoth concern stands Barker and Thurston's motor switchback scenic railway, another variant of the same idea, a magnificent set that does great credit to the proprietors; B. Howden and Son's motor-car track, one of the best sets on the road, is out again, thoroughly renovated and made up-to-date. S. Bolesworth's Stadium Club and bicycle track, and the Western Counties motor-car tracks, these constitute the roundabouts at the fair. P. Collins's Brooklyn cake-walk and the haunted castle were well in evidence, and afforded great delight to their patrons.

THE big shows included the galaxy of Picturedom, Farrar and Tyler's two shows, Charles Thurston's grand vaudeville theatre, and John Creghton's animated pictures.

Hoop-las, Shooters, and Stalls.

AMONGST these (a capital display on the whole) were Prince Samonda, with his garden circle hoop-la, George Bond's hoop-la, Bibby, with circular hoop-la, and C. Summer, P. Relph, and others, with square hoop-las and throwing games. Geo. Holmes, John Westrop, H. Westrop, Wm. Westrop, Parkin, Cooper, Wm. Cheeseman, John Holmes, Fendick, H. Parkin, Corten, and J. H. Norman, with shooting ranges and throwing games. The stalls, &c., were Mrs Bond's bazaar, Mr. Suett's pannum stalls, and John Smith's confectionary stall. There were stalls both by traders taking the East Anglian and local caterers. A temperance refreshment pavilion is provided by a local committee of ladies, a much appreciated boon both by showpeople and visitors to the fair.

Guild Service at the Mart.

ON Sunday (to-morrow) the Rev. T. Horne preaches in St. Nicholas Church, near the Fair-ground, at 11 a.m. At 4.30 p.m. a Guild service will be held in Charles Thurston's show, the clergy and choir of the parish assisting. The chaplain will be the preacher.

Increased Tolls at Bury Fair.

THE organised showmen on the great Manchester circuit are determined to refuse the vastly increased tolls of the Bury Corporation for their March Fair. All the three trade societies have united in this refusal, and unless the Corporation will accept the scale of tolls suggested by the organised showmen, the fair will not be visited this year by the bulk of the amusements usually in attendance. We sincerely hope that the Corporation will arrive at a reasonable decision, and let the fair continue as usual. The tenants of the fair are united on the question, and we do not think that the Corporation is justified in its exorbitant demands.

SHOWMEN IN COUNCIL AT LYNN FAIR.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Showmen's Guild at Lynn Mart took place on Wednesday last, Feb. 16, in the Town Hall, at 11 a.m. The large Assembly Room was well filled by representative showmen from all parts of the United Kingdom. The gathering was marked by the greatest possible unanimity and enthusiasm. On the platform were the president of the Guild, P. Collins, the Rev. T. Horne (Guild chaplain), the Rev. R. R. Powell (representing the local clergy), Mr. T. Watson Wright (Guild Parliamentary solicitor), and T. Hurst (hon. sec.). Amongst the prominent showmen present were Messrs. Wm. Murphy, John Murphy, John Studt, Henry Studt, Jacob Studt, J. Monte, B. Howden, Wm. Holmes, C. Thurston, John Crighton, W. H. Marshall, G. Marshall, Marshall Hill, W. Wilmot, H. Wilmot, S. Forrest, W. Wilson, F. Gray, R. Dooner, S. Bolesworth, G. C. Campbell, J. W. Waddington, T. Clarke, John Studt, jun., Marshall Bros., Wm. Mitchell, Mr. H. Wallis, Wallis Bros., and many others. Amongst the hon. members present were Mr. Wm. Affleck (representing Messrs. Savage Bros., Ltd.), Mr. Whattam (representing Messrs. Wm. Foster and Co.), Mr. Brown (representing the Gourock Rope and Canons Co.), and Mr. Whittaker.

A message having been brought by the Town Clerk announcing the inability of the Mayor to preside,

The Rev. T. HORNE said he was sorry to announce that the Mayor was indisposed, and could not be present. He proposed that Alderman Dunn take the chair.

Mr. T. WATSON WRIGHT seconded, and the resolution was carried unanimously.

Alderman DUNN said he regretted very much that the Mayor was absent, but, on the other hand, he extended a welcome to the friends he saw before him. He was a great believer in public bodies coming to Lynn, and he thought that anything they could bring to King's Lynn was helpful in every way. He had the greatest pleasure in introducing to them their president, Mr. Patrick Collins, and he asked him to move a resolution. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT proposed, "That this meeting heartily approves of the work of the Showmen's Guild." He said the Guild had now come to its majority. It was twenty years since they started the Guild, and the first men to start it were Mr. John Barker, Mr. Thurston, Mr. J. Caddick, Mr. Studt, and a great many members. They remembered that a Bill was brought in to stop their travelling in caravans at certain times and places, and they got up and defeated that Bill. Then Lord Clifford of Chudleigh got up and said it was a pity that "the poor showmen go about like this. We must protect them." The Bill he brought in was more drastic than G. Smith's Bill, but Lord Clifford of Chudleigh and his supporters counted without their host, Mr. Horne, who was their champion. (Applause.) Mr. Horne looked the matter up, and he went to the House of Lords and showed them the showmen's position and their mode of life, and that they were householders. They had a conference, and Mr. Horne showed that the showmen were not the people that they were represented to be. He now thought that that Bill, like its predecessors, was going into the waste-paper basket. (Hear, hear.) He must say that now they were stronger and their society was stronger and better than it had been for years. In fact, they got stronger every year, and they were respected, and there was not one of them that was not respected throughout the country. In the Bankruptcy Courts they would also find that there were very few showmen going bankrupt. He did not suppose that there was one in ten years. (Alderman Dunn: You will get me to go into the trade directly.) Mr. Collins said that with regard to the life they led, people said that they could do without caravans. Many of them could, but they wanted to be amongst their people. They must be on the fair-ground amongst their own people to attend to their business.

Mr. BENJAMIN HOWDEN, of Boston, seconded the resolution.

Mr. T. WATSON WRIGHT, Guild solicitor, supported the resolution. He said he thought they would agree with him that of all the places they visited, and of all the towns and cities, there was none better or more hospitable than King's Lynn. Let them contrast what they used to get in the large towns with what they got now. They were now respected in all the great cities, and every class of citizen, wherever they went, knew they were respectable, and, indeed, were respected. It was not an uncommon thing to have the Mayor, and to have clergymen and Bishops of the Church of England, to preside over them. In the past they had been subject to persecution, and people spoke evil and slandered them, although probably they did it in ignorance, yet the result was that they had been held up to public calumny and almost contempt, quite undeservedly; but they arose, and a man was found, and in that man, Mr. Horne (applause), who recognised, he was sure they would all agree, that that was unfair treatment, and that these people, although they might have been misguided, had erred through ignorance, and the showmen's position was such that they were not entitled to those things said against them. For their protection they found it necessary to form a united body, and an association, and they were represented there that day. Things went in the direction of injuring them in their legitimate and lawful business, and they had seen that the Movable Dwellings Bill had been thrown into the waste-paper basket. Yet they must not forget that in the session of 1900 proposals were made through private Acts of Parliament to interfere with them again in their lawful business, and it was found that if those Acts had been passed, an end would have come to their lawful business, which would have meant that the fundamental principles of English liberty would have been violated, for it was the inalienable right of every Englishman to move about, and carry on his business, and to be able to look a policeman in the face without fear. If the proposals had been passed into law their business would have been wiped out because other Corporations would have copied their example, and the whole of the local governing bodies, in the course of a few short years, would have adopted those proposals, but when the association was formed, and they appeared in the committee rooms of the House of Commons, the proposals were cut out, and eliminated from the Bills promoted by the municipalities and county councils, and other bodies, because they were ultra vires, and were beyond the legitimate powers and the known principles of English jurisprudence. A Bill was proposed in 1882, at Kingston-on-Thames, in which it was enacted that no show vans should be erected there during the months of October and November. It was to prevent them going there under the heaviest daily penalties. It was surely necessary, then, that their association should be formed; but how more necessary was it to-day. There were other Bills promoted at Eccles, Halifax, East Ham, and Macclesfield. They had had over sixty Bills in ten years to petition against in order to protect themselves, and the result had been that in no instance since the association was formed had power been obtained which could be called a hindrance to them. The case of the Bill at Oldham would have bee na lesson, he would have thought. The Chairman of the Committee in Parliament intimate dthat the Committee did not intend to have its time wasted by such an improper proposal as the Oldham Bill, and the Committee unanimously decided that the showmen had been called upon to defend their rights vexatiously and frivolously, and they ordered the Oldham Corporation to pay the costs, amounting to about £200. He wished they had been a little more. There had only been two Bills this year. There was one from Middleton, Lancashire, in reference to cinematographs. Proper representations were made, as they were aware, and the Town Clerk wrote to him, and said that they withdrew the clauses from the Middleton Bill. (Applause.) That left them face to face with the Urban District Council of Handsworth. Although there was some little business done there, there were not many showmen who wen there, but their association would protect the humblest showman or stall-holder where he was unjustly attacked. He was telling them all that inorder to show them that their association was not asleep, but was very much alive to their interests. He desired to say that he was satisfied that they were all serious men and business men, who recognised that but for the work of their association their position would have been very different from what it is to-day. But for Mr. Horne and his great abilities and persistence, their association would not be existing in all its strength for their good as it was to-day. (Applause.)

The Rev. T. HORNE said he agreed with Mr. Wright that until they had taught corporations and the advisers of corporations, and until they had taught Parliamentary draughtsmen that they were doing an injury to their clients by encouraging them to put those injurious clauses into their proposed Bills, they must devote all their power and money and ability to the Parliamentary side of the work. Thank God that the heart of this great country had always been sound towards the travelling showman. The common people loved the show. The people of this country respected and honoured the showman and they welcomed his enterprise. Their great trouble had been not with the common people, but with the men who had arrogated to themselves the right to be the masters of the common people. Those were the people that they had to deal with. Thank God that they were dealing with them successfully. He was only sorry that Mr. Collins and other representative showmen were not called by the House of Lords Select Committee to give evidence on the Movable Dwellings Bill. It would have been a great illumination, and it would have strengthened the position he took as the only one called before the Committee for examination. Their motto was "Advance and Defence," and they, as citizens of the Empire, had the right to go forward, upward and onward—Excelsior—and the goal they were striving for was this, to do and to be in their day, and in their measure, amongst that band of ever-forward soldiers of God, and to go on, and try to leave the world a little merrier and brighter and happier than they found it. He had pleasure in supporting the resolution. (Applause.)

The resolution was then carried unanimously.

Mr. HURST, the honorary secretary, proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman and speakers.

Mr. MONTE WILLIAMS seconded, and the resolution was carried unanimously.

The meeting then concluded.

The enrolment of members then took place:—Mr. John Wilmot, £5; Messrs. Savage Bros., Ltd., £5; Mr. Wm. Affleck, £1 1s.; Mr. A. Henderson (second subscription), £1 1s.; Mr. B. Howden, 10s. 6d.

Mr. J. Monte collected the following additional subscription from Guild members already enrolled:—Mr. W. H. Marshall, 10s.; Mr. Whattam (hon. member), 10s.; Jacob Studt, 10s.; Marshall Hill, 10s.; "Kemplior," 10s.; Monte Bros., 10s.; S. Bolesworth, 10s.; H. Studt and Sons, 5s.; F. Gray, 5s.; S. Forrest, 5s.; W. Wilson, 5s.; R. Dooner, 5s.; Wm. Murphy, 5s.; J. Murphy, 5s.; Mr. Brown, 5s.

ROTHERHITHE HIPPODROME.

One of the chief attractions of the variety bill which has been presented at this house during the week is

"THE STORM;
OR, JEAN RUSSEAU'S LAST PICTURE.
By Percival H. T. Sykes.

Jean Russeau ..... MR. ROBERT PURDIE
Phillipe ..... MR. VINCENT YOUNG
Father Lascelles ..... MR. HAROLD B. LEWIS
Suzelle ..... MISS HILDA GRAY
Camille ..... MISS GERALDINE MONTROSE

This sketch has been reproduced by Miss Geraldine Montrose and company, and tells a thrilling story of the love and hate of a French artist. The scene opens in Jean's studio. Suzelle, his model, who has grown to love him, is remonstrating with Camille (Jean's wife) on the bad way that she treats her husband. Jean enters in the middle of the colloquy, but his eyes are blinded by love for his wife to such an extent that he will not listen to any accusations made against her honour, and sends Suzelle from the room. Camille is living the life of a demi-mondaine, and on the advice of her lover Phillipe, who passes as her brother, she persuades Jean to invest the larger part of his fortune in a bogus mining company, by which he is practically ruined. He is in hopes, however, of retrieving the disaster by the sale of a picture which has been accepted for the Salon. It is called "The New Madonna," the model for the figure having been Camille, whose shameless career is exposed by a priest—Father Lascelles—who recognises Camille from the painting, and tells Jean that he is committing sacrilege in naming the idealised portrait of such a woman "The New Madonna." Jean is broken-hearted on hearing this, and in a fit of remorse contemplates shooting himself. He is prevented, however, by the opportune entrance of Suzelle, who wrests the revolver from him. He then resorts to absinthe, and becoming a raving maniac, attempts to kill his wife. Camille, however, escapes from his grip and hides behind the picture, which is mounted on an easel in the corner of the room. Failing to find his wife, Jean, in his madness, proceeds to destroy his picture by stabbing it with the knife. In so doing he also stabs Camille, and she falls dead.

Miss Geraldine Montrose plays the part of Jean's wife with much force. Jean Russeau is powerfully rendered by Mr. Robert Purdie, being excellent in the drunken scene. Father Lascelles (Mr. Harold B. Lewis), Suzelle (Miss Hilda Gray), and Phillipe (Mr. Vincent Young)—three small but difficult parts—are very well played. The staging and the storm effects are capital, and a word of praise is due to the stage manager for the preparation of same.

Mr. Fred Le Franc's musical comedy extravaganza The Flower Girl is a pretty and clever spectacle, and the audience shows marked appreciation of the dancing and harmony. The Seal of Confession, played by Percy Ford and E. C. Webb's company, is a thrilling tabloid drama, received with much enthusiasm by the spectators. Miss Queenie Mayor, the Lancashire fishergirl, assisted by Mr. Tom Smith, scores a decided success in a novel scena, introducing a clever song, entitled "Who'll buy my mackerel?". Maxey and Pete, trick and comedy cyclists, evoke roars of applause by their comical tricks. Mr. Billy Farrell, the dark-skinned entertainer, sings a most interesting number, and by his smart patter greatly amuses the audience. The Warsaw Bros. delight the house in a screamingly funny musical turn. George Bendon, who has deputised for Miss Bertha Winder, sings a cute little song entitled "Send the Photo," and is very well received; Miss Lawrence, deputising for Miss May B. Brilliant, Claude Gardiner (comedian), and Woolmer Young (comedian) also contribute good numbers; and the Bioscope, with new and interesting films, concludes an interesting and diverting entertainment.

THE Gosport Theatre Co., Ltd., has been successful in obtaining a music and dancing licence.

SUNDAY CINEMATOGRAPHS.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE C.D.L.

On Thursday afternoon, at the offices of the Cinematograph Defence League, 18, Charing Cross-road, a special meeting of the members was held, to consider the decision of the L.C.C that picture palaces must be closed on Sundays unless the proceeds of such entertainments were devoted to charitable purposes.

Mr. W. H. BROUGHTON was chairman, and the meeting was a packed one.

The CHAIRMAN, in opening the meeting, said it was the desire of the executive committee that he should place before them what the League had done since its formation on Jan. 5 last. Since that date the executive committee had been meeting incessantly, and as many as three times a day, and had sat as late as 10 o'clock each night. He had pleasure in informing the members that the League had accomplished what it had set out to do. The result of their labours was that now the L.C.C., through the representations that the League had made to them, no longer made it a condition that the box must be outside the building. It was now only necessary for it to be clear of the auditorium. Further, the ventilating shaft clause was not going to be insisted on. He could tell them that the revised regulations would be issued by the L.C.C. shortly. There would be no need to change the existing spools, and one could use a current of 110 volts. With respect of the regulation that at least one fire hydrant must be in each hall—a very serious condition for small men—he had every reason to believe that it would be deleted. Directly the amended regulations were received from the Home Office the committee had resolved that a copy should be sent to every member of the profession. He had heard complaints that the League was not doing enough for its country members. He could tell them that in securing them leave to open for seven consecutive Sundays without interference the executive committee deserved the thanks of everyone, and that one privilege alone was worth the year's subscription paid to the League. The subject of Sunday opening must be taken up by the whole body of people interested in the entertainment business—by music hall and theatre proprietors as well as cinematograph owners. And they must combine. The L.C.C. officials had treated the representatives of the League very nicely. There was no desire, he was sure, on the part of the L.C.C., to close cinematograph halls if there was a loophole whereby they could be permitted to be open.

Mr. BROUGHTON then read a proposition of Mr. G. W. Grant's, which was submitted in the following terms:—"That the League, having exhausted all the means at its command to have the L.C.C. allow cinema halls to open on Sundays without success, and upon an assurance that they would receive the same consideration given to other premises licensed by them at present being conducted under charity, I therefore recommend that we advise all members of the League to secure some charitable institution to take over their halls on Sunday and make their own arrangements individually, and if any member is unable to secure an organisation to do this, the League will give them any help they can in securing same, and recommend that all places should close until this has been accomplished. If they open in defiance of the authorities they will do so at their own risk."

Mr. GRANT went on to say that by fighting they had nothing but a losing game to fight. He thought it would be advisable for everybody to close next Sunday, and they should continue to close until they had got a charitable institution to take over their theatres. Every proprietor had his price, and the charity itself had to apply to the L.C.C. and render its own financial statements to that body. It was not hard to get open provided the entertainment given was for charity, as the L.C.C. approved of such performances.

Mr. F. MOUILLOT said that, being an Irishman, it was the first principle of his nature to want to fight. But the L.C.C. could tread on the tail of his coat as much as it liked before he would fight them. They could, of course, have a legal fight by using non-flam films on Sunday, but it would be only courting more drastic measures being enforced against them if they defied the L.C.C. in this way. In his opinion, against the L.C.C. there was no appeal. They were their masters, and if they fought the L.C.C. must win in the end. They would be well advised not to open next Sunday, or any other Sunday, unless protected by a charity.

Subsequently Mr. Grant's first resolution was withdrawn, and another substituted by that gentleman as follows:—

"Resolved, that the recommendation of the executive committee that the cinematograph theatres conducted by the members of the League close on Sunday, Feb. 20, be accepted, and that their advice to at once arrange for the opening of the theatres on Sundays under charity, in conformity with the regulations of the L.C.C. be and is hereby adopted."

This was seconded by Mr. MOUILLOT, and carried nem. con. It was further unanimously resolved that a copy of this resolution should be sent immediately to the L.C.C.

An announcement was made just before the conclusion of the meeting that the first dinner of cinematograph proprietors would be held at the Holborn Restaurant on March 15. It would represent the combined efforts and memberships of the Cinematograph Manufacturers' Association, the Cinematograph Defence League, and the Cinematograph Trade Protection Society. Mr. G. R. Sims had been approached to take the chair. Tickets would be 7s. 6d. each, and the following gentlemen constitute the dinner committee:—Messrs. Bishop and Browne, representing the Manufacturers; Messrs. Jury and Griffiths, representing the Trade Protection Society; and Messrs. Broughton and Grant, representing the C.D.L. Mr. Lovesy is hon. treasurer and Messrs. Brook Wilkinson and H. E. W. Poole are the joint hon. secretaries.

AERONAUTIC DISPLAYS.

The public at present are so keenly interested in aerial flight that every fête and gala programme should include an aerial display.

Messrs. Spencer Brothers, Ltd., of 45B, Aberdeen-park, Highbury, London, N., have just issued an illustrated list of balloon ascents, parachute descents, captive balloons, and airship flights, a copy of which they will forward to managers and secretaries upon application.

This firm are the oldest-established aeronauts in the world, their first ascent dating back to the days of Vauxhall Gardens, 1837, whilst the apparatus they use is always of the most up-to-date description, reliable, and of the highest standard of manufacture.

SUBSCRIPTION Guild Funds, 1910:—Mr. W. Kemp (hon. member), agent for L. and N. W. R., £1 1s.

Yorkshire Notes.

AT Adwalton, for Ashington's short season, are H. Ashington's marionette theatre and cinema pavilion, two shows in one, doing remarkably good business, crowded houses nightly; Walter Bassett's novelty throwing games and Daley and Redfern's concerns, all going strong. W. H. Marshall is at Bradford, after a most adventureous journey in the snowstorm from Shirebrook. The cinematograph theatre is now at the firm's works, undergoing renovation in preparation for the coming season.

AT Wakefield, on the Corporation Ground, are J. W. Waddington's roundabout, Holdworth, Blake, Peder, Stewart, and Keshow, with novelties and throwing games.

HIPPODROME STAFF DINNER.

THE staff of the London Hippodrome, to the number of over a hundred, held their annual dinner in the Pillar Hall at Lyons' Restaurant at Victoria on Sunday, when Mr. Fred Trussell, the popular manager of the Hippodrome, to whose courtesy and attention to business so much of the success of the establishment is due, took the chair. After an excellent repast had been enjoyed, and the usual loyal toast proposed and honoured,

Mr. FRED TRUSSELL, whose speech was received with enthusiasm, proposed "The London Hippodrome," including the proprietors, the stage staff, the front of the house staff, and the orchestra. He said he held the proud position of manager of one of the largest and finest theatres of the world. They were a concrete body, working together for a splendid theatre. He felt delighted to preside over representatives of all the departments. The directors were honest, upright men anxious for the welfare of the staff. Mr. Stoll was unfortunately unable to be present at the dinner, but he had sent, through the Chairman, a message of goodwill to the assembled staff. He (Mr. Trussell) hoped the day would be long distant when he would have to sever his connection with the London Hippodrome. Dealing with the heads of the different departments, Mr. Trussell warmly praised Mr. Thomas Miller, the assistant-manager, who was popular with everyone; Mr. Richard Winslow, the stage-manager; Mr. J. Galbraith, his assistant; and Mr. H. W. Hawkins, the electrician, specially commending their capable work in the production of The Arctic. Mr. J. Higson, the stage carpenter, Mr. Mawby, the advertisement manager, Mr. Charles Richards, who presides over the box-office, Mr. Henry Wild, the treasurer, and the members of the orchestra were all alluded to by Mr. Trussell in favourable and felicitous terms. In his peroration, Mr. Trussell thanked one and all for their efforts on behalf of the Hippodrome, and hoped they would always work for the continued prosperity of the house. The speech was punctuated with loud applause, and at the conclusion there was an outburst of enthusiasm.

Mr. THOMAS MILLER, in response to Mr. Trussell's compliments, said he had never had a better staff to work with, each member being both obedient and intelligent. He was proud to work under Mr. Trussell, and it was a source of pleasure to him (Mr. Miller) to receivt that gentleman's kindly commendation.

Mr. RICHARD WINSLOW assured the extra hands who had been engaged for the run of The Arctic that good work was appreciated fully, and that it would secure them further engagements in the future. Mr. Winslow also praised the German visitors who had come over in charge of the bears.

Herr Hagenbeck's manager, who was present, made fitting reply to Mr. Winslow's courtesy.

Mr. Henry Wild, Mr. J. Galbraith, Mr. Smith, the oldest member of the orchestra, and others also spoke eloquently and appropriately.

The speeches were interspersed with an excellent variety entertainment, to which many members of the staff contributed. The platform of the hall had been transformed into a miniature stage with a tasteful act drop and neat fit-up scenery. The principal item was a burlesque in three scenes, by J. Higson, entitled

"THE ANTIC AT TINMAN'S NECK.

Pingston ..... MR. G. BUNYON
Captain Mealy ..... MR. J. INGLEDEW
Arson ..... MR. M. BARKER
Jamrags ..... MR. B. ROOFE
Miss Firefly ..... MISS E. DARVELL

This proved to be a skit on The Arctic, with a "screaming" burlesque of the fight between the villain and the hero, a number of "Teddy" bears being sent down slopes into tins of water. The skit evoked roars of laughter, and Mr. Higson was warmly applauded for his work. Mr. J. Ingledew, Mr. B. Roofe, and Miss E. Darvell threw themselves into the spirit of the thing spontaneously, and Mr. G. Bunyon as Pingston and Mr. M. Barker as Arson were also droll and active in fun-making. In the variety entertainment, which was greatly enjoyed, Miss Mace sang "A Corsican Maid" with spirit and success, and others who contributed to the programme were Messrs. H. Holley, G. Billeston, F. Williams, S. Stead, R. G. Dunn, W. Crawford, Martin Barker, Harry Paulo, T. P. Byrne, Fregoli, John Barker, and Miss Darvell. A skit on Six Little Burglars was performed with success by Messrs. H. Holley, F. Neville, S. Stead, B. Crawford, G. Billeston, and B. Roofe, and the names of Messrs. Gavin, F. Teers, F. Neville, Alf. Thomas, and W. Keeble were also in the bill. Mr. A. Alexander stage-managed smartly, and he and Mr. T. P. Byrne formed an able entertainment committee. Mr. S. W. Williams accompanied well, and Mr. Fred Trussell sang a song in a style which showed his versatility. The staff dinner of the Hippodrome was a great success.

THE employees of the Pavilion, Glasgow, were extremely pleased at the prowess of their tug-of-war team, who carried off the prize at the Glasgow Theatrical Sports on Tuesday after a most exciting bout with Hengler's.

MR. EDOUARD ESPINOSA and four English girls, the Misses G. Groom, G. Somerset, G. Cone, and R. Dene, from the British Normal School of Dancing, will appear in a series of high-class operatic dances at the Tivoli on Monday.

MISS ROMA MARQUISE, a new recruit to variety, made her début at Collins's on Tuesday in an entirely new descriptive scena entitled "One of the Best in Blue," written for her by Rajah Ram Singh. This charming young soprano is by way of touring the halls in aid of various charities.

THE recent naval hoax has already inspired the music-hall bard, and at the Pavilion, Weymouth, Mr. Medley Barrett has been scoring with a verse sung to the tune of "The Girl I left Behind Me." The last line runs "Then I shouted 'Bunga-bunga.'" Is this to be the watch-word of the Fleet?

THE Ilford Urban District Council is prepared to receive, for the privilege of giving open-air concerts in the bandstands in both Valentines and South Parks, Ilford, during next season, from May until September next, sealed offers, endorsed "Tender for Open-air Concerts," to be delivered on or before Monday next to Mr. Adam Partington, Clerk and Solicitor to the Council, at the Town Hall, Ilford.

LA PIA, an attractive young dancer, made her first appearance at the Palace Theatre on Monday. The general character of her work is after the style of Loie Fuller. The principal scene is particularly attractive and novel. This is entitled "The Spirit of the Waves," and represents a strong sea breaking and dashing on the shore. Bathing in the surf is a nymph—La Pia—who apparently is not disturbed by the fierceness of the storm, which, however, finally engulfs her.

A Suggestion for Sunday Shows.

WITH reference to Mr. W. H. Broughton's suggestion, made at the special meeting of the C.D.L. this week, that cinematograph proprietors should get some charity to take over their Sunday entertainments, it is suggested that the Music Hall Home would be an admirable institution to approach with a view to the funds of that organisation benefiting by Sunday cinematograph entertainments. Applications should be made to Mr. Ben Woodger, 21, Wilson-street, Camberwell.

PROPRIETORS of picture shows willing to give Sunday shows for the benefit of the Music Hall Home should write to Mr. Benj. Woodger, secretary, 31, Wilson-road, S.E.

. . . . For a considerable time before the hour of opening the theatre was surrounded by large crowds, and those who were fortunate enough to get a seat witnessed
A SPLENDID PLAY
IN THE HANDS OF A SPLENDID COMPANY.
Mrs. Powell has, by this new piece, proved herself an authoress of good rank. Her drama should have a long and prosperous run before its final ring-down comes on.
The Belfast Evening Telegraph says:—
. . . . It is written by Mrs. Morton Powell in her MOST FORCEFUL AND VIGOROUS STYLE, and is full of exciting and thrilling episodes.

Northern Whig says:—
"Driving a Girl to Destruction" is sure to prove A GREAT POPULAR SUCCESS, as it possesses all the requirements to that end. The plot is ingenious without being over-complicated. The dialogue is crisp and telling, and there is a succession of strong and thrilling situations, while the scenery and accessories are a feature of the production. . . . The unmistakably favourable verdict passed on the play by Belfast is certain to be endorsed in other centres. . . .
The Irish News says:—
There was a big house. . . . and the four acts were followed with a good deal of interest. . . . The plot never lags. . . . The play moves with tremendous rapidity. . . . The company is a strong one. . . . The staging and mounting was on an elaborate scale.
The Belfast News Letter says:—
. . . Her latest work is likely to bring her fresh popularity. . . . The play has plenty of exciting incidents to arrest the attention, and the humorous interludes which characterise it caused much amusement
The Liverpool Press equally enthusiastic.

NOTICE.—OPTION CLAUSE.

COUNSEL WAS REQUESTED TO ADVISE

Whether, having regard to the terms of Clause 16 in the model contract attached to the Arbitrator's Award, the Management are entitled to insist upon the exercise of their option.

(a) In the event of the Artiste having filled by engagements made either wholly or partly after the date of the contract, all vacant dates within 18 months after the date of the notice of intention to exercise the option, and

(b) In the event of the Artiste having, in similar manner, partly filled his time so that the number of vacant dates within that period is insufficient to comply with the option.

COUNSEL'S OPINION.

In my opinion the clause requires the Artiste so to arrange his or her engagements, made after the date of the contract with the Management as to render it possible for the artiste to fulfil a re-engagement with the Management, should the latter exercise the option conferred upon them by the contract; and that it is no answer for the Artiste to say that he or she cannot fulfil such re-engagement because of engagements made by him or by her after the date of the contract.

(a) In my opinion the Management are entitled to insist upon the exercise of their option, although the Artiste may have filled up all vacant dates within 18 months after the date of the notice of intentionto exercise the option, provided such engagements were made wholly after the date of the contract. So far as these engagements were made before the date of the contract, the Artiste is entitled to fulfil them, and the Management cannot insist upon such engagements being a breach of the artist's contract with them.

(b) In my opinion the Artiste is bound to reserve sufficient dates to enable him to fulfil a re-engagement by the Management. If, therefore, he accepts engagements after the date of the contract which prevent him fulfilling his re-engagement in its entirety, he commits a breach of his re-engagement.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, and DISTRICT.—MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, and DISTRICT.—MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.—MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists working in the North of England who have odd weeks vacant are invited to communicate with the Local Manager at above Theatre, with a view to arranging a trial week.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to CO-OPERATIVE OFFICES, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill-matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

BOROUGH OF ABERYSTWYTH.

TENDERS FOR A TENANCY

of the following from May 13 to Oct. 8, 1910, in one lot, are invited by the Town Council:—

1. PROMENADE PIER and ROYAL PIER PAVILION, with fully licensed Refreshment Bar. The Pavilion is suitable for Theatrical, Musical, and Variety Entertainments, Dancing, &c.

2. TOWN BANDSTAND on the Marine Terrace.

3. Well-established exclusive "PITCH" for PIERROT TROUPE on the Castle Grounds.

The Welsh Division of the Territorial Forces (about 20,000 strong) will encamp this season in the immediate vicinity of Aberystwyth.

Further particulars and conditions of the tenancy may be obtained from the undersigned, to whom Tenders stating rent sealed and marked "Pavilion Tender," are to be sent on or before the 3rd day of March, 1910.

The Council do not bind themselves to accept the highest or any tender.

TOWN CLERK.

Town Clerk's Office, Aberystwyth,
Feb. 18, 1910.

BOROUGH OF WEYMOUTH & MELCOMBE REGIS.

The Amusement Committee are prepared to RECEIVE TENDERS

for the exclusive privilege of using the Concert Platform known as the "Sea View Concert Platform," situate on the Foreshore within the said Borough for High-class on WEEKDAYS during the SUMMER SEASON, viz., from May 16 (Whit Monday) to the end of September 1910. The Entertainments must be guaranteed to be of first-class order, and subject to the conditions to be obtained of the undersigned.

Tenders containing not less than two special references as to ability, &c., quoting a sum per week or for the whole season, to be sent to me on or before Feb. 28 1910, endorsed "Tender for Concert Platform."

The Chairs required for the use of the audience must be hired of the Committee at 25s. per 100 chairs per week.

The electric light will be laid on to the Concert Platform and Dressing-rooms, with the necessary fittings at the commencement of the Season. The hirer to pay the cost of the current consumed, and also for the replacing of any fittings which may be broken or damaged. The Committee do not pledge themselves to accept the highest or any tender.

WALTER R. WALLIS,
Secretary Amusement Committee.
Municipal Offices, Weymouth.

FOR SALE

at the end of present successful run,
FRANCIS LAIDLER'S
SUPERB PANTOMIME PRODUCTION,

BABES IN THE WOOD.

This magnificent production which is BREAKING ALL RECORDS at the THEATRE ROYAL, LEEDS, where it was produced on Dec. 23 last, is FOR SALE, only because Mr. Laidler has no use for it next season. The Gorgeous Scenery and Costumes are practically unsoiled.

Owing to the Phenomenal Success of this Pantomime it has been found necessary to put on an extra Matinée each week. There are now Matinées every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

THE PRODUCTION COULD ALSO BE USED FOR "RED RIDING HOOD" PANTOMIME.

The LEEDS MERCURY says:—
The pantomime is superbly dressed and is staged with all the artistic taste in scenic effects that an exacting public expects now from every pantomime of first-class merits. Scenically it is one of the best ever staged at the Royal. The Fairies' Glade is a dazzling dream of floral beauty, and the last scene of all, the Levée at the Palace, is as beautiful as anything seen in Leeds.
The BRADFORD DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—
It is typical of the modern conception of pantomime—wonderful scenery and lovely dresses. The Royal has seen the production of fine pantomimes before, but never a finer than this, and Mr. Laidler may be congratulated on producing an artistic triumph at his first attempt in Leeds. The scenic effects are dazzling. No one who visits the Royal will go away dissatisfied.
Full particulars may be had on application.
FRANCIS LAIDLER, THEATRE ROYAL, LEEDS.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1910.
"The Era" Annual is the usual interesting publication for all who have anything to do with dramatic and musical affairs. It contains a dramatic and musical calendar, stories by, and photos of, many well known artists, all about new plays and revivals in the United Kingdom and some foreign capitals, and all the rest of the useful information generally looked for in it.—Daily Telegraph, Sheffield, Jan. 27, 1910.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

ABERDARE. — NEW THEATRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—Fred C. Somerfield and Percy Brown's company is here with Geoffrey Langdon's Wife. Mr. Wilson Coleman as Felix Beverley displays exceptional ability; Geoffrey Langdon is in the capable hands of Mr. A. Greah Hunt; Mr. John S. Milward successfully represents Jack Stirling; Mr. Cyril Grier is seen to advantage as Colonel Miles; Miss Amy Ellam is excellent in the rôle of Mary; and the Hon. Mrs. Sands and Sweet Nancy are assumed by Miss Kathleen Magee and Miss Minnie Goepel with complete success.

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Pinkie and the Fairies, with all its wealth of colour and beauty, holds the boards at His Majesty's this week. Lavish praise is certainly merited by those clever youngsters, Miss Hawkins (Pinkie), Master Philip Tonge (Tommy), and Miss Florrie Lewis (the Fairy Queen); and amongst the "grown-ups" Miss Kate Foster, Miss Augusta Haviland, Miss Hilda Antony, Miss Gwennie Brogden, Miss Dora Rignold, and Mr. Ambrose Manning give excellent support.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. Evelyn A'Dell's company is here with The Old Home. Mr. Charles Franmore gives an excellent and faithful rendering of the old fisherman Daddy Dean; Mr. Evelyn A'Dell acts with distinction as the Rev. Eric Armstrong; Mr. Horatio Sinclair ably impersonates Lord Avondale; and an amusing portrayal of Sam Adams is given by Mr. Fred L. Connynghame. Miss Nina Blake Adams makes a sympathetic Hazel; Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite adapts herself capitally to the part of Bridget Donoghan; and Miss Ethel Ashleigh is seen to advantage as Polly.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr Walter Mould.—Carl and Mary Ohm's animal circus are at the top of a good all-round bill, and provide an exceedingly smart turn; Fred Land, the popular eccentric comedian, is paying a return visit, and scores heavily; Pawson and Robson present an Irish musical comedy sketch, entitled The Colleen's Eviction, with gratifying success; the Maples sing and dance themselves into favour; and a clever comedy juggler is seen in Cestria; Jock Martin is a capital vocalist and Nan Farren a favourite comedienne; Sid Bedford and company, in The Second Mrs. Chester, and the bioscope are also in the bill.

ALDERSHOT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—The Woman Pays, presented by Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company, is a decided success. Mr. Beresford Innes plays Cyrus Treadgold with excellent results; Mr. Clavering Craig fills the part of Roger Marchant in an acceptable manner; Mr. Phil Harper as Sid Armstrong leaves nothing to be wished for; and Mr. Joseph Magrath supplies many humorous incidents as Mickey. Miss Alice Greenwood is a meritorious exponent of Madge; Miss Kate Blair is capital as Nell; and Miss Lily Beverley and Miss Florence Thorne as Polly and Tabitha are most effective in the comedy parts.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, Jun.—Mr. Frederick Melville's drama, Her Road to Ruin, is being presented by a company organised by the author. Miss Ada Champion acts dramatically as Jess Willoughby, and the scoundrel Philip Hardy is enacted in typical style by Mr. Alex. Bradley. Mary Dawson is finely interpreted by Miss Mabel Coleman; Miss Maud Gill is sweet, neat, and amiable as May Willoughby; and as Frank Temple Mr. Charles Dickens is the self-sacrificing, earnest young clergyman to the life. Miss Grace Emery and H. Talbot are responsible for the humorous element.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—Spessel Bros. and Mack, American eccentrics, create immense fun in the sketch, Scenes in a Café. Tony Freedman is a very acceptable light comedian; Tod Lowen sings old melodies to new words, and parodies in amusing style; the Two Kays introduce a diverting novelty; Mr. Arthur Albert succeeds admirably in impersonations in song; Reno, comedy cyclist, accomplishes some astonishing feats on the wheel; Lew Peterman amuses in song and "sheeney patter"; the Ten Dixie Girls give a lively "turn" of dance and song in The Silver Coon. The bioscope pictures are A Duel in the Time of Richelieu, Calino's Fire Extinguisher, and A Wonderful Hair Remover.

BARNSLEY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Manager, Mr. A. C. Mitchell. — Jason's Dick Whittington pantomime is appearing here. It is a capital show. Miss Maude Beaumont makes a charming Dick; Fred Ward as Idle Jack excels; William Miller as Fitzwarren causes roars; Miss Eva Compton as Alice is good; and Bob Stephenson is extremely funny as Sarah. The scenery is good, the songs excellent, and the gags clever.

EMPIRE PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. Smithson.—Consul is drawing big houses; Bros. Gaudsmidt, clown acrobats, are exceptionally clever; Bert Weston scores heavily, his jokes being very good; Dacey and Lewis are energetic entertainers; and Lena Burton (clever mimic), Johnson and Devere (comedy and trick cyclists), and Chris Baker (comedian) also contribute to the bill.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy and J. E. Cardwell's pantomime The House That Jack Built is here. Miss Daisy Wood is a typical and Jolly Jack and Miss Dolly Dodds a winning Jill. Mr. J. Harrison is a humorous Aunt Purdy, and also funny is Mr. H. Hillerby as Squire Bunce. Messrs. Doyle and Gibson as Scraggs and Scraggles and Messrs. Walker and Lake as Professor Pills and Squills are responsible for much laughter. Miss Etty Jones as Colin and Miss Jenny Marsden as Gretchen act prettily, and Miss Isa Wilson is a gracious Fairy Twinklestar.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. Charles Harrington's company is appearing with The Octoroon. Mr. Harrington is singularly successful as Salem Scudder, and Miss Hero Hathaway is a winning Zoe. Mr. Victor Gardom is a sufficiently villainous Jacob McCloski, and Mr. David Blair makes an heroic figure of George Peyton. Mr. John Boehm is a popular Pete, and Miss Gem Lloyde is a good Paule, while the Wah-No-Tee of Mr. Reginald Kloof shows marked ability. Specialities are done by Rich and Moore, Shorty May, the Tennesseans, L. Allen, and James Hodges. Uncle Tom's Cabin is also billed.

TIVOLI.—Lessee, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—Mysticus is the premier turn of a capital programme, and he gives a meritorious quick-changing act; Tom Gott is an excellent comedian; a capital equilibristic exhibition is given by the Reays; Irene and Morton are really expert dancers; the Kahn and Kahn Trio introduce a number of clever sleight-of-hand tricks; Gwen Francis has some catchy songs, and capital pictures are shown by Vernon's Bioscope.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. C. Routledge.—Bliss and Bliss' vaudeville company are here, with an entertainment of mirth and melody by the Five Bohemians, Miss Dara Verna, comedienne, Archie Davies, comedian, Bliss and Bliss, comedians, Louis Kerno, Frank Probin, and the Three Jackaways, sketch artists.

BATH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—Farcical comedy holds sway here for a pleasant change, in Where is William? presented by the author, Mr. Chas. Windermere, who also appears in the leading rôle; William Jolley is capitally enacted by Mr. Rule Pyott; Mr. Leslie Norman impersonates the peppery General Rubbub in true farcical style; and Mr. F. Westlake does well as Joe Budge. The lovers, Harry and Phyllis, are portrayed by Mr. Wylie A. Thompson and Miss Clare Manifield; Miss Belle Donaldson is good as Lady Gregory; and a quaint sketch is that of Miss Zoe Davis as Eliza. Miss Evelyn Shelley makes a buxom Emily.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Mona Vivian, although still young in years, is an expert in the art of entertaining; Thressen's terriers are highly intelligent; Fritz Kolnau, the human flute, fully justifies the title; Martin Henry, assisted by Miss Irene Rose, enacts an interesting episode, The Silver Medal; the Wedburns continue to amuse; Harry Luck sings a couple of amusing songs; and another comedian who goes well is Reg. Ewen.

ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Manager, Mr. W. Lawson Howes.—Charles W. Poole's latest Myriorama opened here on Monday for the usual Lenten stay in Bath. The many artists engaged include Amasis, a first-class conjuror; the Seven Bramusas, in their musical scena, Music Afloat; the Ettenas, on rolling globes and in a capital skipping-rope dance; Harry Raymond and his clever little daughter renew their acquaintance with local audiences; and Willie Dean causes endless laughter as a comedian. Mr. Robert Tebbit makes an excellent guide, and Mr. A. S. Morrell has charge of the music.

BELFAST.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. F. R. Benson commenced on Monday the second and last week of his engagement here, when he and his talented company produced King John with every element of success. In the title-rôle Mr. Benson furnished a very clever performance, and aroused much enthusiasm during the course of the piece. Mrs. Benson is also deserving of high praise for her finished impersonation of Constance; and Mr. H. O. Nicholson acquitted himself with distinction as Philip (King of France); Miss Molly Terraine must be congratulated on her fine assumption of Arthur; and Queen Elinor was ably sustained by Miss Elinor Alkin; the rôle of Hubert De Burgh was done full justice to by Mr. Edward Harrison; Mr. Eric Maxon portrayed Philip Fauconbridge with much effect; and Miss Violet Farebrother's impersonation of Blanche of Spain reflected much credit on her. Other parts were skilfully enacted by Messrs. Murray Carrington, W. W. Caithness, Guy B. Rathbone, Alfred Wild, and T. Frazer Outram. During the week Julius Cæsar, The Winter's Tale, The Taming of the Shrew, Twelfth Night, The Merry Wives of Windsor (Students' night), and Macbeth have been presented.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The attraction here is The Sorrows of Satan, produced by Miss Loie Esmond's company, under the direction of Mr. Edward Neville. Miss Rosie Neville gives a charming and delightful impersonation of Lady Sybil Elton, and Prince Lucio Rimanez is skilfully sustained by Mr. Edward Neville, his acting in the weird and mystic scenes creating a profound impression. As Geoffrey Tempest, Mr. George Derricke is all that could be desired; and Miss Loie Esmond as the American heiress Diana Chesney scores a success. The rôle of the Earl of Elton is in the capable hands of Mr. J. Le Fleming; and Miss Dorothy Dewhurst furnishes a sympathetic impersonation of Mavis Clare. Humour is infused into the piece by Miss Cecile Bryne as Mrs. Grimes, the landlady; and other characters are sustained by Miss May Morne and Messrs. Frank Wheatley and Percy Foreman. The sparkling comedietta, Two Soft—in which Miss Dorothy Dewhurst and Mr. Frank Wheatley appear to advantage—forms a most acceptable curtain-raiser. Nana was billed for Friday evening.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The star here is Witty Watty Walton, who creates roars of laughter with his imitations, including Casey at the Goal; Velanche's Dogs, the canine football team, furnish an extraordinary performance; and the dancing of the Bros. Ford is first-class; the barrel-jumping performance of Augustin and Hartley has been enthusiastically received; and the Bros. Hannaway, song and dance artists, gain much favour. Also here are Gesta and Hos, speciality artists; Bowden and Bell, song and dance artists; Chas. Cass, vocalist; Edwards and Ward, comedy duo; and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Laidler.—The chief position is held by Miss Rachel Lowe, the charming and accomplished comedienne, who made a big hit on Monday. Mr. Dion Wade's humour is irresistible; the juggling feats of Francis and Alfred are first-class; and the Brennans (May and Will) furnish a clever exhibition of the terpsichorean art; Mr. John Macaulay's rendering of several songs gain him deserved appreciation; and also here are Mr. Pat White, Irish comedian; Miss Dot Hardy, comedienne; and the bioscope.

BILSTON. — ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Licensee, Mr. A. L. Owen; Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Tunstall.—Cinderella forms the attraction here, and Mr. Nelson Barratt's company is highly successful. The scenes are pretty, the singing sweet and tuneful, and the dances clever and artistic. Miss Eva Travis makes an admirable Cinderella; and Miss Georgia Hawkins a charming Prince. Messrs. Harry May and Dave Anderson are clever comedians, and provide plenty of amusement as the two footmen Phil and Garlic; and Mr. James Mackenkie introduces some droll antics and humorous patter into the part of Peps, the page.

BIRKENHEAD. — NEW THEATRE ROYAL. — Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert M. King.—Mr. Ian Robertson's company, in the remarkable play The Passing of the Third Floor Back, has achieved a distinct success on the occasion of this, their first visit here. It is difficult to speak too highly of Mr. Ian Robertson, whose finished playing of the leading rôle is worthy of the highest commendation. Miss Barbara Everest also displays great discernment and ability; and the splendid efforts of Miss Jeannie Thomas, Miss Helena Parsons, Miss Drusilla Wills, Miss Lena Delphine, Miss Blanche Ripley, Mr. P. Gedge Twyman, Mr. W. O. Billington, Mr. J. Woodall Birde, Mr. Stanley Brown, and Mr. Herbert Garthorne are fully recognised and appreciated. Mr. Robertson's little play Come Here makes an admirable curtain-raiser.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, M. J. Keating.—Mr. George Mozart, a sterling comedian, makes a welcome reappearance after a somewhat lengthy absence, and is received with undiminished cordiality. W. T. Ellwanger and his capable company in the amusing sketch Who Did It? are also a leading attraction. Morny Cash, a resourceful comedian, maintains his popularity; and other prominent turns include the Mysterious Marriotts, clever thought-readers; Frank Le Dent, a smart juggler; Arthur Reece, the popular comedian; Alaskas, in a comic acrobatic act; Mike Nono, a really accomplished variety artist and dancer; Miss Amy Sullivan, a charming comedienne; and Brown's Royal Bioscope. Mr. Ernest Denney is musical-director.

HIPPODROME. — Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—A season of dramatic entertainments on the two-houses-a-night principle has attained considerable popularity here. On Monday O. Silverstone and H. Wright's company opened in the sensational play The Nihilist, and were cordially received. Mr. Geo. Mitchell is prominent with a telling impersonation of Ivan, a blacksmith; and an excellent cast also includes Miss Edna Clare, an artist of ability.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; General-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—"The last three weeks" of the highly-successful pantomime Jack and the Beanstalk is the latest announcement, and there continue to be crowded audiences.

PRINCE OF WALES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnstone.—The run of The Babes in the Wood pantomime terminates this week, and on Monday Mr. Graham will present Jack and Jill pantomime for a fortnight's run.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Barnardo; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—The Aladdin pantomime goes with a great swing, and crowded audiences pay tribute to its excellence. The company work hand in hand, and warm praise is due to Miss Ethel Beech, Miss Molly Wynne, Miss Ray Ford, and Miss Florence Dudley for their individual efforts.

BORDESLEY PALACE. — Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Mr. Ernest Carpenter's version of Mr. Hall Caine's play Pete is voted a huge success by crowded audiences. Mr. Frederick Victor plays with great effect in the title-rôle, and Miss Constance Bachner gives an excellent interpretation of Kate Cregeen. Philip Christian is taken with success by Mr. Alfred Lugg, and Mr. Maurice Yorke as Ross Christian shows conspicuous ability. Mr. Ellis J. Preston is well chosen as Cæsar Cregeen, and other characters are admirably rendered.

METROPOLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—High life in the French capital is pictured in realistic colours in the drama, The Idol of Paris, which is being presented by Mr. James Bell's company, and is drawing full houses. Miss Annie Bell gives a notable performance as Flare Flare, the music hall star, and is a great favourite. Mr. Cyri Austen-Lee is clever as Philip D'Esterre, the man about town; and Mr. Scott Leighton is a good figure as Victor Cashello. The comedy parts are ably presented by Mr. H. Vivian Thomas and Miss Annie Megson. The piece is well mounted.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Manager, Mr. F. Martin Morris.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is accorded a welcome reception in A Soldier's Honour. Mr. T. Arthur Ellis displays ability in his portrayal of Captain Deane; and Mr. Jerrold E. Reed scores well as Captain Temple. Mr. Andrew Money and Miss Cissie St. Elmo undertake the heavy characters with conspicuous success; and other parts are cleverly taken by Miss Iza Lyndon, Miss Isobel Marte, Miss Edie Macklin, and Miss Amy Doby.

CARLTON THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Sins of the Fathers is revived here with remarkable success. It is being presented by Messrs. E. Faulkner and M. de Courtsey, by arrangement with Mr. Wallace Davidson. Mr. Max Coutts gives an effective interpretation of Sir Reginald Moreland, and Miss Edith Blande proves herself a clever actress as Camille Le Blanc. Mr. Victor Howard earns applause for a fine portrayal, and Miss Ethel Wynne Matthews displays ability as Ethel Harmsworth. Miss Dorothy Radford is clever in a dual rôle. Bright humour is supplied by Mr. Ross O'Brien (Justin Thym) and Miss Dorothy West Symes (Polly). The production is well staged and mounted.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Williams.—Miss Daisy Jerome's popularity in Birmingham is evidenced by the cordial reception accorded her each evening, her songs being taken up whole-heartedly in every part of the theatre; Grant Gardner and Mary Stoddart present a delightful collection of vaudeville frivolities, which earn great applause; and Holden's Mannikins are entertaining in a perfect representation of a miniature music-hall performance. The Clement Trio excel in smart evolutions on the trapeze; G. W. Hunter is amusing in patter and song; the Jackley Trio are favourite humorists; the Georgias give a bright entertainment; and J. C. Scatter, comedian, and Edith Heron-Brown are other notable contributors.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. E. Foster; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Lucas.—Fred Karno's clever company of comedians head a capital bill with their football travesty, Midnight Wanderers v. Middleton Piecans. Mr. Gilbert Childs is a huge success as the central figure, Stiffy, the goalkeeper. Barrett and Knowles are old Birmingham pantomime favourites, and this week's engagement is adding considerably to their laurels; Fatmah Diard, the American prima donna, pleases with her wonderful voice; Rossi Ashton is a popular sketch artist; the Eight Lancashire Lads evoke rounds of applause for clever dancing; Leslie Harris entertains with popular songs at the piano; Will Johnson is an up-to-date comedian; Harry Allister appears in remarkable impersonations; and Daisy Martell is a pleasing comedienne and dancer.

GAIETY.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—At the head of an attractive company are the Szarvasi Ferencz troupe of Hungarian artists, who have a great reception in a clever exhibition of dancing and athletic exercises. Daisy Mayer is a warm favourite in coon songs and dances; Sinclair and Whiteford present a sketch that provokes endless merriment; and the Brothers Ashley in their comedy boxing sketch are well received. Harry Pleon proves himself an impersonator of decided ability; the Five Bombays are talented vocalists and dancers; and Tom Joy, comedian, and Victor and Louis are other popular artists.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Barrasford's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. C. Baldry.—Fred Karno's latest absurdity, Skating, strikes a popular note in Birmingham, and it is crowded with original and funny situations that keep audiences in continual merriment. Johnny Doyle and Charlie Chaplin are conspicuous figures. Fred Russell provides a first-class ventriloquial turn with his quaint figure "Coster Joe"; Edie Veno is a vivacious and popular comedian; and Mlle. Pollo has a good reception in a daring gymnastic turn. Kinero-Moulin with Mlle. Kioki presents a series of novel balancing feats; and Dave Carter, the popular Irish tenor, is making many new friends. Brent Hayes is a clever banjoist, and Tony Black an enlivening Scotch comedian.

ASTON HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Aston Hippodrome, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—We have here Les Piccolinos, a couple of versatile midgets, whose performances include dancing, marksmanship, equilibristic feats, and a daring cycle act. Miss Diana Hope's episode of modern life, The Altar of Duty, appeals strongly; and Rastus and Banks furnish a delightful entertainment of song and dance. The Days are well received in an exhibition of telepathy; and the Vays contribute a clever scena, Life in the Slums. Baby Myrtle Grove is popular; Fred Erick is responsible for much merriment; and Leslie's Comedy Cadets present an original naval scena.

BLYTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur C. Moody.—The visit of Mr. J. A. Campbell's excellent company with From Convent to Throne has proved a powerful attraction. The part of Princess Maritza in the hands of Miss Mary Fulton is made prominent; the Mother Superior is well enacted by Miss K. M. Davies; Miss Dorothy Leal gives an excellent interpretation of Lady Violetta; Lieut. Von Hapsburg is satisfactorily presented by Mr. Graham Woods; Mr. Wm. Passmore submits an excellent performance of the General; Mr. Wm. J. Miller and Mr. A. F. Stuart are highly successful as the villains of the piece, Baron Streslau and Prince Maurice respectively. Miss Maudie Grayson, Miss Lissa Young, and Mr. T. G. Vane supply the comedy element in plenty.

BOLTON.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Messrs. M. H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's company is here, with For Wife and Kingdom. Mr. Reginald T. Fox as General Von Nestolde and Mr. Matthew F. Glenville as Captain Lubeck give powerful performances of their respective parts; Mr. Edward Hobart as Sergeant Offenbach meets with much success; Miss Lydia Audre is a delightful Grand Duchess Marie of Gotsburg; and Miss Lilian Malvern as Esther, the wise woman of Gotsburg, is successful. Miss Mabel Veriton, Miss Alice Buckland, and Mr. Lewis Gordon keep the audience in a merry mood.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F Elliston: Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—A strong programme here comprises Mr. Charles T. Aldrich, a versatile artist; Messrs. McEwan and Pollard, in a costume sketch, Duval Outdone; the Rosses, comedians and dancers; Chiko, equilibristic contortionist; Miss Jewell St. Leger, comedienne; the Primrose Quartette, harmonising male vocalists, in a Welsh song-scena; Marie Terry and J. S. Bentley, up-to-date cadets; Bert Bowden, comedian; Pat Lynch, the dancing demon; the Four Athos, ball manipulators and novelty acrobats; and the Premier Imperial Pictures.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME, LTD.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Manager, Mr. A. R. Harrison.—John Tiller's pantomime, Jack and Jill, is well patronised here. The principal parts are capably filled. Specialities are introduced by the Tiller Troupe of dancers, Alice Maude (the juvenile Vesta Tilley), the Imperial Ballet Troupe, Bruce Green (Dame Durden), Harry Cotton (Baron Jolliboy), and Horace Jones (Ginger, the page).

BOOTLE. — MUNCASTER THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Penningtons; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Manager, Mr. H. Young.—Cinderella, presented by Mr. James Kiddie, has met with a conspicuous success. The scenic and stage effects are admirable, as it also the singing and dancing. Miss Kitty Avey in the title-rôle soon becomes a favourite, and Mr. Harry Huttin as Pimples, the page, is very amusing. Messrs. Harry Bliss and W. G. Wesley as the two Ugly Sisters; Mr. Leslie Hawkins as Baron Shiphtalotte; and Miss Lily Ennis as Dandini, the Prince's valet, are all successful; and clever acrobatic feats are performed by the Lisando Brothers. Large crowds fill the theatre nightly.

BOURNEMOUTH. — THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—A Message From Mars is presented here this week by Mr. Fredk. Mouillot's principal company, and draws large houses. Mr. F. Vernon Travers as Horace Parker is excellent; Mr. Wm. H. Brougham as the Messenger is impressive and dignified; Mr. Norman Clark furnishes a very clever and finished study of the Tramp; Mr. Danelle Greene as the Policeman is good; Miss Parker is played naturally and well by Miss Aubrey Ashton, as also is the part of Minnie Templar by Miss Rose Helene. Others who contribute to the success of the piece are Mr. Clifford Lomer as the American and Miss Mary Buckstone as Mrs. Clarence.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Jack and the Beanstalk is to be withdrawn this week, although enjoying unprecedented prosperity. This year's production has certainly been the most successful of Mr. Hart's efforts in the way of pantomime.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Councillor F. Laidler; Manager, Mr. E. M. Hamilton.—This is the last week of the reign of The Forty Thieves. On Monday last Miss Ada Fawne, the smart principal boy of the pantomime, had her benefit. There was a crowded audience, the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress being present, and assistance was rendered in the way of special "turns" by the artists from the Bradford Theatre Royal and Theatre Royal, Leeds.

THE EMPIRE.—The Kremo Family of Nine Risley Acrobats occupy the premier position, and their remarkably clever performance elicits unbounded applause. Addie Dorina, a clever protean artist, presents a smart sketch Dr. Spot's Patients; in a pot-pourri entertainment, comprising wire-walking, comic juggling, and hoop manipulating, the Prince Milner Trio are very smart; international dancing by the Great Northern Troupe is enjoyable; Odeyne Spark, comedienne, sings in dainty style; in their Irish duets Stuart and Morgan harmonise well; a funny burlesque presented by Doctor Awful Bogie elicits hearty laughter; in a smart seaside sketch the Smythsons are very amusing; Frank and Jen Latona again present their very clever turn, comprising music and humour, with their accustomed success; and pictures are shown by the American Bioscope.

THE PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Edward Harrison.—Nora Stockelle, soubrette, contributes in very dainty style; the Lafaille Troupe of clever gymnasts and equilibrists in their novel feats of strength and agility are heartily appreciated; Steel and Laing are smart comedians, who introduce clever acrobatic dancing and funny patter into their sketch; Dorma Morgan is a very charming and chic comedienne; Jock McNeil's Scotch speciality dancing is very smart; an enjoyable musical entertainment is given by the Five Musical Palmers; a remarkable performance, comprising many novel features, is rendered by the Scum-Thuse Troupe of acrobats and jugglers, who are applauded heartily; and there are some amusing Palace Perfection Pictures.

BRIGHTON. — GRAND THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—A Daughter of the Sea is proving very attractive here. Miss Florrie Green, a promising young actress, achieves distinct success in the title-rôle; Mr. Lewis Gilbert (author of the play) is powerfully convincing as the villainous lawyer; Mr. Victor Howard acquits himself admirably as the crippled hero; and Mr. Edward de Vere submits a good character-study as the old sea captain. Much amusement is afforded by Miss Mattie Everett and Mr. Johnny Chippendale; and others rendering able support include Mr. Sutton Taylor and Mr. Ashmore Vincent.

ALHAMBRA. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Smith.—Arthur Breton and company achieve great success in the comedy sketch, A Sleepless Night; Allsopp and Beckwith are diverting in His First Lesson in Acting; Scholey and Scholey are very effective in Winning a Wager; Belle Sylvia gains hearty applause for her brightly-rendered songs; Wragg and Wragg are smart swordsmen and athletes; Little Barney, comedian, is highly amusing with his songs and patter; Fred Hanlon contributes songs in pleasing style; Buster Brown is aptly described as a "funny man on skates"; Grace Langley sings and dances herself into favour; and the programme also includes the Alhambra Picture graph.

Suzanne de Verneuil and ladies appear in classical art poses; the Pasquali Brothers perform some clever tumbling and equilibristic feats; Richard Wally is a very smart juggler; Godfrey James, a tenor vocalist, sings in good style; Eastbury is a lightning clay modeller; Nora Beverly contributes charming songs; Gladys Ré Vell is a pleasing vocalist; gymnastic and acrobatic acts are presented by Natalia and Diana, the Alberto Troupe, the Waltons and the Ted Moxon Trio; and Mark Leslie is well received in coon songs and dances.

WEST PIER.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Mr. John E. Watson's company is here, with The New Boy. Mr. F. G. Thurstans is very amusing in the title-rôle; Miss Phyllis Manners is admirable as the perplexed Mrs. Rennick; Mr. T. Weldon Atherstone is effective as Doctor Candy; Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood gives an excellent portrayal of Felix Roach; Mr. Alfred Field Fisher's Theodore de Brizac merits warm praise; Miss Evelyn Ormonde makes a bright and winsome Nancy Roach; Mr. Leo G. Lilly is a capital Bullock, Major; and able support is rendered by Miss Vera Wallace (Susan) and Mr. H. F. Wildy (Mr. Stubber).

BRISTOL.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—Miss Alice Pollard, the charming Goody of Mr. Chute's pantomime, closed her engagement here on Saturday, having to take up her part in Our Miss Gibbs for Mr. George Edwardes. Miss Pollard had a grand "send-off," bouquets and baskets innumerable being presented to her. Miss Daisy Lloyd Wood now plays Goody. She had a hearty welcome on Monday evening, and introduced several of her most popular songs. She plays the part vivaciously, and her smart dancing is appreciated. The benefit of Mr. Horace Mills (Mother Hubbard) is announced for Friday, March 4.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Carpenter's Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—The pantomime Robinson Crusoe is doing remarkably well, full houses being the rule at each performance. Miss Kitty Upton and Miss Blanche Marion are very popular as principal boy and girl; the Sisters Albert and the Sisters Emson are also highly successful; the comedians, Messrs. Martell, Bennett, Garth, and Dunlop, keep up the fun in excellent style; and the rest of the company all do well. Good dancing is introduced by Miss Judith Espinosa and the Lottie Stone Quartette. Scenery and dresses are well up to the mark.

PALACE.—Local Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Assistant-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—John F. Preston and company successfully present their fine racing sketch, A Ride to Win, three thoroughbred racehorses adding much to the attraction. Richard Karsy's Giant Myriophone is an interesting musical novelty; Ray Raymond is a pleasing and accomplished comedienne; Carl Lynn amuses immensely with his mimicry of various animals, &c.; Elroy, the armless wonder, does many surprising things with his feet; the Sisters Harcourt are capable duettists and dancers; Poole and Maguire, vocal comedy duo, do a really good turn; and Russell Brandow, coloured comedian, is a clever eccentric dancer. Some good animated pictures conclude.

EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Alec Hurley and company score with The Cockneys in Japan; the Courtiers, vaudeville entertainers, provide a very pleasing turn; the Elvio Trio have a comic sketch, Jim, the Lady's Maid Burglar; L. W. Harris, comedian, is successful; the Frantz Comedy Five entertain with their acrobatic act, "Happy Schooldays"; Blanche Vincent is a pleasing chorus vocalist; Zera and Zema perform neatly some difficult hand balancing feats; and Lillie Mount is a clever juvenile comedienne. Animated pictures conclude.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. James Cramer; Manager, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—The charming musical comedy The Flower Girl is presented by Mr. T. N. Walter, and well received by good houses. Miss Lena Brickwell is excellent in the title-rôle. Mr. John T. MacCallum is very successful as Joe Wheeler; Alphonse de Racquet is well presented by Mr. Henry Adnes; the Hon. Billy Greenhill is sustained by Mr. J. Burlington Rigg, a good baritone vocalist. Mr. John A. Latham as Johnny Wheeler, Mr. Cyril Delevanti as Reginald Rackett, Miss Elsa Brettingham as Lizette, and Miss Eva Brickwell as the Suffragette keep the fun rolling. Miss Idelia May does some clever dancing. The full chorus and augmented orchestra are under the direction of Mr. Julian Butt.

BURNLEY.—VICTORIA OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Much ability is shown here this week by the excellent cast of Hush Money. Mr. C. Barrington Foote skilfully portrays the character of Sexton Blake, and Mr. J. H. Darnley presents a finished performance of the villainous Lord Walgrave; Mr. Ernest E. Imeson is an excellent John Shard, and Mr. Harry Hartley is highly humorous as Tinker; Miss Theresa Osborne is a charming Lady Muriel, and Miss Ida Wilson is very good as Mary Woodford. Pedro, a fine bloodhound, is introduced with good effect.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—David Fuller, a powerful operatic vocalist, greatly pleases with baritone songs, and Frank Hartley gains much favour for cleverly executed jugglery; Emerson and Baldwin, in addition to smart juggling, introduce some good dry humour instrumental music; Barrington contributes an exposition of trick piano playing and excellent solos, and a pleasing baritone vocalist is Ben Richards; Friscari is a wonderful manipulator of top hats, and a smart equilibristic and juggling turn is presented by the Maximilians; clever dancing is performed by Bonnie Goodwin's Opollo Piccaninnies, with Miss Lily Vine as principal, and the Fordyces dance very well; Jack Warman, a comedian of the shy type, is very successful, and A Magnetic Removal is shown by the Palace Pictures.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—Theatre Royal.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Peuleve. Mr. Robert Macdonald's company, with The Dairymaids, has drawn crowded houses. Mr. Norman Bowyer plays Joe Mivens with genuine humour; Lieut. Sam Brudenell is capitally enacted by Mr. Walter Champney; Mr. Horace Manger is successful as Lieut. Frank Meredith; as is Mr. George Ascot in the rôle of Dr. O'Byrne. Miss Winnie Hall is a vivacious Peggy; Miss May Casson makes Winifred a very dainty creation; Helen is nicely played by Miss Dorothy Vere; Miss Nellie Le Breton is fully equal to the part of Eliza, Lady Brudenell and Miss Pyechase finding stately exponents in Miss Lily Roselle and Miss Julie St. George. The piece is brought up to date with new songs and scenery, and the chorus is excellent.

CAMBRIDGE. — New Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—The house was packed on Monday night to welcome Miss Zena Dare and the other members of Mr. Geo. Dance's company in The Little Duke. Miss Dare's reception must have been very gratifying, and she seemed to revel in the part. Miss Dolly Castles as Diane de Noaille not only sang well but gave a very charming rendering; Mr. Reginald Adair has a very good appearance as Chevalier de Malignon, his acting and singing being first class; the Abbé de La Touche has a capital exponent in Mr. Alec Johnstone, his fine voice being heard to advantage; Miss Kate Graham-Beck makes a stately Duchesse; Miss Nellie Dade as Baroness de Bellechasse enters thoroughly into the spirit of the character; Mr. Johnny Danvers is an extremely funny Baron de Bellechasse; Mr. Jack Gray is all that can be wished as Armand Soliveau.

CANTERBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon.—Bright and pretty is the keynote of Mr. J. D. Hunter's pantomime, Jack and the Beanstalk, which is here. The veteran proprietor makes an ideal Dame Trott, and is as full of vigour and funniosities as ever. He is ably "aided and abetted" in all his pranks and topical skits by Mr. Matt Melrose as the wicked Squire, and the pair keep the house in roars of laughter. Miss Lallah Melrose is a charming principal boy, and in conjunction with the Squire is responsible for a clever double dance on a Venetian blind; Miss Vera Dudley gives a vivacious enactment of Jill (the principal girl); and the Sisters Edwards (Vera and Clara) as Boy Blue and Bo-Peep are two of the prettiest actresses in the show. Rollicking fun comes from Messrs. Fred Beck and Phil Inglis as Johnny Stout and Tommy Green respectively; and Mr. G. E. Cowell is entirely successful as the giant "grim and tall."

CARDIFF.—New Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—A visit is being successfully paid by Mr. Herbert Sleath's company, in the interesting play, The Woman in the Case, and large audiences have nightly been attracted. Miss Kathleen Russell gives a highly-finished portrayal of Margaret Rolfe, and has established an enviable reputation; another skilful delineation is that of Claire Forster by Miss Winifred Pearson, the dramatic force displayed by this clever actress gaining great appreciation; Mr. William Kershaw as Julian Rolfe fills the rôle in a quiet and convincing manner; Mr. James Lindsay's portrayal of Thompson stamps him as an actor of exceptional ability; while a clever piece of character-acting is given by Mr. Sydney Palfrey as Klauffsky. Mr. Paul Wynter as Jimmy O'Neil and Mr. W. F. Fletcher as Walters fulfil their responsibilities with ease; and Miss Mary Griffiths imparts the necessary humour to the rôle of Mrs. Hughes without making the part in any way ludicrous. The piece is preceded by Her Ladyship's Guest, capably performed by Miss Griffiths, Mr. W. F. Fletcher, and Mr. Mervyn A. Rentoul.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Taylor.—Two full houses on Monday listened with admiration to Miss Ada Colley's singing, which has justly earned for her the title of the Australian Nightingale; Van Biene is here once more, in an entirely new sketch, in which the musician and actor both figure to great advantage; a combination of eccentricities and instrumental solos is given by the Leslie Brothers, who are as humorous in the one as they are clever in the other; as a mimic Syd May excels, his impersonations of the various comedians being perfect; Siems, card and coin manipulator, is baffling to all; Larry Lewis causes continuous laughter with his two songs; and Florence Yayman, coon caricaturist, is among the best in her line. The Sisters Pine introduce smart comedy in their Golf act; the Leonards (Bab and Jennie), in a comedy act, are quite good; Violet Stockelle is a chic comedienne; and an instructive film is also in the programme.

Theatre Royal.—General-Manager, Mr. Graham Morrison; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. E. Clay.—The American actor, Mr. Raynor, and company are appearing in a répertoire. On Monday night the evergreen play Moths was staged. Mr. Raynor's representation of Lord Jura was exceptionally fine, the languid, complacent, yet dictatorial manner of the English peer being depicted with infinite cleverness; Miss Dora Dench acted with great feeling as Vere Herbert; Miss Cecilia Dare made a charming and effective Duchess de Sonnaz; and Miss Hilda Blanche represented Fuchsia Leach with piquant effect. Mr. Clinton Baddeley was excellent as Prince Zouroff; and Mr. Milton C. Curtis (Duke of Mull) and Mr. Conrad Heywood (Raphael de Corrèze) gave efficient expositions. Miss Frances Waring as Lady Dolly gave a particularly clever rendering of a difficult rôle. The piece was excellently staged, and the costumes elaborate. Camille and Young Mrs. Winthrop are also in the week's bill.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Will A. Jackson.—The Donaldson Brothers and their company present their screamingly funny act, Sports in a Jungle; Ted Curtis and Pica introduce a successful vocal and dancing speciality; Bert Maddison, a local comedian, again proves his ability as a humorous Welsh patter artist; the Donnas Trio give a sensational trapeze performance; and Damerell and Rutland are amusing comedians. J. H. Greener, the premier singing pit-lad; Joan Deerino, vocalist and violinist; and Nora Emerald, a pleasing comedienne, also appear. Perfection pictures conclude.

CARLISLE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart M'Kim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—Mr. J. C. Lodge-Percy and J. Martin's company in a répertoire of popular plays commenced a week's engagement here on Monday with The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. On Tuesday Sidney Grundy's comedy A Fool's Paradise was the attraction. Mr. J. C. Lodge-Percy was quite at home as Sir Peter Lund, and was responsible for most of the laughs; Philip Selwyn was nicely played by Mr. Andrew Money; and Mr. Cecil Kerr appeared to advantage as Lord Normantower. Miss Henrietta Schrier's Beatrice Selwyn was a most interesting performance; and Miss Marie Ramuz effectively represented Kate Derwent. Camille and Moths are billed for the remaining nights.

CASTLEFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman, J.P.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Draycott and company are here with Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's new play, Her Path of Sorrow. Mr. Chas. Draycott gives a striking and powerful performance as Richard Burfield; as Pauline Ferrars Mrs. Charles Draycott quite wins her way to the hearts of the audience; as the betrayed Nellie Rayne Miss Fay Garnet-Vayne plays with much force; Mr. Chas. Reyne is a capital Farmer Rayne; and some excellent work is done by Mr. Theo Balfour as Markham Ferrars. Mr. Frank Etheridge gives a capital reading of Pauline's faithful lover, Lionel Heathcote; and Miss Nellie Freeland presents a careful study of Mamselle Lucille. Mr. Will Hook is an amusing Tommy Onions; and Miss Daisy Carlton a humorous Polly Green.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, The Castleford Queen's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing Directors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson.—Scener and Fridkin's Troupe head the bill here. Their dances are executed with a whirl of energy; Corman's Juveniles have a pretty vocal scena, The Waif; Tony Iveson as the Ragman at the piano provides some excellent fun; Flo Chevalier is a charming vocalist; Wal Owen as a silent comedian is loudly applauded; Miss Ruby Dahl and her "merry mannikins" are proving as popular as ever; Horace Monto sings and dances with skill; Zelda delights with clever selections on many instruments; and the Loyal Dominion Co. animated pictures are still in favour.

CHELTENHAM. — Opera House. — General-Manager, Mr. H. Oswald Redford.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's excellent company introduced A White Man on Monday to an enthusiastic house. In the central part of James Wynnegate Mr. Guy Hastings acts with feeling and distinction; Mr. Charles Maunsell renders with effect the part of the unhappy Earl of Kerhill; Miss Kathleen Maude plays the emotional part of Diana Countess of Kerhill successfully; Miss Ormonde Wynne gives a neat little sketch of the Dowager Lady Kerhill; and other members of the English patrician group are satisfactorily represented by Miss Dorothy Duncan and Messrs. Harold Richards and V. T. Gerald. Mr. R. A. Brandon presents a strikingly realistic study of Big Bill; the three cowboys of Carson's Ranch are skilfully differentiated by Messrs. Gerald Valentine, Alexander Munro, and Jay Ellis; and other Western types are ably sketched by Messrs. Frank Mayo, Claude Agnew, Ray Raymond, and David Douglas. The old chief, Tab-y-wena, is impersonated by Mr. Eric Hudson, a native Indian, with all the necessary dignity; and a half-caste interpreter is cleverly impersonated by Mr. Cecil Carter. Miss Hilda Barita acts effectively as the ill-fated Natu-rich; and little Hal is delightfully played by Miss Nora Nagle. Humorous are the studies of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Doolittle contributed by Mr. Fred Stone and Miss Janet Stone. The stage-manager is Mr. Harold Richardson.

COLCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Charles Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona.—Mr. Andrew Emm's company, in the drama The Diver's Luck, is here. Mr. William Macready appeared successfully on Monday in the part of Martin Faber; as Barney Bawn Mr. Edmund O'Grady was good; Mr. William Dexter made an efficient Tom Hall; the part of Pedro was in the capable keeping of Mr. James Burt; Mr. Harry Bristow worked successfully as Snowfall; Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff made a good Helen Wyngate; and Miss Pearl Noyle appeared as Peggy; Mr. H. J. Walton did well in the rôle of Maurice Wyngate; the juvenile character of Winnie Hall was nicely played by Miss Phyllis Spalding.

Hippodrome.—Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The top of the bill this week is the Edward Marris Trio, in The Dandy Doctor, a farcical sketch; Signorita Delilao and M. Louis Sans, in a series of Continental dances, work with great success; Charles Gilbert's dogs are much admired; Renee Graham sings a couple of songs which evoke applause; George Campbell has a novel style of patter; Chas. Dillon, "the lamb," goes well in his songs; the Bros. Tarrant patter and dance; and the film Nero is excellent.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—Twice nightly a capital variety programme is submited here. The Bouncing Peps occupy the top of the bill; Hayman and Houghton are very good in patter and song; the Attilla Bros., weight lifters, are an interesting turn; Miss May Thorne, comedienne, and Prof. Hutchinson are well received; and the Grecian Gladiators are applauded.

CORK.—Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. J. Bell.—Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company in Can a Woman be Good? opened a week's engagement here on Monday. The company includes Mr. Josh Milliane, Mr. Harry C. Robinson, Miss Alice Thurne, Miss Nora Melton, Miss Florence Hunt, and Miss Blanche St. Albans.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The star turn of a very entertaining bill of fare is supplied by Wild, Willie, and West, comedy acrobats, who do some clever things and cause great merriment; Robbins and Collier in a pretty scena catch on; Ethel Loftus is an entertaining comedienne; Steve Bartle and Silvo, vocalists and instrumentalists, are a clever pair; Lazern is a skilful magician; Mabelle May, comedienne and dancer, succeeds in pleasing; and the Palascope pictures are good.

COVENTRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—The attraction this week is Alone in London, played by a company under the direction of Mr. Chas. Gibbon. Miss Nellie Clyde takes the part of Nan, with much ability; Mr. Gerald Jordan portrays Dick Redcliffe in an excellent manner; Mr. J. W. Wilkinson assumes the character of Old Jenkinson; and Mr. Cecil Renton is successful as Spriggins. Miss Laurie O'Neill as Chickweed acts admirably; the other characters are in capable hands; Hetty Hornsby as Little Paul wins the hearts of all.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. T. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. E. Wright.—An enjoyable programme is put before the patrons this week. The Colonial Septette of musicians, under the direction of Mr. B. A. Rolfe, are encored again and again; Max Waldon is a clever impersonator; a good acrobatic performance is given by the Gotha Trio; and Ivy Leaf is a good comedienne. Harry Tomlin is popular with catchy choruses; Blanche and Powell as Society entertainers are good; W. Fulbrook keeps the audience amused; and Walter King, as a doleful comedian, winds up the evening's entertainment.

CROYDON.—Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr Roland Daniel; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company, with pretty dresses, a handsome chorus, and superb scenery, is meeting with success here in Dear Little Denmark. Miss Netta Lynde's rendering of Christine reaches a high level of excellence. She sings very sweetly, her style is fresh, and her whole performance is marked by unaffected grace. Mr. Henry Kitts is very droll as the Duke Ernst Von Rasmussen; Mr. J. C. Fagan is well placed as Karl; Dr. Conway Dixon is in good voice as Conrad Petersen; Mr. Tom Redmond is admirable in the rôle of Simon Jorgensen; Mr. Harry Gregory is funny as Jonas Jensen; Mr. Franklyn Davies deserves praise as Sergt. Ohis; Mr. Arthur Staples is quaint and curious as Hans Hansen; and useful work is put in by Messrs. C. B. Williams (Chamberlain), Frank Lewis (Town Crier), and F. Mears (Nells); Miss Claire Lynch as Xandra and Miss Gladys Beech as Adeline are charming; Miss Joan Penrose as Ophelia has a crisp and roguish way of delivering her lines which captivates, and she sustains the part with a brightness and spirit that that are quite exhilarating. Mr. J. A. Robertson cleverly conducts the augmented orchestra.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—The Last Straw affords scope for vivid and powerful acting by Cecil Gray, Dora Eastlake and company; Les Andres are smart international dancers; Dave Samuels is a humorous comedian; Edie King sings and dances commendably; the Frazettis are appreciated in musical act; Signor Arvi's scientific mystery, the Metablescope, is applauded; Ina Lorrimer is an untiring dancer; and other interesting items are Phil Bransby, comedian; Frank Bertram and company, in The Chaperon; Sylvia Phillips, comedienne, and Bioscope pictures.

DARWEN.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Animated Pictorial Enterprises, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. E. Burnett.—Mr. J. Pitt Hardacre is paying a return visit, after many years' absence, in Drink; or, Easily Led. Mr. Hardacre wins much applause for his fine rendering of Coupeau; Mr. Fawcett Lomax is to the fore with a capital character-study of Mes Bottes; Mr. Vincent Harvey is a capable Lantier; and Mr. H. F. Maltby is good as Gouget; Poisson being ably portrayed by Mr. G. K. Ashley. Miss George Hall gives a beautifully sympathetic rendering of Gervaise; Miss Julie Kennard is effective as the scheming Virginie; Phœbe Sage is nicely played by Miss Helen Pendennis; Miss Ada Taylor makes a good Mme. Bosch; and little Bessie Courtney is a charming Nana.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent.—Mr. Silvanus Dauncey and Mr. H. Browning's company are here this week with The Walls of Jericho. Mr. Rutland Barrington in the part of the Marquis of Steventon is a conspicuous success; Jack Frobisher is in the capable hands of Mr. Ethelbert Edwards, whose acting is brilliant; Miss Gwendoline Hay as Lady Frobisher succeeds admirably; and Harry Dallas is well played by Mr. F. Bridgeman. The same may be said of the Hanky Bannister of Mr. Russell Barry. As Lady Westerby Miss Ethel Trever-Lloyd does remarkably well; while Miss Hilda Sims' assumption of the rôle of Lady Devenham is also exceedingly creditable. Mr. Lambert Plummer is excellent as Bertram Hannaford; and Miss Seyvia Jones is quite successful as Miss Wyatt. Miss Doris Digby (Lady Mornington), Miss Eva Westrop (Lady Porchester), Miss Muriel Locking (Duchess of Skye), Mr. J. Tyrral (Wilfred Renton), Mr. Ben Barrett (Lord Drayton), M. H. Browning (Lord Machmont), and Mr. Fred Valder (Peters) are others who should be mentioned. It should be added that in place of the customary curtain-raiser Mr. Rutland Barrington provides a sparkling twenty minutes at the piano.

Palace.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Moyes.—The Devil's Box of Bricks is being presented here by Mr. James Willard and company. The Zanfrellas provide a novel equilibristic act as daring as it is clever, and their performance altogether is distinctly neat; Maude Vera, comedienne, is a pretty dancer; the Raymond Trio are entertaining in their musical and dancing act; Archie Glen acquits himself successfully as a vocalist and story-teller; Ryder Slone, character comedian, is deserving of praise; and Hal Bert well merits the designation of an "elastic comedian."

DEVONPORT.—Metropole Theatre.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's drama, Her Forbidden Marriage, is doing fine business here. As George Maddison, the inventor, Mr. Louis Hecter gives a clever portrayal; Miss Alice Bovey is a first-rate heroine; as Charles Devereux Mr. W. H. Porter is a villain of the approved type; and Mr. Henry Milton is genuinely funny as John Williams.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Madame Albani is starred for the week; King Luis and partner perform wonderful equilibristic feats; Jan Zakoosky plays choice violin selections; Les Cossets go through some skilful acrobat business, being materially assisted by three canine friends; Henry Moore imitates well-known actors and comedians; Rowlands and Ford entertain with humorous patter; and Philip Levard and Miss Lily Gene have some clever illusionist business.

DEWSBURY. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr. Morton Powell's company, in the drama Driving a Girl to Destruction, is here this week. Miss Maud M. Powell gives a first-class rendering of the school teacher, Ruby Wright; Miss Kate Sydney is seen to advantage as Ruth Wright; Ned Chipples is well played by Miss Eva Norman Scatchard; Mr. Charles Stafford makes a capital Robert Ray; the villainy of Lucas List is ably portrayed by Mr. F. Cyril Leighton, who receives able assistance from Miss Ana Corri as Mme. De Meral; the unscrupulous Octavius Screwe is well handled by Mr. Henry Scatchard; and Mr. William Benson as the Rev. Charles Lovett and Miss Maggie Stewart as Bessie Betts ably sustain their parts.

Empire.—Proprietors, Messrs. G. W. and G. E. Smith; Manager, Mr. Claude Shayler; Musical-Director, Mr. E. G. Summerfield.—Coram, the ventriloquist, is the outstanding feature of this week's programme; Howard and Le Prince appear in a smart acrobatic act; another good turn is that of Rapoli, in balancing feats; A. W. Scott is a capable singer and dancer; Frances E. Inman, a local contralto, possesses a good voice; the Three Krakes, in their comedy, The Electric Car Conductor, amuse greatly; Renson and Waite, Yorkshire humorists, provide an acceptable turn; and Gwennie Morgan, comedienne, and an animated picture display complete.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Weldon; Stage-Manager, Mr. Jack Harris; Musical-Director, Mr. R. H. Riley.—The Countess Bekoffoska supplies a very interesting and novel turn here by painting beautiful flowers with great rapidity, and is assisted in her act by Mr. St. Vincent Ellesmere as lecturer; Massona, a clever juggler, amuses with his funniosities; the Sauteron Wonders are a smart couple; Driscoll, Beattie, and company appear successfully in the comedy sketch, Major McFie, M.P.; the Barrys are pleasing duettists; Madge Goodall, dancer, deserves a word of praise; and C. Ibbotson, America's black dame, and animated pictures complete.

DONCASTER.—New Grand Theatre and Opera House, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—Cinderella is presented by a talented combination controlled by Mr. Edwin C. Jazon. Refined music, ilting songs, and quaint dances are all rapturously received, and pungent and incisive humour makes the production. Mr. Will Penn gives a droll rendering of Baron Crooked; in the titular rôle Miss Molly Doon is as delicious as it is possible to be. The efforts of Messrs. Crossley and Walker, the Ugly Sisters, are applauded to the echo; as Prince Brilliant Miss Vera Mayne must be credited with an unqualified success; and in the rôle of Dandini Miss Jennie Clare displays distinct artistic merit. Miss Pattie Varley as Queen Bountiful is greatly popular. Mr. Leo Fields as Buttons is irresistibly droll.

DOVER. — Royal Hippodrome. — Proprietor, Mr. W. Winter; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. W. Holford.—After a week of pantomime the management have returned to vaudeville. Bessie Mackenzie captures all hearts; John Grant and Henri Stewart in Phantoms of Wood give a clever and weird performance; and Nellie Coleman as "the man comedian" is decidedly good. The Three Romas, gladiatorial marvels, give an interesting exhibition; Goodall and Knox, comedians and acrobats, win favour; and the same remark applies to Florence Raymond, the lady ventriloquist.

DUBLIN.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Terry.—The pantomime of Aladdin closes down to-night, after a very successful run. Wee Georgie Wood is appearing this week with new scenes and impersonations, with his accustomed success. On Thursday night W. H. Powell, who has become popular as the Widow Twankey, and Carlton, in his clever creation of Abanazar, took their benefit, and had a bumper house.

Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Hyland.—The boards are occupied here by Messrs. Platt and Tower's company, in Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell. Mr. Claude Haviland, in the character of the Waiter, displayed considerable ability; Miss Edith Hunter was a natural Mrs. Clandon; Miss Winifred Beech an admirable Gloria Clandon; and as Valentine Mr. Graham Colmer acted the part capably. Miss Ida Southern and Mr. Geoffrey Wilkinson as Dolly and Philip were both exceedingly good.

Queen's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Marriott-Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wright.—This week we have the Danbys (Charles and Arthur), knockabout comedians and dancers; Gracie Bard is warmly applauded for her coon songs; Albert does well as a ventriloquist; and Mrs. Glenville and company provide a mirth-provoking sketch, Kitty's Troubles, in which Mrs. Glenville as Kitty, Mr. Tom Falconer as the Major, and Mr. H. Glenville as Billy appear with success.

Empire Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—Topping the bill here we have the Elliott-Savonas, in a magnificent musical performance, which is heartily enjoyed by large and appreciative audiences; Mona Garrick submits clever and impressive scenes from Shakespeare and Dickens; Arthur Woodville is a capital comedian and dancer; Howe and Ardie cause lots of fun in their skit; the songs of Tiny Arnold catch on; Sandy and Carl also appear with success; Ethel Bourne is an excellent vocalist; Victor Travers, comedian, does well; and Hammond and Welby are very good.

Tivoli.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles A. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—The attractions here this week are J. W. Wilson and Nellie Waring, in their clever American vaudeville act; Douglas Campbell is a capital comedian and dancer; Gertrude Martin sings excellent songs; Phinas and Aida do a marvellous performance on the revolving pedestal; and Mlle. Renee as an instrumentalist is a most acceptable item on the programme. Milner and Storey, in their skit, Tickets, are very amusing; Lennie and Hast, in a poetic fantasy, The Sea-Nymph, are exceedingly good; W. H. Dawson, "whistler and bird mimic," is well received; Clive and Vera are successful as the comedy duo; and the Bioscope displays some up-to-date films.

World's Fair.—Proprietor, Mr. Charles A. James.—The company here this week consists of Williams and Hayes, comedy duettists; Will Bowman, comedian; Arthur Bright, Milanese piper; May Williams, a pleasing vocalist; Elton Hayes, comedian; and the Cinematograph.

DUDLEY. — Opera House. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Sexton Blake is here for the first time, and met with a flattering reception. Mr. Murray York gives a fine representation of the astute detective, and receives unstinted applause, and his pedigree bloodhound, Pedro, is a great favourite. Next honour certainly goes to Mr. Will Glaze as Tinker, who is the embodiment of humour; Mr. Edward Maclean gives an impressive rendering of Roger Blackburn; and Mr. Paul H. Lewers is sufficiently villanous as Randolph Lovell; the elderly part of Squire Lovell is a short but effective piece of acting by Mr. Algernon Syms; Miss Elizabeth Watkins invests the part of Marjorie Lovell with pathetic interest; and Miss Sinna St. Clair as Philadelphia Kate handles the rôle with a highly effective callous touch; and Miss Betty Seymour acts the part of Euphemia Pattacake with spirit and dash.

Empire.—Proprietors, the Midland Entertainment Corporation, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.—A welcome return visit is being paid here by Lee and Kingston, in A Resourceful Lover. The performance of La-Vie, in living art panel poses, is both charming and artistic; Sergeant Munford, the soldier in the air, gives a clever exhibition on the slack wire; Joe Cookson, also on a return visit, as a ventriloquial cartoonist, proves more diverting than ever; the Redfern Sisters are experts on the banjo; Zeta Russell is a dainty toe dancer; and a good reception is accorded Charles Denton, comedian. Other good turns are Robt. Bradford, the original "Billy Muggins," and Bob Eldon, comedian. The Empire Pictures complete.

DUNDEE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Martin Harvey and his company are here, taxing the seating capacity of the house to its utmost. The Breed of the Treshams was presented on Monday, when a crowded and enthusiastic house showed its appreciation by numerous curtain calls at the end of each act. Mr. Harvey's artistic qualities were shown to perfection in his picturesque and romantic treatment of the character of the Rat, his "merry tale of the German wars" being a perfect masterpiece of elocutionary power and expression; Miss N. de Silva gave a delightfully breezy and finished performance as Batty; the acting of Mr. Charles Glenney as the traitorous Colonel Hungerford was marked by consummate ability and skill; a striking and convincing embodiment of Viscount Dorsington was given by Mr. Philip Hewland; Colonel Sir Henry Curwen was admirably enacted by Mr. Owen Roughwood; a capital study of Colonel Bagshaw was presented by that old and respected actor, Mr. Fred Wright, sen.; Francis Tresham was depicted with skill and effect by Mr. Leonard Craske; Mr. Edward Combermere acted well and with restraint as the cowardly Captain Stanhope; Miss Brenda Gibson played with much grace and expression as the Hon. Margaret Hungerford; Miss Sybil Walsh as Helena Pierrepoint was deserving of praise; and Miss Bessie Elder was a satisfactory Mrs. Bagshaw. The week's bill also includes The Corsican Brothers, A Cigarette-Maker's Romance, and Hamlet. Mr. Frank O'Neill is business-manager for Mr. Harvey.

King's Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—A nicely varied and interesting programme is headed by the Seven Perezoffs, who introduce some extraordinary feats into their juggling scena, A Supper at Maxim's; the Gilberts' tight wire act, "In the Camp," is a combination of daring, cleverness, and excellent comedy; Fritz Von Liston excels as a siffleur, his imitations of the calls of various birds being remarkably life-like; Sylvene, assisted by Mlle. Florence, submits an altogether charming and clever equilibristic entertainment; Johnny Beveridge, the blind entertainer, is fast coming to the front, his present act being immense; Bessie Lind is a pleasing comedienne with good songs; Marie Kay is a perfect mistress of terpsichore; Lon Hale gives a clever dance on roller skates; and the Kingscope pictures are unusually interesting.

Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company in A Girl's Repentance constitutes a strong attraction here. In the rôle of the bank manager, Paul Earnscliffe, Mr. Carlton scores a conspicuous success, being exceedingly well seconded by Miss Rubie Maude, who gives a telling performance as Stella; Geoffrey Vannock is cleverly portrayed by Mr. Claude Aymond; Mr. John Croudace makes a capital impression as Max Rheinhardt; a performance full of merit is the Glynne Earnscliffe of Mr. Claude Seaton; Miss Rene Belle Douglas and Mr. Willie Vernon revel in their comedy parts. The scenery is elaborate. On Friday evening Miss Rubie Maude was accorded a benefit, when the musical comedy drama A Secret Wedding was staged.

DUNFERMLINE.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. E. Potts.—Majilton's Comediana, along with the Mazellos, provide the bill of fare twice nightly. The Comediana, in the new farce, The Gay City; or, Four in the Dark, and The Trippers, produce a mirth-making entertainment of a very attractive order. The old favourite, Mr. Jim Bond, as principal comedian, contributes largely to the success obtained. Mr. C. Majilton is as droll and active as ever; Mr. G. Hunter puts in excellent work; and Mr. Thomas Carrol is highly effective in his respective characters. Miss Maddie Majilton, an old favourite, maintains her reputation; and Miss Nellie Clifford and the other members of the company help valuably towards the evening's enjoyment. The Mazellos give a clever burlesque triple-bar turn.

DURHAM.—The Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—An interesting programme is headed by the Five Whiteleys, whose entertainment is varied and clever; on the perpendicular ladders Les Uniques give an exhibition which is well appreciated; and Rose and Wold in a comedy wire act, The Sentry and the Maid, receive loud applause; Sydney Brandon is a successful character impersonator; the burlesque representations by Tom Barrett create much laughter; Probyn and Bates score in a comedy act, The Dude and the Soubrette; Edie Endon excels in dancing; and The Squire's Romance is shown on the Cathedoscope.

EASTBOURNE.—Devonshire Park Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Mr. Henry Miller's company, under the direction of Mr. Charles Macdona, is presenting The Servant in the House. The curtain had to be raised many times at the end, when Mr. Charles Macdona spoke a few words of thanks to the enthusiastic audience. Mr. Matthew Boulton as Manson, the servant, gave a powerful and deeply-impressive performance, which gripped the audience and interested them to the end; Mr. Walter Gay, in a distinct and individual manner, played the part of the Vicar, William Smythe, with marked ability; Mr. Harry Parker contributed strong, penetrating work in the very finely-played character-part of Robert Smith; Mr. Ernest H. Paterson was an amusing and dignified Bishop; and good service was done by Mr. F Harvey as Rogers. A delightfully natural and girlish representative of Mary was found in Miss Laurie Flockton; and Miss Nellie Hodson did clever work as the Vicar's wife. Later in the week Mr. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company appear in Leah Kleschna.

Royal Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Manager, Mr. E. W. Holford.—Miss Flora Cromer, the possessor of a fine and clear contralto voice, is topping the bill here worthily in some taking chorus songs; Bains and company give a clever exhibition of comedy and acrobatic work; Miss Gertrude Bibby is a smart quick-change artist, who acts a complete sketch in a very clever way; Mr. Tom Jones is an able Welsh singer and jovial comedian; singing her songs in fine style, Miss Vera Wootton is a dainty comedienne; Miss Edna James dances well; and Mr. Tom Dunmore is a successful comedian; while new pictures are added.

ECCLES.—Crown Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers. — Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company is this week presenting The Prince and the Beggar Maid. Mr. Ernest H. G. Cox as Prince Olaf gives a performance marked by artistic restraint; Prince Michael has a capable representative in Mr. Victor Rae; Mr. Alfred Goddard as Prince Hildred of Sylvania is seen to advantage; Miss Ethel Bracewell as Monica is responsible for a natural representation; as Camiola Miss Verity Page is interesting; the humorous element is well looked after by Mr. Herbert Burton as Captain Hector, Mr. J. H. Vyvyan as Lieut. Karl Stromberg, and Miss Mona Hall as Viola.

EDINBURGH. — Theatre Royal. — Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—There is an unfailing charm in Mr. J. M. Barrie's Peter Pan, and Mr. Charles Frohman's company, which is paying its fifth visit to Edinburgh with the play, drew a crowded audience to the Theatre Royal on Monday last. Miss Pauline Chase repeats her delightfully finished performance of the title-rôle, and the Wendy of Miss Gertrude Long, a newcomer is an interesting and quaint impersonation. Mr. Frohman is fortunate in retaining Miss Sybil Carlisle in the part of Mrs. Darling, which she acts with the tenderness, beauty, and grace that make the character linger pleasantly in the memory. Mr. Fred. Annesley gives to the Pirate Captain the necessary mock melodramatic air, and his work is clever; Smee remains in the hands of that admirable comedian, Mr. Geo. Shelton, and Mr. Charles Trevor is an excellent Starkey. Master Harry Duff is bright as John Napoleon Darling, and Master Herbert Hollow makes a lovable Michael Nicholas Darling. The smaller parts are extremely well acted, notably good performances being contributed by Mr. A. W. Bascomb as Slightly; Mr. Humphrey Warden as Great Big Little Panther; Mr. Edward Sillward as Nana; Miss Tessie Park as Liza; Miss Ninion Dudley as Tootles; Miss Maidie Andrews as Curly, and Miss Margaret Fraser as Tiger Lily. Mr. Maurice Jacobi skilfully conducts the orchestra in the rendering of the incidental music, and the setting of the play is worthy of the book.

were warmly welcomed on Monday evening, when their annual visit opened with the ever-green Davy Garrick, which was played in excellent style. A graceful Violet appeared in the person of Miss Kathleen Leigh; Mr. H. Crocker and Mr. Philip Gordon were in their old parts of the Alderman and Rumbelow; and the cast otherwise was admirably fitted. Mr. Compton repeated his well-known impersonation of the great actor with all the power and humor with which his admirers are familiar, and had to make his customary speech at the end of the play. Tom Noddy's Secret, put on as a curtain-raiser, gave Miss Nell Compton an opportunity of making a promising début before an Edinburgh audience. In addition to the usual repertory of old English comedies Mr. Compton presented The Biasé Baronet, an interesting revival, in the form of a new adaptation, of the once-popular Used Up of Charles Matthews. She Stoops to Conquer, The Road to Ruin, The School for Scandal, and The Rivals have completed a goodly week's bill.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—The famous American entertainer Lafayette has attracted large audiences here this week with a very varied and interesting performance, including much that is novel in the way of conjuring, transformations, rapid painting and sculpture, and travesties of musical conductors, which caused unlimited wonder and amusement. The programme in other respects was an exceedingly good one. Florence Esdaile pleased her hearers by her singing of sundry songs; Alice Maydue contributed a character comedy turn; and Gipsy Wolf, with a bevy of damsels, appeared in a bright vocal and dance scena. The Bioscope showed some very interesting pictures of bird life. Stanley and Greenop gave a clever display as banjoists; Herbert Shelley sustained with ability some half-dozen distinctive rôles in an Irish protean sketch Dan the Outlaw; the Tom Davies' Trio executed some extraordinary cycling work in mid air; and D'Ares Marionettes introduced some clever representations of music-hall celebrities.

KING'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—Miss Radie Furman, fresh from her triumphs in the Theatre Royal Pantomime, is a great favourite with the audiences here this week; her singing of Anglo-Dutch songs and her clever dancing are rewarded with enthusiastic applause. Mr. Harry Ford, the well-known comedian, evoked shouts of laughter by his droll rendering of amusing songs. Miss Ada Oxley, in a farcical sketch entitled Peggy, proved herself to be an admirable comedienne; Miss Rosie Lloyd's turn was full of humour; and other artists who contributed to an excellent programme included the Belmonts, "the dancing stars"; Tom Haytor's Six Manchester Lads; the Selbornians, expert jugglers; Miss Vio Linn, a pleasing singer; and Mr. Alec B. Thorne, Scotch comedian. The Bioscope films comprised a beautiful series of Alpine views.

ELLESMERE PORT. — HIPPODROME AND PICTURE PALACE.— Proprietors, Messrs. Corelli and Coy; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Corelli.—This is the second anniversary week, and a lengthy programme is greatly appreciated by packed houses. Fred Ellis is an amusing comedian; Marie Listen is a charming comedienne; Hari is a smart Indian club manipulator; Hand and Hart create much laughter with their songs and patter; Frank Weaver is again heartily appreciated as a coon singer and sand dancer; Bertha Cousins is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Jack Rae is applauded for his funny antics on the rings; the Belmoir Sisters deserve the repeated encores nightly accorded; and up-to-date interesting animated pictures complete.

EXETER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—The well-known drama The Ticket of Leave Man was selected for presentation by the stock company at the opening of their third week's stay here. Mr. A. Austin-Leigh sustains the rôle of Robert Brierly with considerable power; Mr. Wallis Clark is an excellent James Dalton; Mr. Gerard Wynne being well placed as Melter Moss. Miss Kathryn Collier is a sympathetic May Edwards; Miss Emmie O'Reilly a delightfully humorous Mrs. Willoughby; Miss Belle Travers and Miss Vere Hodson sustain effectively the parts of Sam Willoughby and Emily St. Evremond; and Mr. Ernest Bodkin contributes a well-studied reading of Hawkshaw.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Resident and Acting-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—Premier position on the week's bill is occupied by Maud Lordys, whose dog acrobats and actors prove entertaining; Chris Richards by his antics and eccentricities speedily wins favour; Little Zola more than realises all that is expected of him; Mart and Pep are balancers and tumblers of exceptional merit; Ghita Corri has a voice of unusual merit and range; Amy Clevere sings and dances excellently; and Sid Bandon contributes a song with a fine swinging, popular chorus.

FLEETWOOD.— EMPIRE THEATRE.— Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—Mr. and Mrs. John Walters' powerful company, in Robinson Crusoe, is doing tremendous business. Miss Violet Thorn excels as principal boy, and is deservedly encored for her tasteful singing; Miss Kitty Liske as Polly Perkins is very popular; Mr. Ally M. Benson is again a great favourite as the Dame, his songs, jokes, and "business" being irresistible; Mr. W. Bland makes an excellent Billy Crusoe, his volubility creating roars of laughter; Miss Kitty Chester is a clever and winsome Fairy Queen, her songs being extremely well rendered; Messrs. Dytum and Dale are clever comedians; while Mr. T. Daniels is admirable as King One Lung; Eugene, the girl with the baritone voice, scores with "Somewhere"; and Miss Rena Rees and Miss Gladys Walkden both succeed admirably. The scenery is gorgeous, and the costumes perfect.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—This week Mr. Harold V. Neilson is here with a répertoire of four plays nightly, namely: A Florentine Tragedy, The Light that Failed, The Topside Dog, and Six-and-Eightpence. Mr. Harold V. Neilson gives an impressive study of Simone, and his Dick Heldar is a really fine piece of acting. Miss Effie Leigh-Hunt, a graceful and emotional actress, impersonates the parts of Bianca and Maisie with ability, and Mr. Dickson Moffat is amusing in the characters of Pensioner Robert Boiler and Cyril in the two latter plays. Miss Ella Thornton is well suited to the parts of Bessie Broke, Mrs. Boiler, and Grace; and Mr. Bartlett Garth is responsible for some excellent work as Guido Bardi, Torpenhow, Jim Bates, and Mr. Crook. The scenery and appointments are excellent.

GAINSBOROUGH.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Leivers and Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Messrs. Jacobs and Jephson's pantomime company is here this week with Dick Whittington. Miss Florrie Curette is a sprightly Dick; Miss Ida Hibbert a winsome Alice; and Miss Millie Seale (Capt. Cuttle) sings well. The fun is well kept up by Mr. Ernest Adrian as Idle Jack and Mr. Bobbie Graham as the cook. The Paulasto Troupe give a clever acrobatic turn; and other specialities are provided by Cissie Trent, The Toys, Seale and Seale, &c.

GATESHEAD.— KING'S THEATRE.— Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Local-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—The star item on the bill is a dramatic episode, entitled A Society Woman, by Alan Holt and company, which is well received; Alick Lauder and company are seen to much advantage in the Scotch character sketch The Christening, in which Mr. Lauder receives able support from Miss Jennie Scott and Mr. George Adair; a pair of eccentric comedy acrobats in Dunn and Reono provide an enjoyable turn; the Cheers, with performing cats, are highly praised; Beattie Bloom is an entertaining serio; and Geo. James, comedian, and the pictures of the Paris Floods depicted by the Kingscope are other capital items.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's companies are welcomed here, and this week large audiences have witnessed an excellent production of The Prince and the Beggar Maid. As Prince Olaf Mr. C. W. Standing gives a most enjoyable performance, his soldierly bearing and clear delivery exciting much admiration; Mr. Lionel Gadsen gives a polished portrayal of the stricken Prince Michael; there is much that is good in Mr. Mayor Cooke's Prince Hildred; a handsome Captain Hector is presented by Mr. Robt. Noble; the tasteful comedy relief is well looked after by Mr. Richard Lane (Karl) and Miss B. Stuart (Viola); a dignified Bishop is that of Mr. Francis Hawley; a charming Monica is done by Miss Stella Campbell; Miss Ethel Patrick daintily embodies Camiola; and the other parts are in safe hands.

GLASGOW.— THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy O. Humphrys.—Aladdin is to be withdrawn at the end of this week. Big houses still rule. The combination has made a fine impression, and for many a day pleasant memories will linger of the amusing Abanazar of Mr. Harry Tate, in his side-splitting sketches of "Golfing" and "Motoring," the Mrs. Twankey of Mr. Malcolm Scott, the Emperor of China of Mr. Harry Claff, the Vizier of Mr. George Hirste, and the comical manœuvres of Messrs. Regan and Ryan as the Policemen; also the lively and captivating performance of Miss Bessie Butt as Aladdin; the winsome presence and tuneful numbers of Miss Dorothy Firmin as Princess So-Shi; the dainty dancing of Miss Doris Dean as Chee-ki; and the entertaining interludes contributed by Happy Fanny Fields as Gretchen. In all respects the production has proved worthy of the pantomimic traditions of this house. For Friday evening—Mr. Harry Tate's benefit—extra attractions were announced.

KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—The Moody-Manners Opera company entered upon the second week of its engagement on Monday, when Tannhäuser was presented to a crowded audience. In the title-rôle Mr. Joseph O'Mara acquitted himself well, his fine tenor voice being heard to full advantage; Mme. de Vere-Sapio's exquisite delineation of Elizabeth evoked loud applause, all the familiar numbers being excellently rendered; as Venus Miss Kate Anderson executed her share of the music in finished and artistic manner; Mr. Lewys James' fine baritone and manly bearing makes him an ideal Wolfram; the Landgrave received adequate treatment at the hands of Mr. Charles Magrath; and the singing of the chorus, augmented by the Glasgow Grand Opera Society, deserves unstinted praise, as also does the orchestra, under the bâton of Herr Richard Eckhold. The remainder of the week is devoted to Carmen, Lohengrin, Madame Butterfly, Samson and Delilah, La Tosca, and Maritana.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—Mother Goose was the first of the Glasgow pantomimes to start this season, and it is going to be the last to finish, the closing being arranged for March 5. Mr. Neil Kenyon, Mr. Jack O'Connor, Mr. Fred Allandale, with Misses Lily Morris, Rhoda Gordon, Lily Edwards, and May Moore Duprez continue to attract great crowds, and both at matinées and evening performances enthusiasm runs high.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Willie Winkie has now reached its final performances here. This week interest centred round Thursday's performance, for on that night Mr. Waldon's friends rallied round him and gave him a complimentary benefit, at which several novelties were provided in addition to the pantomime. To-night (Saturday) the usual enthusiastic crowd of Princess' patrons will be bidding farewell to their respective favourites, one and all having worked loyally and well for the success of this season's annual.

METROPOLE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Ethel Van Praagh and J. Edward Whitty are here with The Eyes of the World, in which Miss Van Praagh gives a thrilling representation of Melene de L'Orme; while Mr. J. E. Whitty depicts a lively young advocate with much success; M. Hector de L'Orme has a good interpreter in Mr. Charles O'Connor; and Mr. Will Casey gives a strong portrayal of M. Gaston de Carnac; Mme. Esme de Carnac is well played by Miss Flora Hastings; Octave de Carnac is forcibly depicted by Mr. A. Wilson Wynne; a pleasing part is that of Avice de L'Orme, charmingly rendered by Miss Elsie Capell; and Mr. R. Wilson Bedford as M. Paul Roqueville, Miss Nellie Garside as Mlle. Susanne Pomfleure, Mr. Harold Forde as Brigand, and Miss Beatrice Hulment as Antoinette complete an excellent company.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Mr. T. Arthur Jones is making a successful appeal to Govan playgoers with his touching drama, When Other Lips. The sailor hero, Ted Daunton, is played with refinement and taste by Mr. John Davidson, and the opposing rôle, Basil Cunningham, has an able exponent in Mr. Juan D'Alberti; the Jenkins of Mr. T. Arthur Jones is a careful study; fine emotional acting is seen in the Ruth Lingley of Miss Marie Daventry; the humorous interludes are cleverly sustained by Mr. Charles Preece as Neccles, Mr. F. Thorpe-Tracey as Topwash, and Miss May Neilson as Kitty; good character studies are submitted by Mr. Arthur Ross (Lingley) and Mr. Arthur Prescott (Pawnbroker); Miss Florence Melrose-Millett acts with strong effect as Octavia, other parts being well filled by Misses Marion Wells and Jane Watson.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Reynolds.—The appearance this week of Lady Beerbohm Tree in The Sirocco. The piece is of a fascinating character, and is done every justice to by Lady Tree and her company; in an original monologue, "Her Wedding Day," Miss Ethel Newman appears with much success; Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas, ever popular here, introduce a new and amusing duologue, "The Wire and the Liar," which is much enjoyed; the Miles-Stavordale Quintette are exceedingly clever banjoists to harp accompaniment; in a clever acrobatic turn Great and Good cause a considerable amount of fun; the old favourites, the Sisters Caselli, are as expert in dancing and high kicking as ever; the Whilbys and their magic blackboard provide a good turn, as likewise does G. S. Melvin, Scotch comedian; Maizie Hibbs, in a speciality dancing turn, is smart; and the Bioscope concludes.

PAVILION, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Evan Good; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Foster.—A complete change of programme is given here, the boards being occupied by Mr. Harry Roxbury's company in the pantomime, Mother Goose. Miss Maud Prenton makes a bright and lively principal boy, and lots of fun is provided by Mr. J. W. Gallather as Jack and Mr. Walter Dale as Mother Goose. Mr. Fred Acton as Muggles also adds greatly to the humour; and Misses Bessie Edmond, Kitty Russell, and Marjorie Prenton sing and dance with much animation. Speciality items are contributed by the Miltons, skating comedians, the Society Quartette, and the Eight Sydney Girls.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—Mrs. Lillie Williams' pantomime, Dick Whittington and His Cat, drew a large attendance on the opening night. The Sisters Cora as Dick and Alice have parts suiting them excellently, their singing being a pleasing feature; as Idle Jack Mr. Sam Thomson's witticisms and by-play are responsible for continual outbursts of laughter; Lindray and Harte, the Celesta Comedy Quartette, and the Four Killarney Girls contribute special items, and have a large share in the success of the pantomime. The scenery and dresses are pleasing and effective.

COLISEUM.— District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—The Craggs appear in their new acrobatic sketch, "The Territorials," and, thanks to the irrepressible Billy, provide lots of fun, as well as smart tumbling; Carney and Armstrong are a clever couple who are highly popular here; the Albert and Edmunds Troupe also take well in their "Tower of London" sketch, in which lots of lively knockabout fun is provided; O Hana San, in her Japanese scena, gives a number of beautifully illuminated tableaux, and contributes enjoyable dancing and vocal items; Tom Lloyd has several catchy songs; Les Romanis make a hit with their musical act, which contains several striking novelties; Clarissa Talbot and Albert Pearce, in a "Geisha" duet, sing well; Maude Edwards, the clever lady ventriloquist, and Charles Santon, double-voiced vocalist, complete a well-diversified programme.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Mlle. Rosini is at the head of affairs with her miniature menagerie, and the cleverness of her dogs shows patience and careful training; Mons. de Louie is responsible for a very skilful gymnastic performance; Tom Richards' quaintness is mirth-provoking; Lottie Ross renders her vocal numbers attractively; and Willie Elder proves successful as a Scotch comedian. The Bioscope pictures prove entertaining.

HENGLER'S CIRCUS.— Proprietor, Mr. Albert Hengler.—After a most successful season the last week is now announced of the equestrian spectacle, Tally-Ho, with its amusing incidents and the sensational plunge into the flooded arena at the finish. The special turns include Talberto and Douglas, in their eccentric business; Francisco, a smart juggler with many novel tricks; The Dorians, a clever family of gymnasts; and the Clarkonians, in a number of daring flights in mid-air. Mlle. Amelia Reny, Mr. Claud, Miss Josephine, and the Three Royal Ohmys contribute equestrian items; and Mr. Charles Clark gives a smart juggling act on horseback. The clowns, Doodles and Pimple, provide lots of funny interludes.

GLOSSOP.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Mr. Herbert Fuller ably presents the pathetic play As Your Hair Grows Whiter to a good house on Monday. Mr. Hubert Halliwell gives a fine rendering of the Rev. John Alberry; Mr. R. Nelme Grasswell's performance of Farmer Walters is well sustained; Miss Agnes Collier as the farmer's daughter is very good; Mr. Percy St. Clair as Jack Walters makes a smart and jolly sailor; Mr. Herbert Fuller as Timothy Slough is very amusing; Mr. Louis Weston as Wagner Mozart, is highly entertaining; and Mr. S. Leigh Courtney gives a clever portrayal of Squire Stoneley's villainies.

GLOUCESTER. — PALACE. — Owners, Messrs. Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Director, C. W. Poole, Esq. —Howard and Harris are good in their comedy act, The Adventures of a Happy Tramp; Tom Woottwell is one of the most popular turns we have had; and Susan and Protti dance excellently. Messrs. Lee and Bentley, in capital sketch, The King's Counsel, cause hearty laughter and applause; the Three Favourites in Park Pets are a neat turn; and the Phœnix Trio harmonise well. The Rowntrees are effective in comedy; and Pop Dearly, The Dandy Coon, and Emily Lyndale, burlesque actress, complete the bill.

GOOLE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. Hainsworth.—An excellent picture and variety entertainment is drawing crowded houses. At the top of the bill is G. de Reiwyskow, "champion light-weight wrestler of the world, whose efforts have delighted large audiences; a local wrestling competition is also introduced with great success; Henshall and Forster are very successful in a comedy sketch; Clarice Sefton, comedienne and speciality dancer, is a prime favourite; Elmore and Evans, comedy duettists, keep the house in roars of laughter; Reno is seen in clever sleight-of-hand tricks; and others equally successful are Bert Elmore, comedian; Amy Lloyd, comedienne; Geo. Le Wist, ventriloquist; and Harry Maybee, comedian. The Monarchscope pictures are new and interesting.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM. — Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale. —Miss Grace Warner and company are appearing here in The Scarlet Clue and East Lynne.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. George Zalva.—One of the best programmes of the season is being presented this week. Henderson, the blind musician, gives a first-class musical item; Miss Fanny Robina is very popular with selections from her well-known songs; Miss Florence Cooke is greatly admired for her song, "The stars are angel faces"; Mr. Walter Buxton sings some fine patriotic songs; and Two in a Flat is also presented by Mr. Fredericks and Miss Monckton.

GREENOCK.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—The Sins of a City is well presented by Miss Winifred Maud's company. As Norah Gilmore Miss Winifred Maud proves herself an accomplished actress; Mr. Arthur L. Read is remarkably good as Sandy McDonald; Mr. Morris Maud plays the villain, Ralph Blackwater, K.C., in an able manner; and Mr. Arthur Lester is seen to advantage as Donald McIvor. Mr. Victor Du Cane, in doubling the rôles of Jasper and Joe Woodleigh, submits two excellent studies; as Isaac Levi Mr. Fred Chester plays with good comedy effect; Mrs. Wingold Lawrence admirably portrays Lesbia; Miss Minnie Millwarde amuses greatly as Midge, a servant; Miss L. Carlton does well as Jenny, a Scotch fisherwoman; and Miss Mabel Lane is good as Mrs. Miggs.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—The Prince of the Dandies, presented by Miss Flo Stanley's company, is the principal attraction, and provides an abundance of mirth. The Richards Trio achieve popularity with a cleverly executed acrobatic turn; Duncan and Brasque provide a treat in their well-acted playlet A Society Butterfly; Rose D'Aulby scores as a vocalist; and we are further entertained by Archie Jarvasse, light comedian; Kendrick and Laura, a clever pair of eccentric dancers; and Andie Burns, an amusing comedian.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—The Gay Gordons, presented by Mr. Seymour Hicks' company, is proving very much to the liking of the audiences here. Mr. William Greene as Angus Græme gives a breezy realisation of the genial Highland soldier; Miss Clarice Lockstone, who is well known here, has charmed everyone by her work in the pretty character of Peggy Quainton; Mr. W. H. Desmond introduces clever burlesque as Edmund Siddons; Mr. Edward Carlton also contributes largely to the uproarious fun as Nervy Nat; Miss Mabel Dent plays Victoria Siddons with pleasing vivacity; Miss Florrie Groves, another popular actress here, causes endless amusement as the eccentric Charlotte Siddons; and Mr. Greville Hayes as Andrew Quainton, Miss Tessa D'Alberti as Mary M'Leod, and Miss Ada Mellon as Janet M'Leod also accomplish good work.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Verner Walford.—The farcical sketch, Parker, P.C., is full of really genuine fun, and Mr. Chas. Austin as the enterprising policeman who sets up a private police station, displays much quaintness of style; the Glenroy Troupe of dancers are clever artists, and also accomplish smart sword and lance drill; George Prince is a versatile comedian with good songs; Metz and Metz are expert dancers, and have a fund of amusing cross talk; Ivy Aberdare dances and sings in pleasing fashion; the beautiful Lillian gives an attractive cycle act; and Les Trippelos are skilled instrumentalists.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The Arcadians is drawing big crowds. Mr. Gus Oxley as Simplicitas keeps the audience amused; Mr. Frank Collins as Peter Doody, in make-up, gesture, and delivery, is excellent; Mr. Roy Sidney is good as Jack Meadows; Mr. Roy Lorraine's Bobby is a conspicuous success; Mr. C. H. Hewetson is well placed as Sir George Paddock; Miss Mysie Devine plays the part of the naive Irish girl, Eileen Cavanagh, to perfection; Miss Marion Edwardes sings well and acts sweetly as Sombra, and she is well supported by Miss Katie Yates as Chrysea. Mr. Frank Henry (Astrophel) and Mr. W. Dawson (Strephon) are good. The scenery and mounting are excellent.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—L. B. Athol, actor-vocalist, contributes an acceptable vocal scena, "Dreamland"; John S. Leick and Mabel Keith, solo cornettists, bring down the house; Pyck, Tholl, and Taylor, give a clever and graceful dancing act; Miss Gena Manon is a popular vocalist; Rooke, Rorke, and company give an entertaining sketch, The Prince's Love Affair; the Lannons are clever step and pedestal dancers, and are well received; the Max Tourbillon Troupe of acrobatic cyclists give a daring and graceful performance; and the Palace pictures complete a first-class bill.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Miss Florence Baines and company are paying another visit with Miss Lancashire, Limited, and playing to packed houses. Miss Baines still impersonates Mary Ellen Thompson in her inimitable style; Mr. Burt Burton is an excellent Moses Goldburg; Mr. P. Fletcher gives a hearty rendering of John Henry Thompson; and Mr. G. Gambier (John Higgins), Mr. S. Holden (Harry), Miss M. Collin (Bertha), Mr. H. Lloyd (Grant), and Miss A. R. Clyde (Mrs. Thompson) are good. Miss Ruby Glyn as Eva Lancashire is an admirable support to Miss Baines.

HAMILTON, N.B. — HIPPODROME. — Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Musical-Director, Mr. J. Millar. —Sandy M'Nab, supported by Miss Bessie Arthur and company, is topping the bill here in The Egyptian Mummy. Roma and Romani evoke the heartiest applause in their refined musical act; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde are excellent in a novel shadowgraph entertainment; J. A. Wilson and his dog Towzer are established favourites; the Bros. Dean are something out of the usual in the way of a dancing turn; the Sutcliffe troupe of pipers, dancers, and acrobats are awarded a warm welcome; Patty Yole is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; and the Bioscope concludes.

HANLEY.—GRAND.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.

—A brilliant reception is accorded Jan Rudenyi, the actor-violinist, and his company in The Power of Music. Prof. Leroux's monkeys are cleverly trained; Ed. E. Ford, the Australian sundowner, is received with favour; the Merrills, cyclists, are really clever; Hampton and Bauman are smart; Blake and Granby, in a comedy duologue, are heartily received; Richard Taylor, as a whistling ventriloquist, is good; and also billed are Evelyn Taylor, comedienne; the Lesters, and the Grand Pictures.

ROYAL.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone.—Mr. Weedon Grossmith and company in Mr. Preedy and the Countess are entertaining large and delighted audiences here. Mr. Grossmith's Mr. Preedy is full of natural quaintness; Miss Ruth Mackay as the Countess is admirably suited for the part. Mr. Murray Carson is a blustering Bounsall; Mr. Ronald Squire as the Earl is excellent; Mr. Edward Bonfield as the Hon. Robert Jennerway is most humorous; Mr. Oswald Marshall plays the old Lord Kenslow skilfully; Mr. George A. Seagar as the solicitor is a great success; and Mr. Frank H. Denton's Reginald is a creditable impersonation. Mr. Arthur B. Murray as Bilson is responsible for much fun. Miss Lydia Rachel as Mrs. Sidgrave is well suited; and Miss Evelyn Kerry as Emma is charming. The principal piece is preceded by A Ball or a Motor.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—Capital variety turns are here this week, headed by the De Breans in clever juggling and shadowgraph entertainment; and Trojan, who does wonders with his one arm. Miss Lola Patey scores a success as a Dutch vrouw; Miss Enid Errol and company give a pretty and amusing turn in their dance scena, Cloudland. Miss May Baskerville sings with power; and the Canworths have a good banjo and vocal speciality. Les Supriskis, Mr. Harry Wenburn, Mr. Frank Solbey, and August, September, and May, also assist materially.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. C. Scutt.—During the early part of the week (by special arrangement with Charles Frohman), Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company made a welcome return visit in Leah Kleschna. Miss Bessie Rignold endowed the title-rôle with dignity and tenderness; Mr. William Clayton gave a vivid sketch of Kleschna; Mr. Charles Barrett, in the part of Paul Sylvaine, did well; Mr. Algernon J. Hicks acted with natural effect in the character of Raoul Berton; and Mr. Graham Pockett was effective as Schram, the valet. Mr. Edgar J. Coyne made a pompous General Berton; and Clare Berton is admirably played by Emmie Wallace. Mr. Henry Miller's company came on Thursday with The Servant in the House.

PIER PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Mr. Ernest E. Norris and company are producing David Garrick. The title-rôle is finely sustained by Mr. Ernest Norris. As Simon Ingot Mr. Benson North takes the part admirably; Squire Chivy is played with good judgment by Mr. Edwards Petley; Miss Nora Craigie's Ada Ingot is altogether attractive; and great amusement is created by Miss Mabel Bishop and Miss Gladys Lloyd in the characters of Mrs. Smith and Miss Araminta Brown.

HOYLAND.—HIPPODROME.—Owner, Mr. Scott Alexander; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Terry.—The attraction here is provided by Mr. Gus Levaine and company in The Babes in the Wood. Miss Marion Collins is a bold and dashing Robin Hood, her singing being heartily applauded; Miss Lizzie Levaine as Maid Marion is all that can be desired. Miss Edie Levaine as Allan A'Dale, and Miss Vera Levaine as Phyllis, are excellent. Misses Violet and Nellie Harvey, in the rôles of the Babes, are very clever, their singing and dancing being highly appreciated. Mr. Arthur Collins is quite at home as Baron Badlot, the wicked uncle; and Messrs. Will Glenn and Will Freda as Friar Tuck and Chirrup the page respectively, are very good. Messrs. Charlie Towers and Jimmie Goode as Weary Willie and Tired Tim, and Miss Dolly Freda as Dame Durden, keep the audience in a ripple of laughter. Mr. Victor Silvernie is an excellent Demon Darkness; and Miss Ida Conway is a sweet Fairy Snowdrop, her song "Somewhere" being vociferously applauded. The specialities are Raynor and Esto, contortionists, &c.; The Four Dancing Pearls, speciality dancers; Mr. Victor Silvernie, silleur and bone soloist; Mr. Andrew Brownie, character vocalist; and the Grand Skating Carnival, under the direction of Mr. Alex Payne. The mounting is excellent.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager,

LETTERS COPIED WHILE WRITING in the Zanetic de Luxe Pen-duplicate Book. Sample, note size. 100 Duplicates printed 2-line address post free, cash 1/9, from E.R.A. Zanetic, 13, Wellington-street, Leicester. [ADVT.]

Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Appearing here are Frank Elliston and company in the pretty costume sketch My Lady Betty; Francis O'Flynn, banjo expert; Miss Marie Dreams, lady baritone; Ted Saunders, comedian; Alix Lukos, an actor impersonator and singer; Rex Fox, a clever wire walker; and Kioto and Esa, a pair of daring Japanese equilibrists. Pictures complete the bill.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Herbert Garside.—At the top of the bill is Miss Clarice Mayne, whose charming personality has made her a great favourite; she is very materially helped by the brilliant piano accompaniments and by-play of the gentleman who appears with her. Also in the bill are Bonnetti and Corri, comedy jugglers; Neilson's boys and girls, singers and dancers; Gillin, a ventriloquist gifted with a sense of humour; Roxborough and Wright, in a pleasant little duologue of singing and dancing; Les Montaldos, with a wonderfully well trained lot of parrots, cockatoos, and macaws; and Alfred J. Long, a refined and sweet-voiced male alto singer. The pictures are good.

HULL.—GRAND THEATRE.—Mortons, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Our Miss Gibbs proves itself to be a constant source of entertainment. The principal rôle is cleverly filled by Miss Blanche Browne, who sings and speaks her part with equal facility; a convincing study is that furnished by Miss Dora Sevening as Mme. Jeanne; Miss Grace Wixon as the Duchess of Munster; Mr. George Gregory's Timothy is a piece of acting that will long be remembered for its absolute perfection; Mr. H. V. Oropion is a fine representative of the Peerage. The whole performance is one of exceptional merit.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Mortons, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—For Love and the King is proving highly acceptable. Mr. Watson Mill gives evidence of his skill as an actor, and he is well received by the house; Miss Rosalind Tate plays Jarval's sister with dramatic force; Prince Yuros is a pleasant contribution by Mr. F. K. Wicksteed; King Kara was invested with all-sufficing dignity by Mr. Stanley Weston; the Duke Fernand falls to Mr. G. Chate, who gives an admirable reading of his rôle. The play is well received.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Walter Bentley; Resident Representative, Mr. Alfred Graham.—Packed houses have been the order since the reopening under this new management. A capital programme is headed by Herbert Rule; Leo Dryden delights the audience with his répertoire of song poems; and the Three Orleans appear in a smart singing and dancing act. Remarkable feats are performed by La Belle Nello, in her bathing scene; comedy is introduced into the programme by Tennyson and Wallis, comedians and patterers; Chas. Stevens, character comedian; the Gregson Trio, in a rollicking comedy act, The Dummy; and Willie Atom and company, in their farcical absurdity Wiggles. Marie Stroud, chorus comedienne, and the pictures on the bioscope complete.

PALACE.—Proprietors, Moss Empires, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Barnett.—Here Fred Karno presents his sketch, Perkins, M.P., the title-rôle being taken by Mr. Albert Bruno. Oswald Williams is assisted by Winifred La Barte, and does several remarkable illusions; the Villions are exceptionally clever as cyclists, dancers, and eccentrics; as a ventriloquist Horace White is distinctly clever; Bert Errol's ideal "woman" causes amusement. Rohda Bros. appear in a clever gymnastic act; and Rich and Rich are effective comedians. Florence is a smart mimic; and the Royal Delomes are expert clog dancers. Coloured pictures are shown on the bioscope.

EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—The tenor songs of Jack Freeman are well received; Lisbon and Barker are entertaining comedians and vocalists; Little Dixie is an attractive child comedienne; and the other turns are Hillet and Hallett, comedians and dancers; Adeline Yohle, vocalist and dancer; Gertie Grace, a comedienne; and Cummin and Seaham, humorous acrobatic comedians.

HYDE.—EMPIRE AND THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Central Theatres and Franco-British Picture Co.; Managing-Director and Licensee Mr. W. Turner; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Percival.—Mr. Harry Roxbury's Sleeping Beauty pantomime is full of fun and melody, the comedians being genuinely amusing, whilst the songs and concerted pieces are admirably rendered. As the Princess Beauty Miss Ivy Moore acts and sings with piquancy and charm; a dashing Prince is Miss Lillian Elliott, who makes herself very popular. Sharing chief honours is Mr. Tubby Edlin, whose natural wit and humour is greatly enjoyed; Mr. Willie Black makes a diverting Queen, and his songs and dances are well received. Mr. Frank H. Morton is a dramtic demon, and his songs obtain well merited appreciation. Special recognition, too, must be given to Tom Shenton and Chicks, the Martinellos, and the Oowanda Girls.

ILKESTON.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Proprietor, Mr. B. Kennedy.—The programme is made up this week by Miss Winnie Wentworth, Lerio; Keene Harker, eccentric comedian; and the usual pictures.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Mr. John Leopold's company is paying a return visit with New Frivolity, preceded by The Stadium. Mr. Watson Hume's Oliver Buckwheat is a good performance; and Mr. Jack Leopold is a capital Daniel Teething; Jules Vermiglio is ably represented by Mr. John Leopold, jun.; Samuel Vermiglio loses nothing at the hands of Mr. Harry Ugar; Mr. Bol Otto is suitably cast as Prof. Fumble; Miss Cathleen Cavanagh as Madame Cobweb acquits herself well; and Miss Elsie Forster wins favour as Lucy Buckwheat. The Four Kellys are smart tumblers.

IPSWICH.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Mr. Keith G. Kenneth's company opened on Monday with Max Pemberton's stirring play, The Woman of Kronstadt. Miss Ida Chapman as Marion Best, the heroine, shows ability; Miss Betty Fairfax acts cleverly as Madame de Bellegarde; Miss Isa Bellington and Miss Marjorie Armstrong impersonate successfully the daughters of the Governor; Miss Edith Vogue makes a deep impression as the spiteful Princess Marie; as Colonel Bonzo Mr. Keith G. Kenneth is admirable throughout; Mr. Bernard Copping is a capable Paul Zazzoulic; and Mr. Horace Sinclair plays effectively as General Steffanoff. Mr. Taylor Vinson is the secret service agent; and Messrs. Lionel West and Herbert Lessin are two lively British naval officers. The play is excellently mounted. Collaborators is an amusing curtain-raiser.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Mr. Gus Elen is paying his first visit to Ipswich this week and attracting large and appreciative audiences. Mendel, the blind pianist, on a return visit, had an enthusiastic welcome; Messrs. Wilton Heriot and company have an amusing sketch called Father's Footsteps; Mlle. Leoville is a clever performer on the tight wire; and the Larettes execute some intrepid feats on the swinging trapeze. Guy Ryder is a good society whistler; and Miss Edith Chantler and the Melba Twins sing some catchy songs. The bioscope concludes.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Lionel Locke.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's panto company is here with Hop o' My Thumb, which is well received. Little Georgie Harris is very good in the title-rôle; Miss Kittie Trewhitt makes a capital Prince Uno, her singing being excellent; Miss Kitty Rafferty as Princess Meadowsweet is simply charming, her vocal powers establishing her quite a favourite. Mr. Vivian Wakeman makes a first-class Dame, and gives some most excellent specialities; Messrs. Cowley and Rick are genuine comedians, and do full justice to the parts of Silversheen and Goldstein; and Mr. Harold Pyott, "the smallest man in the world," causes quite a furore. Miss Gladys Wyse is very fine in the part of Jeannie Macgregor. The dresses and scenery are excellent, and clever dances are executed by a powerful corps de ballet.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—Mr. Frank Weathersby's company is appearing here in Two Little Drummer Boys. Mr. Gerald Kennedy is successful in the unenviable part of Captain George Darrell; Mr. Alec Forbes is good as Captain Frank Carsdale; Mr. R. C. Carlton appears as General Kingsley; Miss Beatrice Shirley is a dignified Alma Kingsley; and Miss Nellie Murray is excellent as Drunken Meg. The two little drummer boys are well played by Miss Nellie Morris and Miss Minnie Webster. The comedy element is supplied by Mr. Conn Allister as Quincy O'Quirke and Mr. Byron Douglas as Timothy Trimmer, who are well supported by Miss Viola March as Molly Meadows. For Friday night a visit of Miss Kitty Loftus and company was announced.

KIDDERMINSTER.—NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—Misses Nora Carton and Beatrice Selwyn's company is here in Temptation. Mr. Norman A. Overton ably portrays Hubert Thorne; and Messrs. Dudley Wynton and Charles O. Whyte are respectively good as Sir Charles Tremaine and Major Grant. Mr. Patterson Bradbury as Mr. Blight is very real; Miss Beatrice Selwyn as Dora Blight and Miss Nora Carton as Hilda Dundonald give excellent displays of acting. The play is well staged.

LANCASTER.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—Messrs. Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's pantomime, Aladdin, is here. Miss Hettie Zillwood is a spirited Aladdin; Miss Lou Charlesworth a dainty Princess, sings well; the Sisters Wingrove are excellent in their respective parts of Pekee and Cheekee; Mr. Clarence Turner as Widow Twankey is a great factor in mirth-making; the Brothers Lavelle as the Police are most amusing; Frank Sutherland as Abanazar is popular; and Mr. Fred Osmond makes the most of the part of the Vizier. The specialities include the Brothers Lavelle in a really fine acrobatic act; the Venester Troupe of lady dancers; Pulo, comedy juggler; Miss May Myatt, 'cello soloist; and the Gando Sextette.

LEAMINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Longden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. John Halifax.—During the earlier part of the week Miss Violet Osmund's company furnished a great attraction with The New Barmaid. Mr. Alexander Loftus and Mr. Chas. Adesm as Bertie White and William White kept the ball of fun merrily rolling. Mr. E. Sykes gave a clever impersonation of Colonel Claymore, and Mr. Leslie Austen made the most of his opportunities as Captain Loveday. Mr. Charles Sequin was a great success as Bonsor, as was also Mr. E. Osborne as James. Miss Madge Prior gave a very attractive portrayal of Ethel Joy, singing with artistic effect, whilst as Dora Heather Miss Beatrice Erle was charming as well as amusing. Another praiseworthy performance was the Brenda Louth of Miss Vera Grafton. Other characters were creditably taken by Miss M. Stead, Miss De Terry, Miss Marion Vyner, and Miss Murielle Mascott. For the latter portion of the week Miss Zena Dare is announced to appear in The Little Duke.

LEEDS.—THE GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Jno. Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Cinderella, after a prosperous career, is finishing to-night (Saturday). On Wednesday Mr. Tom E. Murray, the principal fun-maker, took a well-earned benefit. Mr. Edward Lewis is sustaining his popularity as the Dame, and Mr. Albert Letine as one of the Sisters is all that can be desired. We are glad to welcome back Miss Florence Parfrey, who at the commencement of the pantomime was prevented by indisposition from appearing; Mr. Jack Pleasants has made a most favourable impression as the Page; the Bros. Redmond as the Handy Men are also to the fore in funny business; a skilful impersonation of a dog is done by Mr. Fred Zarinella; Miss Maya Mannering possesses a delightfully sweet voice and acts the title part to perfection; as the Prince Miss Jane Eyre fully justifies the enthusiastic applause accorded her; Miss Barry Eldon's capital voice is one of the most pleasing features of the pantomime; and the others who render a good account of themselves are Miss Olive Crellin as Dandini, Miss Winnie Volt as Phyllis, Mr. Richard Keith as Mr. Chatter, and Mr. Albert Chapman as Father Time; and the charming ballets are greatly admired.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—Charles R. Whittle is one of the tops of the bill, and does a smart turn; the living picture entitled The Triumph of Beauty share honours with Mr. Whittle; the Casey Army, with Will Murray in charge, has been altered and improved; Cruickshank is a capital jester, and plays the banjo cleverly; Mlle. Lucia has a novel entertainment which is greatly appreciated; the Coloured Meisters' harmonious voices gain much applause; Mlle. Haydee's marionettes are cleverly manipulated; and others in a capital company include Bros. O'Brien in some smart bar work, Edie Reynolds, and Katie Butler.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Bush.—Miss Marquiss and her trained cobs head the bill; Cassie Walmer's songs, sung in excellent voice, are very popular; the Eight College Girls submit a capital vocal and dancing scena; Emmie Ames has a nice style; Charles Ulrick provides an exciting turn; Harry Barcroft, Paul Corrix Trio, and the Lovelaces are also good.

BARRASFORD'S HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford.—Dan and his company of canine actors head the bill; Miss Alma gives a monologue, "Santa Claus," cleverly; the Arthur Gallimore Trio are very smart; the McLellan Carson Duo shine in roller skating; and Buddha's Blackboard is an interesting feature.

THE VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—Walton and Lester, Millie Howell, May B. Brilliant, The Hendersons, and Bros. Roland are among the good items provided.

LEICESTER.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Business-Manager, Mr. Trueman Towers.—Mr. F. W. Bolam's company is here with The Marriages of Mayfair. Miss Conyers Radcliffe deserves high praise for her portrayal of Dorothy Gore; and other ladies who are also prominent with excellent character sketches are Miss Mildred Cottell as Lady Margaret Villiers; and Miss Naomi Neilson as Bess Bissett; Mr. Robert Paige is very good as Lord Adolphus Villiers; and as Nigel Villiers Mr. Dennis Cleugh makes a conspicuous success; Mr. Paul Beckett is also most successful as Jim Callender. The various other parts in a big cast are capably enacted, and the staging is well done.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Allerton Turner.—Mrs. Wybert Clive's company is here in The Outcast of the Family. Excellent portrayals are given by Mr. Herbert Bentone, Mr. J. D. Clyde, Mr. Bert Oates, M. Wybert Clive, Mr. Tom Armitage, Miss Freda Beckett, Miss Maud Leslie Cudd, and Miss Gertrude Morella.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—The principal attraction is Chung Ling Soo, the smart illusionist and conjurer, whose many elaborate and deftly-worked tricks astound the audience; Humpsti-Bumpsti (presented by Pipifax and Paulo) is a turn that is vastly to the liking of the audience; Will H. Fox, the favourite comedian-pianist, makes a big hit; Tom Stuart furnishes a most enjoyable turn, his mimicry being excellent; Miss Millie Engler and company, including Miss Louie Tinsley, are seen to advantage in the farcical episode, Beauty and the Burglar, which creates plenty of merriment; Jennie Alexander is a young and clever comedienne, who impersonates various stars in excellent style; Geo. Rae is an entertaining Scotch comedian, who also shines as a dancer; Monie Mine's story songs and step dances are a feature; and the bioscope is retained.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—At the head of this week's programme is Harry Tate's No. 1 company in Motoring, which creates the usual amount of side-splitting laughter; Enzer, the soldier-juggler, is also prominent; and Miss Clarice, the lady ju-jitsu champion, has a clever and versatile turn; the Unites, in their comedy act, are both clever and funny; Estcourt, humorist, mystifier, and juggler, is entertaining. Other turns are submitted by Beatrice Willey, in a medley of old flower songs; Fred Wright, eccentric comedian; and Maud Garland, vocal comedienne. The bioscope pictures are good.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Secretary, Mr. W. S. Rosie.—A flying visit of Monsieur Roubaud's French company was paid here on Wednesday, when two performances were given. In the afternoon they presented the comedy, L'Avare, and in the evening the comedy Le Voyage de Monsieur Perrichon, which was followed by the vaudeville L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle.

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. W. Heath.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is occupying the boards here with The Christian. Mr. R. Scrope Quentin as John Storm preserves a dignified and manly demeanour throughout, evoking hearty applause; Mr. Edwin Ling gives a striking portrayal of Father Lamplugh; Mr. Arthur D. Layland presents an excellent study of Horatio Drake; Mr. John Blake successfully undertakes Lord Robert Ure; Miss Muriel Marsden fills the part of Glory Quayle with sound judgment; Miss Alice Maude successfully portrays Mrs. Callender.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Secretary and Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstencroft.—Paulton and Doley are to the front in a clever and amusing cycle act; the Quality Quartette are excellent harmonisers; Dancit had a flattering reception for her clever dancing; Ida Dorrie is an attractive comedienne with good songs; the Three Prestons present an enjoyable sketch entitled The Village of Shift 'Em; Mr. Harry Morris, vocalist; Mr. Geo. Doonan, comedian; and Cavalletti Bros. are also in the bill, and the Hippodrome pictures conclude.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company present an interesting play by G. Carlton Wallace, entitled The Village Blacksmith. A successful rendering of the title-rôle is given by Mr. Sam Livesey; Miss Maggie Edwards makes a hit as the Blacksmith's Wife; roguery is well characterised by Mr. Joseph Carter as Captain Leo; Mr. Thomas E. Marshall, Mrs. T. C. Livesey, and Miss Cassie Le Grande appear to advantage as Jeremiah and Sal Parkins and their daughter Ruth; Mr. Fred Haming plays amusingly as Billy Twigg; and pleasant variety interludes have a place in occasional scenes, a strong feature being also made of a wrestling match between the hero and the sinister Captain

LINCOLN.—ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, Messrs. Payne Seddon and Ernest Pope; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Pope.—When Knights Were Bold was presented here on Monday by Mr. James Welch's company. Mr. H. Langdon Bruce as Sir Guy de Vere is extremely funny; Mr. Charles Lloyd's Isaacson was a clever study, as was Mr. H. Winton's Widdicombe. Mr. Colin Johnson ably played the Dean, and Mr. Gerald Venning made his mark as Sir Bryan. Miss Ernita Lascelles was a charming Lady Rowena, and Miss Ethel St. John a good Sarah. Millie's Mother precedes. For Her Husband's Sake, played by Mr. Millar Anderson's company, is billed for the last three nights.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. E. Dobney.—The Geraldos present a really smart juggling act; Margit and Lener have a sensational turn, in which the gentleman's somersaulting is remarkably neat. Mabel Le Blanche, Charles Leighton, Harry Bent, the Gelders, Ivy Dene, and the Palace Perfection pictures make up a strong bill.

LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—Red Riding Hood finishes here to-night.

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—So successful has Dick Whittington been that it has been decided to run it until the end of March, a couple of dramatic engagements having been cancelled. There is every probability that the Shakespeare will beat its previous record.

ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—How often A Royal Divorce has been to Liverpool is difficult to say, but certainly well over fifty times, yet at this popular north-end house crowded audiences are the rule. Miss Violet Ellicott sustains the part of Josephine in most creditable fashion; Mr. Keith Fraser makes an ideal Napoleon; the level-headed Talleyrand is capitally presented by Mr. J. H. Roberts; Mr. Charles Stirling proves an able Marquis de Beaumont; as Marshal Murat Mr. Harold S. Standing is eminently successful; Miss Dorothy Hudson plays intelligently as the little King of Rome; and Miss Winnie Tempest admirably suits the rôle of Marie Louise.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Married to the Wrong Man is attracting big business. Miss Mary Pemberton shows to great advantage in the trying rôle of Ruth; Mr. Henry Lonsdale affords a telling interpretation of Jack Gladwin; as Captain Deering Mr. George Arthur gives the utmost satisfaction; some capital comedy is provided by Mr. Syd Claydon (Timothy Clinker) and Miss May Day (Dolly Fritter); and other parts are capably held by Messrs. Leonard S. Harrison, Leonard Thackeray, R. Marius St. John, Miss Cissie Bellamy, Miss Irene Atchinson, and Miss Una Erle.

KELLY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant.—An acceptable presentation of The Luck of Roaring Camp is being given here by a proficient company sent by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow. As the light-hearted Nell Curtis Miss Elizabeth Dundas pleases generally, hearty applause being bestowed upon her; Mr. Douglas Murray reflects every credit upon himself with his fine portrayal of Will Gordon; Miss Doris Gilman makes an effective Jovita; and constant laughter follows the work of Mr. Harry Benson (Paddy McGinty), Mr. Horace Stewart (Ebenezer), and Miss Mary Morrell (Mrs. O'Flynn). The rest of the cast do good work.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Heading the programme here is the always welcome Evie Greene, who is having flattering reception for her contributions; Harold Nuttall's company give the popular sketch The Ghost of Jerry Bundler; Alice Raymond and company please immensely with the musical trifle A Night in Egypt; shouts of laughter follow the antics of the Marco Twins; Phil Percival at the piano is a treat, his burlesque on Sexton Blake proving very amusing; the Olympian troupe earn rounds of applause for their clever and amusing football match on bicycles; Chass Lewis gives a smart ventriloquial turn; Williams and Parker have a neat act as Welsh vocal and comedy entertainers; and Harry Friskey has some funny juggling.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Principal here is the dramatic sketch 99, presented by Frank Lister and Fred Kitchen's company; The Toilers is a popular musical scene submitted by G. W. Blythe, Miss Nellie Brierley, the Lancashire pit-brow singing girl, being introduced; Cyrus Dare is a talented vocal illusionist and imitator of children; the Sivronis are smart burlesque artists; Louis J. Seymour has some taking songs; Lillian O'Gorman sings and dances in good style; and Wilf Burnand gives imitations of prominent favourites.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Here this week we have Reginald Eyre and company with the military episode Gentlemen, the King, which is received with approval; the Croisit Trio submit a novel sporting scena, From the Time of the Crusaders; Kitty Colyer has a hearty reception for her popular songs and smart dances; Harry Taft proves as diverting as ever; Madge Allen sings and dances to everybody's satisfaction; the Christie couple of comedians and loose dancers earn rounds of applause; the speciality comedy act of the Hectors gains warm approval; C. Colbert, as a hoop manipulator and club juggler, shows up well, and meets with much popularity; and Reg Beauchamp, comedian, is also in the list.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The Best of Her Sex is being played here by the stock dramatic company, among the principal characters being Colonel Faringdon, ably presented by Mr. Cecil Ravenswood; Philip, in the good hands of Mr. Harry Tresham; Leslie Vernay, well presented by Mr. Sydney Grant; Vera Delorme, which is capably handled by Miss Lilian Radbourne; Ruth Raeburn, undertaken by Miss Gertrude Entwistle; and Peter Jorkins, acted by Mr. Tom H. Solly. The Bioscope shows The Best Man Wins.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Top of the bill here is Arthur Roberts and company with the merry sketch The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife; Miss Lydia Yeamans, who is assisted by Frederick J. Titus, has a flattering reception for his songs; W. F. Frame proves as popular as ever; Naughton and Gold keep their audience in the best of humours with their latest, What Happened at the Hunt; Henry Helme sings in accomplished style; Mlle. Marjutti pleases greatly with her new act From Demon to Fairyland: Clown Argo shows himself to be a clever imitator of sounds; much satisfaction is afforded by Herbert Sleath's capital sketch The Deputy Sheriff; and Falso and Eida have an interesting song and dance act illustrating ju-jitsu.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. George F. Slatter.—The attraction here, Mr. J. Gar Kiddie's pantomime Babes in the Wood, is put on in capital style. Miss Marion Scott makes a vivacious Robin Hood; as Maid Marion Miss Mary Dene acquits herself with credit; Miss Emmie Mappin is the Fairy Queen; and plenty of fun emanates from the efforts of Brinsley Smith (Baron), Harry Rousby (Dame), Oliver Conroy (Village Idiot), and Gee and Atkins (Robbers). Capital business is being done.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Mr. T. N. Walter's company is attracting delighted audiences this week with The Flower Girl. Miss Lena Brickwell, a charming Lily, gives a most pleasing performance; Miss Elsa Brettingham, in the part of Lizette, is capital; and Miss Eva Brickwell is clever as Miss Greenhill, the Suffragette. Mr. John T. McCallum as Joe Wheeler, the Busman, creates endless fun, and is ably assisted by Mr. John A. Latham as Johnny Wheeler; Mr. J. Burlington Rigg (Scotch baritone) as the Hon. Billy Greenhill introduces some good songs; Mr. Cyril Delevanti as the Piccadilly dude makes a decided hit; and Mr. Henry Agnes as Alphonse de Racquet is most successful. Miss Idalia May's dancing in the Italian Garden scene is much appreciated.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—The drama Driven From Home is presented by Mr. Andrew Melville's company. The dressing, mounting, and effects are noteworthy, a steam circular saw being one of the "exciting items" of the play, the chief rôles of which are carefully entrusted to Mr. Felix Pitt (Anthony Raybrook), Mr. Percy Dawson (Willie), John B. Shinton (Geoffrey Waring), and Miss Ada M. Ryder as Laura and Walter.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. W. Alvar.—Coverdale and Huxley's Juveniles present a clever scena, in which a number of smart choruses, solos, and duets, together with excellent dancing, are introduced. Ruby Celeste and May Hallett give an amusing dialogue, The Other Woman; T. W. Lenner is good in songs and patter; while Florrie Wright is equally in demand with her chorus songs.

MALSTEG.—TOWN HALL THEATRE.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd., Manager, Mr. G. F. Knowles.—The Charles W. Poole Myriorama is as up-to-date as ever. The variety programme is a strong one, the star turn being the Royal Banzai Family of Japanese jugglers, contortionists, and equilibrists. Mr. W. L. Rowland is a capable mirth-maker; the Bros. Rees, Welsh military athletes, are a novel turn; Miss Inez and Master Pim are clever on the horizontal bars; Sydney Bach, Welsh comedian, causes roars of laughter; and the Cairo Trio, in an Oriental musical performance, are entertaining. At intervals some fine films are displayed.

MANCHESTER.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—The Voysey Inheritance, presented by Miss Horniman's very capable company, was followed on Monday last with the closest attention. Mr. Montague Kiphinstone was highly successful as Mr. Voysey; Miss Ada King quietly effective as Mrs. Voysey; Mr. Frank Darch played well as Edward; Miss Darragh was particularly good as Alice Maitland; Charles Bibby was Major Booth Voysey to the life; and Miss Edyth Goodall played with her usual charm as Beatrice. As Honor Voysey Miss Muriel Pratt made quite a hit; and the remaining parts were ably filled by Messrs. Edward Landor, Leonard Mudie, Stanley Drewitt, Esmé Percy, J. V. Bryant, Henry Austin; Misses Louise Hotbrook, and Hilda Bruce Potter.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—A strong attraction is provided by Messrs. Cullen and Cathy's comic pantomime, The Babes in the Wood. Miss Bessie Cohen as Robin Hood is distinctly smart; and Miss Maudie Ford plays very nicely as Maid Marion. Pretty and delightful work is done by Miss Dolly Cullen and Miss Elsie Jordison as the Babes; and Mr. Arthur Stratton makes good capital out of his opportunities as the wicked Baron Toodle. Fine fun is added by Messrs. Cullen and Carthy as the Robbers, who are a great feature of the show; while Little Cluley as Bantam and Mr. Tom Drew as the Dame are also very amusing. Among the specialities, the dancing of the Granada Quartet of ladies is worthy of high praise.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—Mr. William Watson's pantomime, Robinson Crusoe, which has been delighting the patrons of other Broadhead halls, is the attraction here this week. The Waldrons are still in the cast.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Messrs. Watson and Ussher's company is here, after a successful week at the Osborne Theatre, in their domestic drama, Only a Little Boy.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Messrs. Hallatt and Howard's company are here in their popular drama, Her Love Against the World. A strong cast includes Miss Elsie Roberts, Mr. Oswald Cross and Mr. Fred Emery, the latter in the rôle of Eric. Good houses are the rule.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The prime honours of a capital programme here are shared by Lottie Bellman (capably assisted by Bay Russell), in clever bits of vaudeville; L'Incognita, the wonderful soprano vocalist; and Fred Storey and Co. in a fine performance of Rip Van Winkle. Excellent turns are added by the Westwoods, expert comedy cyclists; Sydney James's Strolling Players, the mirthful vocalists; Walker and May, coloured comedians; the Musical Jees, in their smithy act; Frank Danby and Co. in Love in a Coffee Shop, a very pleasing sketch; Charles Vincent, comedian; and Takio, the Japanese mimic of sounds.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—The Slavinsky Russian Choir are to the front here this week, under the direction of Madame Margaret Agrineff-Slaviansky. The singing is somthing to remember. Dutch Daly has some smart talk, and plays popular selections on his concertina; the Four Regals give a highly finished and artistic strong act; Barton and Ashley score a big success as a comedy duo; Leonie Dixon sings and dances daintily; Frank Maura gives his dexterous and incomparable exhibition of foot equilibrism; Charles Mildare makes a hit as a whistler; and The Dear Departed, a most enjoyable comedy by Stanley Houghton, is presented by Henry Austin's company. Signor Rosi's Italian Ballet is here for a third and last week.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—The top attraction here is Margaret Cooper, who gives a very refined entertainment at the piano; George Sheldon's company is also promient in the sensational sketch, Before the Dawn. Peggy Pryde adds a smart turn in comedy; and James and Jenny Lee give a startling exhibition of acrobatic cycling on the tight wire. Other good turns are Herbert La Martine, a novel and eccentric dancer; Palles and Cussick, the eccentric pair; Harold Heath, coon comedian and dancer; the Dardinis Trio, in a funny juggling act; and Taree, the Australian musical bushman, in a novel act.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Stella Gastelle, the charming musical comedy artiste, is here, assisted by Lena Simkin in a scena from La Poupée, and is well received; J. Cooke Beresford and company are excellent in comedy sketch, Who's the Burglar? Emma Don scores as a male impersonator; Fred Arthur, in character creations and mimicry, is capital; Edith Harmer, comedienne, provides a very pleasing turn; Henrietta and Selina are clever musical entertainers; and other good turns are contributed by Alice Leyton, comedienne; Emmie Harlow, chic comedienne and mimic; and Wright and Elton, novel comedy artists. Ruffell's Bioscope pictures complete.

KING'S THEATRE, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—Excellent and well received turns here this week are provided by the Smart Set Entertainers, including Georgie Martin, comedienne; Albert Sember and company in a dramatic sketch, The Bell-Ringer; Billy Farrell, of cake-walk fame; and Seeley, West, and Rhodesia, in juggling, mirth, and music. Other acceptable items are those of Olive and Owen, in pleasing comedietta, The Roadside Tinkers; Will Rhodes, droll singing comedian; and the Bioscope pictures.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Owen.—Fred Karno's Yap Yaps, with Gus Le Clerq in the cast, tops the bill, and causes roars of laughter; another capital turn is Toplitsky, or the End of the World, excellently presented by Hayman and Franklin's Players; the Claymore Trio are exceedingly good in a unique dancing juggling act; and other entertaining turns are offered by Angus Strong, baritone vocalist; Layton and Douglas, quick-change musical artists; Milton and Horton on the triple bar; Dick Livesey, ventriloquist; and Harry Marlow, light comedian.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. F. Weathersby.—The Sign of the Cross is being presented here by Mr. G. W. Bowes's company (by arrangement with Mr. Wm. Greet). Mr. Leonard Yorke presents an artistic performance of Marcus Superbus; Mercia is charmingly represented by Miss Florence Maber; Miss Effie Dane plays with resource and expression the rôle of Stephanus; and Mr. Aubrey Fitzmaurice depicts the sinister character of Nero with much power; and Mr. G. Osmond Tearle as Tigellinus and Mr. Evan Davies as Licinius play their respective parts in a commendable manner.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Mayall.—The programme this week is contributed to by the Katos, living marionettes; Bert Crosbie, comedian and dancer; De Lil, a clever illusionist; Lily Vine, comedienne and dancer; H. Munro, modeller of the faces of great men; Jack Binns, comedian; and Hulbert, ventriloquist.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Mother Goose is being presented this week by Mr. A. Jackson Withers' company. Miss Lillie Soutter as Lubin, Miss Marie Wall as Daisy, and Miss Marie Elsie as Annabel earn great praise. Their singing, as well as that of the Fairy, Miss Roberta Svendsen, is a feature. Walter Kooney and Harry Karr as Parchment and Close are immensely funny and clever dancers. Mr. Alfred Donohoe is a comical Mother Goose, and Billy has an amusing representative in Mr. Mark Henlon.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—At the head of affairs here are Ike and Will Scott, a pair of merry entertainers that quickly secure hearty appreciation; the Three Herberts, acrobats and bouncing table experts, prov

ALBERT CHEVALIER.

MR. CHEVALIER'S EIGHTH AND LAST WEEK IN NEW YORK.

THE NEW YORK STAR:

With all due respect for the cry of protecting home industries, it cannot be denied that the appearance of such a man as Albert Chevalier is a decided help to the profession in general. Mr. Chevalier is, to-day, more popular and more welcome than he ever has been before.

NEW YORK.

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH:

Possibly the highest tribute to Chevalier lies in the fact that he holds an audience breathless with interest as he shows types his listeners have never seen. To do this a man must have so much human sympathy and sentiment that he breaks down the barrier separating the known from the unknown types. And that's what Chevalier has. He cannot be classed as a mere entertainer. Referring to him as a great actor gives a dignity to the phrase that few may hope even to approach.

THE NEW YORK STAR:

Chevalier is to-day the greatest artist in his line in the world. The keynote in his character is a strong sympathetic touch that magnetically reaches the best that is in his auditors. . . . His reception was tremendous.

THE NEW YORK DRAMATIC NEWS:

Simply wonderful. As years go by, Chevalier develops his art until it has reached the highest pinnacle. His répertoire was appealing in every particular.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE:

It sometimes happens that dramatic art is even better exemplified on the variety stage than in the "legitimate" theatres. There is such an instance now in New York. Albert Chevalier has begun a tour of the "vaudeville" houses. He is now at the Colonial. His acting was the best in all New York last week. It is always high among the best in England and America. Chevalier comes too seldom to this country. He is as much a favourite now as ever he was. He is one of the most remarkable comedians now living, and the public knows it. Wherever he appears there is "standing room only." His variety is astonishing. He understands how to make a programme. Each impersonation is a striking contrast to its predecessor. And he does half a dozen of a night. No better "character acting" is possible.

NEW YORK MAIL:

Chevalier was given an ovation.

NEW YORK JOURNAL OF COMMERCE:

A tremendous success. Albert Chevalier is the greatest character actor of the present time.

THE NEW YORK REVIEW:

He plays April with our emotions—tears trembling on the verge of falling are subtly arrested and touched up quickly with the light of laughter. Only an artist can twang the heart-strings and tickle you in the ribs, and be equally certain in each endeavour. Eight weeks comprise the sum total of Chevalier's New York appearances. It is a pity he cannot stay the season.

THE NEW YORK GLOBE:

Albert Chevalier is the most finished artist playing in vaudeville to-day, and his work has improved with his years, instead of losing any of the delicacy and restraint which, when a newcomer to America, made him unique among vaudeville performers.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE (second notice):

The performance at the Colonial is a virtual reception for Albert Chevalier.

THE NEW YORK CLIPPER:

Albert Chevalier's second week will in all probability result in the largest financial returns in the history of the Colonial Theatre of any European performer.

THE BROOKLYN CITIZEN:

No one individual has achieved so great a success in the portrayal of character. In the last decade he has added much to his répertoire, and while the old favourites were heartily applauded he appeared to better advantage in his newer characterisations. He is no longer only the coster. Now he depicts the broken-down actor, the country lout and other types as well. His "Workhouse Man," perhaps his most effective rôle, draws the audience's sympathy as nothing else on his programme.

THE BROOKLYN STANDARD UNION:

. . . . There is probably no finer bit of acting on the stage to-day than that of Chevalier in "The Workhouse Man."

NEW YORK STAR (second notice):

What an artistic delight that man Chevalier is, to be sure! His art is of the finest, the best we know on or off the vaudeville stage. Mr. Chevalier comes from abroad, but no American player need feel sorry that Mr. Chevalier plays in America. He is a man who is a credit to himself and to the whole craft of players.

4th American Tour.

SEPT. 27, 1909, to FEB. 12, 1910.
(20 WEEKS).

A FEW PRESS OPINIONS.

CHICAGO.

THE INTER OCEAN:
THE ART OF CHEVALIER.

Albert Chevalier's perfect art in characterisation and balladry graces the programme of vaudeville at the Majestic Theatre this week. His coming is an event that adds distinction to the local trend of things theatrical.

Chevalier is a comedian of genius. He has established himself in international fame, and his methods are familiar over the English-speaking world, from hearsay if not first-hand acquaintance, so there is no need to write discursively about his technique. Every one of his selections is a bit of finished interpretation, in mood, in sentiment, and in character detail. . . . In each, his costume and "make-up" was elaborate; and in each he seemed to put on a different individuality. He has a subtlety and brilliance that recalls Coquelin.

THE JOURNAL:

Chevalier's fame is solid, for it is built upon approximate perfection in the most difficult of arts. . . . When he is done you feel he has left nothing to do, and yet he has seemed not to be acting at all. Though he amazes the spectator with the seeming actuality of counterfeited character, he does not dazzle him with a show of technique. His is an art that conceals itself in everything but its result. He really seems to be what he makes believe he is, and appears to radiate character rather than make a mere outward show of it. He sees to it that his impersonation is pictorially accurate, but the wonder of his acting is not of rags, wig, and grease-paint. . . . It is a remarkable understanding of character and a remarkable control of the means of reproducing it that enables Chevalier to get to your heart.

CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD:

Chevalier is a master delineator, a creative artist. He gives you character, and, because he gives you character, both his humour and his pathos have the searching quality of truth. Chevalier has enormous range, and he sounds the notes in that great range with absolute precision. . . . Elaborate study, infinite pains must have been lavished upon these sketches, but there is no elaboration of method discernible. On the contrary, the method seems simple in the extreme. It is a method comparable to that employed by the masters of the short story where a rigid economy is imposed and where every detail that does not tell is excluded. One regrets that such art is not often visible, and that Chevalier comes to Chicago at such infrequent intervals.

Mr. Chevalier has added to the human worth of the theatre.

CHICAGO EXAMINER:

There's a big star at the Majestic this week: Albert Chevalier, a real comedian, an actor who finds your heart without insulting it. Chevalier has the power to, but he forbears from making an unpretty mess of your feelings. His strength as an artist is most greatly manifested in his reserve. There isn't an actor in town who can't learn something from this singer.

Singer? In its modern application that word tells nothing of Chevalier. His songs are little dramas, perfectly enacted. Their character and atmosphere are without flaw. They talk to us in the universal language—just as some wonderful, simple picture talks to every man in his own tongue.

Chevalier, so frequently pathetic, chokes me to silence. I can't even applaud him. He makes a drama of his song, a drama rich in atmosphere and imagination. He makes me see, not only himself, but what he sees. He is subtle. . . . He has found the hearts of two nations. If man ever broke optimism into the very drab of existence, it is Chevalier singing the "Workhouse Man." He is a fellow of infinite tenderness. . . . Chevalier has that final quality, distinction.

CHICAGO AMERICAN:

The moment eternalised, the human lifted out of mortality, immortalised; this is the painter's art. And this is Chevalier's art.

This is Chevalier's art most truly seen in "The Workhouse Man." Like the painter's, Chevalier's art is impersonal. There is no direct appeal; the canvas is finished and hung upon the walls for connoisseurs and fools alike to gaze upon, but the painter is nowhere in sight. There is no one to crave your emotional appreciation; the picture, serene in beauty and truth, does not ask your tears.

If your sympathies are quick and poignant a tear may fleck your eyelashes, but it will dry there without falling. We weep passionately over the passing, over that which goes for ever, over the wounds that will heal; but the moment of pain lifted into hope, the human lifted out of Time's mortality into eternity—this stirs the soul but forbids tears.

PITTSBURG.

THE PITTSBURG DISPATCH:

A revelation of dramatic power.

THE PITTSBURG POST:

Albert Chevalier is an artist in every sense of that much-abused term. It is thirty minutes of intellectual delight while he is on the stage, for his creations—masterpieces—give one something more than mere entertainment.

THE PITTSBURG LEADER:

Albert Chevalier, the famous English character actor, is an artist of rare attainments. His répertoire is strong, varied, and satisfying, surpassing anything ever seen in vaudeville before.

MR. CHEVALIER'S EIGHTH AND LAST WEEK IN NEW YORK.

THE NEW YORK TELEGRAPH:

The word "artist" is the one word properly to convey the greatness of Chevalier. It is often said of a man, that such as he are born only once in a generation. The history of the stage tells nothing of another Chevalier, and future generations will probably not be fortunate enough to know another like him.

BOSTON.

THE BOSTON TRANSCRIPT:

The quick and spontaneous impression of Albert Chevalier as he stepped upon the stage of Keith's Theatre yesterday afternoon, before an unusually large and unusually enthusiastic audience, was that of an actor who had mastered to its fullest and most satisfying sense the delineative and picturesque art of embodying physical characteristics. Then when the actor spoke the illusion was steadily maintained. The mobility of Mr. Chevalier's face, the quickness and sureness of his gestures to point or underscore a meaning, and the admirable restraint that characterised all his work illumined these sketches and made them something that seemed detached and far removed from the work of the ordinary music hall "character" actor.

THE BOSTON GLOBE:

For a number of years Mr. Chevalier's fame as an artist has been widespread, and his visits from the very first have been looked upon as events in theatrical history, worthy of the serious attention of the wisest students of the drama.

THE BOSTON JOURNAL:

Albert Chevalier, who was due at Keith's a fortnight ago, arrived yesterday. He couldn't come before because, according to the theatre announcement, "Chicago wouldn't let him go." Those who have seen him before could easily believe the announcement, and those who greeted him for the first time yesterday couldn't blame Chicago.

THE BOSTON POST:

Chevalier is a remarkable actor. His "Workhouse Man" is a masterpiece.

THE BOSTON ADVERTISER:

Chevalier's work is a revelation. If he chose to rest his laurels on "A Fallen Star" alone he would still be able to claim recognition as a great actor. . . . "A Fallen Star" and "The Workhouse Man" are classics.

THE BOSTON TRAVELLER:

Albert Chevalier came into his "ane countree" yesterday at Keith's, the welcome accorded him being most vociferous and continuous. . . . Recall after recall before the curtain. The great actor from the other side will be in Boston for two weeks, and it is quite safe to predict that his stay will be a constant triumph.

THE BOSTON HERALD:

The actor who recites to a soft piano accompaniment, who brings tears and smiles in quick succession, the hero of unnumbered poems and sketches is Albert Chevalier, the famous English character actor. So seldom are his methods employed in vaudeville that they seemed new. Distinction was given by the finesse and restraint with which they were used. . . . To convey the finer shades of feeling it would be hard to say whether he depended more upon the wonderful mobility of his face or the expressiveness of his hands. A quality which marks Mr. Chevalier a master in suggesting pathos is his restraint. . . . There was a prolonged welcome of applause.

PHILADELPHIA

THE PHILADELPHIA NORTH AMERICAN:

A man yesterday played with two big audiences at will. He made them sob, he made them cry, he made them laugh, and then he made them cry again. He transformed himself with a touch or two from a country bumpkin into an old, old man with the frost of many winters touching his hair, and the cares and sorrows of the years showing their tracery in his face. This man was Albert Chevalier, famous character actor. His work is wonderful—that is the only adequate word with which to describe it. . . . His "Workhouse Man" is a masterpiece.

THE PHILADELPHIA ITEM:

A great act. He was accorded an ovation.

THE PHILADELPHIA TELEGRAPH:

To quote from his first number, he "Roused the house to laughter and called forth the silent tear."

To achieve this, to cross and recross the faint demarcation between pathos and humour, and to carry the audience in the traversing—this represents the art of your true comedian at its loftiest estate. . . . Chevalier is a singer whose gesture, whose pantomime, whose facial play, whose very intonation characterise and dramatise. His types are all quick with life, and his hearers are brought, through the force and fervour of his artistry, to ready and sympathetic appreciation.

THE PHILADELPHIA TRANSCRIPT:

Chevalier is the greatest character star that has ever crossed the water.

THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER:

Chevalier, an artistic triumph.

MANAGERS, PLEASE NOTE!

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

NORTHAMPTON.—Palace of Varieties, Ltd.—Proprietors, Messrs. Sameen and McNeil; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Manager, Mr. P. H. Gould.—Topping the bill this week we have John Le Hay and company in a farcical episode Poor Beggar, in which Miss Nora Le Hay, Mr. Chas. Cantley, and Mr. John Le Hay provide plenty of amusement. The Herald Comedy Four (two ladies and two gentlemen) have good vocal and comic power; Unita and Paul, comedy gymnasts, obtain enthusiastic approval of their agility and fun; the Spadonis, lady duettists and dancers, are well received; Anson and Leslie are funny in a comedy sketch, Oh, George; and Ernest Clifford, novelty dancer; Lew Loman, comedian; Eric and Nora, in a musical act; and the Delvaines, with their marionettes, complete a most excellent programme.

NORTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company, with Two Little Drummer Boys, is heartily welcomed here. Mr. William Vane submits an admirable impesonation of Captain Carsdale; Mr. Edward Bikker makes of Captain Kingsley an excellent study; Mr. Frank Rogers ably depicts Captain Darrell; and Mr. Vernon H. Vane makes the most of Lieut. Kingsley. Miss Maggie English and Miss Maud B. Douglas display considerable ability as the two little Drummer Boys; Miss Violet Langley is much appreciated as Alma Kingsley; and Miss Violet Ingram gives a finished performance of Margaret Rivers. The humorous element is well sustained by Mr. Will Percy (Quiney O'Quirke), Mr. Dick Seddon (Timothy Trimmer), and Miss Patricia Connaughton (Molly Meadows).

Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The bill here is headed by the Five Olracs, in their act Acrobatical Funniosities, which receives well-merited appreciation. Madge Carew and Winnie Russell, assisted by the Avril Juveniles, in their vocal scena Little Gleaners, obtain a flattering reception; Tom Casey, the singing and whistling newsboy, proves a good turn; Waul Langtry, Scotch, Irish, and Tyneside comedian, is much enjoyed; and Pauline Zaro, comedienne; the Forsyths, in their musical-comedy act The Tramps in the Nursery, and the pictures all find favour.

NORTHWICH.—Central Theatre.—Manageress, Miss S. Golden.—It is some time since Shakespearean drama was last staged here; but Mr. George Munro's company has this week presented a few of the most popular plays. On Monday Hamlet was performed, and in the title-rôle Mr. Munro gave a skilled and sympathetic interpretation. Cladius in the hands of Mr. Howard Rose was an impressive delineation; and the Polonius of Mr. Ivor Barnard was a highly effective reading. Mr. W. Lawrence gave a clever portrayal of Horatio; Mr. Coniah Rowe left nothing to be desired as Marcellus; Mr. D. Thompson's Rosencrantz was commendable; and Mr. Ernest Digges gave a powerful rendering of the part of Laertes. Miss Norah Vaughan acquitted herself well as the Player Queen; Miss Gertrude Newham did well in the small part of Osric; and Miss Gertrude Littlewood played with nice discretion as the Queen of Denmark; Miss Doris Horrocks was a brilliant and charming Ophelia. The other plays billed for the week were Macbeth, Romeo and Juliet, Othello, The Sleigh Bells, and The Lyons Mail.

NORWICH.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Tom Watt's company in the Heath-Wilson Barrett version of East Lynne is here. Miss Laura Hanson in the character of Lady Isabel excites much sympathy; Mr. Rayson-Cousens is an excellent Archibald Carlyle; Mr. Wilfred Percy Mansfield a good Francis Levison; Mr. Joe Rowland a most humorous Bullock; Mr. William Tunbull deserves praise as Justice Hare; and the same may be given to Mr. Eric Lugg as Richard Hare. Mr. Tom Watt ably impersonates Lord Mountsevern; and Mr. E. Elliott as Mr. Hallijohn and Mr. Clifford Clifford as Lawyer Dill are successful. Miss Isabel Singleton as Cornelia Carlyle, Miss Beryl Forbes as Joyce, and Miss Alice Nunn as Wilson deserve praise; Miss Ida Heron is also to be complimented on her Barbara Hare.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—The Achmed Ibrahim troupe of Bedouin Arabs (ten in number) give their usual marvellous exhibition as equilibrists; Conway and Leland, the merry monopedes, create laughter by their eccentricities; Randolph King, the one-man programme, is a versatile artist; the Four Figaros are excellent vocalists and dancers; the Sisters Showell are clever and refined duettists; Maxey and Pete are comedy trick cyclists of merit; Crissie Cross is a smart singer and dancer; and Sam Williams scores as a character comedian. The Hippo Bio pictures are interesting.

NOTTINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The D'Oyly Carte Repertory Company is here. The Mikado was staged on Monday to a full house. In the part of Yum-Yum Miss Mabel Graham sang with bright and pleasing effect; while Miss Beatrice Boarer (Pitti-Sing) and Miss Marjorie Stone (Peep-Bo) acted in piquant fashion. Miss Bertha Lewis vocalised impressively as Katisha; Mr. Fred Billington's quiet humour was in full evidence as Pooh-Bah, this general favourite again adding to his popularity; Mr. Henry A. Lytton well brought out the eccentricities of Ko-Ko; and Mr. Leicester Tunks acted with dignity and sang excellently as the Mikado. Nanki-Poo had a fine exponent in Mr. Henry Hebert, who also gave his numbers with taste and expression. Mr. Sydney Granville (Pish-Tush) and Mr. Fred Drawater (Go-To) were an amusing couple; and the chorus numbers went splendidly. Other operas included Patience, Iolanthe, Gondoliers, and The Pirates of Penzance.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Two Little Vagabonds pays yet another visit here. Mr. Frank Beresford is excellent as George Thornton; and the villainy of Captain Darville is well expressed by Mr. Renand Lockwood. Miss Dorothy Milne makes a sympathetic Marion Thornton; and an effective Barbara Scarth is seen in Miss Mabel Cooke. Miss Marie Pritchard is altogether amusing as Biddy Mullins; Bill Mullins is ably exploited by Mr. C. L. Ludlow; Miss Helen Grenville (Dick) and Miss Ivy Millais (Wally) gain hearty applause; and valuable assistance is rendered by Messrs. Philip Beaufoy, Frederick Archer, and Reginald Key.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The Grotesques are a vaudeville company of exceptional merit; Gobert Belling's well-trained comedy mule, donkey, and dogs cause endless amusement; Ernest Shand again confirms his right to the esteem of audiences; Venando's clever ventriloquial work arouses enthusiasm; and the trick cycle riding of Arthur Kenny well deserves its warm reception. La Freya is the centre of some charming limelight views; laughter is assured by the clever cross-talking of Farr and Farland; and Munroe's comedy team call for commendation. The comic acrobatic feats of the Barrowskys are smartly performed; and capital pictures are given on the Bioscope.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—The principal attraction is Miss Harriett Vernon, whose pleasant manner and style is well known; Hayman and Franklin are popular; Bert and Dora, duologue and singing artists, and George F. Hall, American comedian, are good; and a very enjoyable entertainment is that of Francini Olloms and his page, in juggling and acrobatics. Hersleb Bros. and the Donatos occasion much mirth; Ruby Emmerson is both pretty and graceful; and the vocal efforts of Arthur Race are highly appreciated. A wonderful stage spectacle, Maurini's Fountains, and the usual Bioscope pictures conclude the bill.

OLDHAM.—Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Smiley.—Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's pantomime Robinson Crusoe holds the boards here. Miss Maude Mortimer plays the title-rôle, and wins hearty applause; Miss Yolande Noble as Polly Perkins ably seconds her, and is very successful; Miss Mildred Carr, a dashing Jack, sings capitally; and Miss Gladys Hicks as Sally is also very good. Miss Marie Longden, a captivating Daisy, Miss Jennie Weston, a smart Dick, and Miss Rita Vincent as Neptune's Daughter contribute to the marked success; and Miss Ray Morgan as the dusky Princess is excellent. The fun is fast and furious, with Mr. Arnold Richardson in the part of Billy Crusoe; Mr. H. Flockton Foster as Captain Cutter causes much amusement; Mrs. Crusoe is smartly acted by Mr. C. Young Fixott; and Mr. Charles Heslop as the bold bad Will Atkins is capital; Mr. Chas. North makes a capital Cannibal King; and Elton and Elma as Bill Starboard and Tom Mainbrace act cleverly. Mr. Oswald Battye is a complete success as Friday; and the Children's Ballet is invented and produced by Mlle. Pauline Rivers.

Colosseum Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—The Girl Who Went Astray, the attraction here, is being played by Mr. Bulmer's company. Miss Chriesie Dunbar acts in a powerful manner as Madge Harvey; as Violet Miss Lalla Stanhope is sympathetic; and Miss S. Haughton is an excellent Eleanor Merton. Mr. Louis Lingard makes a soldierly Capt. Julian; Mr. Austin Mortimer a cool and cunning Rupert Murdock; Mr. Ernest Dare a good Sergt. John Harvey; and Mr. R. Ashton a capital Dr. Wilson. Mr. T. Carter is a capable General Sir Hugh; Mr. J. H. Lee a most amusing Gussie Seymour; Miss Mary Dalby does well as Molly Smart; and Mr. Reg Oldroyd infuses much comedy into his acting. Mr. Evan Roland as Adolphus Boomer acts cleverly.

Empire Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Frank Adair and company in The Heathen and the Christian opened here on Monday. Miss Louie Adair played Mira Simpson in a forcible manner; Miss Stanley Burt as May Berresford is a dainty actress; Mr. Frank Adair is highly successful as Li; Mr. Fred Withers as Lung Hi is forcible; and Mr. Herbert Sydney as Chung Lu does well. Mr. Harold Garth is an effective Chang; Mr. Gerald Shirley is a fine sailor in the part of Lord Allendale; and Mr. Gerald Turner a capital Admiral Freebold. Mr. Ellis Carlyle as George Berresford and Mr. Fred Waring as Joshua Sampson do well. Miss Eva Reed as Becky Fibbins and Mr. Chas. Luke as Baa Lamb Gentle cause much laughter.

Palace Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Sharrocks.—Richard Braatz's Dogs show marvellous training; John Warren introduces his military mystery, "The Magic Carpet"; and Geo. A. Richmond and the Brooklyn Twins are smart paper manipulators. Agnes McKellar, an accomplished ballad vocalist; the Austral Trio, in a capital musical act; Viviana and company, in The Toy Shop; Percy Farrimond, with his well-sung songs; and Maud and Sydney Wood, smart duettists and dancers, are also in the bill. The Palace pictures complete.

OXFORD.—New Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is here with Brewster's Millions, and though this is the fourth visit of the play it is liberally patronised. Mr. Charles Esdale has his heart and soul in the piece as Monty Brewster, and achieves a distinguished success. He is ably supported by Mr. Gordon Ash as Charlie Harrison; Mr. Henry Hampson as Archie Golding; and Mr Aubrey Mather as Joseph McLeod. Mr. Robert Forsyth is good as Mr. Grant; Mr. A. Andrews does well as Colonel Drew; and Mr. A. P. Kaye is very droll as Rawles. Miss Pauline Strauss is a bright Mrs. Dan de Mille; Miss Frances Davie makes an effective Jamie Armstrong; Miss Dorothy Whitaker is natural as Barbara Drew; Miss May Selon makes the most of Trixie Clayton; and Miss Cicely Stuckey imbues Margaret Grey (Pegsy) with grace and charm. The scenery and effects are of great excellence, especially successful being the working of the Yacht scene.

East Oxford Theatre.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart; Acting-Manager, Mr. Julian Graham.—Napoleon the Great is being presented here by Mr. Herbert Vere's company. Mr. Vere portrays Napoleon with some success; Mr. Vivian Charles is well placed as Colonel Jules Mouron; Mr. Chas. H. Lincoln makes a forcible Colonel Lavarennes; and Mr. H. L. Staples is good as Monsieur Fouche. Mr. Edwin Frith gives a powerful rendering of Paul Lacrinska; and Mr. George Millard is a capable Pierrie Pomponnet. Miss Katie Norris is an effective Mlle. Leonie Marbœuf; Miss Maggie De Halle as Mons. Dumont and Miss Lily Mann as Lisette are both good. Miss Nancy Roberts is all that could be desired as Marcelli Choupin; and Miss Kate Walford is dignified as Marie Walewska.

PAISLEY.—Paisley Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—Mr. Fred Karno's company is presenting His Majesty's Guests, which is received with roars of laughter. Mr. George Hestor is chiefly responsible for the fun, his study of Sergeant Lightning bubbling over with merriment; Mr. E. O. Freshwater proves himself very capable, both as actor and vocalist, in the rôle of Lord Easem; Mr. Charles Usher is well placed as Mr. Miffin; a clever and versatile performance is given by Mr. C. Richardson as Bunkey; the Mr. Minks of Mr. C. J. Gordon is amusing; Mr. S. Bolton gives a capital portraiture of Fritz; and Mr. Harry Howe does excellent work as Selina. Miss Winnie Bradfield ably represents Lady Maud Eeasem; a pleasing portrayal of Dolly is given by Miss Edith Ager; Miss Annie Wright is well suited in the part of Miss Manley; Miss Eva Ross gives a smart impersonation of Miss Mackerel; and minor characters are capably undertaken by the Misses Maud and Ella Ross, Miss A. Young, Miss Jean Verner, Miss K. Vogel, and Miss F. Vernon.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack R. Bostock.—At the head of the bill here is Ethel Arden and George Abel's company, in the farcical sketch, Three of a Kind, which is responsible for a great amount of mirth; as trick cyclists the Daunton Shaw Troupe deserve much credit, their "show" being exceedingly entertaining; Gus Carrick is a comedian of novel methods, and scores in all that he does; Cissie Curlette, mimetic vocalist, is an artist of distinct merit; and other good turns are the Lyric Mummers (Frank and Lillian) in a vocal and comedy scena; W. B. Raby, comedian; Bert Welda and Dorothy Wynne, comedy juggling and dancing team; Charles Pastor, comedian; and the Hippodrome Bioscope.

PERTH.—Perth Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—Mr. Louis Calvert's production of Sunday had a good reception here on Monday. Miss Janet Lind, in the title-rôle, plays with simplicity and naturalness; Mr. Pennington Gush is a dignified Colonel Brinthorpe; Mr. Richard Trieve a pleasant Tom Oxley; and the four "boys" are capitally played by Mr. Richard F. Symons, Mr. Launcelot Lowther, Mr. James Hussey, and Mr. George Marriot, jun. Miss H. Graham Edwins is charming as Mrs. Naresby; and Miss Gladys Ford Howitt plays most appropriately as the Nun. On Friday evening, on the occasion of Miss Janet Lind's benefit, Dolly Reforming Herself was to be played.

PETERBOROUGH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. Darville Vernon.—Mr. Percy Williams' company opened a three nights' engagement here on Monday with The Fatal Wedding. Mr. Edward Lloyd capably sustains the part of Howard Wilson; Mr. Cyril Melton exhibits ability as Robert Curtis; Miss Ethel Kay as Mabel Wilson is highly emotional; Miss Leah Marlborough is effective as Cora; Miss Marie Wilson gives a pleasing performance as Jessie, the little mother; Mr. Harry M. Vernon as Toto and Mr. Watson Hume as Peter Schwartz keep the audience in a merry mood; Miss Blanche Huber as Bridget, the lady cook, is good; and Mr. Frank Ashley as O'Reilly and Mr. J. Newton as the Rev. Dr. Lanceford are all that can be desired.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—Mr. Selbit heads the bill this week, and presents in full light a delightful demonstration; Josie Mooney, comedienne and dancer, is well received; Vendome and Chase, in their humorous act, gain applause; Mark Hall is quaint; the Atans are clever gymnasts; Auto, musician, gives a good turn; and Walter Munroe, Irish comedian, is a great favourite. The Karnoscope completes.

PLYMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The Dollar Princess, as played by Mr. Geo. Edwardes' company, drew a bumper house on Monday. In the title-rôle Miss Norah Barry gives a delightful performance, her singing being of a high order whilst the passages at arms with Freddy Fairfax, a part excellently played by Mr. Alec Worcester, are responsible for roars of laughter; as Bulgar Mr. W. H. Rawlins' portly personality fits the part admirably, whilst the encores following his song nearly reached double figures; Mr. Leslie Holland is Condor, and fully justifies his hearty reception; Miss Madeleine Seymour as Olga is a distinct acquisition to the company, her singing deserving the highest commendation; Miss Peggie Primrose is winsome and attractive as Daisy. The piece is mounted and staged in the manner characteristic of the Edwardes' production.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Lockhart's Elephants pay a return visit, and the wonderful sagacity of the huge beasts, nurtured under the skilful training of Captain Taylor, earns hearty applause; Winfield Blake and Maud Amber are responsible for a first-rate vocal number, whilst their parodies of grand opera and melodrama were particularly amusing; Royburn and Dix provide an excellent comedy act, entitled Skits on the 'Phone; Les Xentrix (eight dainty maidens) provide a picturesque little turn, the singing and dancing in various costumes having a very pretty effect; Barnes and West furnish some first-rate American dancing; and Hardy Palm and Arthur Leslie, comedians, are strong contributors to the entertainment.

PONTEFRACT.—Alexandra Theatre.—Manager, Tom Diacoff.—Brinn and his assistant appear in a sensational act, entitled Pastimes on a Battleship; Kirk and Saraski give an aquatic display, with gorgeous tableaux; Judge's Cockatoos are the acme of bird training; Fyne and Hurley gain popularity in The Coster and the Dude; the Godfreys are very funny in their musical sketch, The Slavey and the Coon; the Maro Duo are smart on the triple bars; the Two Ludoes are clever equilibrists and tumblers; and Ethel May is a good comedienne and dancer; the Sisters Brooklyn, singers and dancers, deputise for the Ashley Team of roller skaters. The Alexscope is to the fore with animated pictures.

PONTYPRIDD.—Royal Clarence.—Sole Owners, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—Miss Mary O'Neil and Mr. Geo. Kirk's company are attracting crowded houses in From Shop Girl to Duchess. Miss O'Neil is exceedingly good as Sylvia, and receives an enthusiastic welcome; Mr. Hugh Carmichael is loudly applauded for his performance of Arnold Vivian.

PRESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, The Executors of the late Mr. W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—Mr. George Dance's principal company in Miss Hook of Holland is attracting record houses this week. Mr. Alfred Wellesley as Mr. Hook is as big a favourite as ever; Mr. Frank H. Crimp is again heard to advantage as the Bandmaster; Mr. Fred Lyne, as usual, brings down the house with his drolleries as Simon Slinks; Captain Adrian Paap finds an able exponent in Mr. Frederick Hobbs; Mr. Chas. Ross is a capable Schnapps; and Miss Hilda Gordon and Miss Lina Imperiali as Freda and Clara are successful. Miss Lilian Constance is a capital Gretchen; Miss Cora Engleton an admirable Old Market Woman; and Miss Maud Denny enacts the character of Mina with success. Miss Marie Studholme is an attractive Sally.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Clarkson.—A very capable company, under the direction of Mr. Vivian Edmunds, is this week presenting The Cotton Spinner, which is much appreciated.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—At the top of the bill here is Whit Cunliffe, who meets with a rattling reception; Mabel Thorne, comedienne, is also well received; the Eight Colonial Girls, in A Garden Party, contribute well-rendered numbers and execute some clever dances; Herma is an accomplished heavy weight-lifter; and one of the best numbers is the contribution of J. P. Ling, comedian and mimic. Chas. Baron's burlesque menagerie is an exceedingly novel turn; Burns and Bentley are an artistic dancing duo; Will Willis, comedian, contributes some good songs; and the Bioscope concludes.

RAMSGATE.—Royal Palace Theatre.—Sole Director, Mr. Charles Evans; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—There have been big audiences at the Palace this week to enjoy Poole's pleasing and popular pictures. The Myriorama never fails to attract at Ramsgate, as elsewhere. The pictorial portion is interspersed with some exceedingly clever variety turns, including Professor Beaumont's miniature circus, Miss Ethel Lorch, contralto; Nat Abait, the excellent guide; Fil Gerrard, facial artist; Elsie Verona, danseuse; Wun Hi Lung, clever Chinese illusionist; Frank Allen, humorous singer; the eccentric Selbys; and Trevor and Ware, comedy artists and dancers. The nightly competition among the audience has aroused a good deal of interest.

READING.—Royal County Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton.—Mr. Wentworth Croke is presenting the great Drury Lane drama The Prodigal Son here this week with new and elaborate scenic effects. Mr. Marcus D. Draper gives a powerful impersonation of Oscar Stephensson; Mr. Ernest Owttrim plays effectively as Magnus; Mr. Charles Sewell plays with dignity as the Governor of Iceland; Mr. Arthur E. Holland is excellent as the Factor; Miss Lily Crammonde gives a splendid study of the part of Helga Neilson; Miss Sura Dudley plays the dual rôles of Thora and Elin with great artistic skill; Miss Una Gilbert as the Governor's wife; Miss Maud Locker as Margaret Neilson, Mr. William Curzon as the Sheriff, Mr. Harold Clemson as Dr. Olsen, Mr. Wilfred Jessop as Neils Finsen all sustain their parts well; and the other characters are all in good hands.

The Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco; Stage-Manager, Mr. A. Burridge.—The Tschin-Maa Troupe of Chinese magicians, conjurers, acrobats, and dancers provide a most novel and entertaining turn; the troupe consists of eight performers, and includes four tiny-footed Chinese ladies. A series of most amazing and clever feats are performed, which are received with enthusiastic applause. Dorothy Sephton is an accomplished comedienne and vocalist; Stalman and Russell present a most amusing comedy episode, Borrowed Plumes; the Sisters Geretti perform some daring feats on the double trapeze; Henriquette Maude, the little New Zealand travelling girl, who is working her way round the world alone, gives an interesting description of her travels, illustrated by a series of views of the places visited, and also presents her dramatic scena "Lasca"; Harry Zetter, the "loose man in tights," gives a good turn; Rob Gilmore, comedian, is well received; and Ernest C. Gettins' company gives a capital operatic sketch, The Daughter of the Regiment. In this sketch Mr. T. H. Wood appears as Sergeant Surplice and Mlle. Adele Prescott as Marie. One of "Foolshead's" amusing adventures is depicted on the Bioscope, and the Opening of Parliament Procession is also shown.

REDDITCH.—Public Hall.—Messrs. Vale and Edwards are on a return visit with their vaudeville company, and the entertainment is well attended. Erle and Godfrey are a smart couple, and Lawrence Harry is also a favourite. The pictures are very good.

SALFORD.—Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company played to a good house on Monday The Lancashire Lad. Mr. Harry T. Wood successfully sustained the title-rôle; Miss Madge Douglas was a dainty heroine as Jessie Wincote; the villainous Lorna Wincote was forcibly portrayed by Miss Muriel Inglis; Mr. Ernest Vaughan did well as Max Carlton; Mr. Wilton Reed submitted a good study as Jem Wincote. Much fun was evolved by Mr. Bob Anderson (John Willie), Mr. G. Stuart (Tum o' th' Swilltub), Miss Lilian Rignold (Jane Alice), and Mr. J. W. Gadsby (Professor Napoleon Boulanger). Miss G. Henderson (Kitty De Vere) and Miss Molly Shine (Trixie) sang and danced well.

Regent Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. R. H. Lee.—Some smart illusions are presented by the Egyptian wonder-worker Rameses; A. U. Mackinnon's Scottish Meisters Comedy Quartette in their vocal extravaganza Ancestral Spirits command much applause; Talberto and Douglas do some very comical work; acceptable turns are given by Annie Martin, vocal comedienne; Minnie Wheaton, comedienne and dancer; Starr and Leslie, in their clever act; Revill Hall, humorist and mimic; Queenie May, vocalist; and Ted Gill, tenor vocalist.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Boyle.—Mr. William Holland's pantomime Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp furnishes an excellent entertainment, full of mirth and catchy songs. The burden of the fun is well sustained by Mr. Robb Wilton as Widow Twankey and Mr. Bob Selvidge as Abanazar, who with Mr. Kennedy Allen as Wishee Washee and the Three Comedy Chanters (as the Emperor and Police) keep the audience in roars. Miss Helen Charles is an ideal dashing Aladdin, and does some excellent child mimicry; Miss Poppie Holland is a charming Princess; Peko is ably presented by Miss Frances Haskoll; Miss Beatrice Vere (Yum-Yum), Miss Bertha Clifton (Li-lo), Miss Queenie Tilbury (Electrica) also do well. Some speciality dances are performed by the Four Fedoras, and the choruses are well under the baton of Mr. Caffyn Baxter. The scenery is very pretty.

SCARBOROUGH.—The Aquarium.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—Miss Marie Jones tops the bill here with a quick-change comedy playlet, Wanted, the Co-respondent, in which she proves very successful; Lauri Bros. are smart acrobats; and Alice Winsome is a pleasing comedienne. The vocal contributions of Edmund Kershaw are received with much applause; as vocalists and dancers the Soho Trio prove very entertaining; J. J. Mannie is well received as a coon delineator and dancer; and Sam Bignell is popular.

The New Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock.—The Love of the Princess, the attraction here, is being excellently played by Mr. C. Watson Mill's company, with Miss Dorothy Haigh as Princess Idalia, Mr. Frank Harvey Prince Conrad, Mr. John Burton King of Illarnia, Miss Maud Steeple Lady Irene, Miss Josephine Lee Constantia, Mr. Richard Vane Count Nicholas Danilo, Mr. Becket Bould Lieut. Orlans, Mr. John Worth Lieut. Zaroff, Mr. Francis Serle Prince Regent, and Mr. Edgar Morgan Duke Boris.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—New Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—Dick Whittington, presented by Mr. William Pardoe's company, commenced a week's run here on Monday. Miss Lottie Holland, a talented vocalist, wins hearty approval for her impersonation of Dick; as Alice Miss Nellie Rose is charming; Miss Rosie Volbecque is a captivating Lord Dedbroke, and Miss Elsie Kedward an attractive Princess. Miss Cissy Loveday, the Fairy, is a pleasing vocalist; Mr. George Hyam as Idle Jack heads the band of comedians; as Jim Mr. Alf Grady is mirth-provoking; Alderman Fitzwarren is played with originality by Mr. Tom Hulme; Miss Daisy Volbecque supplies a quaint sketch of Sarah Cook; Pauletti submits a smart acrobatic cycle act; the Edengale Trio of dancers win approval; and the Sisters Volbecque earn praise in their comedy duet.

SHEERNESS.—Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Adam Seebold; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ted Williams.—Mrs. Frank Bateman's company opened here on Monday with The Way Women Love. Mrs. Bateman gave an artistic impersonation of Verene Alabra; as Captain Howard Tremaine Mr. Fred Goddard was forcible; Miss Camille Treherne invested the part of Violet with sympathy; Leslie Lamond and Dick Palmer were well played by Mr. Harry Aynsleigh and Mr. Percy Shaw; Mr. Herbert Barr did well as José Alaros; and Mr. George Herbert and Mr. Harry Lyons showed ability. Miss Carrie Jones (Granny), Miss Nellie Fern (Lottie Gray), and Miss Sadie Underhill (Frank Tremaine) were satisfactory.

SHEFFIELD.—Lyceum Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Florodora is being performed to good houses by Mr. Charles Constant's excellent company. Miss Fanny Holmshaw makes a smart and vivacious Lady Holyrood; Miss Daisy Lake's Dolores, vocally and histrionically, is a pleasing impersonation; and Miss Josephine Ellis is a delightful Angela. Mr. Eric Deane acts and sings with vigour as the dashing Captain Donegal; Mr. Arthur Lenville's Anthony Tweedlepunch is a laughter-provoking bit of acting; and Mr. J. Parker as Leandro and Mr. Edward Chester as Cyrus Gilfain are good. There is an adequate chorus, and the scenery and dresses are artistic.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Henfrey Aldred.—The very successful annual Jack and Jill finishes its Sheffield run this week.

Alexandra Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—The Bad Girl of the Family was played for the first time in Sheffield on Monday by Mr. Fred Melville's company. The drama, elaborately mounted and replete with thrilling episodes and humorous incidents, was received with loud applause by an enthusiastic audience. In the title-rôle Miss Violet Crossley acted with grace and intelligence, and other principal parts were in the hands of Miss Margaret Tueskie, Miss Dolly St. Clair, Mr. W. H. Hargreaves, Mr. Geo. H. Montford, Mr. Fred Freeman, Mr. T. May, Mr. C. Eustace, Mr. Luke Forster, and Mr. George Belmore.

Empire Palace.—The Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The star here is Miss Victoria Monks, who on Monday did four songs and was recalled again and again; Miss Amelie d'Enclos a handsome Parisian with a phenomenal vocal organ, was well received; Mr. Harry Bedford was cordially welcomed; Mr. Harry Leybourne's amusing mimicry was thoroughly enjoyed; and other first-rate performers were the Van Damme Trio, comic acrobats; Mr. Carl Howard, conjuror, &c.; the great Lukushima family, marvellous Japanese tumblers and Risley artists; Ross and Lewis, variety entertainers; the Will o' the Wisps, musical comedy artists; and the Dolly's Deception sketch company. Gadabout's Mishap, acted by members of the Paris Gymnase company, was the feature of the animated picture series.

Hippodrome.—The Barrasford Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Poole.—Little Tich has been a big favourite in Sheffield for over twenty years, and his visits here always mean big business. He had a grand reception on Monday, and again kept the house in roars. Other clever performers engaged are the smart Derrington family, in their daring act; Mooney and Holbein, two welcome favourites; Miss Madge Temple, a pleasing artist; Miss Anna Heath, a clever entertainer; Leigh Leicester, in an original act; Mr. Willie Gardner; and Mr. Austin Rudd, the well-known vocal comedian, in new songs. The Bioscope, with artistic new films, concludes.

Central Hall.—Lessees, the Jasper Redfern Co., Ltd.—There is an excellent array of talent this week, and a fine selection of dramatic, spectacular, comic, and fantastic pictures.

SHREWSBURY.—Theatre Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee and Director, Mr. W. Yates Gregory; General-Manager, Mr. Thos. Baugh.—Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's artistic company was here on the first three nights of the week with Miss Hook of Holland. Mr. Chas. Sims as Mr. Hook was exceedingly droll; Mr. Robert Selby as Captain Adrian Paap played the military part in a praiseworthy fashion; Mr. Frank G. Dunn as Bandmaster Van Vuyt merits high encomiums; Mr. Charles Berkeley, with a fine voice, acted in a conscientious manner the part of Ludwig Schnapps; Mr. F. Bartlett made a capital Old Policeman; and Mr. Richard Rose a creditable Hans Maas. Mr. Geo. Roberts made the best use of his opportunities as Van Eck, and Mr. Edward Kipling looked a picturesque loafer as Simon Slinks, a part which he played in a most satisfactory manner. As Mina, the energetic maid to the Hooks, Miss Madge White, a chic and talented actress, worked hard and successfully; Miss Nan Stuart as Sally was attractive and accomplished; and Miss Mabel Selby made a pleasing Gretchen. Miss Hilda Beverley's company in A Destroyer of Men came here on Thursday.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Southend Hippodrome, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis de Burgh.—This week the programme contains the names of the Whitworth Trio, comedy and trick cyclists; Rolando Martin, comedian; Barnes and Ascott, dancers; Muriel Harding, Anglo-French comedienne; Ten Loonies, the mad musicians; Clifton and Gibson, comedians; and the Abdulla Arabs, tumblers and pyramid-builders.

Empire Theatre.—Proprietors, Southend Theatre Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Adam Seebold.—Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart's company, in Sherlock Holmes, is attracting good audiences this week.

SOUTHPORT.—Opera House and Winter Gardens.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Percy Hutchison; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Clarkson.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's principal company is presenting an admirable all-round interpretation of the popular musical comedy The Earl and the Girl. The rôle of Jim Cheese was depicted by Mr. Bert Beswick with irresistible humour; Miss Lily Gullick makes a charming Elphin Haye; Mr. Herbert St. John lends capable assistance as the lover Dick Wargrave; the Hon. Crewe Boodle has a distinctly successful representative in Mr. Arthur Hyde; Mr. Sam Lysons is a commendable Downham, Miss Ada Waugh a piquant Liza Shoddam, and Mr. J. M. East a good Bunker Bliss.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John Coulson.—Mr. Charles Elderton presents Aladdin in lavish style to good houses. Miss Maudie Vincent portrays Aladdin in a bright and vivacious manner; and the Princess Badroulbadour is charmingly depicted by Miss May Gibson. They both have good voices, and their songs and duets are well applauded. Good comedy is displayed by Mr. Harry Harrop as Abanazar and Mr. Will Beanland as Widow Twankey. Many specialities are introduced, including Claremont and Victor, clever hand balancers; Li-Chang-Hi, who contributes good conjuring; Stean and Mellin, comedy and dancing act; the Mimosa troupe of juveniles; Morrisey, marvellous balancer and musician; Sisters Terry, duettists; Lottie Stone Quartette of dancers; and the Cameron Quartette of male voice singers, who have an excellent reception. The ballet is well arranged, the chorus good, supplemented by an augmented orchestra under the able direction of Mr. A. Pearson.

Empire Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.—The chief item is Adam Tomlinson, who, being local, is immensely popular here; Wood, Wells, and Wilkins are

FILM GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

To Legalise Sunday Opening.
THE action of the London County Council in compelling cinematograph theatres to close on Sundays is said to have spread dismay amongst the rank and file of the employees, who realise that as many of the smaller theatres depend upon their Sunday takings for a profit, most of them will in consequence be compelled to close altogether, thereby throwing hundreds out of employment. Therefore a trade union of cinematograph and skating rink employees is being formed, whose objects are: (1) To legalise Sunday opening, after church hours, of cinematograph and skating rinks; (2) to secure a six days' working week for all employees; (3) to obtain trade union wages and conditions of labour. A large percentage of the proprietors of cinematograph theatres are said to have expressed themselves in sympathy with the aims and objects of the union, and a vigorous campaign during the County Council election is being inaugurated.

Buried Alive.
THIS is the title of a very good Selig film. Two old prospectors, John Hanford and Jim Rowe, do their best to accumulate a fortune. Rowe's son Simon is very much in love with Lucy, daughter of Hanford, but she is, as yet, undecided as to the status of her feelings towards her ardent lover. The old partners strike a rich claim, but living in the vicinity are two men of dissolute habits, who believe in the axiom that "the end justifies the means." By name Pete Horner and Jake Rooney, they hear of this "strike," and immediately proceed to scheme whereby they may secure some right or title to it. Horner makes violent love to Lucy, thinking that thereby he may locate just where the claim lies, and she almost reciprocates his pretended affection. Horner and Rooney follow the two miners. On their way they meet a Chinaman "washing gold." Desiring possession of that gold a fight ensues in which the Chinaman is bested. Thinking him "hors de combat" for good and all, the two men proceed farther until they reach the mine. Seeing the entrance thereto, they set dynamite and fuse in hopes of entombing the men within. This done, they turn to leave, and find that the "Chinee" has followed them. Another struggle ensues, in which the Celestial is thrown over a cliff, and the two men proceed to their cabin in hopes that Hanford and Rowe will die within the confines of their own claim. The next day Pete, in order to allay suspicion, goes to the cabin of the two miners. There he meets Lucy, and while endeavouring to assure her of his love for her, is confronted by the Chinaman with axe in hand. It is then that Lucy learns of the treachery and deceit of her pretended lover, and while the Chinaman holds Pete at his mercy, Lucy speeds her way for the rescue of her father. She explains her predicament to the campers near by. At once they go to the mine, and after much labour succeed in rescuing the miners. During the attempted robbery of this claim a Deputy United States Marshal has been searching for Horner and Rooney on other charges. He comes upon the scene and Horner and Rooney are both made prisoners, the Chinaman is given an interest in the mine, and Lucy gives hand and heart to Simon.

Bedford Firm's Claim.
MESSRS. BLAKE BROTHERS, of Bedford, claim that they were the first in the provinces to exhibit pictures of the opening of Parliament by his Majesty the King. The historical function took place at two o'clock on Monday afternoon, and by 7.30 the same evening the pictures recording it were being shown to an enthusiastic audience at the Picturedrome, Bedford.

Effect of Sunday Closing.
THAT large section of the London public which has shown its appreciation of the opening on Sunday of the various "Picture Palaces" where cinematograph exhibitions are given were disagreeably surprised last Sunday to find them closed. These Sunday exhibitions have not prejudicially affected the Sunday League concert attendances, and in such weather as prevailed last Sunday the closing of the "Picture Palaces" has certainly had the reverse of a prejudicial effect on the attendances at other palaces which need not be more particularly specified.

"Take a Broad View."
THE Birmingham Daily Mail, commenting on Sunday cinematograph shows, says that the "Bull-street" parade in Birmingham has often been the subject of comment by ministers of religion. Despite all that has been done to lure thoughtless young persons into the sphere of wholesome influences the evil remains practically as pronounced as ever. The animated "picture show" has great possibilities from an educational point of view, and social and religious workers might do worse than consider the attractiveness of such exhibitions in the light of religious effort. Sunday lectures have had unquestionably a refining and ennobling influence. The old narrow type of Sabbatarianism is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, and it is in the best interests of society that a broad view should be taken on such matters.

Savoy Aviation Banquet.
ONE of the most important social engagements for this month is a conversazione and ball, to be held at the Savoy Hotel on Thursday, Feb. 24, which has been arranged by the Motor Union to celebrate the establishment of an aviation section and the incorporation of the Aeroplane Club. The reception committee includes the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, the Earl and Countess of Kinnoull, the Earl and Countess of Lonsdale, the Earl and Countess of Mayo, Captain the Hon. and Mrs. Robert Lygon, the Hon. and Mrs. Alistair Hay, C. H. Dodd, Esq., Captain W. G. Windham, and Mr. D. Lewis Poole. A conversazione will follow the reception at 8.30 p.m., and lectures, illustrated by cinematograph pictures, and exact models of the most successful types of flying machines will be in the hands of demonstrators, who will explain their construction.

"Pinched."
THE Morning Post agony column is always good reading, and the following spasm culled from its columns is sufficiently romantic to reprint: "PICCADILLY.—Cinematograph Pictures. Will clean-shaven gentleman, with tall hat, who visited pictures on Thursday, 17th, about six o'clock, sat in back row, who unfortunately got pinched, communicate with lady sitting next to him through the front page Morning Post?"

Death of George Black.
WE greatly regret to announce that Mr. George Black, proprietor of Black's life-motion pictures, died at four o'clock last Saturday afternoon. He underwent an operation on Wednesday most successfully, but on Friday he commenced to sink fast. He had been ill about four weeks from kidney and heart troubles. Mr. Black was for some twenty years connected with the old Theatre Royal, Birmingham, and was for some years at th Comedy Theatre, Manchester.

Later he bought a gigantic waxwork exhibition and toured most of the towns and cities of the United Kingdom. He was at the time of his death sole proprietor of Black's Picture Palace, Gateshead; sole proprietor of Palace Theatre, West Hartlepool; sole proprietor of Boro' Theatre, North Shields; lessee of Tivoli Palace, High Shields; lessee of Black's Picture Hall, Sunderland; and lessee of Black's Picture Hall, West Hartlepool.

The Royal Procession.
THREE hours after the Royal procession had arrived at the House of Lords the entire pageant —with very clear pictures of the King and Queen —was reproduced on the London Hippodrome screen. In the evening they were everywhere.

Living Pictures at the Mansion House.
AN innovation in Mansion House entertainments is to be made by the Lord Mayor, who has arranged for a cinematograph representation of the Passion Play, as enacted at Ober-Ammergau, to be given in the Egyptian Hall during Holy week.

Fifty Deaths in Theatre Fire.
DURING a cinematograph exhibition at the municipal theatre of Truxillo, Peru, a film caught fire. The outbreak spread rapidly. In the frenzied attempts of the audience to escape, fifty persons were killed, including several well-known residents. The theatre was destroyed.

Closed by the Police.
MR. CHARLES PALMER, the manager of the picture show at the Royal Victoria Rooms, Bridlington, had to close on Saturday last owing to a notice he received from the police under the new Cinematograph Act. The Corporation, however, have accepted a tender for a fireproof room, and Mr. Palmer assured a crowded house on Saturday that he hoped to open again in a fortnight's time with an even better show than had ever been given here.

More Electric Theatres.
"ELECTRIC THEATRES," which have become important features of the entertainment side of London, have already invaded the provinces, but another company has been formed for the purpose of establishing theatres in Manchester, Derby, South Shields, Leicester, and Hereford.

United Electric Theatres.
SUBSCRIPTION lists closed yesterday in respect of an issue by the United Electric Theatres, Ltd., of 106,000 shares of 10s. each at par. The company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, erecting, and equipping electric or cinematograph theatres. Careful inquiries have been made, and after considering over 100 properties which have been offered, a selection has been made of nine, which were the most suitable for the purposes required, and which were procurable at moderate prices or rentals. The properties selected are in the following towns and places: South Shields, Keighley, Manchester, Derby, Leicester, Dudley, Hereford, Hackney (London), and Mile End (London). The theatre in South Shields is in course of erection, and it is hoped will be completed within a few weeks. The building at Keighley can be opened as soon as some minor alterations are completed. The theatre at Hereford requires only slight alterations, and can be opened almost immediately. Plans of the Derby theatre have been passed by the local authority, and it is intended to commence building forthwith. An agreement has been entered into with Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope Syndicate, Ltd., who supply the cinematograph entertainments at a large number of variety theatres, for supply of pictures and management of the entertainments.

The New Premier Theatres.
THE directors of the Premier Electric Theatres, Ltd., have recently signed building contracts for new picture-theatres to be erected at Ilford and Earlsfield. The buildings have been designed by the well-known firm of theatrical architects, Messrs. Emden, Egan, and Co., and will be substantial fireproof brick structures, handsomely decorated and furnished, with a seating capacity in each case for over 1,000 persons. This company's new theatre at Harringay is rapidly approaching completion, and will be ready for opening at Easter. Theatres are also to be erected at Leytonstone, Woolwich, Bristol, East Ham, and Chelsea. Full houses are the order of the day at the company's Harlesden theatre. Business has been so encouraging recently that the directors have already instructed their architects to prepare plans for a new balcony in order to provide increased accommodation. It will be interesting to learn that this company (a sister company to the well-known Premier Rinks, Ltd.) will also open a new theatre at Boston, in Lincolnshire, on Easter Monday.

To carry on the business of proprietors and managers of electric or cinematograph theatres, &c., to acquire properties in South Shields, Keighley, Manchester, Derby, Leicester, Dudley, Hereford, and Hackney and Mile End, London, and to adopt three agreements—two with International Electric Theatres, Ltd., and one with Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope Syndicate, Ltd.

New East End Theatre.
A NEW electric theatre is to be erected in a prominent position in Mile End-road. This latest of London's cosy little theatres will be equipped with every modern device as approved by the London County Council, and will accommodate 675 people.

Kensington and Knightsbridge Electric.
THE directors announce that the renewal and reserve fund account now stands at £85,464, being an increase of £7,267 over the amount of the account at the end of the previous year. After providing for the amount placed to renewal and reserve fund account and paying dividends on the 6 per cent. first preference shares to June 30, 1909, on the 5 per cent. second preference shares to Sept. 30, 1909, and an interim dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on the ordinary shares for the first half of the year the balance standing to the credit of the net revenue account for the year 1909 is £8,081. Of this sum £1,500 has been appropriated to the payment of the first preference dividend to the end of the year, and £625 has to be set aside to meet the portion of the dividend on the second preference shares accrued to the same date. It is proposed to pay out of the balance of £5,956 a further dividend on the ordinary shares at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, for the past half-year, making 8 per cent. for the year. This will leave a balance of £1,756 to be carried forward.

Kensington P.T. Open on Sunday.
THE Kensington Picture Theatre in future will be open on Sundays, and the entire proceeds will be given to the London Hospital.

Pictures Popular in Birmingham.
CINEMATOGRAPH halls are springing up all over Birmingham. The Theatre de Luxe (at the Masonic Hall) is the latest, and here excellent pictures are being shown. The Theatre Royal picture matinées are being well patronised, and there is much speculation as to what will happen when the Cinematograph Theatre and Winter Gardens is erected next door to the Royal. The old property on the site has been razed to the ground, and the erection of the building will be proceeded with without delay.

Brinkburn Picture Palace Opened.
THE Brinkburn Picture Theatre was opened yesterday (Friday) in Newcastle-on-Tyne. It has a circle with a seating capacity of 400, and the pit or area accommodates another 600. Tip-up chairs are fitted throughout.

Cardiff—Stoll's Panopticon.
A REMARKABLE dramatic picture has been the chief attraction at Stoll's Panopticon this week, entitled The Grandsire, a thrilling story of the sea by Jean Richepin. A humorous character who has become famous under the name of Foolshead, make a welcome appearance in a laughable sketch entitled Foolshead Goes to a Ball. Other comedy creations include A Suspicious Ma-in-Law, Country Servants, and Max Linder's latest mirth-provoker, entitled A Romantic Young Lady. The entertainers in the programme are Mr. R. T. Chinn, a clever performer on the concertina and the purveyor of peculiar patter; Mr. James Hope, the baritone of excellent quality, in new songs to illustrations; Mr. Fred Dyer, a delightful singer of ballads old and new.

Smart Work at Tunbridge Wells.
SMART work was shown at the Tunbridge Wells Electric Theatre on Monday by producing on the Bioscope the film of the Royal opening of Parliament on the same day as the occurrence.

ALDERSHOT.—WIDE WORLD PICTURES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Golder and B. Sloman.—The management is up to date in having a good local picture as the tit-bit this week, the principal film showing last Sunday's Church Parade, with the soldiers coming from church. The full programme of pictures includes Australian Roughriders, The Slavery of Children, A Roman Drama, The Fisherman's Sweetheart, The Bargee's Daughter, Wanted —a Maid! Mishap of a Baby's Perambulator, A Mother's Fault, Lost in the Snow, Driven from Home, Pick of the Russian Cavalry, and The Mysterious Thief.

ALEXANDRA PICTURE PALACE.—Proprietors, Carpenter's Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. H. Crocker.—A splendid programme is presented here, on Tuesday and following nights the film showing the procession of the King on his way to open Parliament being added, proving that the management here intend being quite up to date. The Naval Pageant, showing the recent manœuvres on land and sea at Spithead, is another marvellous reproduction. Miss Sibyl Lonsdale's descriptive songs are a feature of the performance, "The Boys of the Old Brigade," in which she includes a veteran dressed as a Chelsea pensioner, being a great hit. There are several other bioscope pictures besides those already mentioned, including The Poacher's Revenge, Little Violinist, The Angel's Thread, Nerveless Man, &c.

ARBROATH.—PICTURE HALL.—Lessee, Mr. G. S. Melvin; Manager, Mr. Val Dee.—Business is going strong here, and some very fine pictures were shown on Monday evening. Hunting the Panther, Sherlock Holmes, and The Little Shepherd of Gambling Run are good. The picture that recalled a visit to the Oxford Music Hall, London, some time ago was Little Tich, thrown on the screen in several of his most popular characters. Many who have not seen him in life enjoyed his inimitable and original ways immensely. The Redskin's Justice, Lost in the Alps, and The Renunciation were all received with great enthusiasm. One or two variety turns made up an excellent programme.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THE NEW PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. A. Sims.—The Pavilion pictures for the current week are The Rocky Road, a drama of a domestic character, the details of which are painful and the end pathetic; How I Won the V.C., a story told by a veteran of the army, and we see how he achieved the honour in picture; The Two Artists, a very distressing and touching story; and The Gorges of Aude, a film of scenic description which will repay the visitor for the time spent, if he had no other inducement. The two interlude performers are Harry Kimberley, singing comedian, and Spry and Bentley in a one-act comedy-drama, The Terror of Turney's Rents. Mr. Alan Wright, the lecturer-vocalist, also contributes a song, "Queen of the Earth."

THE PICTUREDROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Brothers; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Leckie.—The week's pictures are full of interest for the spectator. The dramatic love story Adrienne Bertraux is historic, an exciting episode of the First Empire, and the interest is well sustained. The Tempting Necklace shows how a man, under strong temptation to fall into crime, is saved from dishonour by his child. The humorous films are The Late Guest, a funny situation provocative of hearty merriment; Mr. Foolshead, the eccentric, seen in his latest amusing adventure; and A Good Winning, a side-splitting effusion. Herring Fishing at Boulogne is good as a descriptive picture; while The Beggar Man's Gratitude is both pleasing and pathetic. Lee Hurst, the ventriloquist, with his doll, gives a smart show, and Frank Wilter, actor-vocalist, sings descriptive songs.

ODDFELLOWS' HALL.—Lessees, the Ashton Entertainments Syndicate; Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Marks.—The Marriage of Trionville is a very fine picture of a love romance; The Gamekeeper's Daughter shows the cruel manner in which a poor girl is deceived; His Reformation is a really fine example of the amendment of a wrongdoer; Burglary by Airship is novel, of course, but hardly possible; Jones Buys a Birdcage is one of the funny group; and The Day After is a perfect scream of laughter. The variety turns are the Maynards, lady and gentleman, who appear with great success in The Lady and the Page, a drawing-room act, in which vocalism, patter, tragi-comedy, and legerdemain are prominent features, and Mr. Fred Buckley, a good singing comedian.

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—The programme here is heartily enjoyed by large audiences. A Lesson in Charity, The Orphan, The Twin Brothers, and The Sculptor's Statue are picture-dramas full of human interest and pathos. Amongst others may be mentioned The Senorita, In the Window Recess, Young Redskins, Potts Backs a Winner, The Butcher's Bill, and Terror and Terrier. Variety turns are provided by Miss Connie Ruble, vocalist, and Mr. Albert Harrison, comedian.

PICTURE PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. Matt Raymond; Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward King.—Crowded houses twice nightly here testify to the popularity of the programmes provided by the management. One of the latest picture series is a highly sensational and fascinating one, Mad Woman of the Castle; Conscience is a touching story; and others which are well received are Choosing a Ma-in-Law, Escaping the Snapshotters, Family at the Photographers, and Servants and Masters. Mr. Ernest Dalmaine, vocalist, is making a successful appearance, and the selections by the Scarlet Band still continue a popular feature.

BARRY DOCK.—VINT'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee, Mr. Leon Vint; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—An excellent series of pictures was presented here on the opening of Mr. Vint's new venture. Heading the bill are Hicks' Clerks, clever comedians, vocalists, and dancers; their specialities are well received. Capital amusement is provided by Bert Allden, a comedian of no mean ability. Some splendid films are shown of an attractive and pleasing kind. The popular ones were The Fatal Wedding and Across the Divide.

ROMILLY HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Sid Bacon.—A fine programme is presented here this week, of which Geo. Grossmith and Edmund Payne in scenes from Our Miss Gibbs, is top of the bill. Many other films of a varied and amusing type are also shown. A special film is billed for to-night, viz., The Driscoll and "Seaman" Hayes fight, which should prove a great attraction.

BELFAST.—NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Under the direction of the popular manager, some capital films have been exhibited here, including Judgment, Smuggler's Daughter, Nick Carter, &c. The variety element is sustained by Meade and Wall, capital comedians, and Happy Atwood, with some humorous parodies and patter.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Under the direction of Mr. Hugh Beckett, a fine programme has been submitted here, including The Little Detective (an amusing and exciting picture), Ruined by His Son, Benedict Arnold, &c. Mr. Chas. Cardle, gipsy vocalist, appears at each performance, and gains a gratifying reception for his latest successes, "Iona" and "My Cairo Queen."

BIRMINGHAM.—KING'S HALL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—Pictures of exceptional interest are included in this week's programme, one of which is a pathetic subject, entitled The Open Gate. The film A Corsican's Revenge is a popular tabloid drama, and here is endless variety in humorous pictures. Blythe and Wild, duettists, and Miss Lila Vesta, contribute acceptable vaudeville turns.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. B. Kennedy and J. P. Moore.—Another delightful programme of animated pictures is heartily appreciated by crowded audiences. The management spare no expense in the endeavour to secure the best dramatic and comedy subjects, and patrons are always ensured a first-class entertainment. Clever vaudeville turns give variety to the programme.

BRIGHTON.—COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford; Manager, Mr. F. J. Thompson.—Some very fine animated pictures are exhibited here this week. The State Opening of Parliament is a very fine film; From Cabin Boy to King conveys a pathetic drama; Bear Hunting in the Arctic Regions is highly interesting; 'Tis now the Witching Time of Night is powerfully dramatic; and The Northern Lights Express is full of fun. Mr. Osland Denner contributes baritone songs in good style.

DARWEN.—ALBERT HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Holden.—Among a good set of films are Nursing a Viper, Hero's Reward, Mr. Gadabout's Xmas, and The Floods in Paris. Wallace Witney, juvenile comedian; Miss Beattie Foster, comedienne; and George Lightbown, tenor vocalist, are all well received.

DEWSBURY.—INDUSTRIAL HALL.—The Devil Woman is an inteneely sensational dramatic picture depicting love and folly; The Kind-hearted Employer is another very popular dramatic film; Benedict Arnold is a fine historical picture; a thrilling dramatic picture is the one entitled From Kidnapper to Rescuer; Coco Gets Married and The Indiarubber Man are extremely funny comics; and A Visit to the Antwerp Zoological Gardens is another splendid film.

DUNDEE.—PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—The programmes presented by the manager, Mr. Lunn, constitute quite a feature of the entertainment world in Dundee. There is a host of instructive and interesting pictures shown this week. A beautifully-coloured view entitled The Indian depicts in realistic manner the trials of the settlers in the Far West. The wonderful evolutions and displays of the U.S.A. trick cavalry squad at Fort Meyer are followed with intense interest. Who's Got My Hat? proves a rib-tickler; the antics of a man whose hat, with some banknotes inside, is handed by a maid to a medico in mistake, keeping the audience rocking with laughter. The Hair Restorer also keeps our risible faculties in good working order. To-morrow evening (Sunday) Pathé's series of coloured animated photographs of The Passion Play will be presented.

EDINBURGH.—PRINGLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Edmunds.—Drama is the strong point in the programme here this week, and is well represented in The Cabin-Boy and the Engineer's Daughter; The Test is an extremely humorous subject; and variety is well supplied by several talented artists.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. J. H. Sanders.—A capital programme is submitted here this week, the films being varied and excellent. The Mountaineer's Honour tells how a false lover paid dearly for his deceit. The Stolen Favourite is a thrilling tale of the turf, while Poultry-Breeding is both interesting and instructive. Humour, however, is not forgotten, as such subjects as Foolshead's Intrigue show. The Acmes are very smart comedy duo and instrumentalists, and are heartily applauded for their clever selections.

GATESHEAD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Acting-Manager, Mr. Steve Smith.—This, the pioneer picture hall of the town, continues to enjoy much success. The bill this week comprises: A Corner in Wheat, An Affair of the Heart, Almost! The Diver's Remorse, The Persistent Lover, A Midnight Adventure, Red Wing's Gratitude, and a series of comic and tragic pictures. In addition to the pictures, the Ashtons, pleasing vocalists, are appearing.

RAVENSWORTH PICTURE HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. R. Allan and T. F. McDonald; Manager, Mr. R. Allan; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. T. Newton.—This most comfortable and well-managed hall continues to enjoy good patronage. The list submitted this week includes: Cab Runner, The Mexican's Revenge, Yokohama Jubilee, Papa, Mama, and the Baby, His Reformation, Mr. Sadman's Cure, A Cowboy's Romance, Foolshead, Hero. Fred Lindsay, comedian, adds to the entertainment.

BLACK'S PICTURE PALACE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Victor Carter.—The excellent programmes submitted here week after week have made this hall a most popular rendezvous for all classes of the public. The bill this week includes: The Dancing Girl of Butte and The Fireman's Wedding. The variety turns are above the average, the Howards, second-sight entertainers, and Geo. Batter, character vocalist, submitting most enjoyable turns.

GRIMSBY.—PICTUREDROME.—Lessee, Mr. Matt Raymond; Resident-Manager, Mr. Adolph Rowella.—Mr. Raymond has been established at this house (formerly the Hippodrome) for three years. A speciality of the performances is the Scarlet Band, which plays incidental music appropriate to each picture. This week the principal picture is The Condemned Man's Mother, a dramatic illustration of an Anarchist plot and its outcome. The Poacher's Revenge is another excellent picture story; The Flower Seller depicts an incident of Parisian life; and among capital humorous subjects are The Soldier and the Servant, Foolshead, The Timid One, Mr. Poorluck's Marriage, &c.

HANLEY.—KING'S.—Lessee, Mr. J. P. Moore; Manager, Captain F. Shaw; Acting-Manager, Mr. Colin Harlewood.—This week again a magnificent series of films are thrown on the screen. The greatest favourite is The Pet of the Ranch, a very powerful story. A Drama of the Sea is another stirring story. The Paris Floods are clearly shown. The humorous films are Out With It, Gibson Goddess, Out of Sight, and Foolshead Pays a Visit. Phil Terriss, an eccentric patter comedian, makes a great hit.

KIRKCALDY.—CORN EXCHANGE PAVILION.—Licensee, Dr. Walford Bodie; Manager, Mr. G. Lee.—Magnificent pictures are on show here this week, of which The Horror of a Strike must rank as first place. This picture very impressively exhibits how "arbitration rather than force" overcomes trade disputes, to the mutual satisfaction of master and man. Other pictures are: The Princess and the Slave, The Man with the Dolls, Left, Right, Date Industry, The Tramp's Awakening, and Earthly Paradise. Dave Melvin, Scotch comedian and dancer, is appearing here with great success.

NORTH SHIELDS.—BOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. George Black; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Black, jun.—The Rocky Road is a picture of great interest; Andre Chenier is much enjoyed; and other capital films include A Romantic Young Lady, The Cheesemonger's Dog, The Two Artists, &c. The Mannikins and Randolph Slater (impersonator) appear, and are accorded a flattering reception.

HOWARD HALL.—An excellent series of pictures are again being shown here, and include A Heroine of Mafeking, An Excursion Through Central Italy, The Rocky Road, His Wife's Sacrifice, &c.

GAIETY PICTURE HALL.—The principal picture here is Pygmalion, which is excellent; other enjoyable films include Morgan the Pirate, The Gold Mania, Foolshead Goes to the Ball, &c. Little Miss Lovett, in her songs and dances, appears, and is loudly applauded.

NORWICH.—AGRICULTURAL HALL ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Mr. E. V. Barr's entertainment continues to be well patronised here. The pictures include In Little Italy, Grossmith and Payne, Foolshead, and the Opening of Parliament by the King. Mr. Tom Taylor (baritone) has established himself a favourite.

OLDHAM.—ROYAL THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—A fine picture in natural colours is the top-liner, and is very interesting. It is entitled Wild Birds in their Natural Haunts. A Western Maid is a powerful dramatic picture. A splendid Biblical film is The Life of Moses, and was very interesting. A Child's Forgiveness earned much applause; and some very laughable pictures include The Turkish Pedlar, The Workman of the Future, The Wrong Cab, and The Hoot Automatic Cycle. Mr. Don Cameron again sings with success.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—A thrilling story of the Boer War is the principal picture here, entitled The Heroine of Mafeking, and the applause was well earned. The Egyptian Maid is well acted, being a fine dramatic episode. A good travel picture illustrates A Cocoanut Plantation in Singapore, and is very educational. Country Servants and A Lesson in Economy are a very funny couple of films, among others. Mr. King sings "The Vagabond."

OSBORNE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Hughes.—The Life of Moses is the principal film, and The Ranchman's Rival is a dramatic film of interest. A powerful story is The Scales of Justice. Sorry Can't Stop, Midnight Sons, and many others are also in the bill.

BROWN'S ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Brown.—The Grandsire is a good film, and an interesting picture is 'Twixt Red Man and White. Fashions from 1859 to 1910 is very interesting and amusing. The Life of Moses, The Heroine of Mafeking, Misfortunes of a Pedlar, and The Day After are shown.

RAWTENSTALL.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees, Manchester Electric Theatres, Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Renshaw.—The films this week are very good, including amongst many enjoyable and interesting series of pictures the boxing contest between Britt-Summers. Additional attraction is the engagement of Mr. George Reeves, "the Phrenologist" (comedian), and Mr. George Ingham, a local vocalist of note, who together fill up a most enjoyable programme.

READING.—THE VAUDEVILLE ELECTRIC THEATRE (Broad Street).—The King's Procession at the Opening of Parliament is the principal feature of this week's programme. A number of other good films are also exhibited.

WEST'S PICTURE PALACE (West Street).—Pygmalion, Faust, and a variety of comic and other subjects are being displayed here this week.

BIO PICTURE LAND (King's Road).—A continuous show of excellent films is being given here, there being an entire change of pictures on Mondays and Thursdays.

SALFORD.—OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—The Regent new animated pictures this week include The Subterfuge, Ice-breaking in Finland, Choosing a Husband, The Mad Woman of the Castle, The New Chief, The Rocky Road, Sea-lion Hunting, and Runaway Stove. Mr. Tom Sherlock also sings "Daylight."

NEW CENTRAL HALL.—Proprietors, Matt Raymond Co.; Manager, Mr. A. H. Gilbert.—The Raymond pictures include Cleopatra, Cure for Cowardice, The Late Guest, In Little Italy, Love Me, Love My Dog, Wanted, a Child, Foolshead, the Naughty Boy, and His Reformation. Mr. Gilbert's songs were "Dear Old Bow Bells" and "Wait for Me."

STALYBRIDGE.—ODDFELLOWS' HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. W. Llewellyn.—Another fine programme is presented by the above management, and the pictures include Tempered with Mercy, The Heir to Clavancourt, The Mountaineer's Honour, Nick Carter, A Sticky Proposition, The Best Man Wins, a splendid cowboy comedy, Cold Water Massage, Pedding Pat Pinches Poultry, and Gold-mining by Hydraulic Pressure, truly a wonderful picture. Mr. M. B. Lees renders several pretty illustrated songs.

FORESTERS' HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Beardsworth, Harrison, and Kershaw; Manager, Mr. Frank Lens.—An excellent variety of interesting subjects are shown here this week. The programme includes The Widow's Reward, a touching domestic drama, Cowboy's Romance, The Death of a Brigand Chief, The Miniature, A Woman's Treachery, A Trick that Failed, Whitles' Witless Wanderings.

SUNDERLAND.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Hamilton's Picture and Variety Company.—The programme here is up to the usual good standard this week. The films Who's Got My Hat and Three Sharps in a Flat were highly diverting. A capital turn is that of Picitt and Lizette, magical pantomimists, in their extravaganza The Crazy Cook, in which they introduce some clever productional work.

SWINDON.—COUNTY ELECTRIC PAVILION.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur E. Melborne.—The pictures here are attractive, and are being appreciated by large houses this week. Prominent among the films are the Johnson and Ketchell fight, The Egyptian Maid, and Niagara.

TODMORDEN.—TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, the Corporation; Lessee, Mr. Andrew Martell.—On Monday the usual full house again witnessed a varied and instructive programme. The Abduction depicts how a young man gets into a fast set, and while out motoring one day they meet a farmer's pretty daughter, and the young man pretends to fall in love with her, and persuades her to consent to marry him. One of his friends acts as the parson; but the girl believes they are really married. The young man's mother, who has heard of the plot, meets them, and persuades him to stop his deception, and he tells the girl the truth, and sends her home. However, he finds he really loves her, and, running after her, he persuades her to be properly married; and so all ends happily. Hidden Treasure is a fine pantomime picture, and Ambushed is a beautiful coloured film. A very instructive film is one showing the habits of wild birds taken in their native wilds.

OLYMPIA PICTURE PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs. A and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. Charles Tyers.—A good house assembled on Monday at this new hall. By Rail to Hardjenkolen is a pretty and instructive travel picture, and How Bridget Served Tomatoes is a roaring comic. Foolshead at the Ball is undoubtedly the finest of the Foolshead series, although they are all laughable. Mr. Sam Travis sings two beautifully illustrated songs in "True Eyes" and "Sweet Maid of Ennis." The last picture, A Fish Trick, leaves a broad grin on the faces of the audience.

WHITEHAVEN.—MARKET HALL.—Continued success attends this popular place of amusement, and the pictures are of the usual high-class order. This week the following are the most interesting series:—Detected by Bioscope, The Negro Burglar, The Senorita, The Cursed Cage, Two Women and a Man, and A Visit to Uncle. Mr. D. W. Watson, post horn player, is a very acceptable turn.

WORTHING.—WINTER HALL.—Lessee, Mr. M. W. Shanly; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. F. Tierney.—An excellent pictorial exhibition has been provided here during the week, and amongst the films that have been shown are The Airship Destroyer, The Lady of the Camelias, adapted from Duma's novel, and The Country Doctor.

YNYSHIR.—WORKMEN'S HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—The pictures here still attract crowded houses. A Ranchman's Rival, Justified, and The Seventh Day are pictures which are dramatised by a splendid company of artists. Some comical and side-splitting pictures are Macaroni Soup and The Lady's Companion. Others on the bill are A Country Doctor, Their Son's Medal, A Good Action Rewarded, and An American Marriage. Miss May Macpherson and the Cinephone, as usual, oblige with capital illustrated songs.

YORK.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—All the films shown this week are of a high order of merit, each one being well received. The Bridge of Sighs (a wonderful effect), The Child Benefactor, Diversions, and The Lamp are all good, and excellent variety turns are given by Harry Delmore, Joe Green, Doris Sterling, and Capper and Steele. Business good.

VICTORIA HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Rutter.—Lovely pictures are the rule this week. In Little Italy is brimful of excitement; The Robbery of the Lyons Mail is also exciting; and the doings of those clever entertainers Belford and Mars never fail to please.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

TODMORDEN. — Hippodrome. — Mrs. Morton Powell's company in A Girl's Temptation opened on Monday to a capital house. Miss Gertrude Gilbert gave a touching delineation of Kate Sterling; Mr. Frank V. Fenn proved a powerful Guy Warren, and as Mark Klaw Mr. Clifton Earle acted admirably. Miss Blanche Lee played Annie Brown to the life, and was ably supported by Mr. Fred J. Mace as Jim Judd. Miss Winnie Donovan as Lady Constance Heathfield, Mr. Charles Herbert as Basile Warren, and Mr. Tom Handley as the Hon. Charles Clade also did well. The humour of the piece is well looked after by Mr. Dan Hardie as Sammy Sniggles and Miss Amy Corallie as Jemima Jossop.

TORQUAY. — Theatre Royal. — Licensee and Managing-Director, Ald. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. William Greet's chief company in The Sign of the Cross has been accorded a welcome reception. Miss Constance Little achieves success as Mercia in gaining the full sympathy of the audience; Miss Winifred Delevanti makes a pathetic figure of Stephanus; Mr. W. Lawson Butt is an admirable Marcus Superbus; Mr. W. Mayne Lynton is sufficiently tyrannical as Nero; Tigellinus finds a capable exponent in Mr. Charles Aldred; Mr. H. Thurston Harris and Mr. Martin Palmer do well as Servilius and Strabo; and as Favius and Titus Mr. Walter Fleet and Mr. Henry Raymond capably fill their respective parts.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale; Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—The Hippodrome season was resumed this week with a strong programme, in which the star turn was the Princess D'Aryaha, in her beautifully mounted fantastic scena, in which her reputation as a clever and beautiful dancer was more than maintained. Other turns included Prof. Glennie's Marionettes; Crawford and Johnson, coon comedians; Dot Moss, the juvenile banjoist; Mother and Meyer, the dancing duo; Johnny Cecil, comedian; and Elsie Athas, comedienne, all of whom had a cordial reception.

WAKEFIELD.—Opera House. — Proprietors Messrs. Sherwood and Co.—Mr. Stuart Lomath and company appear in the drama Whom God Hath Joined. Miss Ellen Owen plays Kitty Crumpet with success; Mr. Stuart Lomath gives a vigorous portrayal of Captain Jack Merrick; Mr. Arthur B. Pringle is a manly Major Stevens; Mr. Lancelot Usher ably undertakes the part of Digby Trant; Mr. Jack Miller is effective as Richard Manley; and Mr. Victor G. Payne is seen to advantage as Watty Cooper. Miss Helena Walbran does full justice to the rôle of Mrs. Merrick; and Miss Amy McNeil is admirable as Beatrice Trant.

Empire.—Proprietors, Messrs. Sherwood and Co.; Manager, Mr. S. H. Laycock.—The Six Spanish Juanitos are wonderful acrobats; the Five Musical Marvels give a talented and refined turn; Mark Stuart delights with clever patter; Stevens and Brett, comedians, contribute a popular item; Blanche White and Miss Clifford, comedy artistes, find much favour; Miss Bertha Evelyn is a pleasing vocalist; and the Cosmopolitan Male Quartette of Glee-Singers are a decided success.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The Child Trio are a wonderful juvenile combination of musicians; Juno Salmo is a marvellous contortionist with electrical effects; Halter and Ray, comedy artists, are greatly appreciated; Vasey and Ramsey are smart dancers; Sam Dalton, eccentric comedian, is amusing; the Czar's Royal troupe of dancers give a clever series of bewildering evolutions; and Miss Lilian Travelli is a charming soubrette.

WARRINGTON.—Royal Court.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; General Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader.—After an absence of several years, The Silver King is playing a welcome return visit here. Messrs. Polini and Melford's company have had a warm reception, and the play is as popular as ever. Mr. Fred D. Daviss as Wilfred Denver plays naturally throughout; Miss Mildred Surrey scores as Nellie Denver, her rendition of the character being very faithful; Mr. Edward J. George renews his popularity for his delineation of the faithful Jaikes; the children are well represented by Miss Hilda Bateman and Master Eric Dene; Mr. Arthur H. Rooke as Captain Herbert Skinner is a typical specimen of the genteel villain; and smart character sketches are seen of Elijah Coombe (Mr. Arthur Wright), Henry Corket (Mr. Ralph Leon), and Cripps (Mr. Fred May). A charming Olive Skinner is Miss Mary Glanbrane. The staging is very effective.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—Mr. Adderley Howard's company head the bill here with the nautical spectacle Black Ey'd Susan. Mr. Howard presents a capital impersonation of William, and a charming Susan is Miss D. Mullord. The staging is excellent. H. C. Lovell and Co. score well in the sketch Mdlle. Pom Pon; the Zampas are smart vocalists, dancers, and jugglers; Mdlle. Dalmere's entertainment with performing cats, rabbits, dogs, doves, and rats is novel and interesting; Norah Desmond's illustrated songs are much enjoyed; Charles Gardner is responsible for much mirth; Willie Long is a smart comedian; Archie Pitt does well; and the pictures are much enjoyed.

WATFORD.—Palace Theatre.—Sole Responsible Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Mason; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Wright. —Mr. Leonard Boyne's company in Raffles has this week drawn crowded houses. Mr. Reginald Dance gives a superb performance in the name-part; Gwendoline Conran and Mrs. Vidal have able exponents in Miss Frances Titheredge and Miss Mollie Tremaine; and Mr. Harold West makes a convincing Bunny.

WEST BROMWICH. — Theatre Royal. — Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. Nightingale.—Pantomime provides a welcome change this week, and Mr. John A. Thomson's production of The Babes in the Wood is very delightful, the company being an excellent one. Miss Pattie McCarthy is an ideal Robin Hood, and the Maid Marian of Miss Daisy Stone is charming. Mr. Will Chandos and Mr. Geo. Chandos as the Ruffians impart plenty of humour into the piece. Enjoyable turns are provided by Mdlle. Florence (champion globe walker), the Sisters Hypatia (duettists and dancers), Miss Nora Pendergast (soprano vocalist), Abex (the pocket Hercules), and La Belle Sylvia (dancer). The pantomime is beautifully staged and dressed.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. R. Colin; Resident-Manager, Mr. Joe Hastings.—In addition to capital pictures, T. E. Johnson provides some clever songs; Colvil and Tate are comedy artists of considerable ability; Miss Mabel Daubyn is a serio comedienne with a good selection of songs, which she sings well; Mdlle. Tudora creates much interest with her four educated ponies; and the Tymes, with their enchanted clock, is an enjoyable turn.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Grand.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Granville.—Messrs. Dotteridge and Longdens' company are presenting twice nightly the migratory pantomime Dick Whittington. To Miss Ethel Campbell is allotted the name-rôle, and a pretty and sprightly Dick she is. Alice has a charming representative in Miss Tina Franks. Madame Benita, who plays the part of Fairy Sunshine, possesses an admirable voice. Wholesome comedy is abundantly displayed by Mr. Albert Williams as the Cook, and Mr. Deane Tribune as Idle Jack. The whole production is excellently staged and prettily dressed. The Pauline Rivers Troupe of merry mill girls and dancers introduce some very pretty dances.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—Keen and Waller, a couple of eccentric comedians, are exceptionally clever. The Delevines provide a novel turn in their scarecrow dance. Fred Elton's scena at the piano On Board an Ocean Liner is well performed. Andrew McManus has established himself a favourite. Lily Burnand is a great favourite. W. Selkirk's juvenile production, The Gathering of the Clans, is retained another week, and excellent Pictures are shown.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Lloyd's animated pictures and variety company are here this week. The films are exceptionally good, especially those entitled The Robbers of Fingall's Creek and Following in Father's Footsteps. Miss Bertha Zander possesses a well-trained and powerful voice, which found plenty of scope in "When the heart is young." "The Sailor's Grave" was sung by Mr. Charles W. Wade with much dramatic expression; Mr. Leedam Stanley is a first-class comedian, and produced a very humorous sketch for the first time, entitled Peers.

WEYMOUTH. — Pavilion Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Mr. J. W. Cordiner's company is here in Dare-Devil Dorothy. The title-rôle is charmingly represented by Miss G. de Lacy; Ruth Montrose (her sister) is cleverly played by Miss K. Stewart, who renders some dainty songs; Mr. G. A. Fox as Capt. George Fielding wins approval; Mr. R. Gilbert is an excellent Capt. Edward Dudley; Mr. F. Trevor as Hawkins leaves nothing to be desired; Miss Nellie Harcourt wins much appreciation as Judith; Mr. W. Boyce as General Garston and Mr. Deane Cliffe, and Mr. W. H. Troutbeck are good in their respective parts; Mr. J. Salter as Silas Crump keeps the house in roars of laughter; Miss Iris Elvido and Miss Lily Elvido are accomplished dancers, and with Miss Madge Delta contribute much to the success.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. Thomas Swinton.—Mr. Kiddie's popular pantomime The Forty Thieves is presented twice nightly here. The author is Mr. Harry Corrin, of Runcorn, and the composer of the special music is Mr. Bert Harding, the conductor of the local orchestra. The principals, who do their work well, are Miss Elsie Steadman (Ganem), Miss Lyle Jefferies (Morgiana), Miss Rose Parcezer (Abdallah), Miss Cissie Behan (Calet), and Miss Kitty Behan (Mirza). The comedians are capital fun-providers, and rank as follows: Mr. Percy Curry (Ali Baba), Mr. Arthur Behan (Cogia Ali Baba), Fame and Fortune (Pitchett Detectives), Mr. Mark Merry (Kaderick), Mr. Arthur Burton (Cassim Baba), and Mr. Reg Amber (Mustapha). The chorus do their duty well, and the production is capitally mounted.

Co-operative Hall.—Lessees, Messrs. Hamilton and Hughes.—In addition to excellent pictures, Signor Torti, Mr. Frederick Carr and Madame Rose (in their drawing-room entertainment), Miss Gladys Wright (a sweet-voiced soprano), and Messrs. W. Dean and J. Dixon (humorists) help to delight large audiences.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. George Dance's company, in Our Miss Gibbs, is here for the first time. Miss Elfie Vincent, a capable artist, acts with much grace as Mary Gibbs; Miss Ellaline Thorne is an excellent Madame Jeanne; and Miss Florence Hylton as Mrs. Farquhar is effective. Miss Lilian Birtles as Lady Thanet causes endless laughter; Miss Amy Singleton is an interesting study as the Duchess; Mr. Eustace Burnaby is exceptionally clever in the part of Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint; the character of Timothy is depicted with humour by Mr. Vincent Erne; Mr. J. S. Durant plays Slithers smartly; Mr. A. Gordon Begg is extremely pleasant as Earl St. Ives; and Mr. Arthur S. Radcliffe as Lord Eynsford also provides a capital performance.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. Charles A. Clarke's company is here in Little Phil's Mother. Miss Gertie Renaud as Phil acts the part to perfection; Miss Maud Russell as Ruth Towers and Miss Violet Crauford as Elspeth play effectively; Miss Leslie Warner is good as Julia Worrilove; Frank Towers finds an able exponent in Mr. Percy Ballard; Mr. Henry Earlesmere fills the rôle of Oscar Titherton with credit; and the character of Sam Pukels is ably portrayed by Mr. Frank M. Thorne.

WISHAW, N.B. — Pavilion.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Nimse.—The genial Horace Wheatley is topping the bill here this week and proving a big favourite. Miss Geddy Edmond's company in The Lady Jockey evoke the heartiest laughter, especially good being Mr. Jamie Rous as the Tipster. Fred and Lulu Camplin are alike excellent in their musical comedy act; W. E. Hilton in a Scotch ventriloquial turn is good; and William McNally contributes an unusually fine musical turn upon the dulcimer. Some unusually fine films are shown upon the Bioscope.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis M. Chapman.—A welcome return visit is being paid by Mr. Frank Bertram's company, in The Breed of the Treshams. Mr. Sidney Bland gives a telling representation of Lieut. Reresby; Mr. Alfred Holles does admirably in the part of Viscount Dorsington; Mr. Geo. Butler is well suited as Colonel Hungerford; and Mr. George Traill as Colonel Curwen, Mr. L. Lingham as Colonel Bagshaw, Mr. S. F. Courtney as Captain Stanhope, and Mr. Walter Grahame as Francis Tresham render excellent support. Miss Mildred Hodson is a charming Margaret; Miss Grace Harlington a capital Batty; and Miss M. Cottier and Miss D. De Lille appear with success as Mrs. Bagshaw and Helena Pierrepont.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—Mr. Percy Honri merits commendation for his production of Concordia, of which his concertina-playing and the solo ballet-dancing of Mlle. Quetta Papucci are the cheif features; the Starley Bros. show expertness as acrobatic cyclists; Perrier presents an original ventriloquial novelty, his three "dummies" subsequently joining him in excellently-rendered excerpts from grand opera. The other artists include Mark Hanbury, comedian; Queenie Mayor, the Lancashire fisher lass; Smitte and Smit, in a comedy bar act; and Harry Hasto, comedian.

WORCESTER. — Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Edward Evans.—Pantomime is again meeting with considerable favour, and Mr. John A. Thompson's company's presentation of the familiar story of Sleeping Beauty is well deserving the liberal support accorded. Admirably staged, gorgeously dressed, and cleverly presented, it forms a delightful entertainment for old and young alike. Miss Alyce Wyllyams is a charming Princess, singing with taste and good expression, and dancing gracefully; and Miss Adele Roze is a dashing Prince Charming. Miss Nellie Scorey is seen to advantage as Bo Peep; and Miss Emmie King is well suited as Boy Blue. As King Ruby Mr. Richard Teesdale scores an unqualified success; and Mr. Henry Warren is very comical as Queen Ruby. Mr. Sidney Godfrey and Mr. J. Monkhouse as Selina and Bamboozleum respectively are highly diverting; and Mr. Tom Hanlon and Mr. Alf Harlin as Johnny Green and Simple Simon are liberal contributors to the fun of the show. Other capable members of the numerous company are Mr. E. Freeling (Tommy Trout), Miss Ethel Broad (Silver Star), Miss Doris Shaw (Dolly Dimple), and Mr. Edward Stanley (Yellow Dwarf). The specialities are numerous, and include some very effective ballets; Albas, the daring wire-walker; the Musical Scoreys; the Canadian Male Quartette Party; the Casino Girls; and Miss Doris Shaw's clever dancing. Mr. Arthur Sheldrake directs the music.

WORKINGTON.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday The Gay Gordons came here. As Angus Mr. Stafford Dickens played capitally; the drolleries of Mr. Sidney Burt as Nervy Nat were enjoyed; and Mr. Ernest Pierce showed ability as Edmund Siddons. Miss May Yates as the heroine Peggy Quainton was charming to a degree;; and the Victoria Siddons of Miss Ruby Louis also calls for special mention.

YORK.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Under the Iron Heel has done well. Mr. Wilson Howard as Rene de Maupassant plays a strong rôle with much skill; he is ably played up to by Miss Jessie Tatman as Andre; Miss Carlotta Anson is entitled to unstinted praise for her efforts as Germaine; and a very able company renders every assistance.

Opera House and Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooks.—Tom Costello's popularity is well maintained, his song-scena "The Old Clown" going remarkably well; Sterling and Love's business is neat, clever, and up-to-date; the Three Dixons give a novel and pleasing entertainment; the Four Mayos, on the skates, prove very amusing; Evelyn and Norrie present a neat sketch; Charles Rowen sings amusing songs; Lilian Rose gives a particularly bright and taking turn; the Creedons present a novel comedy sporting act; and John Partington, the Lancashire singing mill lad, finds hosts of admirers.

Mr. Wilson Benge's company is paying a return visit to the Miners' Theatre, Ashington, in The Eve of Her Wedding. Mr. Cecil A. Melton as George Tremain is excellent; Mr. Arthur Keand as Giovanni is exceptionally good; Mr. Harry Heyton as Dean Clifton is capital; Mr. Chas. W. Dockwray as Paul Cairshaw and Hiram P. Younger does able work; and as Jack Herne, the cripple, Mr. Herbert Hastings deserves praise. Miss Pauline Nanton as Marvis Leverton makes a very sweet heroine, and Miss Annie Hylton is an admirable Renie de Telle. The comedy, which is in the hands of Mr. C. Milley Doyle as Rudulph Earle, Mr. H. Danson as Dick Leverton, and Miss Nancy J. Clarke as Gwendoline Younger, is effective.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS MARION WAKEFORD.

Commencing her career under the management of Mr. Geo. Edwardes and Mr. Chas. Frohman, Miss Marion Wakeford proceeded with The Shop Girl company to America, and, after playing a season in New York visited the chief cities in the United States. Returning to this country she joined Miss Minnie Palmer for a tour of The School Girl, opening at the Grand, now Kelly's, Theatre, Liverpool. At the conclusion of that tour she was engaged by the Messrs. Gatti to play in A Night Out and Never Again at the Vaudeville, afterwards touring in the latter piece under the management of Mr. Geo. Giddens and Miss Agnes Millar. Her next engagement was with the well-known touring actor-manager, Mr. Frank Lindo, to whom she was shortly afterwards married. Since then she has played all the principal rôles in his numerous productions. She created the part of Joan in the now famous drama Home, Sweet Home, and, with the exception of one or two nights, has played the part ever since the production—six years ago.

On Mr. Lindo temporarily relinquishing management, Miss Wakeford was selected by Mr. Arthur Collins to play Daphne (juvenile lead) in the suburban and provincial tours of The Great Millionaire. Other parts in which Miss Wakeford has appeared with great success during stock seasons in Leeds and Bradford include Rose Maywell in The Sledge Hammer, Aima in Night and Morning, Pauline in Called Back (a favourite part of hers), Lucy in The Streets of London, and Laura in Frank Lindo's own dramatic version of David Garrick.

Miss Wakeford's only appearance, so far, in Shakespeare was in a special production of The Merchant of Venice at the Victoria Theatre, Manchester, where she played Portia to Mr. Lindo's Shylock, and received enthusiastic notices in the Press. Miss Wakeford's ambition is to play other leading Shakespearean rôles, an ambition which she hopes to gratify later on. In December last she created the part of Mistress Beatrice Mortimer in her husband's latest success, Love, the Conqueror, in which she has made, perhaps, the biggest hit of her career. Miss Wakeford is particularly popular with the mill girls of Lancashire and Yorkshire, always receiving a hearty welcome at their hands, and very often humble but well-meant tokens of appreciation in the shape of hand-worked gifts and flowers.

MISS MARION WAKEFORD.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Mr. Edwin H. Lemare's organ recital at the Trinity College on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 17, attracted a large audience. Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor came first in the programme, and was followed by Mr. G. E. Bambridge's charming Idyll. A clever and very attractive Rondo Capriccio by Mr. Lemare was admirably played by the composer and encored. Mendelssohn's fine sixth and last Sonata was also included in the recital, and in the descriptive note in the programme Mr. Lemare does justice to a truly great work, and as the organist remarks truly, the lovely Andante, the fifth and last movement, "is a perfect gem of beauty and peace." The Sonata was finely interpreted and warmly applauded. After a very short interval Mr. Lemare gave the delightful Canzona della Sera of E. d'Evry, Soutenir (a study on one note), and a brilliant Scherzo from his own Symphony in D minor. The talented organist also gave a clever improvisation on a theme submitted by one among the audience. Mozart's Fantasia in F minor concluded a very interesting recital.

The Ayr Amateur Opera Company have taken the Gaiety Theatre, Ayr, for the week, and are performing Dorothy to packed houses. Mr. John McTaggart, the musical director, and Mr. Harry Leffler, late of the Savoy Theatre, who this year fills the post of stage-manager, are, along with the members of the company, to be congratulated on the success of the production.

Mr. Allan Wilkie's company opened at the Grand, Mansfield, on Monday, in The Merchant of Venice. Mr. Allan Wilkie gave an impressive study as Shylock; Mr. Alexander Marsh was a telling Bassanio; Mr. T. J. Fay was a good Duke of Venice; Mrs. Allan Wilkie a successful Portia; and Miss Hilda Plowright played well as Jessica. The programme for the week also included Hamlet, The Bells and David Garrick, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Othello, and Jane Shore.

Mr. Wentworth Croke's well-chosen company in The Bondman is paying a second visit to the Theatre Royal, Smethwick. The part of Jason is well filled by Mr. Philip Darien; Michael, as played by Mr. Stanley Harrison, is a fine piece of acting; Mr. Wilfred Beckwith is well suited to the part of Adam Fairbrother; Mr. W. H. Rotherham gives an admirable performance in the doubled rôles of Father Ferrati and Grandfather; Dr. Boni is well represented by Mr. Fred J. Waller; Mr. Chris. A. Olgar as the Marshal is good; Miss Madge Lanerton gives a creditable performance as Mrs. Fairbrother; Christian Anne is well portrayed by Miss Emelie Mayhew; and Mona and Danny as played by Miss Beatrice Maud Hughes and Master Walter Neville are commendable efforts.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"AHASVER."

Musical Drama, in One Act, by F. Ritter, Produced at the Volks-Oper on Feb. 12.

Karalik	Herr Ruenger
Lubascha	Fraulein Sachse
Petruschka	Herr Zoernitz
Batuschka	Herr Fischoetter
Petrow	Herr Taubert
Kascha	Fraulein Gerhardy
Grossmutter	Fraulein von Firli
Kosakenhauptmann	Herr Roesler

BERLIN, Thursday, Feb. 17.—A very hearty and well merited reception was accorded to this new work, which is drawn by Herr Raché from a drama by the clever Dutch writer, Hermann Heijermans. The music, although in parts somewhat crude, is in others extremely dramatic, suiting the gravity of the theme to perfection; there is over-much recitative, but the instrumentation betokens great talent, and the composer should certainly do better work still. The action passes in Russia, the word "Ahasver" serving as a symbol for the persecut on of the Jews in that country, and a tragic scene of the pogrom is enacted before us. Karalik and his wife, a poor old Jewish pair, have missed their only son, Petruschka, for some time, and are in great fear that he has fallen a victim to the Cossacks, as his grandfather before him. The youth returns, but the old people have not long in which to express their joy, for the dreaded Cossacks are at hand. Karalik and his good wife, Lubascha, are hounded out of their wretched home, which was dear to them, nevertheless, and their only consolation is that they have Petruschka again. Then the truth becomes known. Petruschka, to save himself from the horrible persecution of his race, has slunk into a church and been baptised. He is therefore allowed to remain—a free man, and is about to order the Cossacks off, when his father curses him for a renegade. The curse is terrible, the youth sinks beneath it, and then the curtain falls. The interpretation was good all round, the best in the cast being Herr Ruenger and Fräulein Sachse. The orchestra did its work admirably under the clever conducting of Kapellmeister Enders, and the mounting of the opera was very effective. There was not a vacant seat in the house.

An event in our theatrical annals was the first production of Léhar's new operetta Zigeunerliebe at the Komische Oper last week. The authors of the book—which is poor—are Herren Willner and Bodansky. The scene of the "romantic" operetta is laid in the Roumanian frontier, where Zorika, daughter of a local magnate, runs away with a hot-blooded gipsy on the eve of her marriage, who appears more desirable than the distinguished bridegroom she had promised to wed. Zorika is not happy, and we finally tremble for her reason—which was never very firm—but in the final act we are agreeably surprised to learn it was all a dream, and Zorika's wedding to the rightful man takes place with all appropriate pomp and some delightful dances in the composer's best style. Léhar has written some pretty numbers of a sentimental description, as becomes the text, but he is not so happy in serious music as in the lighter, graceful dance music which has made him so famous. The work was capitally given, and that composer and artists were called times innumerable goes without saying. It will, nevertheless, not rival the composer's first work, the ever-popular Merry Widow.

"Christinas Heimreise," the new comedy by Hugo von Hofmannsthal, which was produced at the Deutsches on Friday last, was not altogether a success. The author is one of the cleverest of our modern dramatists, and is best known by his play Elektra, which gave Strauss the idea of his famous opera. This is the first time Herr von Hofmannsthal has written a piece in lighter vein. His admirers called him several times before the curtain and applauded warmly, but this manifestation only appeared to increase the opposition, so that at the close hisses and applause were pretty even. The action passes in Venice during the eighteenth century. Christina is a fair peasant maiden who is beloved by a faithful old seaman. She is caught by the wiles of a noted Don Juan, who sees her for a few moments, and determines to gain her favour. After betraying the girl, he goes off in search of fresh conquests, and Christina philosophically accepts the proffered hand of the sailor, who seems to have no qualms about playing second fiddle. Acting and mounting were equally good.

A French farce by MM. Armont and Nancey, entitled Theodore and Cie, German translation by Erich May, made a decided hit at the Trianon last week, and has filled the bill since. At the Residenz Theatre another French farce, Im Taubenschlag, has passed its seventy-fifth performance, and is still drawing well.

Herr Franz Molnar's new comedy Verteidiger met with a most cordial reception at the New Schauspielhaus last night.

"TAIFUN."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Melchior Lengyel, Produced at the Berliner Theatre Feb. 19.

BERLIN, Thursday, Feb. 24.—The author of this original play is a young Hungarian, who would have had more than the success which fell to his lot—and that was not inconsiderable—had he condensed his work a little more. He has laid the scene in Paris; the principal figures are Japanese. He has provided plenty of sensation, and raises a warning finger against the "yellow peril." The characters, however interesting they may be, are not convincing—at least, to such of those who know anything of the Japanese temperament. We hear a good deal of talk about a secret mission of a number of Japanese in the interest of their Government, but its nature is kept a profound secret from us. We only know that Dr. Nitobe Tokoramo is at the head of it, and indefatigable in its cause. He is a delightful little gentleman, as amiable as he is clever and patriotic, but it seems he can be moved—on occasion—to terrible passion. The Doctor is in love, and the object of his affection is Mlle. Heléne, a fair serpent, whose vices are difficult to equal, even in naughty Paris. To make a long story short, Heléne betrays Tokoramo and laughs him to scorn—we even fancy she has obtained a knowledge of the mission, for the "typhoon" of the title breaks over him, and he, with a skilful jiu-jitsu movement, strangles his false mistress. The devotion of the Japanese to their Fatherland, and their sublime contempt of death is now displayed in striking colours. All Tokoramo's compatriots rally round him, each one eager to take the murder upon his own shoulders, the mission being far too important to be interfered with by such trifles. The lot falls upon a lad of eighteen, Inose Hironari, and we see his trial. The young hero is sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, and although the real murderer declares he is the guilty one, the Court does not believe him. So there is nothing left to the unfortunate Tokoramo but to finish his great work with an aching heart, and afterwards to make his own quietus. The interpretation was an excellent one, the author and artists being called repeatedly before the curtain.

Another novelty which would have improved by cutting was the drama Neue Jugend, by the Swedish writer Tor Hedberg. It was produced at the Schiller on Saturday, but the results were not such as warrant a lengthy run. The theme is the persecution of Finnland. A foolish youth is selected to assassinate a high official, but in the course of discussion with his father, hitherto a quiet citizen, the elder man becomes so inflamed, that finally he, and not his son, commits the deed. Neither the characters nor the scenes are convincing, and the applause was freely mingled with manifestations of disapproval.

A broad farce met with a very cordial reception at the New Schauspielhaus last week Der Herr Verteidiger, by the Hungarian author, Franz Molnar, who is already favourably known here. The action passes in the wilds of Arizona, where law and equity are but names, and the race is to the fittest scoundrel. To detail the plot would be an almost impossible task; the chief scene is a trial before a caricature court, and the main theme is the competition between the famous barrister, Parker, and his friend, or enemy, as the case and circumstances dictate, Tim Boots, a genius in crime. Vivacious acting aided the success of the piece.

"Mandanika," a new romantic opera, by Gustav Lazarus, was produced at the Volks-Oper on Friday last with much success. The music has been written round an Indian legend; the composer has also written the text, and it is very melodious and pleasing. Herr Lazarus is known as a song-writer of merit, and he may be complimented upon his first operatic effort.

Kadelburg's merry farce, Der Familientag, has been revived at the Royal Schauspielhaus, and is drawing well. The Emperor, with the Empress and Princess Victoria Luise, attended a performance one evening last week, and applauded and laughed as much as anyone.

MR. MARK LORNE'S MARRIAGE.

Mr. Mark Lorne, the popular lessee and manager of the King's Theatre, Sutton-in-Ashfield, was married on Tuesday at Sutton Parish Church, the Rev. R. H. S. Curry officiating, to Miss Cecilia Lucas, youngest daughter of Mr. William Lucas, the well-known North Country sportsman. Capt. Clayton, managing-director Mansfield and District Theatres, acted as best man, the bride being given away by Dr. Wordsworth (hon. medical adviser Actors' Association), Mansfield. There was a large attendance, both at the church and at the theatre in the evening, when the happy couple were the recipients of the following presents:—Bridegroom's gift to bride, diamond ring, brooch, and earrings; bride's gift to bridegroom, diamond pin; cheque from Capt. Cecil Clayton, Grand Theatre, Mansfield; solid 18-carat gold watch and bow, Capt. Clayton and the directors of the Mansfield, Sutton, and Districts Theatre, Ltd.; silver cigarette case, barometer, gilt time-piece, Capt. and Fred Clayton; solid 18-carat gold curb bracelet, the Staff and Orchestra, King's Theatre; solid silver cigarette-box, Mr. and Mrs. Minto, St. James's Theatre, Long Eaton; bronze and gold cigarette-case, Mr. Ward, Sutton; silk evening dress, Mr. and Mrs. Badley, Mansfield; silver tea-pot, Mr. and Mrs. Hardwick; Ivory-handle carvers, Mr. and Mrs. Hardwick; silver tea-spoons, the British Goldsmith Co., Mansfield; six pairs of silk hose, Mr. and Tom Mills, jun.; silver-fitted travelling bag, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Poole (Poole's Myriorama).

During the performance of Mr. Stephen Pritt's Almost His Bride company, Dr. Wordsworth, in a few well-chosen words, asked Mr. Lorne's acceptance of the following illuminated address:—

"An Appreciation.

"To Mr. Mark Lorne, lessee and manager, King's Theatre, Sutton-in-Ashfield, on the occasion of his marriage, Feb. 22, 1910: We, the undersigned, present our congratulations, together with a purse of gold, value £20, as a mark of the esteem in which he is held, and in testimony of his straightforward good-fellowship, his courtesy and gentlemanly behaviour, and his business abilities, and we wish him much happiness and prosperity in the years that are to come."

The address was numerously signed, and her Grace the Duchess of Portland sent a telegram conveying her heartiest congratulations.

Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sydney Cooper's company is at the King's Theatre, Seacombe, with The Flag Lieutenant, which is mounted and acted to perfection. Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir Berkeley Wynne, K.C.B., is characteristically enacted by Mr. Mark Paton, and Mr. Claude Murray does well as Flag-Captain John Penrose. Mr. Guy Newall scores heavily in the title-rôle, receiving undeniable recalls after each act; Mr. Frederick Leister gets in some capital work as Major William Thessiger; Mr. Edwin Mervyn is fully equal to the demands of the part of Surgeon Walter Crutchley; Mr. W. S. Stephenson as Sergeant Thomas Steel, Mr. William Greyson as Seaman James Sloggett, and Mr. W. J. Yeldham as General Gough-Bogle are all good; Miss Mabel Rees is effective as Mrs. Cameron; Miss Rita Johnson gives an able rendering of Lady Hermione Wynne; and Miss Una Venning as Viola Hood, Miss Evelyn Robson as Mrs. Gough-Bogle, and Miss Rosalind Ross as Lady Dugdale are fully equal to their respective rôles. The orchestra is under the bâton of Mr. Fred Holliday.

At the Cambridge Theatre, Spennymoor, Mr. T. Edward Ward's company is presenting His Real Wife in able and accomplished style. The staging of the piece leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. Clifford Rean is a fine actor, and throws great enthusiasm into his character as Herbert Barton; and as Martin Avondale Mr. J. W. Evelyn is a great success. Mr. C. W. Spencer as General Barton acts well; Mr. Bernard Elliott gives a capital rendering of Randal Meredith; and Mr. Charles York, along with Mr. Walter Walmesley, causes much amusement as Colombe and Alf. Snickers respectively; and Mr. T. Edward Ward is good as Simon Bietherell. Miss Ward gives a fine rendition as Rose Avondale; and Miss Clarrie Yandell as Betty Tuttlebee is also fine.

Presentations.—Mr. Edward M. Hamilton, the courteous acting-manager of the Prince's Theatre, Bradford, was, on the occasion of his benefit last week, presented by Miss Ada Fawn, the principal boy in the pantomime of The Forty Thieves, with a solid silver cigarette-case, as a mark of esteem. From the staff Mr. Hamilton received five pieces of handsome pottery, and a beautiful clock, and he was also the recipient from the company of a beautiful occasional silver tea set. Mr. Francis Laidler, the lessee, spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Hamilton's kindly consideration and business abilities, and the bénéficiaire suitably and feelingly responded.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Repertory Theatre at Glasgow have again placed playgoers under an obligation by their enterprise in staging this new work, and though opinions may differ as to the merits of the play, the interest evoked by The Silver Box and Strife ensured it a sympathetic hearing. The grim relentlessness with which the tragic story is unfolded held the audience firmly, despite some lengthy waits due to heavy scenic changes. As Cokeson Mr. M. R. Morand again enhanced his reputation greatly by the life-like rendering he gave of the good-hearted old clerk. Equally notable, in quite a different line, was the Falder of Mr. Milton Rosmer, the most convincing characterisation of its kind he has yet given here. The companion picture of hopeless despair shown by Miss Irene Rooke as Ruth was intensely pathetic, her acting in the trial scene and in the final act calling forth the hearty applause of the large audience. Mr. Campbell Gullan gave a very human reading of the part of the Advocate for the Prisoner; and the Prosecuting Advocate was cleverly portrayed by Mr. J. T. Macmillan. The two partners, Walter How and James How, were extremely well played by Mr. Lawrence Hanray as the stern old father, and by Mr. Perceval Clark as his more merciful son. In the trial scene Mr. D. Lewin Mannering made an impressive Judge, and later acted the part of the Prison Doctor cleverly. Mr. C. F. Cargill made a staid and prosaic Chaplain; and clever sketches of three convicts were given by Messrs. George Tawde, Richard Pyne, and V. Maclure. Mr. Cecil Brooking as the Detective, and more particularly as the Prison Governor, gave able support; and Mr. Campbell Forbes was quietly effective as Cowley. The play was produced by Mr. D. Lewin Mannering, and reflected much credit on his staging. At the conclusion, the audience, while not unduly demonstrative, were distinctly favourable, and Mr. Alfred Wareing was able to telegraph congratulations to the author, Mr. Galsworthy, at the Duke of York's.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

An artistic performance of Gluck's opera, Iphigenia in Tauris, was given by the students of the Royal College of Music on Friday afternoon, Feb. 18, at His Majesty's Theatre, by kind permission of Sir Herbert Tree. Sir Charles V. Stanford conducted the college orchestra, which did justice to Gluck's refined and graceful music, while the representation had all the advantage of picturesque scenery, kindly lent by Sir Herbert Tree. It was evident that the opera had been well rehearsed, and under the experienced stage direction of Mr. Richard Temple all went smoothly. The dances were arranged by Mr. B. Sontten, and the chorus-master was Mr. S. P. Waddington. Miss Viola Tree, who impersonated Iphigenia, has had the invaluable advantage of stage experience, and in the pathetic scene where Iphigenia has to decide which of the two friends, Orestes and Pylades, are to be sacrificed, her acting was very expressive. As a vocalist also Miss Tree continues to advance. The fine voice, clever singing, admirably clear enunciation, and intelligent acting of Mr. Jamieson Dodds made the part of Orestes interesting; while Mr. Ivor Walters proved an excellent Pylades. In the contest between the two friends, who each want to give their life for the other, which is so beautifully expressed in Gluck's music, both the young performers greatly distinguished themselves. Mr. George Baker's Thoas, the tyrant King of Taurica, was another good feature in the performance; while the small part of Diana was ably undertaken by Miss Dorothy Webb. The characters of First and Second Priestess and A Greek Woman were adequately filled by Miss Katherine Vincent, Miss Florence Barrow, and Miss Agnes Christa, and the ghostly scene in the second act, where the spirits hover round the sleeping Orestes, was well carried out. As might be expected from a great college of music, the chorus sang finely and with delightful freshness and purity of tone. There was frequent applause during the performance, and at the fall of the curtain all the principal artists had a most hearty greeting.

In the orchestral concert given at the Royal College on Wednesday evening the orchestra, conducted by Sir Charles V. Stanford, gave a refined and finished performance of Mozart's fine Symphony in G minor. Brahms' masterly Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, in B flat major, op. 83, was ably interpreted by the orchestra, and the solo part brilliantly played by Mr. William Murdoch. It was no easy task even for a most experienced pianist, and at the close the delighted audience recalled the talented young performer many times to the platform. Miss Clytie M. Hine sang the scena "Suicidio," from Ponchielli's Gioconda, with clear enunciation and a fair amount of dramatic expression, and the orchestra performed for the first time in England Rachmaninoff's symphonic poem, "Die Toteninsel." The Russian composer has founded his symphonic poem on a picture entitled "The Island of the Dead," painted by Arnold Böcklin, representing an island, and a gigantic mausoleum on a glassy, lifeless sea. On the sides of the great cliff are niches or vaults prepared for the reception of the dead. A boat approaches this haven, bearing a white-robed figure with a coffin at its feet. Tall cypresses rise from the centre of this mighty rock, and steps lead from the water to the darkness beneath. This gloomy picture, which it is said the artist has painted and repainted no less than six times, may, no doubt, be suited to the composer's sombre and impressive style, but, from want of light and shade in the music, Rachmaninoff's symphonic poem did not prove an entire success. Surely there are many more beautiful pictures than "Die Toteninsel" that would have served the composer's purpose better for musical illustration?

THIS week Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is at the Eden Theatre, Bishop Auckland, in With Edged Tools. Mr. Hamilton Deane portrays with striking effect Jack Meredith; Mr. Henry Nunn is in no wise lacking as Guy Oscard; Sir John Meredith is realistically portrayed by Mr. J. D. Geddes; and Mr. Albert Campbell makes the most of Maurice Gordon. Mr. Campbell Goldsmid commendably enacts the part of Victor Durnovo; Miss Marie Leonard is a capable Jocelyn Gordon; and the rôle of Millicent Chyne is well depicted by Miss Marguerite Cellier. Miss Marion Fawcett is a charming Lady Cantourne.

THE King and Queen, Princess Victoria, and Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia visited the Gaiety Theatre on Monday night and witnessed the performance of Our Miss Gibbs.

DEATH OF MR. ROBB HARWOOD.

Death has robbed the stage of that excellent comedian Mr. Robb Harwood, who passed away at Newcastle-on-Tyne on Sunday. It seems that he had had a sharp attack of bronchitis, and the journey to Newcastle-on-Tyne to join the Peter Pan company must have been taken too soon; for on his arrival in the town he took to his bed, and sank rapidly. He was a kindly-souled Bohemian, and modest withal. Had he been more pushful, Robb would not have had those periods of "resting" which must have been so galling to an artist with such a gift of characterisation. He was a remarkably fine mimic, and his powers of burlesque imitation were appreciated on the variety stage, especially at the Palace, where his appearances were all too short. Robb was the son of Mr. James and Mrs. Lucia Harwood. His father was said to have been the original impersonator of Dick Turpin on the production of that piece as an equestrian drama at Astley's. Later the elder Harwood joined Irving to play small parts at the Lyceum, where his daughters Kate and Florence acted as the children in the revival in 1879 of Charles the First. The deceased gentleman's brother, John Harwood, now at the Playhouse, also served as a lad in Irving's Lyceum company.

Robb appeared as a child at the old Holborn Theatre and at the old Queen's, in Long Acre. On arriving at man's estate he had a long provincial experience both in stock companies and on tour, gaining that complete knowledge of technique which was as the breath of life to the budding artist twenty years ago. He first made his mark in London at the Haymarket in the part of Mr. Goldspink in The Dancing Girl, in which piece he commenced an artistic association with Sir Herbert Tree that spread over many years. One of his earliest successes was in the part of the old actor in Sydney Grundy's comedy, in five acts, An Old Jew, produced by Sir John (then Mr.) Hare at the Garrick on Jan. 6, 1894. The character lived.

Eccles may be said to have been a favourite part with the deceased actor, and though superfine critics thought the impersonation somewhat highly-coloured, there was little doubt of the originality of the conception, the sharpness of its outline, or the humorous nature of the old reprobate's snatches of moral philosophy. Mr. Harwood played the part on tour with Mr. Arthur Bourchier. He was in the cast of The Last of the Dandies produced at His Majesty's Theatre on Oct. 24, 1901, when he played so admirably the part of the valet, Octavio; and during the short run of Em'ly, an unsuccessful adaptation by T. Gideon Warren and Ben Landeck of "David Copperfield," produced at the Adelphi on August 1, 1903, he was the Uriah Heep—a notable success. He was in the original cast of Business is Business, the English adaptation of Octave Mirbeau's play Les Affaires sont Les Affaires, creating Professor Gruggh in the production at His Majesty's on May 13, 1905; and one remembers with pleasure the sketch of the Mantalini-like husband in The Little French Milliner at the Avenue in 1902. He took the place of Mr. Gerald Du Maurier in the revival (December, 1908) of Peter Pan, wherein his striking success as Captain James Hook—his last part—will be a cherished recollection. When the youngsters become greybeards they will still remember the rich humour of this most delightful pirate, so perfectly represented by the deceased comedian.

The funeral took place at Kensal Green Cemetery on Thursday in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. Beautiful wreaths were sent from the Duke of York's Theatre, Mr. Charles Frohman, His Majesty's Theatre, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Courtice Pounds, Mr. Austin, of the Actors' Orphanage Fund, Playhouse Theatre, and Friends of the Savage Club.

GEORGE ALEXANDER AT DENMARK HILL.

Mr. George Alexander, the chairman of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee of the London County Council, formally opened an extension to Ruskin Park, Denmark-hill, Camberwell, on Saturday afternoon. The extension is about 12 acres in area, and is to be used as a playing field. The cost of acquiring the land was £23,685. Half of this was contributed by the London County Council, and the remainder was raised by the Lambeth, Camberwell, and Southwark Borough Councils and by a local committee.

Mr. Alexander, in opening the extension, said he was especially grateful that that honour had been conferred upon him, because he had the great privilege and honour of Professor Ruskin's acquaintance. Ruskin encouraged him very early in his career, while his niece, Mrs. Arthur Severn, and her husband, Mr. Arthur Severn—who he was glad to see present that day—he counted among his oldest and dearest friends. That park was a very fitting memorial to Ruskin, for they could not think of him without remembering his love of nature, his desire that everyone should be within the reach of some of nature's finest lessons and some illustrations of her power. He (Mr. Alexander) asked Mr. Severn on their way down, what was Ruskin's favourite game, and Mr. Severn told him that he thought it was "battledore and shuttlecock." Mr. Severn also told him a story of a visit Ruskin paid to one of the ladies' colleges at Oxford. He asked them many questions as to their work, and then inquired what their exercises were, because he said he thought, if possible, exercises should combine something useful. The young ladies went through a catalogue of their games, and Ruskin said, "They are all very good, but I will tell you a better thing still, and that is, carry coals every day up to the top of the house."

"JUST A WIFE."

Just a Wife, a drama in four acts, by Eugene Walter, was produced on the 1st inst. at the Belasco Theatre, New York, with Miss Charlotte Walker, wife of the author, in the leading rôle. The characters chiefly concerned are a man and his wife and—the other woman. Once again the wife is pitted against the mistress. But in this case the two women are not at daggers drawn for the possession of the man. The author of Paid in Full and The Easiest Way has given what at first sight appears to be the situation that playgoers know so well a new, or, at least, an unhackneyed twist, and has allowed the wife to view the situation dispassionately, and even to exhibit a sort of sympathy and tolerance towards her rival, while her philosophy does not prompt her to throw herself into her husband's arms "in spite of all." Mr. Walter has written a serious, thoughtful play, in which some of the "problems of the day" are discussed interestingly, if somewhat lengthily and inconclusively.

John Emerson has a wife who wedded him simply for his money, while he married her to hush the scandal which had arisen from his illicit relations with another woman, and which threatened to prove an obstacle to his preferment. Mary Ashby, the wife, was an aristocratic, but impoverished Southern belle, to whom the luxuries of life were a necessity. She understood the nature of the compact which she and John Emerson made, and she has had all that she bargained for. Neither one has intruded upon the privacy of the other, this being the understanding between them. Moreover, Emerson has not discarded his mistress, and his wife knows it. After six years of this sort of existence, the latter is beginning to realise what the situation means to her. The posture of circumstances is disclosed in a conversation between the wife and her younger brother, who rebels at the state of affairs, and wants to help her. They are surprised to receive a visit from Emerson, who has not been "home" for several years. He explains that he is trying to elude some process-servers. As a matter of fact, he is running away from the other woman. And at a moment when the Emersons and their guests are peacefully assembled in the home, and Mrs. Emerson and her brother are singing, Eleanor Lathrop, Emerson's mistress, descends upon the scene like a bolt from the blue. Tense moments these, and the audience holds its breath, while Emerson and his wife stand staring at the intruder. The scene is the strongest of the play, and it is admirably acted by Miss Charlotte Walker as the wife and Miss Amelia Gardner as Eleanor Lathrop. It is the wife that breaks the awful silence. "You are Miss Lathrop," she says. "Let me take your bag and show you to your room." The woman gasps with astonishment and tries to speak; but in these conventional words there is so much dignity and insistence that she obeys without a word. Everyone breathes freely, but Emerson is scandalised and angry. His brother-in-law has to be forcibly restrained from assaulting him, and Mrs. Emerson is the only one who keeps cool. Presently Emerson and his mistress "have it out" with each other. She claims a share in his life because she has helped him in his business. But he declares that the debt has been paid. After that there is a scene between the two women. It is not a violent scene, but just a spirited discussion. The wife is not unsympathetic, but she insists that no matter what her rival claims, no matter what part she may have played in the man's life, the end has come. Mrs. Emerson has been listening and has heard her husband say so. "Don't you believe that talk about intellectual affinity," she says; "there is only one tie between a man and a woman, and that is the tie of sex." When they part there is apparently no feeling of enmity between them. Mrs. Emerson is a dignified and highly intelligent woman, and her eyes have been opened to her husband's point of view. Women are creatures to be bent to a man's will. This domination, he says, in effect, has existed in the general scheme of things from the beginning and will continue to the end. In discarding his companion of many years he betrays a one-sided view of her sex, which she controverts in the discussion which follows. With her clearer understanding has come a softening of the hatred she was inclined to feel towards her rival. Towards the husband, who is now free, she will advance no closer than before. As they part all she says is this: "When you can meet me with love in your heart you may come back. I won't say that I shall be waiting for you, but your chance will be as good as any other man's."

As Mary Emerson Miss Walker bore herself with a womanly charm that was irresistibly appealing, and her embodiment found great favour in the eyes of the audience; Mr. Edmund Breese gave a forceful and dignified portrayal of John Emerson; and Miss Amelia Gardner played the part of Eleanor Lathrop most effectively. Mr. Walter's previous plays were praised for their directness. This one has been criticised because it lacks that quality. On the whole, however, it is a clever and interesting contribution to the drama of to-day, and will doubtless enjoy the success that it deserves.

STEINWAY HALL.

Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay and Mr. Harcourt Williams's second matinée at Steinway Hall on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 17, proved very successful. Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay recited two short pieces by James Whitcomb Riley, "Like his Mother used to make" and "Nothin' to say," a widowed father's reflections when his only daughter asks his consent to her marriage. Miss Mackinlay, who delivered both these admirably, was associated with Mr. Williams in "Dialogue from Plato" (Austin Dobson), and the same author's "A Sonnet in Dialogue." Miss Mackinlay also displayed much humour in her own clever little sketch "Cornelia Jane," and for the encore gave a boy's lively remarks on "My Mother." The first part of the programmge concluded with the gloomy work of Maeterlinck, "The Death of Tintagiles," recited by Mr. Harcourt Williams with considerable power and dramatic effect. The second part of the recital was devoted to Austin Dobson's Proverbs in Porcelain, in which Miss Mackinlay and Mr. Williams appeared in costumes of the eighteenth century. The Ballad à la Mode was cleverly acted by Miss Mackinlay as the Countess, and the Baron (her cousin and suitor) by Mr. Williams. The audience were also greatly pleased with The Cap that Fits ("Qui sème d'épines n'aille déchaux"), the three characters of Hortense, Armande, and Monsieur Loyal being brightly acted by Miss May Congdon, Miss Mackinlay, and Mr. Harcourt Williams. In The Metamorphosis ("On s'enrichit quand on dort") Mr. H. Williams played the Abbé Tirili, who, unable to find a correct rhyme to his couplet, falls asleep, while Monsieur L'Etoile (Mr. Frank Cochrane) enters, finds the paper, and completes the verse to his own satisfaction, but not the Abbé Tirili, who, on awakening, reads the addition with disgust. Other proverbs enacted were The Song out of Season, the vocalist being Mr. Frank Cochrane; The Secrets of the Heart, in which Miss May Congdon and Miss Mackinlay appeared; and Good-night, Babette, played by Mr. Williams and Miss Mackinlay. Mr. Frank Cochrane sang "The Lute Player" (Frances Allitsen) with ability, and was also heard in "My Captain," a song of Cyril Scott; while Mr. German Reed rendered excellent service as accompanist and at the spinet, which gave quite the old-world spirit to the Proverbs in Porcelain.

THE Queen and suite were present at the performance of The Village Romeo and Juliet at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on Tuesday night.

THE LATE FRED C. SOMERFIELD.

We briefly recorded last week the death of Mr. Fred C. Somerfield, which occurred on the 15th inst., at the Warrington Infirmary. The funeral took place on Saturday, from the deceased's home, Fernhead Lodge, where he had lived for the past four years, and he was laid to rest in the little churchyard close by. The respect in which Mr. Somerfield was held was shown by the number of those present at the graveside. The mourners included the widow, his mother, sister Amy, and four brothers, William, Frank, Tom, and George, together with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mason, Mrs. Ormerod (of the Accrington Theatre), Mr. Fair, Mr. Booth, Mr. James Mason, Mr. Will Mason, Mr. Newton, Dr. Bennett, Mr. Howard, Mr. Ludlow, Mr. Charles B. Fountaine (Royalty Theatre, Chester), and Mr. Charles E. Warne (manager Tyrant company). The following acted as bearers: Mr. C. B. Fountaine, Mr. C. E. Warne, Mr. Mather, and Mr. James Mason. The coffin was made of solid oak, with heavy brass mountings.

Among many beautiful wreaths was one from Mrs. Somerfield, composed of lilies and violets, made in the shape of a harp with a broken chord. The following also sent wreaths: His mother, Sister Amy and Dick, and his brothers Frank, Tom, George, William, and Lizzie; the Tyrant company, Geoffrey Langdon's Wife company, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mason, Master Eric Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Ormerod, Mr. J. E. Barnes, E. and H. Page and family and Mrs. Clarkson, Mr. McMasters, Mr. Chas. B. Fountaine, Charlie and Alice Warne, Maudie Grayson, J. G. Vane, Mr. and Mrs. C. Whelan, Mr. Paul Beckett, Maud and Z. Horlington, Bobby Coleman, Joe Bernstein and Grace Bernstein, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mason, Dr. Bennett, and a few friends at Padgate.

The late Mr. Somerfield entered the profession nineteen years ago, joining The Curate, and playing a minor part for some little time, until he eventually took the leading part. He also fulfilled engagements with the following companies and plays: Rass Chaffis' Parson Thorn, The Maid of the Alps,

THE LATE MR. FRED C SOMERFIELD.

Miss Emma Rainbow's plays, Jack of Hearts, The Grip of Iron, Ronald Grahame's Mankind, &c. He joined Miss Marie Dagmar thirteen years ago, playing the lead in Woman's Victory, followed by Prince Strogroff in A Life's Revenge, and parts in The Tyrant and Geoffrey Langdon's Wife. His achievements included that of authorship, and among the many plays that he wrote were The Tyrant and Geoffrey Langdon's Wife, which are now on tour. Mr. Somerfield had been far from well during the past few years, and only acted for short periods for some time past. Previous to his death he was in the Sheffield Hospital, and was removed from there to the Warrington Infirmary, where he expired, his wife, mother, and his brother Frank being in close attendance during the latter part of his illness.

MR. BLACKMORE AND HIS CLIENTS.

The following letter, showing Mr. Herbert Blackmore's astuteness and attention to the interests of his clients, was read by counsel in the course of the hearing of the case of Dance v. Smith, in the King's Bench Division this week:—

"DEAR SIR,—As you were present in your official capacity as secretary of Waldorf Productions, Ltd., you will recollect I asked Mr. Henry Smith for a copy of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, so that I could find out if they contained any clause as to the minimum sum upon which the company could proceed with the scheme. Consequently, now that I have read the document, and found there is no mention of any stated sum other than the capital, I write this to inform the company of their omission, but to say it is quite good enough for me and all of us to have had Mr. Smith's statement that all contracts entered into will be carried out by himself should sufficient money not be subscribed by his friends. And as he made this statement I feel sure he will see the wisdom of my desire being carried out, viz., that you, as secretary, enter in the minutes of the meeting held to-day the fact that he will carry this out. You see I am rather particular that I can in no way be considered to have misled any of my clients as to their contracts being valid. And at the next Board meeting I wish to bring forward a resolution to the effect that I am in no way responsible for any contracts entered into previous to my joining the board. Another item that is necessary for the agenda is that the company recognises the fact that I am interested in making engagements for it, and that I consequently receive commission on their salaries. That is why I only wish to be a temporary director. All this must strike you as too much detail; but from the fact of my always having such voluminous notes to enter in my minute book of the T.M.A., I find that so much trouble is saved when reference to the minute book is necessary, by my having made these correct minutes.—Yours truly,

"HERBERT BLACKMORE.

"To W. McNicol Turner, Esq., secretary, Waldorf Theatre, W.C. Nov. 2, 1908."

MRS. MARK KINGHORNE has engaged Miss Carlotta Zerbini to play Mrs. McTurtle on her forthcoming tour of Mother-in-Law.

THE Russian stage has lost its leading lady actress by the death of Mme. Kommisarzhevskaya, who died at Taskkent, while on tour with her company. Death was due to blood poisoning supervening on smallpox. Mme. Vera Fedorovna Kommisarzhevskaya was the daughter of a famous Russian singer, and was born in 1862. She was an accomplished actress, and was credited with a remarkable gift for portraying the subtleties of human psychology. She chiefly distinguished herself in the plays of Ostrofsky and Sudermann.

WALDORF PRODUCTIONS, LTD.

In the King's Bench Division on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Jelf and a special jury, Mr. George Dance sued Mr. Henry Richard Smith for alleged fraudulent representation. The charges were denied by the defendant.

Mr. Rufus Isaacs, K.C., Mr. McCardie, and Mr. St. John Field (instructed by Messrs. Langton and Passmore) appeared for the plaintiff, while Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., and Mr. Holman Gregory (instructed by Mr. W. Vant) represented the defendant, who was manager of the Popular Playhouse, Ltd., which was a company started mainly to carry on theatrical enterprises at the Lyceum. The action was to recover the sum of £3,000, which Mr. Dance said defendant had induced him to part with by making fraudulent representations. In September, 1908, Mr. Ralph Hall Caine came with the defendant to see Mr. Dance. There was some conversation about a theatrical enterprise to be started at the Waldorf Theatre, and Mr. Dance was asked by the defendant to put £3,000 into the concern, the Waldorf Productions, Ltd., and in reply to questions was told that there was at least £3,500 actually found, and that it was expected that Messrs. Chappell, who were interested in a musical comedy called The Antelope, which it was proposed to produce, were also expected to subscribe. The capital of the company, the plaintiff was informed, was £10,000, and that it was all working capital, and he found the £3,000 which he was asked to do. Of that sum £500 was for 500 preference shares and £2,500 for certain rights in connection with the bars and refreshments at the theatre. The only money which actually existed to represent the £3,500 mentioned by defendant was £3,000 advanced by him to the company in order that they might pay out what was necessary to start the concern. In order to take up the lease of the Waldorf Theatre from the Law Guarantee Trust Society Mr. Smith had to pay £1,500. That £3,000 was neither subscribed capital nor in any way an asset of the company, but was advanced on the understanding that out of the first moneys subscribed to the company the defendant's advances were to be repaid. Instead of there being £3,500 working capital, as far as could be ascertained the money Mr. Dance put in was intended to be used, and was used, to pay Mr. Smith.

In January, 1909, there was a petition to wind up the company. The only subscribed capital was £52, of which £50 was put into the concern by Mr. Blackmore, who was a director, and £1 each was paid for shares by the defendant and his father, who were also directors.

Mr. George Dance deposed that when the defendant told him that the capital of the company was £10,000, he remarked that it was not much on which to run musical comedy. Defendant replied: "£10,000 is quite enough. When Carpenter and I took the Lyceum we started it on £200 or £300."

The hearing was continued on Wednesday, when Mr. Dance stated that his feelings towards the defendant changed after he had had an interview with Mr. Ralph Hall Caine. What really annoyed him was that he heard from Mr. Hall Caine, two days after he—Mr. Dance—had paid his money over to Mr. Smith that the £3,500 said to be subscribed was a myth.

Mr. Thomas Cecil Wray, theatrical manager, in the employment of the plaintiff, stated that he was present at an interview between the plaintiff and the defendant, and that he heard the latter inform the former that already £3,500 had been subscribed for shares of the company, and that with the exception of £100 or so the whole of the capital of the company would be available for working expenses.

The further hearing was adjourned till Thursday, when Mr. H. Blackmore, theatrical manager, examined by Mr. Isaacs, said he applied for and obtained fifty shares in the Waldorf Productions, Ltd. Defendant told him that the capital of the concern was to be £10,000. On an occasion when he was at the theatre he heard an angry discussion between Mr. Dance and Mr. Smith. He heard plaintiff ask defendant about the amount of capital subscribed, and accuse him of having used his (plaintiff's) money for the purpose of running the theatre. Defendant emphatically denied that plaintiff's money had been used for that purpose, or that in any way he had guaranteed a certain sum.

Mr. William Boosey, managing-director of Messrs. Chappell and Co., Ltd., musical publishers, said he had two or three new comic operas, and Mr. Smith and Mr. Ralph Hall Caine chose The Antelope as most suitable for their theatre. He invested £500 in the company a few days before the piece was produced.

The plaintiff's case having closed, and Mr. Marshall Hall having addressed the jury,

Mr. Henry Richard Smith, in answer to Mr. Holman Gregory, said he was managing-director of the Lyceum Theatre. During 1907 he and Mr. Carpenter achieved considerable success at the Lyceum with popular prices, and it struck him that the same might be done at the Waldorf with musical comedy. In running a theatre the letting of the bars was a very important consideration. The rent of £30 a week for the bars at the Waldorf (Mr. Dance paid £2,500 as rent in advance for eighteen months or two years) was very cheap. Witness told Mr. Dance at an early interview that he had no capital in the company, but that when the company was completed he had promises of about £3,000. "Mr. Dance said," defendant went on, "that he was prepared to come in if I got the lease of the theatre for twenty-one years, and if I remained managing-director, as he had confidence in me. He agreed to come in for £2,500 on account of the rent of the bars, and £500 in share capital. When the company was wound up witness found £1,000 under a verbal undertaking to pay the artists.

A settlement was arrived at, Mr. Smith consenting to a verdict for the plaintiff for £3,000, and Mr. Dance withdrawing the charges of fraud.

The jury accordingly entered a verdict for the plaintiff for £3,000, and judgment was entered for that amount with costs.

THE story of Miss Joanna Baillie's play of De Montfort, some time since revived at Drury Lane Theatre, is founded on an interesting trial for murder, in the last century, of a gentleman who resided near the sea-shore, and with whom the hapless victim had been intimately acquainted in his youthful days. On the evening of the murder, the gentleman (whose name in regard to his family shall be a secret, and whom therefore I shall call Mr. B.), had been surprised by the entrance of his old comrade, who had been shipwrecked on that part of the coast. Mr. B. welcomed him with apparent cordiality and delight, and invited him to spend a month or two at his hospitable mansion. The guest consented, and next morning was found murdered in his bed. Mr. B. was arrested and tried, but nothing could be proved against him, as he had the gout at the time, until his servant deposed, that, at midnight she heard his door open, and in two or three minutes afterwards, that of the stranger. On this he confessed; and acknowledged, that, what prompted him to commit the horrid deed was that once at school the other had contended against him for a prize and won it. He was executed shortly after.

THE King and Queen and Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia were present at the performance of Elektra at the Royal Opera Covent Garden on Saturday night.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

Hardly strong enough for a night's entertainment were the four playlets placed before the King's audiences this week. At the same time, they were useful to show the powers of Mr. Courtice Pounds and his merry little company. First on the programme was Cox and Box, the famous triumviretta by F. C. Burnand and Arthur Sullivan. It appears a trifle old-fashioned now, but there are opportunities for some comic acting interspersed with a few songs and choruses. Mr. Sam Walsh made a laughable Cox, the hatter, and Mr. Courtice Pounds developed very comical acting as Box, the printer. As Mrs. Bouncer, the lodging-house keeper, Miss B. Gaston Murray acted with great energy and sang successfully. An interlude—songs at the piano by Mr. T. C. Sterndale Bennett—followed. His songs were enthusiastically received, and we should imagine that a bright career is in store for Mr. Sterndale Bennett as an entertainer. The new playlet, The Idol's Eyes, by Mr. Burford Delannoy, with incidental music by Mr. Harold Samuel, was productive of a few thrills, and met with unqualified approval. Mr. Sam Walsh made a bustling Dr. Grain, and Miss Myrtil Blades acted very prettily as his wife. Mr. Garrick Quin as Flash Jim was the traditional burglar, and Moll was vigorously and smartly played by Miss Mary Forbes. Mr. Courtice Pounds rendered Roger Bellingham, the owner of the Idol's eyes, with much capability. His song "On the road to Mandalay" met with demands for repetition. With a view to variety, the Kitchen Scene from Twelfth Night was given, Mr. Courtice Pounds repeating his successful performance of Feste, the clown. Rightly played in the spirit of pure farce, the scene occasioned great merriment. Mr. Kenyon Musgrave was excellent as Sir Toby Belch, Mr. Stanley Lathbury as Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Mr. Sam Walsh as Malvolio, and Miss B. Gaston Murray as Maria, all proving proficient in their work. In another interlude Mr. Sam Walsh, at the piano, recited Kipling's "Voyage of the Camperdown" with skilful expression. The musical play by Keble Howard, entitled Charles, His Friend, which has proved so popular at the variety theatres, wound up the evening's entertainment. Mr. Courtice Pounds's versatility is well shown here in the several characters he undertakes, and it is needless to say that the audience were highly amused. Miss B. Gaston Murray was a fascinating Mrs. Gilliland, while Mr. Sam Walsh was a clever Peter Ward, stockbroker. Miss Mary Forbes made a pert Barbara.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Musical Play,
"KING OF CADONIA."

The pantomime season concluded here on Saturday night last after a most successful run since Christmas. There was a full house on Monday to welcome Mr. Frank Curzon's company in King of Cadonia, and it was abundantly evident that the "Marlburians" were completely satisfied with the fare provided for the start of the new season. The play is mounted in lavish style, and beautifully dressed. A long acquaintance with the part of the Duke of Alasia enables Mr. Bertie Wright to extract the utmost humour from it, and his clever dancing adds greatly to the merit of his performance. Nothing could be smarter or more artistic than Miss Alice Moffat's Princess Marie. She is an artist to the finger-tips, and soon becomes an immense favourite, her musical numbers being especially well received, as they deserve to be. Mr. J. Warren-Foster, whose fine, manly presence exactly suits the part of Alexis, is able and natural; Mr. Jack Martin gives a notably clever delineation of General Bonski; and Captain Laski, in the hands of Mr. Cameron Carr, acquires a position of prominence. Mr. Hartley Summers is an amusing Panix; and Laborde is very creditably undertaken by Mr. Cecil Tresilian. Mr. Edward Thirlby displays all the resource of a clever and experienced comedian, and keeps the house in continual good humour as Bran. Miss Molly Keen contributes a vivacious study of Militza, her acting, singing, and clever dancing having delightful freshness. Miss Florence Lelgarde is effective as the Duchess; Miss Olga Marsden is a particularly pleasing Stephanie; and the Misses Nellie Cambray (Nattine), Mabel Hirst (Ottaline), and Winifred Sampson (Fridoline) form a bevy of beautiful ladies-in-waiting to the Princess Marie. Mr. M. C. Forde is the courteous business-manager for Mr. Frank Curzon, and Mr. John Wigley, the capable stage-manager, ably assisted by Mr. Leslie Winter. Mr. H. R. Mathews ably conducts.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Drama, by Hall Caine, entitled
"THE CHRISTIAN."

The Lyceum version of this powerful play is being presented at the Kennington Theatre this week by Mr. Wentworth Croke. It is excellently staged and acted, and was received with warm approval on Monday. The outstanding feature of the production is the impressive, attractive, and forcible acting of Mr. Henry Wolston, in the part of the Hon. John Storm. Father Lamplugh is brilliantly played by Mr. John Hastings Batson. He is quite the embodiment of the champion and expounder of real Christian virtues. Miss Gladys Purnell is charming and spirited as Glory Quayle. Archdeacon Wealthy is ably enacted by Mr. Charles E. Dering. Mr. Fred Morgan gives a remarkably strong impersonation of Lord Robert Ure. Horatio Drake is cleverly sketched by Mr. Wilfred Noy. The character of Polly Love is effectively and pathetically sustained by Miss Gladys Vernon. The warm-hearted Mrs. Callendar is well presented by Miss Mollie Hayden. Lighter characters are ably sustained by Miss Harriet Russell as Mother Kent, and Mr. W. S. Carter as Bert. The rôles of Black Meg and her sister Jennie, inhabitants of the "under world," are finely undertaken by Miss Lizette Cardozo and Miss Alice Leigh respectively. The disappointed father, Lord Storm, and the aged Parson Quayle are satisfactorily represented by Messrs. Royce Milton and Arthur Maskell. The minor rôles are also adequately depicted. The business-manager for Mr. Wentworth Croke is Mr Frank Brandon, and the duties of stage-manager are allotted to Mr. Louis Fergusson.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Drama, entitled
"THE BEGGAR GIRL'S WEDDING."

With King Pantomime dethroned, Mr. Fred Melville inaugurated his dramatic season most auspiciously with one of Mr. Walter Melville's chief successes, The Beggar Girl's Wedding, and a capital send-off was given on Monday evening. The play has the merit of holding the spectators' attention throughout, and was followed with deep interest. Mr. Otto Minster very ably impersonates Jack Cunningham, who ultimately marries the beggar girl, and in this latter rôle Miss Maggie Duncan shows delicacy and renders the arduous part in an interesting way that demanded warm recognition. Mr. Herbert Goddard is effective as the outspoken lawyer Robert Grimshaw; Mr. Charles Barclay gives us a clever character sketch of the physician Dr. Milbank; and Mr. Herbert Morgan is evidently at home in the part of Gilbert Lindsay. Mr. Herbert Lloyd as Dicky Storm proves himself a prime favourite with the audience. The low comedy element is capitally sustained by Mr. B. Elton as the lawyer's clerk Davis, and Miss Daisy Meynard as Miss Tina Torkington; Miss Olive Warne depicts with great skill the wiles of the society lady Maud Villiers, and Miss Lily Duncker is very engaging as Jack Cunningham's sister Elsie. Miss Anita Playfair, a typical London slavey as Lizzie; Mr. Harry Playfair as Joe; and Mr. Horace Kenny as Dodger deserve notice. Mr. David Cartwright is a stately and impressive Rev. Mr. Melsom. The Beggar Girl's Wedding is presented with every care, scenery, dresses, and mounting being all that can be desired. Mr. Newman Maurice is the efficient manager for Mr. Fred Melville.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, entitled
"THE CINGALEE."

After two weeks of drama, an acceptable change is made in the programme at the Alexandra Theatre this week by the presentation of the successful musical comedy from Daly's Theatre, The Cingalee. The company, under the direction of Mr. Haldane Crichton, works admirably together, and, aided by an excellent chorus, a smooth and level performance results. Mr. Jack Crichton, who has also "produced" the piece, works unflaggingly in the part of Chambhuddy Ram. The vocal contributions of Miss Florence Watson, who appears as Nanoya, meet with considerable favour; and the pomposity of Boobhamba is amusingly presented by Mr. Douglas Munro. As the Hon. Harry Vereker Mr. Arthur Cartwright makes quite an acceptable musical comedy hero, acting as well as he sings; Bobby Warren has an alert and spirited representative in Mr. Scott Cullen; and an entertaining sketch of Sir Peter comes from Mr. F. W. Ford. Miss Pauline Hague appears as Lady Patricia Vane with complete success; and Misses Winnie Murray, Mercy June, Violet Cowen, and Edie Burton deserve a word of praise for their work as the four tea girls. The Peggy Sabine of Miss Ida Ernest is a tower of strength to the production; whether as singer, dancer, or actress Miss Ernest is equally successful, and the all-round excellence of her performance causes it to stand out vividly. The orchestra and chorus are under the direction of Mr. Roland Wood. A dance is introduced in the second act, but its omission would not detract from the attraction of the show.

DALSTON THEATRE.

The second week of the much-appreciated visit of Mr. J. W. Turner's opera company to the Dalston Theatre this season is noteworthy for even larger audiences than the first. The commencing opera was Verdi's Il Trovatore, the artists appearing being Mr. F. J. Hargrave, Mr. Frank Clarke, Mr. Harry Reynolds, Mr. P. Newton, Miss Beatrice Hill, Miss Doris O'Brien, and Miss Sarah Williams. A complete success was achieved on Tuesday evening by a most efficient performance of Maritana. Mr. J. W. Turner met with a cordial welcome when he appeared in the character of Don César de Bazan, rendering once more the famous song "Let me like a soldier fall" with a degree of really surprising vigour. Mr. Tom Griffiths was a capital Don José. In a duet and for his rendering of "In happy moments" he met with an enthusiastic encore. Mr. Harry Reynolds as Charles II., King of Spain, sustained the dignity of the part, and his singing was cultured. Mr. P. Newton was delightfully quaint as the Marquis de Montefiore, and Miss Grace Parish looked remarkably well as the Marchioness. Mr. A. Fisher was well placed as the Captain of the Guard. Miss Jessie Dennis met with a most friendly reception in the part of Lazarillo, being persistently encored for the ever-popular song "The mansions of the blessed." As Maritana Miss Sarah Williams achieved a pronounced success. The song "The harp in the air" was rendered with artistic taste, and "Scenes that are brightest" secured for the singer quite an ovation. Mr. T. Lawton conducted. The Bohemian Girl, Carmen, Tannhäuser, and Faust are also in the repertory.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the comedy entitled
"THE CHORUS LADY."

Visitors to the Notting Hill Gate theatre this week are regaled with the celebrated American play, in which Miss Rose Stahl was "the big screech" at the Vaudeville. Mr. William Mollison, whose company are playing the piece, himself essays the rôle of the unpleasantly heartless libertine Dick Crawford, and he mitigates somewhat its repulsiveness by his bonhomie and sangfroid. Miss Annie Hughes enters heart and soul into the part of the vulgar but right-hearted Patricia O'Brien, and her emotional outbursts in Acts 3 and 4 hold the audience spellbound. Her "business" in the dressing-room scene shows a lively sense of the requisities of the lighter side of the character. Mr. Henry Deas is worthy of all praise for his very excellent and convincing performance as Dan Mallery. Miss Elsie Vron-Neville acts with a sense of character as the foolish, wayward, shiftless Nora O'Brien, and Miss Josephine Woodward is delightful as the good, homely, honest, Hibernian matron Mrs. O'Brien. Mr. Harold Neville make much of his small part of Patrick O'Brien, and of the others Miss Agnese D'Aragon is extremely amusing and lifelike in her portraiture of the bibulous wardrobe woman Georgie Adams Coote and Miss Mabel Durrant does well as the show girl Sylvia Simpson. Miss Hilda Donn and others render good service as chorus girls. Mr. Archie W. Chappell is business manager and Mr. Harold Neville stage manages the show.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Play, entitled
"THE FLAG LIEUTENANT."

The visit here this week of Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sydney Cooper's company in the above play has proved a strong attraction, and excellent houses have been maintained throughout the week. The piece and its exponents have met with signal favour, a fitting result of a brilliant play excellently interpreted. In the title-rôle Mr. Edgar Kent gives an amusing presentation of the man who is never taken seriously, even by himself. He develops the character in the most natural manner, and his acting throughout is always convincing. Mr. George Mallett is responsible for a sound and well thought out delineation of Vice-Admiral Sir Berkeley Wynne, and Mr. Vincent Fletcher is a capable John Penrose. Mr. Montague Love enacts Major William Thesiger with a quiet sincerity that is well in keeping with the character, and Mr. George Percy gives an able rendering of Surgeon Walter Crutchley. As the two midshipmen Horatio Hood and Edward Dormer Lee Messrs. Hugh Wakefield and Olaf Hytten give smart and concise impersonations of their respective parts. Mr. Lionel Isted is a quaint General Gough-Bogle, and Mr. John Wheatman does well as Michael Palliser. Minor parts are well played by Mr. John Cross as Christopher Neate, Mr. Edward Christopher as Colonel McLeod, and Mr. Gilbert Prentice as Captain Munro. Miss Florence Jackson as Mrs. Cameron looks well and acts with womanly tenderness and simplicity. As charming Lady Hermione Wynne is seen in Miss Dorothy Ripley, who contributes a graceful portrayal. Miss Winifred Vallant plays the part of Viola Hood with quiet assurance and charm of manner; and Miss Stella Leigh contributes an excellent character study as Mrs. Gough Bogle. Miss Ada Clarke lends a dignified air to the character of Lady Dugdale.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Play, entitled
"LUCKY DURHAM."

This well-acted and handsomely-mounted play will appeal to all those lovers of the late Wilson Barrett, "whose name is legion," and to all who care to see a drama of human interest, strongly played. Mr. Edmund Kennedy, who impersonates the title-rôle, plays with much sincerity and great force. It is an able study of a fine character. Mr. William Calvert acquits himself well in the difficult and thankless part of Lord Mountfallon, and is never other than dignified. As the Hon. Reginald Steighton Mr. Arthur Leigh scores a success. He gives a striking picture of the shiftless youth, and makes his points well. Mr. Charles Wemyss bears himself well as Mr. Vallerton, and gives a good study of the "average man." Mr. F. Elton is satisfactory as Walcombe; and Mr. W. F. Clitherow is very amusing as a type of shady moneylender. Mr. S. Bancroft and Mr. C. Phipps as the Solicitor and Estate Agent are discretion and reliability personified; Miss Dorrie Turner acts with spirit and sincerity as Margaret Steighton; and Miss Francis Wolviston gives a good rendering of her shallow, matchmaking mother, Lady Mountfallon. Miss Florence Tresilian as Helen Vallerton shows tenderness and much dramatic skill; and Miss Nellie Bonser acts Mrs. Durham with quiet and persuasive charm.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Drama, entitled
"THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING."

Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company is again presenting this famous drama, which is followed with interest. Mr. Alfred Paumier repeats his original character of the fighting swordmaster Paul Valmar, and is all that can be desired; Mr. John Nesbitt gives a careful study of the Crown Prince Leopold; Mr. Charles Whitlock makes a good impression as the aristocratic scoundrel Eugene von Strelsburg; Mr. A. E. Winnington Barnes is excellent as the brutal Captain von Scarsbruck; Messrs. James E. Page, St. George Frere, and Algy Spalding form a merry soldierly trio as Sergeant Max, Corporal Otto, and Private Bobbo; Mr. Forbes Harrison is good as Father Gerard; Miss Margaret Brodie realises well the part of Princess Astrea von Strelsburg, and comes through with flying colours; Miss Jessica Black plays merrily as Kathie of the Golden Dragon; Miss Prudence Lawrence is the adventuress Satanella.

THE BRITANNIA.

With a run of eight weeks to its credit, Dick Whittington, the pantomime at the Britannia Theatre, was performed for the last time this season on Saturday evening, before a crowded and appreciative house. With a strong cast, which included that old Britannia favourite Bob Hutt, the whole show went with a swing from start to finish. Packed with songs, smart jokes, and dances, backed up by a full 100 auxiliaries, and aided by the capable pantomimist Mr. J. M. Jones, who appeared as Shellack in the magnificent scene, The Feast of Wealth, the success which attended the pantomime was practically assured from the first day of reopening the theatre on Dec 27. Although on Saturday last the original cast had been somewhat depleted by the absence of Mr. George Rapley, the troupes of dancers, and others, the principals who were left worked hard to keep things going, and were completely successful, as the constant applause indicated. East Londoners notoriously expect plenty for their money, and they get this at Hoxton, for the show lasted from 7 o'clock until close on midnight.

Miss May Beatty makes a splendid Dick, and her renderings of some of the popular pantomime songs were much applauded, the whole house joining in the chorus whenever possible. Miss Ruby Verdi is charming as Alice, and it goes without saying that Messrs. Bob Hutt and Edward Lauri kept the fun going fast and furious as Fitzwarren and Idle Jack respectively. A word must be said in praise of the two "mates," Mr. Will Harris and Mr. Alec Fraser; the former an exceedingly droll comedian, and the latter a smart light comedian, whose song "Don't take me home" was chorussed by the whole assembly. Mr. Jack Hurst as the Cat and Miss Millicent Cooper as King Rat were very popular. Miss Mabel Cameron, in the Scene in China, was much applauded for her excellent singing.

After the interval, Miss May Beatty and Mr. Edward Lauri presented an "operatic protean mélange," entitled In Her Boudoir, in which they played eight distinct characters. Here was plenty of scope for the humour of Mr. Lauri, and the singing of Miss Beatty gained great applause. Later in the evening the audience were treated to a sketch, entitled The Dumb Man of Manchester; Mr. Bob Hutt played the part of the Dumb Man, and Mr. J. M. Jones took the "heavy lead." The acting, however, was powerful, and received much applause. At the conclusion of the performance Mr. Ellis Brammall, the licensee, in a speech complimentary to the company generally, stated that the theatre would be reopened as a variety house (one house a night), and that he hoped to provide a performance which would combine the three prevailing types of entertainment, viz., the theatre proper, variety, and the Bioscope. He was accorded an enthusiastic reception by the Britannia patrons.

The pantomime was run by the Amusements Development Syndicate, Ltd., with Mr. Humphrey E. Brammall as the managing-director.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Frank Price, entitled
"A CHILD OF THE STREETS."

Sir John Graham .....Mr. John Erroll
Lawrence Craigie .....Mr. Leonard Aardale
Lieut. Jack Ainsley ..Mr. Norman H. Tracey
Robert Wallace .....Mr. Charles Freeman
Oscar van Dam .....Mr. Maurice Jones
Ezra Scroggie .....Mr. George Francis
Pomeroy Smith .....Mr. Charles Tolcher
Constable 214D .....Mr. Lewis Rae
Gertrude Graham..Miss Nellie Thorne Hallam
Lorna Carstairs .....Miss Yoxa Summer
Selina Haddock .....Miss Carlotta Blondin
Little Doris .....Little May Renaud
Doris Graham .....Miss Dot Stephens

All the essentials of a popular drama are to be found in A Child of the Streets—an interesting story with plenty of stirring and pathetic situations and incidents and an abundance of really funny comedy relief that especially pleased Monday night's audience at the Lyric, when the play appealed successfully to a delighted audience.

An important engagement for the part of Doris in the latter acts of the play is that of Miss Dot Stephens, the popular musical comedy actress, of The Belle of New York and La Poupée fame. She had full scope for her vocal abilities in the character of the street singer, her expressive rendering of "Mother's Eyes" and other numbers being loudly acclaimed. She realistically depicted the sufferings of the half-starved and ill-treated girl, the scene where she is provided with such a sumptuous meal being very humorous, and her portrayal throughout an excellent one. Another character that enlisted the sympathy of the audience was that of the long-suffering Gertrude, convincingly undertaken by Miss Nellie Thorne Hallam, particularly pathetic being the scene in the first act where she is shown the forged letter, and also where she has to ask her child to choose between grandfather and mother. Her distinct and well-modulated delivery of her lines especially calls for praise, and her performance altogether is a very creditable one. In the unthankful part of Lorna Carstairs Miss Yoxa Summer carefully refrained from making the designing and disappointed woman appear too base, and looked and played the part admirably; and a like remark applies to Mr. Leonard Aardale, who pursued his career of crime in the nonchalant and easy fashion one expects to find in characters of this description. Mr. Charles Freeman was a manly and sincere Robert Wallace, and skilfully indicated his devotion to Gertrude, looking particularly gallant in his Highlander's costume; and Mr. Norman H. Tracy as the reckless young Lieutenant Ainsley was responsible for an excellent portrayal, the actor scoring heavily in the scene where he befriends Doris. The scoundrelly Scroggie was enacted in a grimly humorous style by Mr. George Francis; and Oscar Van Dam as played by Mr. Maurice Jones was a typical vulgar stage Jew. Chiefly responsible for the many comedy interruptions, always welcome, were Mr. Charles Tolcher as Pomeroy Smith and Miss Carlotta Blondin as Selina Haddock, afterwards Mrs. Smith. Screamingly funny was the scene with the bassinette and baby outside the supper rooms; and the wooing in the first act by Selina of Pomeroy was very mirth-provoking. Mr. Tolcher also scored heavily by his clever rendering of a character sang "The Junior Job Lot Club," and the happily-associated and hard-working couple soon became great favourites. The other parts were adequately enacted, and the play was satisfactorily staged.

THE BROADWAY, NEW CROSS.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"A COUNTRY GIRL."

Musical comedy is the attraction this week, and A Country Girl is meeting with a favourable reception, all the well-known numbers being enjoyed and applauded. The acting is excellent, dresses charming, scenery and effects all that can be desired, and the chorus a good one, well trained, and boasting of much personal attraction. Miss Addie Lennard's rendering of Sophie is worthy the highest praise; besides being a charming singer and graceful dancer, she is also a finished actress. Miss Dorothy Arliss is a very pleasing Marjorie Joy. Miss Anna Hickisch is all that can be wished, vocally and histrionically, as Nan; Miss Myfanwy Newell's fine voice is heard to great advantage, and her performance of the Princess is admirable. Miss Marie Greenhouse is a stately Mrs. St. Quintin, and the same remark applies to the Lady Arnot of Miss Vi Small. Lady Anchester has a charming representative in Miss Hilda Darrell. Miss Melba Sharratt as the Nurse, Miss Ena Hamilton as the Milliner, and Miss Madge Reddin as the Indian attendant, are all highly satisfactory. Mr. Coningsby Brierly carries off first honours among the gentlemen, and is a huge favourite; Mr. Percy Everard is a clever actor, and his Sir Joseph Verity is exceedingly good. Mr. J. W. Bruce is a capital Rajah of Bhong; Mr. H. B. Hargreaves is a pleasing Douglas Verity; Mr. C. T. Chapman is an impressive Lord Anchester; Mr. Tom Sheridan is very good as Mummery; and Mr. H. Brean and Mr. M. Jones are well placed as Rube Fairway and the Indian respectively.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 21, Verdi's Opera
"IL TROVATORE."

Cavaliere F. Castellano's Italian company has had good houses all the week here with a classical selection of operas, including two or three of the more modern school, and the audiences have been both critical and appreciative. The company are especially good, both as vocalists and actors, and the well-known numbers received hearty applause. Signora Esposito's fine contralto voice and most dramatic manner at once made a success of her Azucena, and her several duets with Manrico (Signor Barbato) were loudly redemanded; Signor Barbato is gifted with a telling and robust tenor voice of much power: his fine figure was also a great factor of his success. The Leonora of Signora Protti was conspicuous by the excellence of her vocalisation; her aria in the first act was given in a delightful manner, and in the Prison Scene she took full advantage of the strong situations, and scored a decided triumph. Signor Azzolini, with a powerful and agreeable baritone voice, was a great acquisition as the Count of Luna, acting forcibly, but without exaggeration or effort. The well-known number in the Chapel Courtyard was splendidly rendered and vociferously applauded. Signor Quintana was the Ferrando, and his songs and dramatic recitatives were well rendered. Signora Massia as Inez, the confidant of Leonora, capably rendered the music which fell to her part, and Signor Antonini, in the small part of one of Manrico's followers, bore himself well, and sang very creditably. The "Anvil Chorus" in the Gipsy Encampment Scene and the "Miserere" in the Dungeon Scene were most effectively rendered, and the chorus of retainers, nuns, and gipsies were all that could be desired. Signor Wehils presided over a full orchestra of between thirty and forty instrumentalists, and the entire production was successful in the highest degree. As usual, this company present a different work each night, nine operas being given in all.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Pantomime entitled
"THE BABES IN THE WOOD."

After an interval of a few weeks, the successful Christmas pantomime is now succeeded by another which is being presented by Messrs. Levy and Cardwell, and is entitled The Babes in the Wood. The book is by Mr. H. B. Levy, and runs on familiar lines, and the music is by Mr. C. F. Dodds. The story is unfolded in ten scenes, many of which are well executed and effective. The Babes (Leslie and Marjorie) are represented by little Peggy McDonnell and Cissie Wyse respectively, and the noteworthy feature of the pantomime is the clever portrayal submitted by the former, who by her easy and confidential manner proves herself a very engaging and talented little actress. Miss Cissie Wyse also displays ability and is heard to advantage in the Babes duet, "A piece of Dresden china. Miss Marie Lumberg makes a capital Robin Hood, and evokes much applause by her singing of "Do as the soldiers do" and "Seaside." Maid Marion is well undertaken by Miss Winifred Norman, who offers a spirited interpretation, and she is happily suited in the song "Good-bye, Mr. Teddy Bear." Mr. Jimmie Watson as Lucinda Lovejoy is a most diverting Dame, and speedily becomes on good terms with the audience, and imparts much humour to his songs "Tax the batchelors" and "Directoire." Mr. Neil Hardy is also successful as the Baron, and has a good number in "Angel Daddy." Messrs. Graham and Barron are amusing, and cause considerable laughter as the ruffians Willing and Weary; and Miss May Curtis makes a dainty fairy. The cast also includes Mr. A. Hutchinson (Friar Tuck), Mr. Harry Tullett (Grinda), Miss M. Townsend, Miss Annie Brumby, Miss Flo Taylor, and Miss Eva Hopps.

OPERA HOUSE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Farcical Musical Play, entitled
"THE DAIRYMAIDS."

Mr. Jules Richeux has this week secured Mr. Robert Macdonald's well-selected company in The Dairymaids, and highly-appreciative audiences have thoroughly enjoyed the bright music and singing. Mr. Edwin Dodds as Joe Mivens, A.B., proves himself to be a comedian of excellent capabilities, being thoroughly diverting, and he keeps the house in roars of laughter the whole time he is on the stage. He is generously assisted in the fun-making by Miss Edie Martin, who as Eliza is responsible for much merriment. The duet "The Hay-ride" is greatly applauded, as is the song "Christen me Elizabeth." Another duet, "I'd like to meet your father," also catches the ear of the house. Lady Brudenell has a good representative in Miss Mabel Medrow. Miss Dorothy Grasdorff makes a most attractive Peggy, and scores well in the songs "The Sandow Girl" and "Hullo, little stranger!" the latter being several times encored. The light-hearted and breezy Lieut. Sam Brudenell, R.N., is humorously portrayed by Mr. William Spray, who has strong claims on the popular favour. He works hard, and is highly appreciated, and his song "Sea-serpent" goes well; he is also heard to advantage in the duet "A long, long lane" with Peggy. In the rôle of another young officer, Lieut. Frank Meredith, R.N., Mr. Herbert Lugg finds himself most suitably placed; Dr. O'Bryne, R.N., is well and judiciously characterised by Mr. Bernard Vaughan; Miss Kathleen Sinico as Winifred earns the applause she receives for her rendering of "Boy Blue"; Mr. Harry Cottell as Tim Capus affords much pleasure in the song "Dreamland"; and other valuable members of the cast include Miss Kitty Kirwan, Miss Edna Russell, Miss Kathleen Ronayne, Miss Wynne, Miss Doris Hodgson, Mr. J. W. Duval, and Mr. Robert Caradoc.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Musical Fairy Play,
"PINKIE AND THE FAIRIES."

In his desire to cater for all classes, Mr. Fred Fredericks is succeeding melodrama with Pinkie and the Fairies at the Borough Theatre this week, and "juvenile Stratford" will undoubtedly avail itself of witnessing this delightful fairy play. Messrs. Max Monteeole and Angus MacLeod's company is a very efficient one, and the scenery and stage effects are very handsome and appropriate. Among the younger members of the cast Miss Hermione Gingold is a very dainty and sprightly Pinkie, and shows considerable ability; Master C. H. Chappell is boyish, ingenuous, and entertaining as Tommy; the three Elves are very cleverly impersonated by Miss Aileen Faithful, Miss Peggy Rae, and Miss Kathleen Yorke; a funnily pompous Herald is presented by Miss Dolly Summers; and Miss Hetty Kenyon is a prettily dignified Queen of the Fairies. Of the elders, Miss Haidee Gunn plays with artistic drollery as Aunt Imogen; Miss Lucie Evelyn as the prim Aunt Caroline is excellent; and Miss Muriel Alston is a naïve and winsome Molly. Mr. T. P. Haynes's portraiture of the gardener, Mr. Irons, is genial and interesting; Mr. Ribton Haines is admirable as Uncle Gregory; and as the Butcher Mr. S. Williams does well.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

This week Mrs. Ellis Frederick's popular melodrama theatre has forsaken its staple fare for pantomime, Mr. Andie Caine's company in The Babes in the Wood being the attraction. That the novelty of pantomime is appreciated at this, one of the oldest continuously-running theatres in outer London, is evidenced by the excellent business ensuing. The pantomime teems with comedy business, has numberless good songs, and the familiar story is embellished with some excellent scenery. Mr. Andie Caine is always amusing as Dame Anne Chovy, and works indefatigably; the Robbers have humorous and clever representatives in Messrs. Coda and Danton; Mr. Jimmy McGarth is very droll as Jimmy Green; Mr. Wal Kent is well placed as Baron Graball; and Mr. Bert Albert is an excellent Friar Tuck. Miss Alice Digby makes a handsome and active Robin Hood; Miss Lily Brammer acts and sings her way into favour as Maid Marion; Miss Dolly Macalla is admirable as Will Scarlet; Miss Madge Macalla is a prepossessing Margery Daw; Aian-a-Dale is well played by Miss Maud Whittaker; Miss Mabel Beaufort is seen to advantage as Dolly Dene; and the Babes are charmingly impersonated by Miss Dorothy Elliott and Miss Mabel Lucina. Speciality dances are contributed by the Frivols, and the chorus and ballet are under the direction of Mr. Louis Beaufort.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Feb. 21, the Drama, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, entitled
"THE FIRES OF FATE."

A hearty reception was accorded to this piece when it was presented at the Royal County Theatre on Monday by a company under the control of Mr. Vedrenne. The stage pictures presented in the course of the play are amongst the finest ever seen in drama at the Royal County. Miss Ruth Bower presents a remarkably fine portraiture of the young American, Sadie Adams, and Miss Lydia Hayward scores a success as Mrs. Belmont. A favourable impression was created by Miss Gwendolen Floyd in the part of Sadie's aunt. A notably fine delineation was that of Mr. Alfred C. Sandoe as the dragoman Abdulla; and a forceful and convincing picture was given by Mr. Stephen T. Ewart as Captain Egerton. Other rôles were cleverly impersonated by Messrs. H. Vyvyan, E. A. Coventry, C. Francis, Herbert Maule, S. Logan, G. Merrielees, F. Warlock, A. Ansell, D. Bryan, E. Vanderlip, and G. T. Lambert.

DEATH OF J. E. WILKINSON.

The wide circle of friends of Mr. John Edward Wilkinson will learn with regret of his untimely death, which occurred at Northampton on Sunday last. Starting on the first rung of the theatrical ladder as call-boy to J. L. Toole, "Johnnie" steadily worked his way up to a high position in modern comic opera, playing several of the principal parts in D'Oyly Carte's operas at the Savoy Theatre. In Morocco Bound he made a great success as Squire Higgins, which he played for nine years. Another successful achievement in musical plays was his Yarker, the chauffeur, in Butterflies. He has also appeared in drama and comic opera at several of the principal London theatres, at Brighton under the late Mr. Carpenter, of the Lyceum, London, and at most of the important provincial theatres. He proved very successful in South America. Of late years he made a great success at the music halls in musical comedy duologue with Miss Nora Layton.

The funeral took place at the Kingsthorpe Cemetery, Northampton, on Wednesday afternoon. The service was conducted by the Chaplain, the Rev. S. Lack. Wreaths were sent as follows:—"To our Darling Father, from Poppy and Daisy," "To my Dear Father-in-law, from Geoffrey Berwick, and "From his beloved Nora." In addition to the family there were present Mr. E. S. Dunkley, of the Black Lion, St. Giles's-street, who has rendered valuable aid in carrying out the funeral arrangements, and Mr. T. Warren, of Boughton. Amongst the numerous telegrams and letters of sympathy received by Miss Poppy Wilkinson (Mrs. Geoffrey Berwick) was one from Mrs. D'Oyly Carte.

Mr. Frank Lindo's company in Home, Sweet Home is on a welcome return visit to the Grand Opera House, Radcliffe. As Stephen Armitage Mr. Frank Lindo would be difficult to beat; Lucas Lyle has a strong exponent in Mr. Leonard Laurence; Mr. Bert Tench scores heavily as the Hon. Percy; Mr. Harry Belford renders good service as Gaffer; Mr. Sidney Dench deserves a word as the Duke of Ancester; Miss Marion Wakeford is a tender and emotional Joan; and Miss Helene Thomson a lively and vivacious Sybil.

Auguste Van Biene and Son are presenting Man and Wife at the New King's Theatre, Kirkcaldy. Mr. Jerrold Ord as Paul Revere is satisfactory; Mr. George H. Child makes a capital Captain D'Esparre; and the interpretation of Jean is a capital piece of acting by Mr. George Overs. Mr. Henry Compton is a fitting Colonel Labour; Messrs. E. Hall-Eldon and E. Helm promote great mirth as Bimbo and Bambo; Miss Kate Hallam acquits herself most creditably as Marcelle; Miss Marguerite Thorne is equally good as Ruth Revere; and Miss Lucy Fitzroy as Rosette is very funny.

At the New Theatre Royal, Whitehaven, Mr. A. Clifton Alderson's company has fulfilled a three nights' engagement with The Coal King. Mr. Henry Deane was well cast as Tom Roberts; and Mr. A. W. Norman acted with force as Sir Reginald Hartford. Mr. Sam Roberts as Jim was good, and the same may be said of Mr. R. Faulkner as Walter Hartford. Miss W. Love made a pleasing Grace Shirley; and minor characters were well represented. The Gay Gordons is billed for the remaining three nights.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

The King and Queen, Prince and Princess of Prussia, and an enormous audience were present at Covent Garden on Saturday night, Feb. 19, the opening night of Mr. Thomas Beecham's opera season, when Elektra, by Richard Strauss and Hugo von Hofmannsthal, was produced for the first time in England. The opera was given in German, and when Mr. Thomas Beecham appeared to conduct his splendid orchestra he was greeted with rousing cheers in recognition of his courage and enterprise. In the whole range of operatic libretti there is nothing more horrible than the story of Elektra. King Agamemnon is murdered by his wife Klytemnestra and her lover Aegisthens. Orestes, the son of Agamemnon is banished in fear that he might avenge his father's death, and of the two daughters, Elektra and Chrysothemis, Elektra, like her brother, is determined on vengance. Orestes is reported dead, and the ill-concealed joy of Klytemnestra more than confirms Elektra's suspicions, and her gentle sister, Chrysothemis, then agrees to join Elektra in her scheme. The report of Orestes' death is a ruse, and on his return to Elektra he learns the truth, and the gruesome plot ends by Orestes going to the palace, killing both his mother and Aegistheus, and Elektra dancing herself to death in a perfect delirium of frantic triumph. There is no overture and only one scene, A Courtyard in Mykene, and Elektra is given in a single act with no interval. Anything approaching sentiment or charm in such a subject as this opera would be inconsistent, and Strauss, like a true artist, gives us music which, for grim power and passion, is unsurpassed. In the scene between Elektra and Klytemnestra, one of the finest and most dramatic in the opera, the orchestral effects are simply magnificent. There have been sensational statements circulated regarding this orchestra and Strauss's music, but beyond unusual size and power there was nothing grotesque or extravagant in the performance of the orchestra, even at their most stormy moments. How masterly the composer has scored for the orchestra is shown throughout the opera. To every dramatic situation the accompanying music seems a natural outcome, while as the character of Chrysothemis is more gentle and womanly than Elektra, the music allotted to this part is of considerable beauty. As regards the performance on Saturday night all the principal artists deserve great praise. Miss Edyth Walker, a native of New York, nobly sustained the exacting and strenuous part of Elektra. For nearly two hours Miss Walker is acting, singing, and declaiming with immense dramatic power. The physical strain must have been enormous, and it is simply a marvel that her fine voice was not affected, but so far from this being the case, in Elektra's scene with Orestes the composer has written a charming and original air for the heroine, which was beautifully sung by Miss Walker. Frau Von Bahr-Mildenburg proved a superb Klytemnestra, and nothing could be finer than her acting in the great scene, where Elektra almost compels the Queen to a confession of the murder. Excellent also was the Chrysothemis of Miss Frances Rose, and admirable her singing of the music. Herr Weidemann made a dignified Orestes; and the Aegistheus of Mr. D'Oisly also deserves special mention. Mr. Stewart Gardner appeared as the companion of Orestes; and an old and young servant, were ably undertaken by Mr. Veevers and Mr. Byndon-Ayres. The Confidant and Trainbearer were well played by Miss Isabel Bronte and Miss Violet Williams; while the Five Maids were capitally played by the Misses Molly Deane, C. Milestone, Muriel Terry, Gertrude Bloomfield, and Carrie Tubb. The evening was a perfect triumph for Mr. Thomas Beecham, and when all the principal artists were called on over and over again, and a special ovation given to Miss Walker for her heroic efforts, Mr. Beecham and the stage-manager, Herr Wirk, came before the curtain amidst most enthusiastic cheering.

On Monday, the second night of Mr. Thomas Beecham's season, Wagner's Tristan und Isolde was given in German, and attracted a large audience. Fräulein Fasshender made her first appearance in the part of Isolde, and gave a reading instinct with womanly feeling and poetic expression, even if she partly failed to present the more dramatic side of Wagner's charming heroine. The Tristan of Herr Urlus had no special features beyond careful singing, while his treatment of the character was somewhat cold. Towards the close of the opera, however, both vocalists greatly improved. Although the part of Brangane is seldom sung by a soprano, Miss Perceval Allen's pure toned and sympathetic voice made the part very attractive. An excellent Kurvenal was forthcoming in Herr Weidemann, who proved so successful as Orestes in the performance of Elektra on the first night of the season. The Melot of Mr. M. D'Oisly also had many excellent points. Mr. Kaufmann's King Mark was only moderately successful and lacking in dignity. Herr Bruno Walter conducted with intelligence, although at times he allowed the fine orchestra to slightly overpower the vocalists.

The Village Romeo and Juliet, a music drama in six scenes, by F. Delius (in English), produced at Covent Garden on Tuesday night, was the second novelty of Mr. Thomas Beecham's season. The action of the music drama takes place in Switzerland during the nineteenth century, and Mrs. Delius has adapted the libretto from the novel of Gottfried Keller, a Swiss poet. When produced at the Komische Oper, Berlin, in 1907, Mr. Frederick Delius's opera had a fair amount of success. The story is simple, and fully bears out the title, as it is indeed a rustic form of Romeo and Juliet with a feud, as in the great original, between the two families. In the Prologue the action takes place in a field near Seldwyla. Manz and Marti are two Swiss peasants, having farm land divided by a field, said to belong to the Black Fiddler, and the children of Manz and Marti, Sali and Vrenchen, play together on this waste land. Unfortunately, both the peasants gradually encroach on the Black Fiddler's ground, and this leads to a long lawsuit, in which both sides are ruined and a feud established. Manz ends by keeping a low-class tavern, and Marti sells up all except his old cottage and garden. Six years elapse between the first and second scene. Sali and Vrenchen have become lovers against their father's commands, and one day they meet again outside the old cottage. Marti discovers them and is furious; in the quarrel Sali, with a stick, knocks him down, and, on the old man coming to, it is found he has lost both reason and memory. The old cottage of Marti is sold to pay his debts, and before the lovers part, as Vrenchen has to go out to service, they agree to have one happy evening together, and they visit a village fair and join in the dancing. After this the lovers go to the Paradise Garden, and here they meet the Black Fiddler. Pretending friendship for the young couple, he unites them by a mock marriage ceremony, and there is more dancing until midnight. Vrenchen and Sali, however, feel that nothing but death can meet their case, and they resolve on drowning themselves. An old boat is found, the lovers embark, and at sunrise their bodies are seen floating on the stream. Mr. Delius is a cultivated musician, and he has treated his music drama in an idyllic manner, which is best suited to such a subject. Although not in the least dramatic, there is much charm in the composer's graceful and flowing themes, and in the duets between the lovers, particularly the one they sing in the scene of Marti's Old Cottage, Delius's music is really beautiful. In the Village Fair, with its swings, shows, merry-go-rounds, and all the bustle and fun incidental to such a scene, the composer never attempts exaggeration in his music; indeed, the whole of the music drama is treated more akin to a symphonic poem than an opera, and the want of some striking finale is somewhat severely felt in the closing scenes of The Village Romeo and Juliet.

As regards the performance, Miss Ruth Vincent, who made her first appearance at Covent Garden, has a pleasing and sympathetic voice, of which she made artistic use in the part of Vrenchen, while Mr. Walter Hyde, who has had considerable experience in opera, sang the music of Sali. The duets, which form so attractive and important a feature in the opera, were admirably sung by both these clever young artists. Excellent also was the Black Fiddler of Mr. Robert Maitland. Mr. Dillon Shallard appeared as Marti, and Mr. Harry Dearth, who made his first début on this stage, proved very effective in the part of Manz. Miss Muriel Terry played the child Sali, and Miss Betty Booker successfully undertook the double rôle of the child Vrenchen and the Slim Girl. The parts of the Poor Horn Player and the Hunchback Bass Player were adequately filled by Messrs. Arthur Royd and Albert Archdeacon. Mr. Thomas Beecham, the conductor, got all that was possible out of Mr. Delius's clever score. The scenery is very beautiful. A lovely picture of a Swiss Valley in Harvest Time is shown, and the realistic Fair Scene admirably managed. The King and Queen were present, and the audience at the close called the composer on.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The National Association of Theatrical Employés gave those of their members who had been employed at the Strand Theatre during Mr. Robert Hilton's season legal assistance to recover the wages due to them, and Mr. C. F. Appleton, solicitor, on Monday applied at the Bow-street Police Court for seventeen summonses, which were granted. The hearing is fixed for Tuesday next at 3 o'clock. It appears from a search at Somerset House that "Cleodan, Ltd.," of which company Mr. Robert Hilton was manager, was formed with a capital of £7,000, and the names of the subscribers of £1 each are Miss Mabilia Daniells and Mr. A. C. Sheard, box-office manager. The list of directors and managers is as follows:—The Rt. Hon. Lord Clifford of Chudleigh (Baron), of Ugbrooke Park, Chudleigh, Devonshire; Mr. Alfred Farquhar (described as gentleman), of 11, Belgrave-square, W.; Mr. Robert Hilton, The Cottages, Little Stanhope-street, Mayfair; Mr. W. R. Wilkinson, 21, Hotham-road, Putney; and Mr. E. L. Raphael, of 31, South-villas, Camden Town, also described as a gentleman. Mr. Wilkinson was the general manager of the company.

What steps the Actors' Association and the Musicians' Union are taking remains to be seen, but both these parties will have to proceed through the County Court, as under the Act neither the actor nor the musician can apply as "workmen." This appears to be an anomaly, as under the Workmen's Compensation Act both the musician and the actor are classified as workmen if in receipt of less than £5 per week.

A conference between representatives of the Variety Artists' Federation, the Actors' Association, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union, and the National Association of Theatrical Employés was held on Wednesday to consider what steps may be taken to secure the observance, in the letter and the spirit, of the L.C.C. regulations relating to Sunday Entertainments.

A meeting of the Heads of Departments' Association was held on Monday evening. Mr. Philip Sheridan presided in the absence of the president and vice-president. Four new members were elected. Messrs. Sheridan and F. B. Fidge were appointed as auditors. A resolution was carried unanimously, expressing regret at the untimely death of Mr. William Barbour, the Hon. Secretary of the Association, and the sympathy of the members with the deceased's family. Mr. G. H. Dyball has left the hospital and gone to Herne Bay for a few days. He expects to be able to return to work at the London Pavilion on Monday next.

Mr. Edward Marris's company is at the Grand Theatre and Opera House, Falkirk. Miss Maisie Jerrard as Robinson is winsome and graceful; and Miss Mamie Iris as his sweetheart is clever and captivating. Mr. Jimmy Danvers as Mrs. Crusoe is highly diverting; Mr. Jack Bland as John Willie is droll; the singing of Miss Nancy Taylor and Mr. Heller Le Maistre is appreciated; and Mr. Harry C. Robinson is a graphic villain.

ARTHUR COLLINS.

AN APPRECIATION.
BY ONE WHO KNOWS HIM.

Few men can wear a giant's robe without getting it bespattered by mud; fewer still carry it with grace and dignity; but the robe that dropped from the shoulders of poor "Gus" Harris long before it had lost its lustre and quality fell with unerring effect upon Arthur Collins, who has shown us how to preserve and enhance the value of good, legitimate material. Arthur Collins was a remarkably young man to step into shoes that "wanted a bit of wearing." Strangely enough both "Druryolanus" and his brilliant successor came to the throne of the "National" kingdom when in the spring of their "thirties." Harris was a financier, and could have raised money on an iceberg. He was, too, by way of being an actor, therefore he was well equipped from a commercial point of view, and he thoroughly understood the technique of the stage. Arthur Collins not only is gifted with an extraordinary amount of business acumen, but he is an accomplished scenic artist, and what he doesn't know about a stage from fly-rail to mezzanine is not at all worth knowing. Perhaps no living man—I don't care how extensive his theatrical experience—could have so successfully carried the "hodd" laid down by his famous predecessor as Arthur Collins. It is only those who thoroughly understand the "ins and outs" of theatrical enterprise and skilled management who can appraise the enormity of natural skill, labour, patience, and responsibility connected with the sole control of "Drury Lane," a theatre which, in the world's histrionic annals stands alone, and within the walls of which more money is spent and more people employed than in any other four theatres in the kingdom. Perhaps it is not "slinging the hatchet" too far to say that the chief of our National theatre has, in his way, as onerous a post as our Prime Minister, and in the formation of his "cabinet" he has to exercise minute discrimination and foresight, and at the same time be so self-reliant and independent in resource that in the event of losing any member or members of his staff, to be strong enough in himself to keep the vast and complicated "Lane" machinery moving without serious mishap. In this respect the late Sir Augustus once caused me to smile and admire. A certain gentleman in his employ imagined that his services were indispensable, and in vulgar parlance put on "many frills." Harris told him to clear out; but, said the swollen-headed employee, "You can't do without me." "If you dropped down dead," answered the guv'nor, "I should have to do without you." Mr. Collins is to be envied the possession of one managerial asset above all others, and that is his quite extraordinary equanimity of temper, which, even under the most trying circumstances, he contrives to keep as unruffled as his immaculately groomed hair. To produce a Drury Lane pantomime, and not once to let your language descend to the cerulean or your silk hat to the fly-rails is not only a wonderful thing to have to one's credit, but it exhibits a power of self-denial not excelled, perhaps, by any member of the Salvation Army, and in this respect Arthur Collins stands out in striking contrast to many of his predecessors, and could the remaining walls of Old Drury speak we should hear of "sudden temper" and "strange oaths" and of the loss of self-respect as frequently as the loss of money. Here is a wee instance of the "Chief's" placidity. Seven weeks before the production of his pantomime his "principal boy" rung him up very early one Sunday morning (when he was fairly fagged out and in great need of sleep) asking "What coloured wig she was to wear?"

Naturally it is no easy task to corner Arthur Collins or to fix him in a club-room chat, but when he does get a spare moment he is full of good anecdotal matter, and he has the gift of spinning a yarn without putting in too much "embroidery." Speaking about the various and striking sensation scenes which have practically found their origin in his fertile brain, the following may be quoted.

"Another scene that I had had in my mind for a long while was the 'Under the Sea Scene' that was done eventually in The White Heather. I mentioned this to Harris and also to Pettitt, but neither of them would entertain it for a moment. Later on, when I was going to produce The White Heather I again mentioned the scene, this time to Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, but they were equally sceptical. However, I bided my time, and one day the two authors came to me and said, 'Look here, we've succeeded in effectually losing the marriage certificate, but I'm blowed if we can find it!' 'Where was it the last time you heard of it?' I enquired. 'Sunk in a yacht off the coast of Scotland,' replied Raleigh, and then suddenly, 'Are you willing to risk your pet scene?' 'Yes,' I said, and had it not been for two bewildered dramatists being utterly unable to find a marriage certificate, which the exigencies of their plot had necessitated their losing, that situation might still be waiting for someone brave enough to risk it."

With the information that brilliant Mr. George Graves will prominently figure in Jack and the Beanstalk next Christmas and that we may expect "the records to once again be broken," we reluctantly bowed ourselves from the "Monarch of Drury's" engaging presence fully impressed by the notion that we had met a clever, distinguished, and many-sided man, who has done, is doing, and will do much good for a profession he knows and represents so ably.

"THE EVE OF THE WEDDING."

Play, in One Act, by Fanny Morris Wood, Produced at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Sunday, Feb. 20.

Rosalie Benningham ..... Miss Joy Chetwyn
Lennox Clifford ..... Mr. Warburton Gamble
Emma ..... Miss Honor Eliot
Mrs. Benningham ..... Mrs. Kaffin Crosfield
Huggins ..... Mr. Patrick Curwen
Robert Clifford ..... Mr. James Gelderd

Containing many amusing lines, and a dramatic situation that threatens to completely shatter the happiness of the bride and bridegroom of to-morrow, The Eve of the Wedding was cordially received by the friendly audience assembled at the cosy little Rehearsal Theatre on Sunday evening. Rosalie Benningham, the evening prior to her marriage, is about to start for a ball when the curtain rises. Her fiancé, Lennox Clifford, is, however, not accompanying her, as he has work to finish up at the office, but he has called to see her off. The light-hearted couple discuss their prospects and their many presents, amongst which is a cheque for £200, which, with a valuable bracelet, the gift of Lennox, is placed in a table-drawer. Lennox confesses that his only worry is concerning his brother, Robert, a rolling-stone of whom he has heard nothing for years, and whom he imagines is abroad. The advent of Rosalie's mother, Mrs. Bennington, to take her daughter to the ball, interrupts any further conversation on the matter, and the trio depart. A policeman has been engaged to guard the valuables, but the kitchen contains metal more attractive for the constable, and the room is left empty and in complete darkness. Then, of course, the enterprising burglar enters by the window, and with wonderful dexterity dodges the furniture, and finds the notes and bracelet. Ere he can depart, however, the lights are suddenly turned on, and Lennox, who has returned, discovers it is his brother Robert who is the thief. Robert is armed, but Lennox manages to get possession of the pistol, and commands his brother to replace the valuables, promising to forward him a cheque in the morning. The ne'er-do-well taunts his brother with always being the fortunate one of the family, and also with marrying money; and boasts that he is glad he has come to that house, and thereby ruined Lennox's prospects of happiness. A motor is heard outside, and Lennox bids his brother hide behind a curtain. Rosalie has returned unexpectedly from the ball, a presentiment that all is not right compelling her to come home early. She is overjoyed when she sees that Clifford is well; but he tells her it will be impossible for him to wed her, and asks her not to press him for the reason. Eventually, Robert comes from his hiding-place and explains all, and Rosalie magnamimously forgives him, tells him she would like him for a brother, and with the prospect that he will make a fresh start in life, and a happy future for Clifford and Rosalie, the curtain falls. Some of the players on Sunday were not quite sure of their lines, but otherwise the piece was admirably enacted throughout. Miss Joy Chetwyn was a natural and sympathetic Rosalie, especially praiseworthy being her acting in the final episode of the playlet; Mr. Warburton Gamble skilfully suggested the anguish of Lennox when he discovers his brother is a thief, and in the lighter scenes his portrayal was excellent; Mr. James Gelderd submitted a creditable enactment of the waster and thief, Robert; and Mrs. Kaffin Crosfield was responsible for an easy and finished portraiture of Mrs. Benningham. The comic rôles of Emma, a knowing parlour-maid, and Huggins, the policeman with an eye to the main chance, were amusingly undertaken by Miss Honor Elliot and Mr. Patrick Curwen.

There were other entertaining items in the programme given by the Francis Club for those that ventured out in the gale on Sunday, but none were more enjoyable than Frankfort Moore's admirably-written and witty playlet, Kitty Clive, the title-rôle of which was cleverly undertaken by Miss Fanny Morris Wood, whose portrayal of the difficult part of the delightfully roguish Kitty revealed her as an actress of undoubted ability and versatility. She was excellently supported by Mr. James Gelderd as the conceited provincial actor, Jack Bates. The couple were heartily recalled at the conclusion.

The Loughborough Amateur Operatic Society have given three performances of the ever-popular Mikado at the Loughborough Theatre Royal, on behalf of local charities.

Mr. Walter Norman, manager of the King's Theatre, Gainsborough, entertained the old people and children from the workhouse at the pantomime of Dick Whittington last Saturday, greatly to their enjoyment.

Messrs. C. and F. Renad's company is at the Empire Theatre, Swindon, in The Swiss Express. Mr. Wilford Bailey makes a capital Dr. Gull; Messrs. Charles and Fred Renad are as amusing as ever in the respective parts of James and John; Mr. Victor T. Raymond does well as Dudley Green; Bob Rollingstone finds a capable exponent in Mr. J. Hawkes; and Jack Gadabout is amusingly taken by Mr. Harwood Cooper. Virginia Squeeze is satisfactorily portrayed by Miss Mabel Collins; and Miss Lottie Stone's Palace Quartette introduce songs and dances.

Presentation.—Mr. Fred Benton has completed the term of his engagement with Mr. Milton Bode at the Royal County Theatre, Reading, and on Saturday night, after the fall of the curtain on The Flag Lieutenant, Mr. Benton was sent for to the stage, and the staff—much to his surprise—presented him with a beautiful solid leather fitted dressing-case, and dispatch-box.

The King's Picture Theatre, Hanley, was packed on Monday last at its first house, and the record attendance was reached since Messrs. Moore and Kennedy took over the theatre, over two years ago. Great praise is due to the fine management of Captain F. Shaw and Mr. C. Harlewood.

A full-size picture painting by an artist of repute, in oils, on a canvas measuring 8ft. by 5ft., would cost scores of pounds. The difficulty of expense, however, has been done away with by Hana, the well-known photographer, who, by the combination of photography and hand-painting, has produced a likeness equal to any hand-painted picture. It is a life-size picture of Miss Marie George, an oil-painting on canvas, and although its dimensions are 8ft. by 5ft., it folds into half that size for travelling. Artists would do well to visit the studios of Hana, in Bedford-street, and see this picture, which would make an attractive addition to any vestibule.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the council meeting held at 32, Regent-street, on Tuesday, Feb. 22. Present: Mr. F. J. Arlton (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Langford Reed, L. Shepherd, E. Morgan, H. Le Grande, Murri Moncrieff, F. H. De Quincey, Clarence Derwent, Miss Joan Pereira, Miss Vita Spencer, and Mr. D. Young (secretary).

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A letter was read from Sir Herbert Tree, and the secretary was directed to acknowledge receipt of Sir Herbert's letter, and to thank him on behalf of the council for the views expressed therein.

Mr. Clarence Derwent reported upon a communication he had received from Mr. Winston Churchill with reference to the inclusion of actors in the Government insurance scheme. Though the profession, in Mr. Churchill's opinion, is not likely to be included in the original Bill, it is the intention of the Government to extend facilities as soon as practical experience of its working has been obtained. Mr. Derwent also reported an interview with Mr. Philip Carr with reference to the need of the Association being represented on the committee of the National Theatre.

With reference to the "Railway Clearing House" three-quarter concession, the secretary was asked to insert the letter in its entirety in the minutes of the current week. The letter is as follows: "The application, dated 9th instant, for the concession in fares allowed to members of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association to be extended to members of the Actors' Association has now been considered by the Railway Superintendents in conference, and I am desired to inform you that they regret they are unable to see their way to accede thereto."

With regard to Mr. Robert Hilton's season at the Strand Theatre, the secretary read letters from various members of the company, and, on the advice of the solicitor, he was instructed to reply to the following effect: "Letters having been received from various members engaged at the Strand Theatre in reply to the secretary's request for information, and it appearing that the contracts were entered into with a limited company, the council feel that unless it could be shown that the company had any assets, it would be useless to take proceedings, but that further inquiries should be made, and the file of the company searched at Somerset House." The attention of members was also directed to clause 8 in the "Year Book" Legal Advice, which is as follows: "In an agreement with a syndicate or limited company, the actor should be careful to ascertain who are the persons connected with it, the amount of the subscribed capital, and to take the advice of the secretary of the Association before signing it."

With reference to the case for arbitration, the secretary was directed to inform the parties interested that the date fixed for the arbitration was Thursday, March 3, at 2.30 p.m., and that the names of the committee appointed to arbitrate in the case in question were Messrs. F. J. Arlton, H. Le Grande, and Lewis Casson.

The hon. solicitor declared that it would be illegal to make a charge on the occasion of a "social," and that it would be an infringement of the agreement with the landlord to have any meeting of the kind on Sunday. He advised that it would not be advisable to proceed with the matter, and in view of the above opinion the social committee in question withdrew. The secretary was likewise further instructed to write to Mr. Devereux and thank him for his kindness in consenting to act as chairman. The hon. solicitor reported and received instructions in regard to three cases.

The finance committee's report was presented by Mr. Morgan and adopted.

Mr. Arlton reported further on matter concerned with the house committee. Their next meeting was fixed for Tuesday, at twelve o'clock.

A proposal "That a notice be placed on the board asking those members who are willing to become members of a commonwealth company, formed of members of the Association, to hand their names to the secretary at once," was carried unanimously.

The following is the letter from Sir Herbert Tree, alluded to above:—

"Dear Mr. Young,

"I have consulted with several of my brother managers, and I find the general feeling is very much as I hinted in my letter of Dec. 28, to Mr. Hayden Coffin. They share my views as to their willingness to help the Association in any way that may be considered desirable and practical.

"Personally, I feel that it would be my duty and pleasnre to be of service to the Association, but at present I am not clear as to whether we can serve the Association better as members or as outside supporters. I think that we should be a drag rather than a help if it is proposed to conduct the Association as a society in the nature of a Trades Union, which it is perfectly conceivable may be a sound policy. I cannot help thinking that it would be desirable in the meantime that the membership of the Association should be extended, and when the newly-elected council shall have made up its mind as to the precise policy which shall govern its actions, it will then be well to have a straight talk and come to a definite understanding. I am aware that this course may be some time in shaping, but hold myself at all times at the disposal of the Association, to whose deliberations and achievements I wish every success.

"I have just read some statements with reference to a conversation which Mr. Derwent had with me as to the £2 minimum wage. It may be well that I should take this opportunity of dotting the "i's" of this conversation. Mr. Derwent asked whether, in my opinion, there would be objection to a £2 minimum wage. I replied that it did not seem to me that such a proposal would encounter the opposition of managers. In doing this I referred to actors taking speaking parts in London theatres. It appears inevitable, alas! that in any calling there should exist a struggling mass who cannot by the divine right of living ensure to themselves a living wage. This applies equally to the Bar, Medicine, and all other professions and crafts for which apprenticeship is needed. I have just referred to the salary sheet of this theatre, and find that no actor or actress with a speaking part at the present moment here receives less than the minimum named.

"Yours very truly,
"Herbert Beerbohm Tree."

Elections: Kathleen Vereker, Norah Johns, P. Ramsay Forman, Brineta Brown, C. Lewis Sealy, Cicely Barcham. Nominations: Frank B. Crowcott, Enid Baird, Stratton Rodney, Olive Noble.

Presentation.—Mr. Will Cutler, who stage-managed Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan's pantomime at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, was the recipient of several handsome presents at the termination of the run last Saturday night at the Theatre Royal, Chatham. The gifts included a silver cigarette case from Mr. George Newburn, a silver-mounted walking-stick from Willie Benn's Dutch boys and girls, and a large travelling trunk from the company.

Mr. Editor.—Sir,—In noticing the pantomime at the Pleasure Gardens Theatre, Folkestone, last week, your representative remarked that the attraction was Mr. Charles R. Stone's company in Red Riding Hood. I should feel obliged if you would make it clear that the pantomime was exploited by the Exeter Theatre Co., Ltd., for whom I acted as producer and stage-manager.—Yours faithfully, Charles R. Stone, Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Feb. 21, 1910.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Herbert Tree, who has shown his desire to advance the claims of opera, by giving the hospitality of His Majesty's to more than one important musical work, has decided to advance further in the cause. Accordingly he has arranged with Mr. Thomas Beecham for a season of light opera to be given each year at His Majesty's. The great work which Mr. Beecham is doing at this moment in connection with grand opera at Covent Garden is a sufficient indication of the quality of the entertainment which will be provided under his direction in the Haymarket.

Sir Herbert has written the following letter to the Editor of the Times, in which paper it was published on Thursday:—"Sir,—Many will be grateful to you for the outspoken article in the Times of to-day on 'Art and the Joy of Life.' Of course, every great artist has this joy of life, though it is often obscured by self-consciousness. Is not this self-consciousness largely due to a false respect for the painstaking pessimism of modern criticism? Earnestness uninformed by humour is the enemy of seriousness. If there is one thing more deadly than religious puritanism, it is irreligious puritanism. The Greeks and the Elizabethans, who were joyous peoples, loved great tragedies. To-day we are shocked by Œdipus and revel in drab misery. All forms of art should be respected. If the study of smells is interesting it should be remembered that perfumes, too, have their uses. If we prefer the passing phase we should be tolerant to the eternal. It is well that we should be reminded that in the drama, as in other arts, Jaeger is not the only wear, nor crape the sole panache."

In connection with the proposed testimonial from the West-End managers to Mrs. R. D'Oyly Carte, we understand that there is a strong feeling amongst the provincial managers and others, with whom Mrs. Carte has had so many pleasant business relations, and who are not represented on the committee of the fund, either that they should be permitted to take an equally prominent part in the movement, or should, if it be found desirable, start a separate testimonial. We anticipate that the matter will be taken up either by the Theatrical Managers' Association or by the Theatres Alliance at their ensuing meetings.

Mr. Forbes Robertson is about to enter upon the sixth month of his remarkably successful season in New York, where he will celebrate the 500th performance of The Passing of the Third Floor Back on Monday, March 7. In the autumn he will embark on a tour, comprising thirty-five or forty weeks in the principal Eastern and Central States.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones will address the National Sunday League on the present chaos in the licensing of theatres and music halls at the Alhambra on Sunday evening at eight o'clock, Sir Herbert Tree has kindly consented to take the chair, and will also address the League. Many other gentlemen of influence will be present on the platform. The usual programme of the Sunday League concert will be given, commencing at seven o'clock, with the full Alhambra orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Geo. Byng, to be followed with songs by Miss Amy Evans, soprano, from the Savoy Theatre, and Mr. H. Lane Wilson.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre, held on the 18th inst., Mr. George Bernard Shaw presiding, it was reported that rapid progress was being made with the organisation of the movement by means of local committees throughout the country. In many of the large centres extensive and influential promises of support had been obtained, and meetings would shortly be arranged. Committees were formed or forming in a large number of other centres.

Mr. Martin Harvey's visit to the Opera House, Southport, has been a brilliant success, the house being crowded nightly. At the conclusion of the performance on Saturday evening Mr. Harvey, in response to cries for a speech congratulated Southport playgoers upon having Mr. Hutchison to look after their interests and announced that he was so gratified at the result of his visit that he hoped to make a speedy return.

The annual Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's, which will take place after the present run of The O'Flynn, will be given on a more extended scale than in previous years, a number of the leading managers having volunteered their co-operation. Sir Herbert returns to the theatre in the first week of September with a new play by an English author. It is good news for both children and grown-ups that the policy of an annual Christmas production will be followed in the present year.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton achieved another triumph with their adaptation of Stanley Weyman's novel "Count Hannibal" on its production on Jan. 15 at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne. The performance was voted quite the finest ever seen in Australasia, the famous rapier and dagger duel drawing forth shouts of admiration from a wildly-excited pit and gallery. This success, following on that achieved during the short trial trip the play had in the provinces, bodes well for its future in London.

Lord Kitchener graced the occasion, and was accompanied by his staff and a party from Government House. When the news spread that the bronzed face in the dress-circle box was Kitchener's, a roar of applause went up from all parts of the house, and the shrill voice of a galleryite called for three cheers, which were enthusiastically given. The Field-Marshal watched the play, which is full of military details, with keen interest, and frequently applauded. On the conclusion of the performance he was conducted, at his own request, to the green room, where he congratulated Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton on the production.

Mr. C. H. Workman has engaged the following artists to support him in Two Merry Monarchs, the new musical play to be produced at the Savoy on March 10:—Miss Mayar Young, Miss Alma Barber, and Miss Daisy Le Hay; Mr. Roland Cunningham, Mr. Lennox Pawle. Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., Mr. Leslie Stiles, and Mr. Neville George. The entire production is in the hands of Mr. Austen Hurgon, and the orchestra will be under the direction of Mr. Hamish McCunn.

Mr. Charles Frohman will present a triple bill at the Duke of York's Theatre on Tuesday, two new one-act plays by Mr. J. M. Barrie, entitled Old Friends and The Twelve-Pound Look, and an unfinished comedy by the late Mr. George Meredith, entitled The Sentimentalists. The following artists will be included in the casts:—Mr. Sydney Valentine, Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Dorothy Minto, Mr. Hubert Harden, Mr. Dennis Eadie, Mr. Charles Maude, Mr. Lewis Casson, Mr. C. K. Vernon, Miss Fay Davis, Miss Mary Jerrold, Miss May Whitty, Miss Penelope Wheeler, Miss Sybil Thorndyke, Miss Eva Killick, Mr. Edmund Gwenn, Miss Mary Barton, and Mr. C. C. Calvert.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and suite attended on Thursday evening the performance of The Importance of being Earnest at the St. James's Theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bannister Howard were amongst the company present on the 18th inst. at the third of the Bath Assemblies, which have lately been revived successfully.

Mr. Cyril Maude will inaugurate his series of matinées with The Toymaker of Nuremberg at the Playhouse early next month. It is a three-act comedy, by Mr. Austin Strong, and was given just over three years ago in New York. Mr. Cyril Maude will appear in the title-rôle, and the cast will also include his daughter, Miss Margery Maude—who thus makes her début on the stage—Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Fred Lewis, Miss Elsie Chester, and Mr. Shiel Barry.

In recognition of the help afforded by members of the theatrical profession to King's College Hospital, a bed in the new hospital at Denmark Hill is, it was stated at the annual meeting of the Hospital Corporation, to be named after Sir Henry Irving. Sir Charles Wyndham has been nominated by the Actors' Benevolent Fund as a life governor of the institution. Dr. Headlam yesterday made a strong appeal for help for the hospital, the income of which last year showed a decrease of £2,426. The ordinary expenditure exceeded the ordinary income by £6,431.

At the thirty-seventh ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Devonshire Park and Baths Co., Ltd., on Monday the report of the directors for the year ending Dec. 31 last stated: The balance (gross profit) at the credit of the general revenue account for the year is £5,712 16s. 6d., as against £5,100 12s. 5d. for the year 1908. Against the gross profit for 1909, £5,712 16s. 6d., and transfer fees, £1 15s., making £5,714 11s. 6d., has to be charged interest on mortgages, &c., and retiring allowance to the late manager, leaving a balance of net profit of £3,656 12s. 1d. for the year, against which is charged the manager's commission for 1909, leaving an available balance of £3,473 16s. The directors recommend that a dividend at the rate of £2 per centum per annum be paid free of income tax, which will absorb £1,446 12s., leaving an amount of £2,027 4s., which the board recommend should be transferred to a general reserve fund.

Mr. Robert Arthur will present at the Coronet Theatre on Monday a revival production of the comic opera Les Cloches de Corneville, with new costumes made in Paris and new scenery painted in London. Leading rôles will be interpreted by Mr. Stuart Alexander, Mr. E. St. Alban, Mr. Wensley Russell, Miss Gurney Delaporte, and Miss Vera Darien.

Sir Herbert Tree's contribution to the Shakespeare celebration will not be confined to his own theatre, as he will furnish the leading attraction at the Festival at Stratford-on-Avon, which he opens on Friday afternoon, April 22, with a performance of Hamlet. Sir Herbert, of course, will play the moody Dane, Mr. Henry Ainley appearing as Laertes, and Miss Marie Löhr as Ophelia.

Mr. Lewis Waller has decided that his re-appearance at the Lyric in April shall be made as Captain Absolute in The Rivals, Sheridan's comedy will be somewhat condensed, and the original five acts compressed into three. After the run of The Rivals, we understand Mr. Lewis Waller will appear in a new comedy of the present time.

The next meeting of the Actresses' Franchise League will be held on Friday in the Grand Hall of the Criterion from three to five. The guests will be received by Miss Edyth Olive and Mrs. Carl Leyel. The chair will be taken by Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, and the speakers are Miss Georgina Brackenbury, Mr. Frederick Whelen, and Sir John Cockburn, K.C.M.G. Miss Decima Moore has kindly consented to recite.

A high school master named Billeter, of Zurich, is credited with the discovery of a manuscript copy of a lost original version of Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister." The copy comprises six volumes of entirely unknown material.

The Royal Academy of Music has recently been the recipient of a most interesting gift in the form of a marble bust of the late Signor Alfredo Piatti. The bust is the work of the young artist, Signor Giacomo Manzoni, of Bergamo, and is a strikingly excellent portrait of the great violoncellist, who was for so many years not only the finest performer on his instrument, but also one of the most eminent professors in the Academy itself. The school owes this notable addition to its treasures to the generosity of the maestro's daughter, the Countess Piatti-Lochis.

Amongst the distinguished audience present at the inauguration of Mr. Charles Frohman's Repertory Theatre at the Duke of York's, on Monday evening, were Lady Esher, Lady Ponsonby, Mrs. Bradley Martin, Lady Lewis, Count Mensdorf, the Marchioness of Ripon, Lady Northcliffe, Lady Bell, Sir Frederick Macmillan, Prince Francis of Teck, Hon. Mrs. Lyttelton, Countess Armin, Lady Allington, Lady Tennant, Princess Hatzfeldt, and Sir Philip Burne-Jones.

The comedy entitled A Member of Tattersall's, which was produced at Brighton in October of last year, and was revived at the Theatre Royal, Worthing, last week, with Mr. Rutland Barrington in the rôle of Peter Perks, the bookmaker, will be presented in London at the end of the spring. Mr. Barrington will be seen in his original rôle.

Miss Gertrude Elliott (Mrs. Forbes Robertson) has accepted a tempting offer to "star" in America next season in The Dawn of a To-morrow, by Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, which has achieved a great success all over America during the past two years. Liebler and Company, by whom Miss Elliott is engaged, are now negotiating for the production of The Dawn of a To-morrow, with Miss Elliott as lead, at a London West End theatre early next April.

The Birmingham Theatrical Managers' Billiard Handicap has now reached its concluding stage. The final round will be played off on Tuesday next at the Woolpack Hotel, Birmingham, between Mr. J. F. Graham and Mr. Lester Collingwood, each receiving 120 points in a game of 500 up. In the semi-final round played at the Woolpack Hotel on Monday afternoon Mr. J. F. Graham (receives 120) defeated Mr. Albert Bushell (owes 50). Mr. Bushell failed to display his true form, and never looked like overhauling his opponent.

All records were broken at the Birmingham Jewish Working Men's Club on Sunday evening, when the concert programme was arranged by Mr. Lester Collingwood, the popular proprietor of the Alexandra Theatre. Mr. Collingwood occupied the chair, and was supported by members of the Alexandra pantomime company. Miss Daisy Dormer, who has scored such an undoubted success in the Prince of Wales's pantomime, paid her second visit to the club, and quickly established herself a big favourite. Mr. H. Barnes, chef d'orchestra at the Alexandra, had charge of the musical arrangements. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Collingwood and his able assistant, Mr. Guest.

Sure proof of the success of the Opera House, Southport under Mr. Percy Hutchison's management is given by the fact that Mr. Hutchison has decided to enlarge the capacity of the theatre, as on frequent occasions many hundreds of people have had to be refused admission. Plans have now been drawn up and passed by which additional seating accommodation will be secured, the refreshment bars greatly enlarged and improved, and a new crush-room added.

The apotheosis of the Princess gown is to be found in The Balkan Princess at the Prince of Wales's. Miss Isabel Jay's costume in the first act is a pink satin Princess gown veiled with soft folds of pink tulle, embroidered with silver, and again with a still more transparent overdress of pink chiffon. The rich, heavily-embroidered court train is of silver tissue, and lined with pale pink chiffon. Another lovely confection worn by Miss Jay is of blue cashmere de soie, veiled with pale blue chiffon.

Similar adornment figures in the gorgeous white and silver gown in which Miss Jay appears in the last act. Also cut in the Princess style, it is of white satin veiled with tulle, with long panels back and front embroidered with silver bugles and white floss silk, and linked together with silver festoons. The only touch of colour is a deep band of blue satin encircling the skirt under the tulle veiling.

Miss Mabel Green looks very charming in a beautiful cloak of blue satin, draped in an elaborate toga fashion, and adorned with a wide band of very heavy old gold embroidery. With this is worn a charming blue turban head-dress, with a falling veil of pale blue chiffon. Another lovely gown is composed of pale mauve satin, with a wonderful falling panel at the back, of net, richly embroidered with gold; while a third creation is of golden yellow crêpe de Chine, with richly jewelled ornaments.

A hockey match played by Mr. F. R. Benson's eleven against Malone at Belfast on Saturday proved very interesting, despite unfavourable weather. The teams were as follows:—Benson's XI.—Charlton, Carrington, Mann, Denys, Conroy, Howell, Caithness, Young, Benson, Roller, and Bulloch. Malone.—Coulter, Crossley, E. Cooke, Young, "Marks," H. Hall, Black, Pollock, Imrie, B. Crossley, and T. Cooke. At half-time the actors had scored only one goal to their opponents' two, but matters were equalised in the second half, Mr. Benson himself scoring with a neat shot from centre.

A reading of The Taming of the Shrew was given in the Central Hall, Rosemary-street, Belfast, on Monday, by members of the Belfast branch of the British Shakespeare Society. All the characters were interpreted with an ability which demonstrated the progress made with the study of Shakespeare's works since the extension of the society to Belfast.

Their Majesties the King and Queen, and suite, occupied the Royal box at The Playhouse on Thursday evening.

Mr. Reginald A. Hunt, the producer and stage manager of Mr. Arthur's Aladdin, which terminates its successful run of eleven and a half weeks to-night at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, rejoins The Bondman at Woolwich on Monday, Mr. Wentworth Croke having kept the position of stage manager open for him.

Mr. Edmund Payne has, after a long and serious illness, taken a turn for the better, and will shortly leave for the Mediterranean to complete his convalescence. On his return in a few weeks' time he hopes to resume with his usual vigour and quaintness his character in Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety.

At the conclusion of the successful run of Red Riding Hood at the Brixton Theatre on Saturday, Mr. Newman Maurice, who had an ovation, outlined the programme to be placed before Mr. Frederick Melville's patrons during the ensuing season. These attractions include the J. W. Turner Opera company, The Cingalee, The Geisha, Charley's Aunt, and When Knights were Bold.

Four performances of Faust as an old German play will be given in Clifford's Inn Hall, Fleet-street, at 3 and 5.30 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday, March 7 and 8. The profits will be devoted to the Leadless Glaze Exhibition expenses and the Potteries' Fund, which provides nourishment and change of air for necessitous cases of lead-poisoning. This production should appeal to all lovers of Goethe and all interested in the life of the people as depicted in a "folk-play." The performances will be given by members of the Ilkley University Extension Centre, and will be prefaced by a short introductory lecture by Mr. P. H. Wicksteed.

Mr. Fred Benton, who has been resident-manager at the County Theatre, Reading, for close on two years, concluded his engagement last Saturday. The occasion was marked by a presentation by the staff and orchestra, consisting of a handsomely-fitted dressing-case and dispatch-box. Mr. Benton carries with him all good wishes from the many friends he has made during his sojourn in the Royal County.

A case of much importance to theatrical proprietors and licensees came before the Liverpool Stipendiary on Wednesday About a month ago the Shakespeare Theatre people were summoned for employing women on a Sunday to alter and improve pantomime costumes. Mr. John Gaffney, the esteemed manager, pleaded guilty to the charge, but, with a perspicacity that was greatly admired, pointed out that the women did not come within the provisions of the Factory Act, under which he was summoned, because they were not working directly for their employer's gain.

The worthy Stipendiary was evidently impressed with Mr. Gaffney's argument, and, after looking up several law-books, declared himself in agreement with him, and assured the factory inspector that he would have to show a stronger case and more legal reason before a conviction could be procured. The complainant applied for a month's adjournment, and on the case being called again last Wednesday the summonses were withdrawn, costs being allowed. Mr. Gaffney has managed the Shakespeare's affairs for nearly twenty-two years, and it is hoped he is not forsaking that honoured position in order to become a legal advocate!

When the curtain fell on the last performance of Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens' pantomime The Fair One with the Golden Locks, Mr. Wallace Stranack, the stage-manager, was presented by Mr. Will Letters, the principal comedian, on behalf of the company, with a very handsome gold pencil case. Mr. Stranack suitably replied to Mr. Letters' very flattering remarks.

Miss Philidda Terson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Terry, to whose charm and talent we paid tribute on her debut some weeks ago, took up the part first played by her mother in Henry of Navarre at the New Theatre on Wednesday, and made a decided success. On that evening the play reached its 400th night. It was Mr. Fred Terry's intention to produce The Popinjay this week, but the indisposition of Miss Neilson has compelled him to revise his plans, and the conclusion of the run of Henry of Navarre will probably see a revival of the perennial Pimpernel.

Mr. W. W. Kelly's engagement of Mr. Ian Robertson in Jerome's clever phantasy, The Passing of the Third Floor Back, at the Birkenhead Theatre Royal, has been remarkably successful, the house having been sold out on Thursday morning. The play has created a great impression in Birkenhead, and Mr. Kelly has received quite a number of letters thanking him for bringing "so noble and unusual a play" to the town. On Monday The Arcadians commences a much-anticipated first visit.

At Mr. Kelly's Liverpool theatre business is still maintained at a high level. Next week Mr. Louis Calvert's Sunday company (with Miss Janet Lind in the title-rôle) forms the attraction.

The British and Foreign Musicians' Society held their eighty-eighth annual meeting on Sunday last, when the annual report and the statement of accounts were under consideration. The society has had a heavy expenditure on account of sickness, deaths, and old age. Thirty-five members who have been on the fund during the year have received £229; thirteen old age pensioners received £274; and £100 was spent in payments at death for four members and two wives. In addition, six widows and two orphans are in receipt of annual incomes from the widows and orphans' fund.

The society was founded in 1822 and its membership consists entirely of orchestral players. It has long been considered that the title of the society is not sufficiently explanatory of its objects, and a resolution was submitted and carried that the title should be changed to that of "The Professional Musicians' Sick and Pension Society."

The Rehearsal Company will give their twelfth performance on Monday, March 7, at the Rehearsal Theatre, at 2 p.m., when will be presented an original one-act play by P. E. Slayton, entitled The Passing of the Ironside, in which Messrs. Clive Currie and Frank Lincoln will appear. It will be followed by Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, with Mr. Fred Grove as Sir Toby Belch, Miss May Saker as Viola, Miss Mary Forbes as Olivia, and Mr. Clive Currie as Malvolio. The casts will also include Messrs. Fredk. James, W. Fletcher, C. Heatherley, &c., and Misses Evelyn Vanderzee, Grace Richardson, Ursula Keene, and others.

The Prince and Princess of Wales have given their patronage to the Keats-Shelley matinée at the Haymarket Theatre on Friday, June 10, which is being organised to provide for the complete equipment of the Memorial House in Rome.

The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, who are ardent theatre-goers, put the manager of a Berlin opera house a few nights ago into a dilemma. Their Imperial Highnesses arrived unexpectedly at the Operetten Theatre to hear The Count von Luxemburg, but the august guests could not be provided with seats, as the house was full. Finally, the occupants of a private box loyally vacated it for the benefit of the late-comers, who were profuse in apologies and thanks.

At the Metropole, Devonport, this week, on the occasion of the visit of Mr. F. Melville's company in Her Forbidden Marriage, the offer of a 22ct. gold wedding ring to any parties in the house who intended to tie the nuptial knot during the week's run was accepted by a seaman serving on H.M.S. Impregnable. Having fulfilled the required conditions, he was presented with the ring on Friday, the wedding taking place this (Saturday) morning.

The Glasgow "Cinderella" treat to poor children, of which Mrs. Percy O. Humphrys is the able and energetic president, has been in operation for eight years, and over 4,000 children have benefited by this lady's efforts. This year 800 of the poorest little mites in Glasgow were treated on Thursday to an enjoyable variety programme, backed up by "pokes" of pastry, and presents of fruit, &c., to each little visitor. The treat took place in the Theatre Royal.

At the close of the pantomime's remarkably successful eight weeks' run at the Marlborough Theatre on Saturday evening, Mr. James Leslie, Mr. Fred Karno's manager for The House that Jack Built, was the recipient of a number of souvenirs. A handsome silver-mounted dressing-case was presented by the company; and a large engraved cigar-case by Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers. Among other gifts were a massive-silver-cased cigar-holder and an inscribed silver card-case from the front-of-the-house staff.

Great enthusiasm prevailed in the Grand Theatre, Brighton, last Saturday night during the final performance of Robinson Crusoe. Mr. Ernest Gates, the popular managing-director, stated the pantomime had been a great success. Floral presents and other gifts were plentiful during the evening, Mr. Ben Court, the manager, being the recipient of a handsome silver cigarette-box, subscribed for by the principals of the company.

At the Longsight Public Hall, Manchester, on the 17th inst., a dramatic recital, comprising monologues and a series of character parts from famous plays, was given by Mr. William Podmore, who has given much promise as a member of Miss Horniman's company at the Gaiety Theatre. Considerable skill and versatility distinguished the performance from beginning to end, and the programme was agreeably varied by the soprano songs of Miss Annie Bayley.

Mr. Gerald Spencer, who for the past two years has been resident-manager at the Theatre Royal, Wolverhampton, and has resigned his position as such to enter the commercial world, said farewell to his many patrons and the stage on Saturday last. Occasion was taken of the event to present Mr. Spencer with a purse of gold subscribed for by the staff of the theatre and his many friends. In making the presentation Mr. Hogg spoke in high terms of Mr. Spencer's ability as a manager, and the esteem in which he was held by the many friends he had made during his stay in Wolverhampton. At the conclusion, Mr. Spencer introduced to the crowded audience Mr. Lewis M. Chapman, from the Elephant and Castle Theatre, London, who has succeeded him as resident-manager.

An engagement which should prove highly attractive at the Crystal Palace Theatre next week is that of Mr. Frank Curzon's great musical success The King of Cadonia, from the Prince of Wales's Theatre. The original production, including costumes and scenery, is travelled. The fine company is headed by that talented comedian Mr. Bertie Wright.

Our notice of the production of The Balkan Princess at the Prince of Wales's Theatre is unavoidably omitted, but will appear next week.

This afternoon sees the inauguration of the Aldbourne Village Theatre, which has been converted from a big barn into a comfortable playhouse by Mr. Charles McEvoy, the author of David Ballard and other clever plays. The promoter describes his venture as the first village theatre for village players in England, and adds that the object of their director is to present a realistic reflection of rural life and manners. Mr. Granville Barker will start the proceedings with an address from the stage at four o'clock, and a quarter of an hour later the curtain will be rung up on The Village Wedding, a drama, in three acts, by Mr. McEvoy.

The curtain fell upon the final performance of the Edinburgh Theatre Royal pantomime, Humpty Dumpty, last Saturday, amidst a scene of remarkable enthusiasm. During the progress of the piece the action was stopped again and again to present the principal artists with tokens of goodwill from the crowded audience, and in the concluding scene the stage looked like a veritable bower of Flora. Miss Iris Banfield was surrounded with a rampart of lovely flowers, while the comedians had suitable and ingeniously formed bouquets given to them.

At the close Mr. Geo. T. Minshull, one of the managing-directors, stepped upon the stage in response to loud applause, and expressed the thanks of the management and the members of the cast for the magnificent reception which the public had accorded to the pantomime. This was a comet year, and there had been great scintillations on the part of different members of the company. He appealed to the audience whether the pantomime had not been a success. Another burst of applause greeted the speech, and after joining in the strains of "Auld Lang Syne," the audience dispersed.

Miss Winifred Pearson has been engaged by Mr. Herbert Sleath for Claire Foster in A Woman in the Case. She is playing this week at the New Theatre, Cardiff.

Lent has not affected the attendance at Maeterlinck's fairy play, The Blue Bird, at the Haymarket, and the bookings extend well into April. Mr. Herbert Trench, it is evident, will not want a successor to the play for many months.

Maeterlinck's poetic idea of "The Blue Bird for Happiness" has been taken up by a number of clever and well-known women in the world of literature, music, and art, who have banded themselves together into a dining club with one object, the Pursuit of Happiness. The rites and ceremonies practised by the "Blue Birds" at their meetings are kept a profound secret, and no man is permitted to join.

A hockey match on skates was played at Perth on Wednesday, by members of the Sunday company, against a local team, and a very exciting contest resulted. At first it seemed as if the homesters were to have it all their own way, as they scored two goals within three minutes. The visitors were by no means dismayed, for on the ball being centred, it was immediately knocked into the local net by their centreforward. The game finally ended in a draw of two goals each, the principal events being the scoring of the second goal by the Sunday back from his own goal post, and the saving of a critical situation by the goalkeeper sending the ball through a window into a neighbouring street. The Sunday team were Richard Triene (centre), Robert Borland (right), L. St. G. Lowther (left), George Marriott (back), and Richard F. Symons (goal).

Mr. Charles Frohman has made two notable additions to the list of playwrights who are to provide dramatic material for the carrying on of his Repertory Theatre, which made such an auspicious start at the Duke of York's on Monday. Mr. Henry Arthur Jones and Mr. Alfred Sutro have accepted commissions to furnish Mr. Frohman with plays, thus greatly enhancing the value of his experiment.

Mr. Robert R. Ashby played the part of Harry Leyton in The Thief at the short notice of three hours at the Grand Theatre, Luton. Mr. Ashby only joined the company a few hours previous to his playing the part.

Princess Henry of Battenberg, with her suite and Miss Ellen Terry, were amongst the audience which witnessed the first performance of La Zolfara, by the Sicilian players, at the Lyric Theatre on Thursday night. Miss Terry was taken behind the scenes between the first and second acts and presented to Mme. Bragaglia and Cav. Grasso. The latter was so carried away by his feelings that he took the distinguished actress in his arms and kissed her on both cheeks.

The management of the Beecham opera season has concluded a special engagement with Herr Forchhammer, of the Frankfort-on-Main Opera House, to sing the part of Tristran on Wednesday, March 2. Carmen, which was originally announced for that date, has been postponed until March 14. There will be another extra performance of Elektra on Thursday, March 17, so that Strauss' opera will be given on Feb. 26, March 5, 12, 15, 17, and 19.

Mr. Percy Hutchison having recovered from his operation for appendicitis will reappear in Brewster's Millions at the Marlborough Theatre, N., on Monday next, supported by the same company that appeared with him in that successful piece at Wyndham's Theatre.

The suburban and provincial rights of the Wyndham Theatre play The Best People have been secured by Mr. Frank Weathersby, who will send a tour out on March 7, starting at West Pier, Brighton. The play is by Frederick Lonsdale, the author of Dear Little Denmark, The Early Worms, The Balkan Princess, &c.

So great has been the success of the pantomime Mother Hubbard at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, that a further two weeks have been added to its run, which will terminate on March 12. Mr. G. H. Elliott, who has scored tremendously as Chocolate, will, by the courtesy of Oswald Stoll and Messrs. Elphinstone (who have kindly released him) continue to afford delight to the Bristolians until the pantomime closes its run.

Mr. Graham Morrison, the popular general-manager of the Theatre Royal, Cardiff, was on Wednesday last, the occasion of his birthday, the recipient of a gold-mounted cigar holder, cigarette holder, and cigarette case from the members of his staff.

In the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday application for discharge was made by Mary Adelaide Whytal, described as of Craven-mansions, Lancaster Gate, actress and theatrical manageress. In 1905 debtor formed a theatrical company, and toured in the provinces with the plays The Cardinal, 'Twixt Axe and Crown, Clancarty, and Alice Sit-by-the-Fire. The tour was not successful financially, and judgment was eventually obtained against the debtor in respect of a printing account. His Honour said the debtor could either take her discharge immediately, subject to paying the costs of the bankruptcy proceedings, or it would be granted subject to the minimum suspension of two years.

The case of Mr. H. Scholz, dramatic author, professionally known as W. Gunn Gwennet, also came before the Court upon an application for discharge. Debtor in 1907 brought an action for infringement of copyright against the petitioning creditor and Amasis (Limited). He alleged that the play called Amasis was founded upon, or copied from, a play written by him called Son of the Sun, and claimed £5,000 damages and an injunction. In January, 1909, judgment was given in his favour, with £500 damages, but on appeal that judgment was reversed, with costs. The liabilities were returned at £774. The assets were valued at £703, but had so far realised only 11s. 6d. The order of discharge was suspended for two years.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Opera and Variety.

MR. CHARLES MANNERS has said to a representative of the Glasgow Citizen:—"Under the present conditions I find it simply impossible to run grand opera any longer with companies such as are appearing these two weeks. I had intended, unless I could get a little more encouragement from those I have to do business with, to stop the company altogether. Then I had a very munificent offer for what my wife and I think very easy work in Mr. Stoll's principal variety theatres, the engagement to run for thirty-two weeks. I have accepted that offer, and so intend for the present to run only one opera company. That company will not be as large or as expensive as the present one, but I think I can safely say that it will be as large as, if not larger than, any of the other opera companies that may be on the road. When my agreement with Mr. Stoll terminates, which will be about the end of March, 1911, I hope I shall be in even a more independent position than I am now; and then I hope most sincerely to endeavour in a different way altogether to establish national opera."

Shakespeare's Accent.

IF Shakespeare attended a present-day performance of his plays, said Mr. Daniel Jones (lecturer upon phonetics at University College) at the Times Book Club on Thursday, he would feel very much as we should feel if we heard Tennyson recited in broad Cockney. Mr. Jones read two passages from As You Like It—the "Seven Ages" soliloquy and the song "It was a lover and his lass"—in an Elizabethan accent. The effect was pleasing, the impression being that of a cross between Lowland Scotch and a Frenchman's fairly correct pronunciation of modern English. "This recitation is not given as a mere curiosity," said Mr. Jones. "The original pronunciation of Shakespeare should be cultivated far more than it is if we really wish to appreciate the music of his verse."

Not the Right Note.

A DRAMATIC critic (remarks the Chronicle) has been complaining that our most accomplished players cannot reproduce on the stage the "married voice," even when they are married. There is a peculiar domestic note—used at home—which cannot get over the footlights and was never meant for publicity. That critic might have gone further, and asserted that the stage never conveys the married manner, which hotel porters are quick to note in places that are reached by other and swifter means than marriage lines. Even the least observant in the stalls can seldom believe that the married people on the stage have been really married for more than ten minutes.

The National Theatre.

IT has been proved (writes Mr. Philip Gibbs in the Chronicle) that there is a demand for a National Theatre. There are butchers and weavers and factory hands and poor clerks and working women and labouring men who, out of their poverty or their savings, would "plank" down a shilling on the board to do something to honour the man who wrote Henry V.'s speech before the Battle of Agincourt and the fairy scenes in A Midsummer Night's Dream—the man who gave them their only knowledge, perhaps, of English history and their only insight to the magic world of poesy, when they recited his living words in the elementary schools of their childhood. And if these people would give their shillings, there are others who have had more chance of getting close to the great heart of Shakespeare, and who already have some dim notion as to the value of an English theatre fulfilling the functions of the Théâtre Français, who would surely subscribe their half-crowns or their half-sovereigns.

Facial Play Photographed.

THE Morning Leader has been publishing some very interesting reproductions of the separate films of a cinematograph of Miss Dorothea Webb reciting dramatic passages from Shakespeare, which were taken expressly to illustrate a lecture by Prof. Fredk. Mott, of the Royal Institution, on Tuesday, on "The Emotions and their Expression." Prof. Mott said that he had asked Miss Webb to try and feel the emotions she depicted if possible, as he wished to see the alterations of facial expression that occur in the recital of passages embodying some of the principal emotions, such as fear, anger, love, hate, rage, joy, &c. He did not expect her to actually feel those emotions. It did not need any close analysis, however, to show that Miss Webb's delineation of the various emotions was of a most realistic accuracy. Taking "Horror," he pointed out that the protruding eyes, the wrinkled forehead, the drawing up of the eyebrows, the angle of the mouth, which although wide open, was still drawn down, and the drawn, unrelaxed cheek were quite characteristic of horror.

The lecturer went on to show how true, physiologically, were the common expressions representative of the emotions. Such phrases as "Breathing out vengeance," "Fuming with anger," "His blood froze in his veins," "Blue funk," "Rooted to the spot with fear," "Bowed down with grief," "Flushed with anger," "Trembling with fear," "Paralysed with fear," &c., were all accurate expressions of the effect on the body of the emotions.

An Old Cock.

A PRECEDENT for Chantecler has at last been discovered. At the Vienna carnival in 1783 there was produced a piece, in two acts, entitled The Farm Yard Cock. The scene was laid in a farmyard, and the actors and actresses, attired as cocks and hens, crowed and clucked and flapped. The principal cock in the piece, like Chantecler, sang a hymn to the sun. The success of the production was so great that a similar piece, entitled A Comedy of Birds, was produced in the following year. The author was a certain journalist entitled Johann Rantenstrauch, but there is no reason to suppose that M. Rostand has ever heard of him or his play.

Mr. Welch in the Water.

IN his lecture on "Fools" at the Criterion Restaurant on Sunday, Mr. James Welch related that many years ago he showed another little boy how to dive, the considerations that it was a dangerous bit of rocky coast, that the tide was running out, and that he could not swim a stroke not stopping him. He dived. Eventually he was fished out, and after three or four hours of very hard work was brought round to consciousness. When he was asked how it felt to be drowning he could only recollect that he shouted for help as he was going down, and that he roared with laughter at the funny sound of his voice in the water. Many years afterwards he found that he was then only illustrating an old English proverb, "A fool will laugh when he is drowning." Therefore they might not only write him down a fool, but underline it.

No Female Fools.

"THERE are no fools," he went on, "among the female sex. It is the women who make fools of the men. Shakespeare finds the fools to be always male. Generally vanity in a man produces more foolish results than in a woman. Vanity in a woman leads to the pictorial and the effective, but in a man only to foolishness. It is poor 'Chantecler' who is the fool, and not the hen-pheasant." Mr. Welch said that as an actor he found it difficult sometimes to "suffer fools gladly." One sometimes got a fool in the front row who laughed in the wrong place. Then there was the fool who did not laugh at all, and the type of fool who laughed as though he were hissing.

Mr. Charles Frohman commenced his Repertory Theatre season at the Duke of York's Theatre with a play of stern, gloomy strength by that extremely advanced author Mr. John Galsworthy, the author of The Silver Box and Strife. Mr. Galsworthy has written a play calculated to wring one's heart if it be made of penetrable stuff; and to witness Justice leaves one with a tremendously strong sense of the sadness and suffering which exist, and with a resolve to be more merciful in our judgment on human acts and motives. We may infer a criticism of our present law of divorce in the situation with which the play commences. Falder, senior managing clerk to Messrs. James and Walter How, solicitors, has fallen in love with a married woman named Ruth Honeywill, whose husband is a drunkard and a brutal blackguard. Unable, according to our divorce law, to release herself from him, she consents to elope to America with Falder. Money, however, is required for the purpose, and the young man—he is only twenty-three—commits a forgery to get it, with the idea that on the other side of the Atlantic he will be able to earn and repay the sum he has stolen.

The forgery is discovered, and the two partners of the firm discuss how Falder shall be treated. The junior partner, Walter How, leans to the side of mercy; but his father does not believe in overlooking even first offences, and Falder is sent for trial.

Scenes in courts of justice have always been effective on the stage, and the poignant realism of Falder's trial at assizes, with the speech of counsel, the judge's summing up, and the verdict of the jury create a dramatic agony intense and sustained. In the end Falder is sent to penal servitude for three years. The point, of course, which the author, by the mouth of Falder's counsel, makes is that our adminstration of the law does not sufficiently consider extenuating circumstances such as those which surround Falder's crime. The hardness of the senior partner in refusing to overlook the clerk's first offence is paralleled by the judge's mechanical summing-up and the verdict of a jury insensible to the finer shades of guilt.

Falder goes to prison, and a leaden depression and despair take possession of his soul. The prison system grinds out of him all that is hopeful, resilient, and active. He is set free at the end of the three years, a mere sullen wreck of a man. In the meantime Ruth also has degenerated. After trying hard to earn a living as a sempstress, she has become the mistress of her employer. Falder determines to ask the Hows to take him back, and they agree to do so. But the forgery of a reference by which he obtained a former position has been discovered, and a detective comes to arrest him for it. As Falder is being taken away he throws himself out of a window and is killed.

Justice is a "slice out of life." From the ordinary playgoer's point of view this spoils it as a play. In all probability, if Justice were put on at an ordinary theatre in the ordinary way, it would not have a very long run, but the avowed object of a Repertory Theatre is to cater for an eccentric and advanced minority. It is an old saying that what is one man's meat is another man's poison, and the sort of drama which will depress and bore one person will send another into ecstasies of admiration.

Mr. Galsworthy's object, as his title shows, is to draw attention to what he regards as the injustices of our social arrangements. It is an injustice, he says, that a woman should only be able to obtain a divorce for cruelty combined with adultery. It is an injustice that a man who commits a crime in a state of nervous excitement should be treated in the same way as the professional criminal who commits it in cold blood; and it is an injustice that any human being should be condemned to solitary confinement. To deal properly with a play which is practically a social treatise and a plea for general reforms, it would be necessary to introduce essays on these three subjects, to the discussion of which Justice is a deliberate challenge. As space will not permit of this, we must content ourselves with praising the manner in which Mr. Galsworthy has put his case in each instance. There could hardly be a stronger plea for a change in our divorce law than the spectacle of this naturally good woman driven to adultery to escape from her husband's ill-treatment, and finally, in sheer despair, sinking into sordid vice. The terrible scene in which the prisoner beats against the walls of his cell, half-crazed by the silence and the solitude, is an "object lesson" on the evils of part of our prison system; and the arguments for the greater consideration of "extenuating circumstances" in allotting punishment are put with telling strength in the speech of the counsel for Falder's defence.

There was not a weak place in the acting of the company, the characters, down to the very smallest, being represented with rare skill and intelligence. Mr. Dennis Eadie played William Falder with admirable perception of the manner in which the part ought to be handled, and, without ever striking a theatrical or melodramatic note, managed to make the weak, unfortunate clerk very dear to the hearts of the audience. Miss Edyth Olive played Ruth Honeywill with a tragic and melancholy intensity which was quite appropriate, and acted with a melancholy pathos that was deeply touching. Mr. Sydney Valentine gave a marvellously natural and well-studied impersonation of James How; and Mr. Charles Maude was admirably natural as Walter How. In the character of Robert Cokeson Mr. Edmund Gwenn acted in his usual artistic and original style, and by his personal power somewhat masked the comparative artificiality of the rôle. One of the most fortunate of the artists, from the point of view of effect, was Mr. Charles Bryant, who as the Counsel for the Defence had one of the most sympathetic and emotional speeches in the play to deliver, and spoke it with great earnestness and feeling. But all the characters in the Court scene were sustained in a way that closely approached perfection. Mr. Dion Boucicault as the Judge, Mr. Oscar Adye as the Counsel for the Prosecution, Mr. C. C. Calvert as the Clerk of Arraigns, Mr. Talbot Homewood as the Usher, and Mr. R. Ossulton-Riche as the Foreman of the Jury, all gave to their performances the subtle touch of individuality so difficult to describe, but so fully felt by an audience. That able and experienced actor Mr. Robert Pateman as Moaney, an old convict, supplied a character sketch of great merit; and the parts of Sweedle, Wister, and Cowley were individualised by Mr. George Hersee, Mr. Leslie Carter, and Mr. C. E. Vernon with a finish and appreciation which were worthy of the warmest praise. Mr. Grendon Bentley as the kindly but routine-ridden Prison Governor, Mr. Hubert Harben as the Chaplain, Mr. Lewis Casson as the Doctor, Mr. Frederick Lloyd as the Chief Warder, and Mr. Benedict Butler as the Warder Instructor, rendered these minor but important characters with all the quiet elaboration which could have been given to principal parts. Mr. O. P. Heggie played Clipton cleverly, and Mr. Whitford Kane enacted O'Cleary carefully and thoughtfully. Justice created, as it was intended to do, an effect of serious and thoughtful depression combined with admiration for the great genius of the dramatist. Mr. Granville Barker's production of the play was perfect.

On Wednesday was presented for the first time a debate, in one sitting, by Bernard Shaw, entitled

"MISALLIANCE."

John Tarleton, Junior ..MR. FREDERICK LLOYD
Bentley Summerhays ....MR. DONALD CALTHROP
Hypathia Tarleton .....MISS MIRIAM LEWES
Mrs. Tarleton .....MISS FLORENCE HAYDON
Lord Summerhays .....MR. HUBERT HARBEN
John Tarleton .....MR. C. M. LOWNE
Joseph Percival .....MR. CHARLES BRYANT
Lina Szczepanowska .....MISS LENA ASHWELL
Julius Baker .....MR. O. P. HEGGIE

The scene of Mr. Shaw's piece is laid in the Villa at Hindhead of Mr. John Tarleton, whose successful manufacture of Tarleton's underwear has made him very rich. John Tarleton, junior, who holds an important position in the firm, is a strong, commonplace person of limited intellect. Tarleton's daughter, Hypathia, is by nature adventurous, amorous, and erratic, and she chafes angrily at her monotonous life and the insipidity of the young men who come courting her. Mrs. Tarleton, her mother, is a motherly, middle-class woman, with reminiscences of early married life on a small income. Hypathia is engaged to a neurasthenic, hysterical young man named Bentley Summerhays. He is the son of Lord Summerhays, a retired Indian official, who, in a moment of passion, has proposed marriage to Hypathia, who has refused him with ridicule.

The action opens with John Tarleton, junior, bullying Bentley, who cries and screams like a child, and brings in Mrs. Tarleton and Hypathia, who carry him out consoling. Two other personages drop into the story, literally "from the skies." They are Joseph Percival, a young man with wealthy connections, and Lina Szczepanowska, a female trapezist and juggler. They have descended into Tarleton's garden on an aeroplane, on which Lina has embarked to keep her nerves in order. Lord Summerhays, in time past on the Continent, made improper proposals to Lina, who is a dashing and attractive personage; and, soon after her arrival, John Tarleton senior, who boasts of his "exuberant vitality," offers to make her his mistress, while Tarleton junior offers her marriage. She scornfully refuses. Then Hypathia makes obstinate and aggressive love to Percival. He resists her overtures for some time, but when she entreats him to "chase her amongst the heather," he yields, and they go out together for that purpose. The conversation between them has, however, been overheard by Julius Baker, a sickly and embittered clerk, whose mother was for some time Tarleton senior's mistress. Baker has been driven half mad by bad health, novel reading, sedentary work, and genteel poverty, and he comes to shoot Tarleton for seducing his—Baker's—mother. The elderly draper treats the matter very prosaically, and points out that it was with the money which he gave to his mistress when they parted that she was able to purchase a husband. This does not pacify Baker, who still threatens Tarleton senior with a revolver; but his life is saved by Lina, who comes in and catches Baker by the wrist, and twists it until he gives up the weapon. Baker, in his bitterness, remarks on the "goings on" of Hypathia and Percival, and the latter, taking high ground, denies everything, and forces Baker, in fear of physical chastisement, to write a confession withdrawing his remarks. Mrs. Tarleton, however, who knew and loved Baker's mother, takes the poor clerk's part, and expresses her belief in the truth of his statements. The blame now falls on Percival, who asks Hypathia to explain that she made overtures to him, which the young lady declines to do. So in the end, therefore, he has to expose her in order to clear his character. Tarleton gives Baker a glass of sloe gin, the effect of which is to make him blatantly aggressive, and to set him talking rabid Socialism about retribution and "the writing on the wall"; and he goes off saying he does not "give a damn" for anyone. Lina denounces the stuffiness of life at Hindhead, and the pre-occupation of the well-to-do with sexuality, and complains that almost every man in the house has made love to her—the weeping Bentley has become her slave since she carried him out by the scruff of his neck when he was in a fit of hysterics. She exalts the advantages of being a trapezist and earning one's own living, and departs, shaking the dust of Hindhead from her feet. Percival consents to be married to Hypathia, if Tarleton senior will "come down" handsomely; and the piece ends.

The story was embellished with a number of arguments, observations, and jokes. The arguments were on the following subjects:—The difficulty of parents explaining sexual facts to their children; the restraint inflicted on middle-class girls by dull respectability; the objections to clerking as an occupation; the gulf in thought and feeling between youth and age; and many other topics too numerous to mention. The jokes were of various kinds and qualities, but most of them elicited laughs or titters, Tarleton senior's trick of referring to some well-known author in illustration of an argument always evoking a responsive roar. Scarcely a minute passed without a laugh, and sometimes the merriment was prolonged for several seconds. Misalliance was received with every evidence of success.

The acting was excellent, the piece being cast in the most liberal and judicious way. Mr. C. M. Lowne played the breezy, hearty, sentimental, and rakish old manufacturer with a genial expansion which carried all before it. It was a performance full of warm colour, active, energetic, and amiable; and John Tarleton senior was one of the most popular personages of the play. Mr. Frederick Lloyd as John Tarleton junior depicted density and determination, in firm and solid style, and gave a performance that remains in the memory. Mr. Donald Calthorp made the best of the repulsive rôle of the little whining cur, Bentley Summerhays, and another painfully degenerate character, Julius Baker, was carefully and conscientiously sustained by Mr. O. P. Heggie. Miss Miriam Lewes as Hypathia supplied a picturesque and piquant portrait of a morbid modern girl, restless amid uncongenial surroundings; and Mrs. Tarleton was represented with perfect ease and art by that admirably experienced actress, Miss Florence Haydon. The refined, philosophical, and sensitive Indian official, Lord Summerhays, had a completely charming exponent in Mr. Hubert Harden, and Mr. Charles Bryant as Joseph Percival was much assisted by a fine physique in giving an entirely convincing embodiment of that large and lordly youth. Miss Lena Ashwell as Lina Szczepanowska looked very pretty in a becoming knickerbocker costume, and delivered Lina's indignant tirades and ingenious explanations with all the requisite art and energy. She certainly had one of the pleasantest parts in the cast. Misalliance, which was produced by the author, was an undeniable success.

Mr. Arthur Phillips began his season at the Royal Court Theatre on Saturday night with a revival of Shakespeare's comedy, The Merchant of Venice, which proved interesting for more reasons than one. Mr. Phillips has gathered together a band of young actors of more or less repute, imbued with the fire and enthusiasm of youth, tempered by the discretion which comes of training and combining in an excellent whole. The stage management is noticeably good, and this was especially shown in the carnival scene, a picture of light and joy and laughter, which immediately precedes the darkened scene in which Shylock makes his return to his deserted home.

The chief interest of the revival naturally centres in the Shylock of Mr. Arthur Phillips, who plays the part rather on the lines laid down by the late Sir Henry Irving. Mr. Phillips has evidently given much intelligent thought and earnest study to the character of the Jew, and if he be somewhat lacking in the temperament necessary to produce a "great" Shylock, this very lack brings out more forcibly the vindictiveness of the moneylender, which has been neutralised or at any rate condoned, by the strength of a more powerful personality. Mr. Phillips was at his best in Act III. in his outburst of mingled rage and despair at the loss of his ducats and the desertion of his daughter; and in the Trial Scene he was impressive throughout, and made a really fine and effective exit. Mr. Cyril Keightley, who is famous for his depictions of villainy, gave a sound reading of the part of Bassanio. Mr. James Berry imparted to the character of Antonio the benevolence, the gentle philosophy which, according to Mr. Frank Harris in his recent book, "The Man Shakespeare," were the chief characteristics of the great poet himself, whom Mr. Harris believes to have revealed himself as Antonio. Mr. E. Harcourt Williams could not have been better as Gratiano—his gallant air, his easy light-heartedness, his excellent by-play, are all worthy of the highest praise. We do not remember that the part of Gratiano has ever been better played than it is by Mr. Harcourt Williams, who, in addition possesses the natural advantage of a beautiful speaking voice. Mr. Ross Shore acts with much humour as Launcelot Gobbo, and Mr. Arthur Fayne was sympathetic as old Gobbo. That most difficult part the Prince of Morocco, was played with dignity and feeling by Mr. Leslie Palmer, who made a fine figure as a "dusky monarch," and as the second unsuccessful suitor, the Prince of Arragon, Mr. Rupert Harvey also merits commendation. The Lorenzo of Mr. Scott Sunderland was attractive, although a little stiff, particularly in the last act, while the two friends Salanio and Salarino were played with spirit by Mr. E. Stuart Vinden and Mr. Richard Fielding. Miss Amy Brandon Thomas was somewhat handicapped by inexperience in the onerous rôle of Portia, but her freshness and charm atoned for this deficiency to some extent. She was best in the final act, where Portia tormente Bassanio for parting with the ring she had given him, in which she brought out the playful tenderness of Portia very prettily. Miss Dora Hole was an attractive Nerissa, and her performance was satisfactory in every detail. Miss Christie as Jessica made a very favourable impression, her facial expressions and her elocution being particularly good. The other parts were well filled by a capable company.

MISS VIOLA TREE'S VOCAL RECITAL.

At Bechstein Hall on Monday afternoon Miss Viola Tree gave her first vocal recital. A large audience was present, and they accorded Miss Tree a very hearty welcome. The concert-giver was first heard in "Amarilli," a sixteenth-century song of Caccini; the charming "L'Angélus," a Vieux Chanson de Basse Bretagne; and "Silvie la Bergère" (Pierre Guerdon), arranged by Sir Hubert Parry. These three songs were given by Miss Tree with finish and refinement, and she was equally successful in Tosti's "Quando cadran le foglie" and "Colloque sentimental," by Debussy. In a group of English songs Miss Tree received an enthusiastic encore for her dramatic singing of "When we two parted," a musical setting of Byron's verses by Sir Hubert Parry. Miss Tree also greatly pleased her audience in "A Stray Nymph of Dian." Two songs, "Killary" and "A lake and a fairy-boat," accompanied by the composer, Mr. Joseph Holbrooke; "Weep you no more, sad fountains" (Tovey), and Sir Charles V. Stanford's gruesome and dismal song, "A Corsican Dirge," were also given. In a group of German songs, however, Miss Tree displayed her sympathetic voice to the greatest advantage. "Es war ein alter König" and "Tausendschön" (Georg Henschel), Schumann's delightful "Frühlingsnacht" and "Mondnacht," and R. Strauss's "Die Nacht." During the afternoon Miss Tree received many floral tributes. Mr. Jamieson Dodds, who assisted Miss Tree, sang "Vittoria" (Carissimi), Raff's "Mädchenlied," and gave so stirring a version of Schubert's song, "To the Lyre," that he had a most hearty encore. The accompanist was Mr. Harold Samuel.

"Mrs. Warren" in Berlin.

IN a recent paragraph we stated that Mr. Shaw's plays had been only moderately well received in Berlin. Such was our correspondent's description of most of the premières. The best test, however, of public opinion is patronage. Mrs. Warren's Profession, which was produced at the Central Theatre, Berlin, on Nov. 15, 1907, has been given 276 times in that city. The piece has been for a long time the property of the Hebbel Theatre, and is apparently a favourite with the patrons of that house.

Mr. Harvey Hopeful.

"THERE is no doubt," says Mr. Martin Harvey in an interview, "that we are going through a stiff time; but, in my opinion, the theatres are not being so adversely affected by the success of music halls as by the success of rinks. Rinks have, I believe, hurt the theatres a good deal. That damage, however, I think, will prove to be only of a temporary kind. I believe that trade depression and recent elections, of course, are answerable for most of our troubles, and I am sure that an improvement in matters has already set in."

Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Arthur Bourchier deserve great credit for presenting Mr. W. Somerset Maugham's play. The Tenth Man is not only a strong and effective drama, admirably invented, constructed, and written; it is a piece with a thesis and a moral. The thesis is that while nine men out of ten have their prices, an obstacle in the way of the able and unscrupulous rascal will always be found in the tenth, who is incorruptible. The rascal in Mr. Maugham's play is George Winter, a self-made man who, from being a clerk in a "bucket-shop," has become a great company promoter and speculator. He has married Catherine, the daughter of Lord Francis Etchingham, a foolish old man who fancies he has a genius for finance, and has been taken by Winter into partnership. In the first act Catherine, who can endure Winter's glaring infidelity no longer, leaves him and returns to her father's house. She has fallen in love with a young politician named Robert Colby, and is resolved to divorce Winter and marry him.

But Winter explains that this course is out of the question. He has gained possession of a love-letter from Colby to Catherine; and he threatens, if she enters an action for divorce, to bring a counter action As the seats of both Winter and Colby are held on precarious tenures the scandal which would follow would ruin both. Colby's whole soul is in politics, and he hopes to attain a high position in the Cabinet. So Catherine has to choose between bearing her fate as Winter's wife and spoiling the career of the man she loves. She takes the former course. When a deputation from the provincial town of Middlepool, for which Winter is M.P., arrives to demand from her a direct denial of any intention to divorce her husband, she gives the assurance at once.

The troubles of the Etchingham family are not at an end. Winter, in order to purchase a mine in Central America, has embezzled over £80,000 of Trust Bonds, and has made Lord Francis an innocent accomplice in the crime. The mine turns out to be worthless, and penal servitude stares Lord Francis, Winter, and his subservient clerk, Frederick Bennett, in the face. Lord Francis's first instinct is to go to Scotland Yard, but he is persuaded to keep quiet by Winter, who proceeds to turn the worthless mine into a company.

All these threads of interest are combined in the last act, which takes place in the private room of a provincial hotel, with the sound of trams passing periodically. Winter's election is going splendidly, when a London financial paper finds out that the mine is a swindle, and exposes Winter in a stinging article. A paragraph in this excites the suspicion of a hard, stern provincial man of business, James Ford, who is an exception to the rule that everyone can be bought at a price. He goes to London, looks into matters, and discovers the embezzlement. Winter, by bold "bluffing," has neutralised the effect of the article and has won his election by a narrow majority. When he finds that nothing can alter Ford's resolve, he poisons himself, and so the play ends.

The part of George Winter, a remorseless rascal with a merry, impudent manner and a plausible tongue, suited Mr. Bourchier exactly, and, made up effectively with a beard, he hit off the type with striking skill and spirit. The light, sarcastic, jaunty manner of the man, and the brutal frankness with which he revelled in his rascality were admirably sketched by Mr. Bourchier, whose delivery of the cutting speech in which, in order to frighten Lord Francis, Winter describes the horrors of penal servitude, thrilled the house to the core. Mr. Bourchier's performance in the last act of the piece, when Winter, drunk with delight at winning the election, reels desperately and hysterically under the blow of his ruin, was a fine bit of acting, which held the audience in a firm grip and made the concluding scene of the play very exciting and impressive. Mr. Bourchier's George Winter is a performance that cannot be forgotten. It is one of the best things that he has done. Miss Frances Dillon as Catherine Winter had a part which was not entirely satisfactory, the wife's warm love scenes with Colby somewhat detracting from the interest in her as a martyr to marital infidelity; but she played it from first to last with excellent expression, a delicate yet firm touch, and exquisite grace and refinement. The rôle of the Rt. Hon. Robert Colby also needed very judicious handling, and obtained it accordingly from Mr. Godfrey Tearle, who was the beau ideal of a well-groomed, intellectual, ambitious young politician. A clever bit of character-acting was Mr. Michael Sherbrooke's performance as the anxious, energetic little clerk. It was very natural and effective indeed. Mr. A. E. George as James Ford did not get his chance until the last act, when he rose to the occasion, and supplied a very strong and serious rendering of Ford's indignation and distress. Mr. Edmund Maurice was unimpeachable as Lord Francis Etchingham, both in make-up, dress, and characterisation, and it was fortunate that he was available for the part. Mr. A. Holmes-Gore's Lord Perigal was distinguished by a rare polish, sweetness, and elevation, The minor parts were all neatly played. Mr. George Bealby contributed a clever comedy sketch as a hypocritical parson; Mr. Frank Atherley was good as Colonel Boyce; and a young and shallow couple were pleasantly impersonated by Miss Daisy Markham and Mr. Douglas Imbert, Mr. Dallas Cairns being efficient as Thompson. The first scene, by Mr. Harford, was sumptuous, and the second appropriate; and the piece had an enthusiastic reception.

THE sum of £145 13s. 9d. has been distributed among the Liverpool charities as the result of a capital amateur performance of Jack Straw, given at the Royal Court Theatre a short time ago.

"THE LITTLE DAMOZEL" registers its 150th performance on Thursday at Wyndham's. The American rights have been secured by Colonel Henry Savage; but, according to present arrangements, Mr. Monckton Hoffe's delightful comedy will not be produced in the United States until the autumn.

SOME speculation has arisen as to the date on which Sir Herbert Tree met with the mishap which caused him to appear on the stage with his arm in a sling—an incident which has figured in a case in the law courts this week. It was on Saturday, Aug. 31, 1895, at the Grand Theatre, Hull, that the distinguished actor sustained the injury alluded to, putting his shoulder out by stumbling over a sill at the wings when making an exit as Loris Ipanof in Fedora.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENTS.—MODIFIED PROPOSALS.

The weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Sir Melvill Beachcroft (chairman) presiding.

The Education Committee reported as follows:—We reported on Oct. 12, 1909, that we had considered as to the steps to be taken to secure the safety of school children at entertainments or displays held either on the school premises or elsewhere; that these cases had hitherto been dealt with as they have arisen, and that while the general precautions taken by the Council had in the past been adequate to secure that all ordinary risks were avoided, we were of opinion that the Children Act, 1908, which came into operation on April 1, 1909, offered a suitable occasion for reviewing the existing practice. We accordingly submitted recommendations on the subject, but in consequence of certain representations made on behalf of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee, they were withdrawn by our chairman for further consideration. As a result of communications with the Theatres and Music Halls and the Fire Brigade Committees we now submit our proposals, modified so as to meet the views of these committees in regard to the rules which we had framed.

The entertainments under consideration may be divided into two classes, (a) entertainments organised locally, which may be sub-divided into (i.) entertainments in school buildings; (ii.) entertainments in local halls; (iii.) performances in theatres; and (b) large entertainments organised from the Education offices.

It should be understood that under these heads we deal only with cases where the school organisation is used either to promote the entertainment or in some way to cause the children to be present thereat. For cases outside this category the Council, as local education authority, has no responsibility, but in making this demarcation it will be well to interpret the phrase "school organisation" in its fullest sense, as the Council has a certain responsibility, if in any way its officers or its system contribute to the assembling of children. It may be convenient at this point to quote the provisions of Section 121 of the Children Act, 1908, in order to show the general responsibility of the Council apart from the question of its control of the school system. These provisions are as follow:—

(1) Where an entertainment for children, or any entertainment at which the majority of the persons attending are children is provided, and the number of children who attend the entertainment exceeds one hundred, and access to any part of the building in which the children are accommodated is by stairs, it shall be the duty of the person who provides the entertainment to station and keep stationed, wherever necessary, a sufficient number of adult attendants, properly instructed as to their duties, to prevent more children or other persons being admitted to any such part of the building than that part can properly accommodate, and to control the movement of the children and other persons admitted to any such part whilst entering and leaving, and to take all other reasonable precautions for the safety of the children.

(2) Where the occupier of the building permits, for hire or reward, the building to be used for the purpose of an entertainment, he shall take all reasonable steps to secure the observance of the provisions of this section.

(5) It shall be the duty of the council of the county or county borough in which a building in which any contravention of the provisions of this section is alleged to have taken place to institute proceedings under this section if the building is a building licensed by the Lord Chamberlain, or is licensed by the council of the county or county borough under the enactments relating to the licensing of theatres or of houses or other places for music or dancing, and in any other case it shall be the duty of the police authority to institute such proceedings.

PERFORMANCES AT THEATRES.

The next portion of the report has reference to entertainments in school buildings in local halls, and thirdly to performances at theatres, in reference to which the Committee state:—

Where permission is asked for children to attend theatrical or pantomime performances, the headmaster or mistress (or, in the case of a non-provided school, the correspondent) is informed that no objection will be raised to the attendance of the children at the performance, provided (a) that the consent of the parents or guardians is first obtained, and (b) that a sufficient number of the staff of the school are willing to accompany the children and remain with them until the close of the performance.

Some difficulty has been experienced in the past in administering these regulations owing either to shortness of notice or inadequate information. It is true that in cases of this type the responsibility of the Council is less direct than in the previous cases. Yet, as the school organisation is brought into play, it is desirable that full particulars of the proposal should be forwarded to the Council.

We are also of opinion that under this category it should be laid down that any distribution of tickets to children for admission to travelling shows and the like should be prohibited.

ENTERTAINMENTS ORGANISED FROM THE EDUCATION OFFICES.

A recent performance at His Majesty's Theatre (1,230 children at each performance) and the opening of Rotherhithe Tunnel (4,000 children) are examples of this class of case. These entertainments are arranged with the greatest care by a specially selected staff at the education offices, and we do not think that any special regulations are necessary.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

We recommend: (a) That no entertainment in which the school organisation is in any way involved be held on the premises of L.C.C. schools or in any other places unless an application for permission to hold such entertainment, in the form of a certificate that satisfactory arrangements have been made and approved by the managers, shall have been approved on behalf of the Council. (b) That the attention of the managers of non-provided schools be drawn to the requirements of section 121 of the Children Act, 1908, with reference to the safety of children at entertainments; that they be informed of their legal responsibility under the Act and of the precautions taken by the Council in respect of the use of the organisation of L.C.C. schools for purposes of entertainments, treats, &c., whether in the schools or public halls; and that they be asked to adopt the procedure similar to that referred to in the foregoing resolution (a), whenever it is proposed to give an entertainment, treat, &c., to children attending non-provided schools. The report was received.

MR. ALEXANDER USES HIS OWN CAR.

A long discussion took place with reference to a letter which appeared in the Times, the writer, Mr. Casson, a member of the Council, charging the members of the Municipal Reform Party with making use, at certain public functions, of conveyances provided at the expense of the ratepayers.

The Rev. Stewart Headlam, in the course of some remarks, suggested that Mr. George Alexander, as Chairman of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee, might have used one of the vehicles provided by the Council when he opened the Ruskin Park extension on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. George Alexander: As a matter of personal explanation, I went in my own car.

The Rev. S. Headlam: My friend, Mr. Alexander, thereby showed he is a very wise man.

Mr. W. Reynolds also spoke on the question raised by Mr. Casson's action, which was strongly condemned by members of the party attacked.

MR. J. L. SHINE'S ACCIDENT.

In the King's Bench Division on Monday, Mr. John Lloyd Shine, comedian, sued the Moss' Empires, Limited, to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by him while performing at the Holloway Empire. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants were negligent, which they denied, and pleaded that the plaintiff was negligent. The defendants also said the plaintiff was in common employment.

The counsel for plaintiff were Mr. J. A. Simon, K.C., Mr. Wallace Atkins, and Mr. David White, and for the defendants Mr. M. Shearman, K.C., Mr. E. F. Lever, and Mr. S. P. Kerr.

Mr. Simon said that the defendants owned or controlled about thirty music halls, and Mr. Shine had a contract to appear at some of these halls. The accident happened on Feb. 15, 1909, when he was presenting for the first time at the Holloway Empire his own sketch, entitled The Actor's Art, in which he was assisted by four other characters. The plaintiff had to go on the stage through scenery representing a door, and the entrance had to be made in a bustling manner. Across the bottom of the door was a wooden batten, about three inches high, to keep the scenery rigid, and the plaintiff tripped over it and sustained grave injuries to his left shoulder and arm. He endeavoured to go on with his part, but was unable to do so, and the curtain had to be rung down. His injury was attended to at the Great Northern Hospital, and, not to disappoint the public, he gave a recitation or monologue at the second house. X-rays were subsequently applied, and it was found that there was a fracture.

Mr. Shine, giving evidence, said that for upwards of thirty years he had been a member of the theatrical profession, and at one time was lessee of three West End theatres—the Globe, Gaiety, and the Empire. He had also been chief comedian at Drury Lane Theatre. His salary for the sketch was £32 10s. per week. He represented seven characters, including a Scotsman, Irishman, Cockney, and an old Irishwoman.

Mr. Simon: What sort of entrance had you to make?

Mr. Shine: A brisk, impetuous entrance, I fell violently on to my shoulder, and there was a great burst of applause. The audience thought it was a comic entrance, but when I got up I found it was not. My arm was broken. Some acrobats, thinking my arm was only dislocated, tried to pull it into position. The use of wooden battens is not now usual in theatres; they have been superseded by iron battens about a sixteenth of an inch thick. Through the injury I lost about £20 a week for six weeks, and had to pay about £50 in royalties for playing a substituted sketch, in which less energy was required.

Mr. Frank Curzon, lessee of Wyndham's Theatre and the Prince of Wales Theatre, said that he had not seen a wooden batten in a theatre for twenty years. The only one he had seen in his lifetime was at a "fit-up" theatre in the wilds of Wales. Wooden battens were dangerous, because actors when entering the stage could not look at their feet; they must look at the audience.

Sir Herbert Tree said that at one period Mr. Shine was manager of a company in which he was acting. A wooden batten on the stage was old-fashioned, and obviously was a dangerous arrangement. The safe arrangement was an iron, flush with the floor.

Asked whether he had known one of these wooden battens used, Sir Herbert replied, "Thirteen years ago at Hull I came across one."

You "came across it" in more senses than one? Yes; there was a staircase and—I put my shoulder out.

Is this injury calculated to interfere with the engagements an actor may get?—It depends upon the parts he may be called upon to play.

Mr. Shearman (cross-examining): Usually when you go to the provinces you take a play successful in London and then have to take your own scenery?—Not always; in Shakespeare plays I should as a rule.

When you go on tour you go with a stage-manager?—Yes.

And it would be his business to look after the scenery and not yours?—Yes; though I should call attention to anything which was not satisfactory—if I tripped over one of these things, for instance.

You only trip over by accident?—Yes; I should not trip on purpose.

Mr. M. White, F.R.C.S., and Mr. Hunter Richards, F.R.C.S., of Harley-street, gave evidence to the effect that they did not think the plaintiff would recover the full and free use of his shoulder joint.

Other witnesses also gave evidence.

The case was resumed on Tuesday, when Mr. Bertie Ralland, acting-manager of the Holloway Empire, said the scenery for Mr. Shine's sketch was set up in front of the plaintiff's manager.

Mr. Charles Rock then went into the witness-box, and was asked by Mr. Shearman: Is it fair to describe wooden battens, in the words of Sir Herbert Tree, as old-fashioned?—Sir Herbert Tree is very up-to-date, and being a big manager would have the very latest of everything.

Mr. Simon (cross-examining): Has it ever been your experience to make an exit backwards?—Yes. We know that gentlemen whose duty takes them to the Court get great experience in walking backwards, but what do you do? Do you take a sudden skip up?—I step naturally over it.

Mr. Stanley Wade, lately stage-manager at Daly's, thought the wooden batten bore much the same relation to the iron batten as the horse 'bus did to the motor vehicle; but it was still used.

Mr. Bertie Shelton, manager of the stage department of Moss' Empires, said he was formerly stage-manager to Sir Herbert Tree's company for nine and a half years, and he was stage-manager at Hull when Sir Herbert met with his accident.

Mr. Simon: When you were stage-manager for Sir Herbert Tree did he ever trip over an iron sill?—I don't remember a case in which he wanted to trip.

Do you remember him tripping over a wooden batten?—Yes, at Hull, in the first act of the Bunch of Violets.

Mr. Shelton: I was not hauled over the coals, and it is no good suggesting I was. Moreover, Sir Herbert did not make a claim in respect to that accident, and he played next week with his arm in a sling.

Mr. Shine, recalled, said that some time ago he was injured in a railway accident.

Mr. Shearman: You got £400 on that occasion?—No, I got £250 without an action being brought.

Judgment having been entered for £1,000 damages, a stay of execution was granted with a view to a possible appeal.

SHINE v. MOSS' EMPIRES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Our client, Sir Herbert Tree, gave evidence at the trial of this action last Wednesday to the effect that while playing in Fedora at Hull in 1895 he met with a similar accident to that which happened to Mr. Shine.

After Sir Herbert had left the Court Mr. Bertie Shelton was called by the defendant, and he said that the accident happened not in Fedora but in A Bunch of Violets.

It does not seem to matter in which play the accident occurred, but as we believe much depended on Sir Herbert's evidence, it may be as well for us to state that, after referring to the file of The Era, we find that his evidence was correct, and that Mr. Bertie Shelton's statement was incorrect.—Yours truly,

J. D. LANGTON AND PASSMORE.

JOHNNY ALEXANDER'S BENEFIT.

The Empire, Camberwell, was full on Thursday afternoon last, the occasion of a benefit to Mr. Johnny Alexander, and his farewell to active work. During the many years "Johnny" has been in the profession he has made hosts of friends, and as many of these as circumstances permitted were present to say "farewell."

The hit of the afternoon was the "great boxing contest between the two star variety performers Fred Kitchen and Charles Coborn," who were to don the gloves for a three-round contest. Mr. Geo. Harrington was billed as timekeeper and referee. The Man who Broke the Bank came up smiling, but Frederick was nowhere to be found—at least on the stage. So Mr. Coborn claimed the match by default, and was immediately presented with two massive "gold" cups—splendid specimens of the property man's art. And everybody was satisfied.

Johnny Alexander appeared during the afternoon with his burlesque company in the comic absurdity Actors, introducing Mlle. Clairette, and Messrs. Fred Percy, Tom Pemberton, and Ray Dunne. The other willing contributors to a fine entertainment were Joe Elvin, Flo Banks, Gilbert Girard, Little Ganty, Tom Leamore, Charles Pond, Sammy Shields, James Stewart, Hyram Travers, Miss Bertha Barnes, Miss Daisy de Roy, Miss Violet Murray, Miss Bertha Norwood, Harry Blake, Ted E. Box, Edwin Barwick, Chirgwin, Charles Coborn, and Pat Carey. The musical directors were Leon Bassett, W. S. Bassett, and Frank Hurst. Charles Coborn managed the stage, and was assisted by William Nutt. Messrs. Ben Obo, Jim Obo, T. C. Callaghan, Charles Cornish, W. L. Murray, Will King, George Harrington, Ben Woodger, Harry Gribbon, George Cooper, and Tom Packer were everywhere, and adorned with stewards' badges. The following ladies were untiring in their efforts to sell programmes: Miss Margaret Radcliffe, Mrs. Hunter, and Miss Molly Shields, and Mrs. Harold Pounds sold flowers. The design on the front of the programme was specially drawn by Mr. Rossi Ashton.

It is understood that a most substantial sum was handed over to Mr. Douglas Stuart as a result of the matinée. As, however, there are many large and small sums on the way to 18, Charing Cross-road from the provinces to add to that amount the total money realised cannot as yet be stated.

At the conclusion of the performance Mr. Johnny Alexander, who was escorted on the stage by Messrs. Were and Stuart, made a brief little speech of thanks to artists, audience, and helpers.

PAUL CINQUEVALLI'S CASE.

At the Shoreditch County Court on Thursday, before his Honour Judge Smyly, K.C., the R.B. Syndicate, Ltd., of 95, High-street, Shoreditch, sued Paul Cinquevalli, of 5, Mostyn-road, Brixton, music hall artist, to recover £50 8s. 4d. By an agreement of Oct. 18, 1907, the defendant agreed to appear in his usual entertainment at the Royal Cambridge Music Hall, at a salary of £64 10s. per week, for one week, commencing on Oct. 19, 1908. Under Clause 4 of the agreement the defendant was transferred to the London Music Hall, to perform there in lieu of the Cambridge, at a reduced salary of £55, that transfer being agreed to on Oct. 12, 1908. The defendant appeared at the first house only at the London Music Hall, on Monday, Oct. 19, and not again during the week. By reason of the neglect and refusal of the defendant to appear at the London Music Hall the plaintiffs alleged they had suffered damage.

Mr. Greenhill Richards, the managing-director of the London Music Hall, said Mr. Cinquevalli's non-appearance had been a very serious matter to them, as he was the "star" turn.

Mr. Paul Cinquevalli deposed that his non-appearance was caused by his assistant breaking down. A doctor ordered a sea-voyage. So he—Cinquevalli—took him to Australia. By so doing he had to forego his contracts with the Tivoli, the Canterbury, the Pavilion, the Brixton Empress, and the Camberwell Palace.

Mr. Joe O'Gorman stated that he was in the bar at the London on the night in question, and saw the assistant. He advised Mr. Cinquevalli to take the boy back to be seen at the London, and rushed off and obtained a substitute.

Mr. Charles Chapman, manager to Messrs. Warner, said he arranged the original contract, which he considered was afterwards cancelled by a letter saying that the place would be shut up. He tried to fill up for the defendant, and almost at the last minute he booked up the London.

Mr. Richards, recalled, said the Cambridge was only temporarily closed, and was now running. The R.B. Syndicate had never been in liquidation.

In giving judgment Judge Smyly said the defendant did not perform wholly and solely because of the illness of the assistant. That reason was justifiable and honourable. He did not try to shirk the work, and there was no doubt the matter had been a great financial loss to him. He thought there had been no breach of contract, but simply a misfortune, and he gave a verdict for the defendant, with costs.

Considerable interest is being evinced in the forthcoming appearance, on March 7, at the Palace Theatre, of Mlle. Polaire, who, it will be remembered, created the character of Ma Gosse in Paris. She will be seen in a little sketch, in which she will have an opportunity of exhibiting her terpsichorean powers.

It is interesting to note that Stylo and Beatrice Bonnie (Mrs. Stylo) have their birthday anniversary on Feb. 28, and that they are of the same age.

The Borough of Weymouth authorities are prepared to receive tenders for the exclusive privileges of using the concert platform known as the "Sea View Concert Platform," situate on the foreshore within the said borough, for high-class musical entertainments on week-days during the summer season, viz., from May 16 (Whit Monday) to the end of September, 1910. Particulars may be obtained of Mr. Walter R. Wallis, secretary Amusement Committee, Municipal Offices, Weymouth.

The special appeal fund in aid of the unfortunate Birmingham Football Club will be considerably augmented by the receipts of a matinée held at the Birmingham Hippodrome on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. P. D. Elbourne, the manager, and his assistant, Mr. H. C. Baldry, had arranged an excellent programme, and there were over three thousand persons in the hall.

Artists in the local pantomimes and at the halls readily gave their services, and the performance went with a rare swing from beginning to end. The following names were on the programme:—Mr. George Robey, Bros. Griffiths, Mr. Tom Shale, Miss Ethel Haydon, Sinclair and Whiteford, Bros. Ashley, Miss Daisy Mayer, Mr. Walter King, Mr. Mark Sheridan, Bros. Egbert, Miss Dorothy Ward, Miss Daisy Dormer, Mr. Harry Conlin, Will Vay's Juveniles, Mr. Fred Karno's company in Skating, Mr. Fred Russell, The Rangers, Mr. Brent Hayes, Mr. Dave Carter, Miss Edie Veno, Mlle. Pollo, Mr. Tony Black, Kiners Moulin, Miss Marie Colmore, Master Stuart McMillan, Little Maudie Olmar, and Miss Ray Ford.

During the afternoon the fact was made known that Councillor Marsh, well known in local theatrical circles, had presented a 25-guinea cup to the Birmingham Football Club, to be won in a competition the nature of which it was left to the directors of the club to decide.

DAISY JEROME AND THE CRITIC.

In the King's Bench Division on Thursday, before Mr. Justice Coleridge and a Common Jury, Mrs. Daisy Cynthia Jerome Fowler, actress and music hall artist, known professionally as Daisy Jerome, claimed damages from Messrs. J. and W. Griffin (Limited), proprietors of the Walsall Observer and South Staffordshire Chronicle, in respect of an alleged libel contained in that journal in a criticism of her performance. The defendants denied that there was any libel, and pleaded fair comment. The plaintiff was engaged as principal artist to perform at Her Majesty's Theatre of Varieties, Walsall, for the week ending Feb. 20, 1909, and the defendants in their paper published the following:—

"For some weeks past we have had fairly good entertainments at Her Majesty's Theatre, but this week we have had one of another kind. Some of the artists appear to be rather diffident as to the success of their efforts. For instance, Daisy Jerome, who, by the way, without very much provocation, is constrained to give three more than the usual number of songs we get from other artists, wonders whether people 'think her rotten or a funny little elf.' We, too, wonder."

Mr. W. H. Westwood, manager and secretary of Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, said that in February, 1909, plaintiff was engaged to appear for a week at £40 a week. She played at each of the twelve performances, and gave great satisfaction to the audience, by whom she was legitimately encored. She was not in the best of health, and was not anxious to take an encore, but at his request she did so.

The plaintiff and others having given evidence, and her counsel having addressed the jury, Mr. J. A. Cook, on the staff of the Walsall Observer, who wrote the criticism complained of, and Mr. Wm. Wheelan, journalist, on the staff of the Wolverhampton Express and Star, were examined.

His Lordship, in summing up, observed that music hall performers appealed to the public for applause, and thereby invited public criticism. Comment which would be unjustifiable in private life was not only justifiable, but essential, in public life.

The jury found for the plaintiff, and awarded such damages as would carry with them plaintiff's costs.

His Lordship said that this was equivalent to a verdict for a farthing damages. The jury found that the action was properly brought.

His Lordship gave judgment for plaintiff, costs to follow the event.

BOHEMIAN CONCERT.

The third annual concert of the London and County Printing Works Staff Association was given at the King's Hall, Holborn Restaurant, on Monday last. This concert is always a most enjoyable function, and the fare provided by the Music Committee is of the first order. Amongst those who contributed were Miss Gertrude Wood, the possessor of a beautifully rich contralto voice, who sang with much success "Life's morning star." "I had a little garden" was a humorous song, sung by Mr. Will Ballard, who kept the audience in a state of laughter while telling of the wonderful specimens of horticulture which flourished in his little garden. Miss R. Scott Russell recited with dramatic effect the "Jester Dagobert." "Songs of Araby," Clay's well-known song, was sweetly rendered by Mr. Arthur Mortimer. Miss Marie Schulz sang "I am longing," and caused much merriment by applying the words of the song to the bashful chairman (Mr. Mynott). An excellent baritone, Mr. Frederic Gregory warbled "Onaway, awake, beloved" with telling effect. No better entertainer at the piano could be wished for than Mr. Selwyn Driver. His imitations of an amateur choirmaster and choir at a Penny Reading were delightfully funny. Two violin solos by Miss Maude Niner stamped this young artist as a player of great merit. Miss Emilie Hayes sang "The Pipes of Pan" so well as to obtain an encore. A very humorous song, "The business guide," was sung by Mr. James Godden. The character sketches of Mr. Ernest Cherry were extremely good, and served to show that Mr. Cherry had mastered the very difficult art of a quick "make-up." The artists were splendidly accompanied by Mr. Chas. E. Johnson, whose duties were long and arduous. Congratulations are due to the chairman, Mr. Ernest Mynott, and his stewards for the excellent entertainment provided. Mr. Upcott Gill and family and friends were present, and all voted the third annual bohemian concert a great success.

EARLY DELIVERY.

Special newspaper express services now running on the London and North-Western, Great Northern, Midland, and Great Central Railways, carry The Era to the following important cities and towns at the times named. Newsvendors and subscribers obtain their papers at a much earlier hour than was previously possible:—Rugby, 4.30 a.m.; Coventry, 4.54 a.m.; Birmingham, 5.20 a.m.; Crewe, 6.5 a.m.; Manchester, 6.50 a.m.; Liverpool, 7 a.m.; Chester, 9.3 a.m.; Doncaster, 6.10 a.m.; York, 7 a.m.; Hull, 8.20 a.m.; Darlington, 8.58 a.m.; Scarborough, 10.5 a.m.; Newcastle, 10.10 a.m.; Leeds (Central), 6.58 a.m.; Huddersfield, 7.37 a.m.; Bradford (Exchange), 7.47 a.m.; Harrogate, 7.50 a.m.; Halifax, 8.17 a.m.; Burnley, 9.28 a.m.; Leicester, 4.36 a.m.; Nottingham, 5.10 a.m.; Derby, 5.35 a.m. "The Era" is posted on Saturday in time to reach London subscribers by the first Town Delivery, and Country Subscribers should receive their Papers by the first London post. Address, the Publisher, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

The councillors of the Borough of Aberystwyth are seeking tenders for a tenancy of the Promenade Pier and Royal Pier Pavilion, with fully licensed refreshment bar; the town bandstand on the Marine-terrace; and the well-established exclusive "pitch" for pierrot troupe on the Castle grounds. Particulars may be obtained from the Town Clerk, Aberystwyth.

Pioneers of open-air entertainments are invited by the Borough of Southend-on-Sea to send offers for the privilege of giving entertainments during the coming season on the foreshore opposite Hartington-road, and also from the stand about to be placed on the green at the east side of the main drive at Chalkwell Park. Mr. H. J. Worwood, Town Clerk, Southend-on-Sea, will give further particulars.

"Three Weeks," a dramatic version of Mrs. Elinor Glyn's novel, has been produced at the Girard-avenue Theatre, Philadelphia. The play begins with a prologue that makes plausible the affair of the unhappy Queen with her English lover, and it is said that the three acts which follow hold the attention of the audience, the play being one that appeals to women. There was a disposition to titter, however, at some of the lines.

The Sarnthaler troupe of Tyrolese vocalists (seven in number), who have been at the Weymouth Jubilee Hall this week, have been enthusiastically encored for their rendering of the volkslied of the Tyrolese. The rich peasant airs, with their simple words and rippling, lilting melody, have enchanted large audiences.

"Children on the Stage." Managers, agents, entrepreneurs, and performers wishing to possess a copy of the complete Act (in a concise form) can do so by forwarding three stamps to the Publisher, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

EALING HIPPODROME.

The Spanish Goldinis, the carpet-spinning acrobats, return again and again to Ealing, and at each visit the carpets they whirl and spin are larger and more splendid than before. The once small member of the troupe is getting a big girl now, and her acrobatics are more daring, and are given with a graceful audacity that makes them more welcome than ever, and in the finale, when she is herself whirled in the air, a thunder of applause, given in no niggardly manner, shows how thoroughly such sterling work is appreciated. A fine setting is staged for the turn, and the addition of a brilliant electric installation adds greatly to the charm of the show.

Miss May Henderson, "the dusky comedy queen," is a packet of vivacity, and from her first step to the footlights until the moment she finally vanishes into the "wings," her merry tongue and twinkling feet are never still. Her "Caroline of China Town" is a screamer, but her triumph is "Tinker Bill; or, Any Knives to Grind." One has to follow her very closely to catch the vim of her witticisms, for they are rattled off with lightning-like rapidity, but they all strike home, and a tumult of laughter is the result. She chaffs the audience, the band, and she does not spare herself, and her success as a favourite is instantaneous. The singing of the 'Varsity Girls is always welcome, the swing of their opening chorus has lost nothing of its sparkle and freshness, while the solos and dancing continue to charm. Doggie, whose "sagacity is almost human," does not belie his character, as he demonstrates in the clever bow-bow display, as presented by "Lux." He counts, he adds, and he calculates, until one wonders how it is all done, and "man's friend" appears to enjoy the game as much as his master. Kenny Kay presents a fine piece of "spoof ventriloquism." How it is managed would be to give the game away; but go and see an excellent example of clever fooling, and then laugh loud and long at the way you have been hoodwinked. In their "Costumes Old and New" the Sisters Burnett, duettists and dancers, hit off some of the costume vagaries of to-day and yesterday; while in their second contribution, "The motor and the donkey-cart," the coster lady proves to the motor dame that her tongue has lost nothing of its cunning. Fred Shepard, in his "Can I help you?" proves himself a most obliging fellow; but his very goodness lands him in all sorts of queer situations, and he is not always as well repaid as he deserves. "The Australian comedy musical act" of the Warsaw Brothers is mirth-provoking enough to make the proverbial donkey laugh, and the house roars from their entry until their exit.

There is plotting, counter-plotting, and murder in The Case of the Kidnapped King, as produced by Miss Carlotta de Yonson, and lovers of the sensational will find it in abundance in this episode, which is founded upon the extraordinary "Adventures of Sexton Blake." Miss De Yonson makes a stately Princess Myra; Mr. C. Douglas Carlile as Sexton Blake is ever elusive in his disguises; while the faithful Tinker, Mr. Lee Gilbert, is always "there" to help his master out of a tight corner. On the Bioscope a fine multicolour film showed a Wild West Hold-up, and how the cunning of the American Indian can be outmanœuvred by the sagacity of the trapper. Mr. A. Malcolm Park's band gives every aid in the music incidental to the various turns; while Mr. J. A. Molloy, who is already preparing a budget of novelties for his Easter patrons, keeps a watchful eye after everybody's comfort.

Over 140 telegrams were received at the Hull Hippodrome on Monday from the leading music hall proprietors, managers, and stars, wishing the new management success.

Leo Dryden's song books are on sale in the Hull Hippodrome this week, and the whole of the proceeds, without deduction, will be handed over to the Mayor's Unemployed Fund.

Miss Amelia Bingham, who has been playing the halls in Great Britain since last August, will sail for the States on April 17. She is engaged as stock star for the Suburban Park Company in St. Louis under a five weeks' engagement. Previous to her opening date in St. Louis, she will be fixed for vaudeville for a few weeks in New York.

Mr. Ernest Clifford, who has just bought two big numbers, "Then I started to play my flute" and "Jasper Jenkins," both written by Will Hyde, will produce them on his return to town.

Mr. Wal Lessy, a new character comedian, will shortly be seen on the halls. He has been fitted with songs by Fred D'Albert and Chris Carlton.

The Town Council of Rothesay, on the Clyde, invite offers during the summer for the site for al fresco entertainments, adjoining the bathing places on the West Bay, and measuring about 100ft. by 50ft.. Mr. Robert D. Whyte, Town Clerk, Rothesay, will give all information.

W. C. Burns, the well-known manager and director, has just concluded his tour of seven months with his famed Orient pictures, vaudevilles, and novelty contests, in Staffordshire, which commenced in August amongst the Scottish Border towns. He is now getting ready to pilot, direct North into Scotia, a new International Circus, full of novelties. Mr. Burns has had an experience which few managers can boast of, being successively representative of circuses, travelling zoos, English grand opera, myrioramas, theatre and music hall manager, and ringmaster. Very few men at the age of forty-five can recount an experience such as he. During his earlier career he was dispatch carrier to the late famous war correspondent, Mr. Archibald Forbes—Zululand 1879, South Africa 1881, and Egypt 1882.

During a recent performance at the Grand Theatre, Nelson, a defect in the sprinkler apparatus which is kept above the stage in case of fire allowed the water to escape from the tank. Large volumes of water poured across the stage, and the players made a hurried exit. At the time of the occurrence, singularly enough, the familiar Bath Scene was in progress, the principal comedian being dressed as a water-rat. Considerable excitement prevailed until the cause of the incident was explained.

During the Lenten season the Worthing Theatre will be given over to vaudeville, and the lessee, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold, has made special arrangements with the Co-operative Variety Artists' Federation to supply the programme. An excellent start has been made this week, and a really capital entertainment presented. Topping the bill is Andie McLeod, the Irish minstrel, whose diversified programme is much appreciated. The Five Tritons provide a rich musical treat. A popular turn has been that of Tom Haig and Millie Novel, in a refined acrobatic, singing, and dancing act, the former being an excellent acrobat. France and Stewart appear in a capital racing sketch, entitled The 100 to 1 Chance; and for their rendering of "The Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust The Crown Trio are warmly applauded; Belrose and Develin play selections from opera; and the programme is completed by Valvo, the military ventriloquist, and Len Teel, a quaint personage, who is described as "the suffering dame."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

J. U.—Mr. Archer's critique of Monna Vanna appeared in The World of July 2, 1902.

A. MAIDMENT.—A letter to the hospital authorities would probably procure you the desired information.

MRS. KIRBY.—There is no notice of the company in "On the Road" in our paper or any other, so that we are unable to give any information. See Notice above.

C. MCMILLAN (Montreal).—Miss Vesta Tilley was born in the cathedral city of Worcester, England, and as a youngster made successful appearances as the Great Little Tilley, the Pocket Sims Reeves.

SANTOI.—As far as we can discover, the opera Tom Jones is not on tour at present. Do not know that production under another name. Your other question is not clear. We cannot make any inquiries concerning a lady whose identity we have to guess from initials.

JOURNALIST (Liverpool).—Try the librarian of a good public library in your town, or inquire of Denny's, bookseller, Strand, London, W.C., or of any well-known secondhand bookseller. All or either may be able to put you in the way of obtaining information on the subject.

B. T. HARRISON SNOW.—As You Like It, entirely played by ladies, was produced under the direction of Mr. Leonard Outram, at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, on Feb. 27, 1894. The Rosalind was Miss Frances Ivor, the Orlando Miss Ada Ferrar, and Charles the Wrestler was played by Miss Gladys Ffolliott.

BELLE D'ARCY.—The Garden of Lies, romance, in four acts, adapted by Sydney Grundy from J. M. Forman's story of the same title, was produced by Mr. George Alexander at the St. James's Theatre, on Sept. 3, 1904. The cast was as follows: Carol III, Mr. Herbert Dansey; Denis Mallory, George Alexander; Colonel Von Altdorf, Mr. Charles Fulton; Sir Gavin Mackenzie, D.D., Mr. Mark Kinghorne; Creighton, Mr. Leslie Faber; Henri, Mr. E. H. Brooke; François, Mr. Gerald Jerome; Princess Eleanor, Miss Lilian Braithwaite; Jessica Mannering, Miss Corisande Hamilton; Fifine, Miss Margaret Bussè; Dame du Comptoir, Miss Elinor Aickin.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth, a Marriage, or a Death, or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Copyright confusion is like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

1910—THE ERA ANNUAL—1910

DAILY TELEGRAPH, Feb. 2, 1910.
Once more "The Era" Annual justifies its claim to a place which is unique in the theatrical literature of the year. It contains a record of all the new plays and important revivals produced at the London theatres and in the provinces during the twelve months ending Nov. 30 last, arranged in two lists, one according to the theatres and the other alphabetically according to titles. Then another carefully compiled section gives the casts concerned in these productions. The principal sketches put on at the London and provincial variety houses are treated in the same thoroughgoing manner, and lists of the plays produced in Paris, Berlin, and New York complete a remarkably comprehensive survey of the doings of the theatrical year. It will be clearly seen, therefore, that to the "profession," the student, and the theatrical enthusiast "The Era" Annual is indispensable. But the casual reader is also skilfully catered for in the series of articles and stories contributed by many favourites of the stage, including Sir Herbert Tree, Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Dan Rolyat, Miss Louie Freear, and Miss Vesta Tilley. No conscientious theatre-goer can do without his "Era" Annual.

THE ROAD, February, 1910.
"The Era" Annual for 1910, illustrated (1s., The Era Office), always one of the best theatrical volumes of the year, this time excels itself. It gives a dramatic and musical calendar (each day recalling some event of importance in corresponding years); a number of short stories, each by some well-known actor or acting-manager; new plays and important revivals in London and suburban houses for 1909; the same in the provinces; an alphabetical list of plays, both London and provincial, for the whole year; the casts of new plays; plays produced in New York; new pieces at the Paris theatres; the same at Berlin; principal sketches at London variety houses, and casts thereof; separate lists of theatres and music halls in the United Kingdom; a theatrical, musical, and equestrian obituary; and, last and saddest, the deaths of the year illustrated, brought down to so late a date that it includes photos of Mr. E. H. Carpenter, who died on Dec. 23, and Mme. Meta Illing, who died on Dec. 26 last past. It is a veritable mine of information between two covers, and makes us wonder how so many valuable facts can be published at the low price charged for this. Our sincere congratulations to the editor and publisher thereof.

MORNING ADVERTISER, Jan. 20, 1910.
"The Era" Annual (price 1s.) is always welcome in stageland and among the theatre-goers. This year's issue maintains the reputation of the publication for amusing reading and useful information. A number of lively contributions from well-known actors and actresses fill nearly half its pages, and the rest of the book is devoted to particulars as to the new plays and revivals of the year 1909, a list of theatres in the United Kingdom, and a full obituary list of artists who, having "fretted their hour upon the stage," are heard no more. "The Era" Annual is an invaluable reference book to all concerned with the stage.

REFEREE, Jan. 30 1910.
About this time of year players and playgoers alike begin to look for the works of theatrical reference to which they are accustomed. Again we welcome that old-established useful shillingsworth, "The Era" Annual, or "Almanac" as it was wont to be called. As of yore, "The Era" Annual contains articles, anecdotes, and pictures galore, Sir Herbert Tree (with portrait) leading off with that new Shakespearean conundrum, "Where was the Old Globe Playhouse?" Among other well-known people contributing are Messrs. Fred Terry, Willie Clarkson, Rutland Barrington, J. H. Barnes, John Le Hay, Harry Nicholls, John Lawson, Charles Collette, Arthur Williams, Alfred Lester, Dan Rolyat, and Henry Neville. The lady story-tellers include Louie Freear, Vesta Tilley, and Miss Edith Cole. The lists of new plays in London and the provinces, Paris, New York, and Berlin, and the catalogue of new sketches (with casts thereof) are admirably compiled.

THE FINANCIER, Jan. 20, 1910.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual (5, Tavistock-street, Strand, 1s.), is a full and accurate record of the past year's productions and a calendar of theatrical events. It also contains a feature of wide public interest—namely, "Stories Told by Well-Known People." The story-tellers are, for the most part, the bright, particular stars of the stage, whose recollections, sketches and poetic interludes—these last by Messrs. J. H. Barnes, Charles Collette, and Tom Craven—are likely to command wide attention. The Rev. T. Horne, chaplain of the Showmen's Guild, also contributes an in memoriam tribute entitled "Faithful Unto the End." The opening contribution is by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, and deals with the problem concerning the site of the old Globe playhouse of Shakespeare's day.

FINANCIAL TIMES, Jan. 24, 1910.
"The Era" Annual, 1910, 1s., 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. As usual, this well-known annual of the theatrical profession contains a complete record of the plays and sketches produced during the year, in this country and abroad, a record, with photographs, of stage celebrities whose deaths have taken place during the period, directories of theatres and music-halls in the United Kingdom and a well-arranged dramatic and musical calendar. The ever-popular series of good stories told by well-known people, and illustrated by the author's photographs and autographs, is led off this time by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, with "Where was the old Globe Playhouse?" and the reputation this symposium has gained for humour and wit is thoroughly maintained. The Annual will make a strong appeal, not only to members of the profession, but to all theatre lovers.

EVENING NEWS, Feb. 9, 1910.
"The Era" Annual, issued at a shilling, has been compiled with care and is replete with interest for all concerned in the personalities and the events of stageland. In addition to the diaries of theatrical productions, there are short stories and reminiscences by well-known actors and actresses. This section is led by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, who raises again the disputed site of the old Globe playhouse. The latter part of the book deals with the deaths of the year, with excellent photographs of the artists who have passed away.

SUNDAY TIMES, Jan. 23, 1910.
"The Era" Annual (1s.) continues to swell in bulk. In addition to the dramatic and musical calendar, are alphabetical lists and full casts of the new plays and important revivals produced in London, New York, Paris, and Berlin, and of new sketches in London and the provinces, there is a series of stories by well-known members of the profession with portraits and autographs of the authors. Sir Herbert Tree answers the question, "Where was the old Globe Playhouse?" and other contributors include Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. John Le Hay, Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Dan Rolyat, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Harry Nicholls, Mr. Will Clarkson, Miss Louie Freear, and Miss Vesta Tilley.

PELICAN, Jan. 27, 1910.
"The Era" Annual is full of interesting matter from cover to cover to all who are in any way connected with the theatrical profession. To familiar "Era" Almanack features are added stories by well-known members of the Profession, and there is a very interesting series of portraits of the many well-known actors and actresses who have died within the past twelve months, starting off with an admirable and characteristic picture of dear old Lal Brough. Mr. Pedgrift is to be congratulated upon a shillingsworth of characteristic excellency.

YORKSHIRE POST, Feb. 2, 1910.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual (The Era Office, 1s.) as usual contains stories and short articles by many well-known people of the stage, in addition to a list of London and provincial productions in 1909, and many other items of interest to the theatrical world.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1910.

PROPAGANDA PLAYS.

The production of Justice at the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday, on the opening of Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN'S Reperotry Theatre season, marks a revival of the play which is produced with the object of attacking an abuse or abuses, exposing a defect in our social system, and creating sufficient public feeling to effect reform. Of all the functions of the drama—to amuse, to instruct, to soften, or to console—there is no higher one than this; and from time to time the stage has been used by propagandists as a medium for their preachments. It is difficult to imagine, but very easy to under-estimate, the influence of the stage in this direction. Of all methods of reaching the public heart, the drama is the most direct, the most exciting, and the most impressive. It appeals to hundreds of people who never read a printed article seriously, and it appeals to them with remarkable force and vigour.

One of the most famous writers of propagandist plays was the late CHARLES READE, who, in his time, immensely assisted in bringing about the removal of abuses. Unfortunately, with the removal of the abuse, the intention of a play is overlooked; and few who witness revivals of It's Never Too Late to Mend regard the prison scenes as anything but exaggerated sensationalism. Yet these scenes were firmly founded on fact. In the October of 1851 a certain Lieutenant AUSTIN was appointed governor of Birmingham Gaol. Between the November of that year and the April of 1853 there were no fewer than twelve attempts at suicide, three of which were successful. The original of Josephs was a boy of fifteen years of age named ANDREWS, who had been sent to prison for three months for stealing four pounds of beef. He was set to turn a mechanical crank, and to accomplish the required day's work of 10,000 revolutions it would have been necessary for him to exert force equal to one-fourth of that of an ordinary draught-horse. Failing to perform his task, he was fed on bread and water, and put into a punishment jacket, suffering great pain in his arms, chest, and neck. This was repeated on two occasions, a bucket of water being thrown over him. His bed was taken away, and in despair at his misery, ANDREWS hanged himself. AUSTIN was tried at Warwick, but escaped with only three months' imprisonment. Nowadays, of course, such barbarities are unheard of.

Many of DICKENS'S novels were originally attacks on abuses; and when they found their way on to the stage in the form of adaptations they became propagandist plays. Of these, Oliver Twist, which attacked the workhouse system in the person of the immortal Mr. Bumble, is one of the best known, though in the process of dramatisation the interest in the Poor Law was shifted to the fortunes of the unhappy Oliver. This was certainly the case in connection with the adaptation of GEORGE ALMAR, which was produced at the Surrey Theatre in the November of 1838. The following dialogue brought down the curtain:

"Mr. Brownlow: And what is now wanted to complete the happiness of Oliver Twist? Oliver: First that you will erect a small white tablet in the church near which my poor mother died, and on it grave the name of Agnes. There might be no coffin in that tomb; but if the spirits of the dead ever come back to earth to visit spots hallowed by their love, I do believe that the shade of my poor mother will often hover about this solemn nook, though it is a church, and she was weak and erring. Mr. Brownlow: The next request I will make for you, dear Oliver, myself, and will make it here—to you. (To audience.) Our hero is but young; but if his simple progress has beguiled you of a smile, or his sorrows of a tear, forgive the errors of the orphan boy, Oliver Twist." This was certainly not the kind of dialogue we are likely to hear at the Repertory Theatre.

Unlike CHARLES READE, DICKENS did not dramatise his propagandist novels, so that he was always more or less at the mercy of others, both in adaptation and production. On one occasion, when TOOLE was playing Caleb Plummer in The Cricket on the Hearth, the actress who was cast as the blind girl, Bertha, was taken ill, and was unable to appear; and the stage-manager sent on another young lady to "read" the part. Even though an abuse be a thing of the past, the skilful dramatist, by his thoroughly human treatment of his theme, makes the play itself immortal. Though the barefooted waif has disappeared from our streets, the performance of Miss JENNIE LEE as Jo will never fail to draw tears; and though the Yorkshire schools have long since disappeared, the picture of them in "Nicholas Nickleby," with the horrible portrait of Squeers, is still effective and acceptable.

Coming to recent years, we find IBSEN, in Pillars of Society, attacking the abuse of "coffin ships," which we have since been able to reduce in importance by legislation. Of late, the tendency has been, instead of exposing a definite and destroyable abuse, to attack society as a whole. This can do little good. The mere demonstration of the sorrows and sufferings of the world, unaccompanied by any suggestion or hope of improvement, only tends to weaken and depress humanity. It is well that we should have brought before us the faults in our social arrangements which require to be cured; but when, for instance, M. BRIEUX, in Les Trois Filles de M. Dupont, depicts the position of women as being equally unhappy whether they marry, take to prostitution, or work for their living, he proves too much. A kind of sloppy sciolism is very apt to take the place of study in authors who only aim at creating an effect. And it must be owned that by selecting such unhappy weaklings as Falder and Ruth Honeywill as equivalents of the average man and woman, Mr. GALSWORTHY in Justice allows his pessimism to predominate over his instincts as a playwright. Let us hope, at any rate, that the production of the piece may assist the efforts of those who have long been agitating for certain important alterations in our methods of punishment and our law of divorce.

SICILIANS AT THE LYRIC.

Greeting of the most cordial character was given to the Sicilian actors who are revisiting London, and opened a four weeks' season at the Lyric on Tuesday. All the artists were warmly welcomed by a crowded house in which the foreign element was conspicuous, and it was quite a sight to see Signor Grasso, the lion of two years ago, take the stage and respond to the ovation in which British cheers were mingled with Italian bravos. The enthusiasm thus began was continued throughout the evening, and it is evident that Mr. Robert Arthur's enterprise in bringing our interesting neighbours again to these shores will be liberally rewarded.

For the opening piece reliance was placed on the three-act drama, by Angelo Guimera, entitled Feudalismo (Low Lands), which was seen during the season of the troupe at the house opposite last February twelvemonth. How a poor, simple-minded Catalonian shepherd marries a pretty peasant girl at the behest of the Squire; how he learns that his wife had been the mistress of the Squire; and how he waits upon that gentleman when he comes to renew his illicit intimacy and kills him by biting his throat is told with many thrills and constant rise and fall of emotions.

The performance proved fresh and fascinating as ever. Cav. Uff Giovanni Grasso—to give the actor his due title—was as picturesque, agile, and intense as of old, and acted with all the resistless energy, the unbridled passion, and the tenderness that distinguished his former appearances. Signor Grasso is without the services of Signora Aguglia, who on the last occasion shared in his triumphs, but that lady has a worthy successor in Signora Marienella Bragaglia, who showed herself to be an actress of unmistakable dramatic power. She has not the tigrish ferocity of her predecessor, but her emotional gifts are highly developed, and every movement is instinct with grace and eloquence. She played the unfortunate Rosa in artistic style, the grief of the woman being made very poignant and her frenzied outbursts unutterably real.

Signor Grasso's support differs in the majority of cases from that of his former visit. The Squire is now played by Sig. P. Florio, who gives a finished exposition of the unscrupulous patrician. Excellent work is done by Signor A. Sapuppo, who makes a humorous miller, and wins more than one round of applause Cav. A. Musco, a comedian of much originality and droll resource, enhances the effect of the performance as a blind itinerant musician. The rest of the company enter with zest into their rôles. Everyone seems to be "spelling for a row," even the musicians at the wedding festivities handling their instruments in an ominous way before adjusting them in position. The intervals are agreeably whiled away by the ladies and gentlemen of Signor Carlo D'Amato's Sicilian mandolin and guitar orchestra.

On Thursday the company performed La Zolfara.

FREEMASONRY.

A successful meeting of the Bohemian Lodge, No. 3,294, was held at the Masonic Chambers, 9, Hamilton-street, Birkenhead, on the 18th inst. Amongst those present were Bros. H. R. Romer, W.M.; W. S. Tafner, P.P.G.Std., S.W.; H. Mathison, J.W.; A. J. Thompson, I.P.M., P.P.G.W.; W. Cantle, P.P.G.S., of W. West Lancs.; A. J. Fishlock, P.P.A.G.D.C., West Lancs.; A. Bloom, P.P.G.; D. E. Wighton, Olympia, Liverpool; T. Wrathmall and Jones, of the Olympia Orchestra; Frank Weston, Hippodrome, Birkenhead; R. Goffin, Tower, New Brighton; Walter Hook, manager, Central Theatre, Altrincham; Bro. Daly (Dutch Daly); Barton (Barton and Ashley), A. Warren (illusionist); and J. A. Warton. There was also a large attendance of officers and members. Mr. Frank Lindo, the proprietor of Home, Sweet Home touring company, and Mr. Eduard Krause (the Great Roland) were initiated. The after-proceedings were most enjoyable. This lodge meets on the fourth Friday of the months of January, February, March, April (Installation), May, June, September, October, and November at 1.30 in the afternoon. All brethren visiting Liverpool or district during that week are not only invited, but are expected by the Master and members to attend. A very tasty card, containing photos of Bros. Lindo and Krause, was designed, and presented by Bro. Will. Jones, secretary, the well-known theatrical printer.

"THE MARRIAGE OF COLUMBINE."

Play in Four Acts, by Harold Chapin, Produced for the First Time at the Court Theatre, on Sunday, Feb. 20.

Scaramouche ..... MR. A. S. HOMEWOOD
Columbine ..... MISS SYBIL THORNDIKE
Tommy ..... MASTER NAGLE
Mrs. La Bolaro ..... MISS AGNES THOMAS
Mr. George Salamandro .... MR. H. K. AYLIFF
Alfred Scott ..... MR. ERNEST YOUNG
Bob ..... MR. A. L. BURKE
Annie ..... MISS LORNA LAWRENCE
Mrs. Jollings ..... MISS IRENE MONCRIEFF
Jessie Poole ..... MISS GWLADYS MORRIS

The high opinion expressed of the work of Mr. Harold Chapin at the production a month ago of his comedietta Augustus in Search of a Father was in a large measure justified on Sunday evening last, when a four-act piece from his pen was staged by the Play Actors. Though The Marriage of Columbine leaves something to be desired in the way of probability, and the author is committed to much that is illogical, his gifts of keen observation, ready wit, and skilful construction are fully established. Neat epigrams are frequent in the piece, which on Sunday was received from first to last with delight by a full house.

A peep is afforded into the family circle of a celebrated clown, Scaramouche by name, who has brought his circus to "an old and respectable town," and is staying at the George Inn. Scaramouche is a model husband and a loving father, doting on his three children, and Columbine who passes as his wife, is devoted to him. Having to hurry off to the circus, Scaramouche is obliged to leave Alfred Scott, a local printer and owner of the Dunchester Argus, who has called to interview him, in the hands of Columbine, who speedily gives particulars of "Scary's" career. She tells how they were boy and girl performers years ago, and that "Scary" saved her from the illtreatment of a brutal master, sent her to school, and afterwards nursed her through a severe illness, since when they have lived happily together. No details of any marriage ceremony are given, and Scott learns with horror that none ever took place, Columbine being utterly oblivious of the fact that anything of the kind was imperative. Scott is a "chapelgoer" with strong convictions, and improves the occasion by enlarging on the iniquity of her offence, putting the girl into a state of terror by representing the horrors of hell to which she is hastening. So impressed is Columbine that she sees in an accident to her boy, who is run over by a motor-car, a token of judgment to come, and determines to leave Scaramouche, never stopping to think what suggestions he may have towards a settlement. Columbine asks Scott's advice, and he magnanimously offers to marry her and thus make her an honest member of society. Then it is that Columbine's artlessness becomes overwhelming. She consents to become Scott's wife, and the marriage takes place the following day at a registry office. He takes her to rooms he has engaged in the town, and when he proposes that they shall go away for a month on the honeymoon, Columbine begs that she shall be allowed to journey alone. Scott is just asserting his right to press a kiss on Columbine's lips when Scaramouche bursts into the room, and Columbine flies to his arms. The clown tears up the marriage certificate and carries off Columbine, leaving Scott to face a breach of promise action at the hands of a young lady whom he had jilted to marry Columbine.

The weakness of the play lies in its chief character, deftly drawn as it unmistakably is. Columbine is able to read and write very imperfectly, but it is inconceivable that a woman, however unlearned, should be unaware of the offence of setting up housekeeping without having gone through the formality of a wedding ceremony. Public opinion, which possesses more terrors even than hell fire, would determine the situation. It would be more acceptable if the story were to end when Columbine recognises in the marriage certificate brought by Scott a document exactly like one already in her possession. It would require very little extension of Columbine's ignorance to represent that she went through a marriage ceremony without knowing it. As it is the paper turns out to be Columbine's birth certificate, a circumstance which creates a laugh but does not advance the action, and leaves Columbine in the perplexing position of going back to her lover and children, and leaving behind her a man who is legally her husband.

The characters of the piece are strongly outlined, and were ably realised by the performers. Mr. A. S. Homewood played naturally as the genial and good-hearted clown, and was ready with the necessary force in the powerful little scene at the close. A prepossessing Columbine was found in Miss Sybil Thorndike, who acted with grace, delicacy, and charm, and succeeded as well as could be expected in assuming the appalling innocence of the girl. The exacting part of Alfred Scott, the local printer, was admirably personified by Mr. Ernest Young, who maintained the attitude of the self-righteous young man cleverly to the close.

Two striking personalities of the play were Mr. George Salamandro, an impecunious friend of the family, who is always "dropping in" to tea, and Mrs. La Bolaro, a retired equestrienne, who has a temper and a stock of caustic utterances levelled at George and his propensity for staying to meals. The latter was admirably played by Mr. H. K. Ayliff, who by his hesitating and nervous utterance and varied facial play, completely suggested the author's conception. In the former part Miss Agnes Thomas revealed her talent for caricature at its best, and gave a performance replete with exquisite comedy. Other neat assumptions were the manservant of Mr. A. L. Burke and the hysterical maid of Miss Lorna Lawrence; Miss Irene Moncrieff made really and figuratively a laughter hit as a typical landlady; Master Nagle's rendering of the boy Tommy reflected every credit upon him, and as Jessie Poole, Scott's fiancee, Miss Gwladys Morris made a brief but effective appearance. The play was produced by Mr. Lewis Casson, who secured an effective representation, the hubbub outside the inn after the accident to the boy being strikingly real. At the end of the piece the author was heartily called and congratulated.

"DUVAL OUTDONE."

A Costume Sketch, by Arthur Eckersley, Produced at the Grand Theatre, Bolton, on Monday, Feb. 21.

Sir Charles Gosling ..... MR. WALTER MCEWAN
Lady Betty Carstairs .... MISS LILIAN POLLARD

The sketch was well received on its initial performance. It is a pretty little play and though there are only two characters, each is so true to life and so capably treated that one's interest is held throughout. The time is of the eighteenth century. Sir Charles Gosling, on hearing that Lady Betty Carstairs had laid a wager that nothing would induce her to dance with him, determined to outwit her, and wagered that she shall dance with him, and that within ten minutes of their introduction. Disguised as a highwayman, the baronet emulates Claude Duval, and tries to force the lady to dance with him at the point of the pistol. Lady Betty, however, apprised of his intentions, begs him not to shoot her with an "empty" pistol, knowing the weapon is unloaded; she turns the tables on him and compels him to dance with her instead. The piece ends with the pair joining in a stately gavotte as they enter the ball-room together. Miss Lilian Pollard, as Lady Betty, exhibited all the grace, charm, and dignity associated with the ladies of that period; and Mr. Walter McEwan, as Sir Charles, was equally successful.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"GABY."

Comedy, in Three Acts, by M. Thurner, Produced at the Bouffes Parisiens, on Feb. 11.

Gaby ..... MME. CORA LAPARCERIE
Mme. Seguin ..... MLLE. MARIE LAURE
Françoise ..... MLLE. VERMEIL
Hélène ..... MLLE. BLANCHE GUY
Annette ..... MLLE. REGNAULT
Jacqueline ..... MLLE. LESSEYGUES
Rondet ..... M. DUBOSC
Jean ..... M. ROUSSELL
Dr. Seguin ..... M. HASTI
Joncourt ..... M. ACHARD
Larbinois ..... M. REGNIER

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, Feb. 17.—We have had several premières this week, but it cannot be said that any of the new works produced present any interesting features. The Bouffes-Parisiens opened the ball with Gaby, a play by M. Thurner. Mme. Cora Laparcerie, the new manageress—and herself a very charming actress—started her new tenure of office some time ago with a revival of Lyssistrata that had a successful run. The new piece is perhaps a trifle lachrymose, but it had an excellent reception, and is likely to remain on the bill for many weeks. The plot is as follows: Rondet is living with his wife Gaby in a country château. He dotes on her, and things run smoothly until Jean, the son of a neighbouring doctor, appears upon the scene. He and Gaby become great friends, and, having many ideas in common, grow fond of one another's company. When, however, Jean becomes the fiancé of a young lady he has known since his childhood, the truth suddenly dawns upon him and upon Gaby. What they have taken for friendship is love. They fall into one another's arms, and are discovered in that interesting position by Mme. Seguin, Jean's mother. That lady confides the secret to her husband, but the latter, as simple-minded as his friend Rondet, does not see his way out of the difficulty. Mme. Seguin then takes Gaby in hand, and loyally but firmly points out to the young woman the wickedness of entering into an intrigue with Jean, and refers to the duties she owes to her husband and her little child. After this interview Gaby resolves not to succumb, but when, after a while she is alone with Jean their fortitude breaks down and they resolve to flee together. Fortunately, Rondet's guardian angel watches over him. Whilst Gaby has gone into the house to fetch her cloak she overhears a conversation between her husband and Jean. She hears her husband speak of his adoration for his wife and of his fears that possibly one day something might come to mar all his happiness. And he is so tender, so unselfish, so noble, that Gaby can no longer constrain herself. She throws herself into her husband's arms, and, afterwards implores Jean to go home. Jean understands, and the play has come to an end. In the rôle of Gaby Mme. Laparcerie showed herself exceedingly clever, and Mme. Marie Laure supplied a good sketch of the loyal Mme. Seguin.

THE Théâtre Molière has brought out a curious play called La Femme et le Masque, by Ferri-Pisani. That gentleman happens to be a direct descendant of the celebrated Georges Sand, for which reason, no doubt, he chose the career of letters. He has still much to learn if he wants to get near his great ancestress. The story he tells us is very simple. Jacques Derval, a novelist, has a mistress, married to a gentleman farmer. One day the latter hears of his wife's infidelity, and at once orders her to leave the house and go to her novelist, who is busy on a novel dealing with his intrigue with that lady. But he soon tires of her, and as his book is ready by that time, he leaves her and seeks another mistress, on whom he can write another book.

THERE will be several festivals in different towns in France, when the works of the great composer Henry Maréchal will be produced. On the 28th inst. at Cambrai, the programme will comprise choruses from some of the master's well-known operas, and two compositions written for chorus, "L'Eternel Chemin" and "La légende de Jumièges." At Douai, on March 13, the two latter works will also be given. At the Théâtre Fémina, in Paris, on May 15, M. Maréchal's sacred drama Le Miracle de Naïm and L'Etoile, an antique idyll, will be performed with very fine scenery and costumes, and projections by the well-known artist Eugène Frey. Verviers is also anxious to do honour to the talent of the eminent French musician, and announces for the month of May the performance of the entire sacred drama Le Miracle de Naïm. This beautiful composition, by the way, was recently performed with great success at Geneva.

CHARITY CARNIVAL AT BRADFORD.

Through the generosity of the artists engaged in the pantomimes at the Theatre Royal, Prince's Theatre, Empire, and Palace, at Bradford, local charities will benefit considerably. A carnival and football match took place on the ground of the Bradford City Football Club last Wednesday. The committee consisted of gentlemen prominent in the city in the cause of charity, and the managers of the various houses of entertainment who organised a procession through the city, including tableaux from the Theatre Royal, viz., "The Royal Laundry," "Sweeps," "The Spanish Bull," "The South Pole," "A Radford Valentine," and ladies and children of the pantomime. "The Toreador" and other effective displays from the Prince's Theatre, the Palace, and the Empire. En route good business was done by the collecting vans, and in front of the Hotel Metropole Mr. Harry Radford, the clever comic juggler from the Theatre Royal, caused no little astonishment by catching on a fork held in his mouth a big turnip thrown from the high roof of the hotel.

Arrived on the ground, an Eleven of the City Players met Eleven of the pantomimists in a "straight" match, which the latter only lost by the odd goal. Dick Tubb, of the Prince's, was captain of the loser's team, and that gentleman, together with Mr. Chris. Le Brun and Mr. Fred Spencer (also of the Prince's) and Mr. Rowland Hill, the Dame from the Royal, were mainly responsible for the fun that followed. There was a comic match, Sweeps v. Bakers. Roars of laughter greeted the Ladies' and the Gentlemen's Hat-trimming Competitions. The children's races and Scene-shifting Competition interested the crowd, and the Tug-of-War was won by a team from the Prince's Theatre.

The ladies from the theatres did a brisk trade in chocolates, cigarettes, &c., and Miss Nell Emerald's flower stall helped to swell the funds materially. In distributing the prizes to the winners of the events during the afternoon, the Lady Mayoress graciously thanked the artists for their generosity in assisting in the cause of the local charities.

MR. G. CARLTON WALLACE'S company in A Thief in the Night is the attraction at the Crewe Opera House. Mr. Hugh Wallace gives a manly impersonation of Lord Romilly; Mr. S. Bedwell is an effective Alan Escombe; Mr. L. Cancellor is exceedingly good as Michael Pagani; Mr. Stenson Liddard is an excellent Richard Cleeve; Mr. Russell Bogue is a capable Crake; and Mr. P. Crossley appears as the Rev. Chas. Halkett. Miss Irene Chalmers is suitably placed as Lady Romilly; Miss Margery Fane gains favour as Joan Escombe; Miss Beatrice Homer's powerful rendering of Sonia Cleeve is much appreciated; Miss Winifred Barton is bright and vivacious as Happy; and Miss Prudence Ayrton is good as Little Joan.

CHARITY AT HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

An excellent concert was given on Sunday evening at the Holloway Empire, in aid of the Mayor of Islington's Fund for the Relief of the Families of the Unemployed; and in spite of the unfavourable weather there was a good attendance, both the pit and gallery being crowded. The theatre was kindly lent by Messrs. Moss and Stoll free of cost, and there were no expenses in connection with the entertainment, the whole of the artists and staff generously giving their services. Mrs. Lewis Waller had promised to give a recitation, but Mr. Bertie Ralland, the manager of the Empire, read a letter he had received, stating that Mrs. Waller was unable to appear owing to illness, her medical attendant having forbidden her to leave the house. This was the first occasion Mrs. Waller had been unable to keep her promise to appear at a charity performance, but she trusted that the entertainment would be a success, and enclosed a cheque for a guinea.

The long list of artists included Mr. John L. Shine, who recited in fine dramatic style the recitation by Byron Webber, entitled "A Letter from England." In response to a call, the popular actor told an amusing story of his second visit to Ireland. He said he was received with many flattering remarks by the driver of an Irish car and driven to his hotel. When asked his fare, Pat commenced a recital of his family troubles, but suddenly broke off and exclaimed, "There, sorr, I must not worry you." Pressed to state his fare, he replied, "I'll leave it to your honour's honour," but adding that the week previously he drove Mr. Edward Terry to the hotel under precisely similar circumstances, and was awarded with half a crown, and "Bedad," he said, "your honour's a sight better actor than Mr. Terry ever was!"

Miss Violet Essex, the daughter of an Islington Alderman, fresh from her success at the Alhambra, sang with charming effect "The Jewel Song" from Faust, and, encored, she gave with equally satisfactory results the tuneful old-time song "Who'll buy my sweet lavender." Miss Hessie Reeve, one of the babes in the Marlborough Theatre pantomime, sang "Somewhere" and "The baby in the bath," both of which were received with loud applause. Miss Janet Reeve, another sister of Miss Ada Reeve, sang "My gel Sal" in good style. Miss Maggie Snow, who appeared by the kind permission of Mr. Robt. Courtneidge, sang "The Waltz Song" from Tom Jones with distinct success. Miss Grace Rosaine, another pantomime principal, gave a very pleasing rendering of "The old Green Isle" and "A broth of a boy." Miss Kitty Cavendish made a hit with "She didn't know"; Miss May Simmonds, who sang "When the heart is young," had a flattering reception, and Miss Elsie Bellery, another sweet soprano, scored with "Come Back to Erin." Miss Mabel Kempton scored by her rendering of "The Echo Song," and Miss Ethel Elmes was well received for Gounod's "Far greater in his lowly state." Mr. and Mrs. Fisher White appeared as Benedick and Beatrice in short scenes from Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing, and their excellent performance was loudly applauded. Mr. Robert Anthony, a young baritone, who has often been heard in North London, sang "The Sergeant of the Line" in admirable style, and his contribution was much appreciated. Other successful contributors to the programme included Miss Edith Newton, Messrs. F. Raynham, Jack Mallard, C. Ernest Neads, John R. Humphries, Chris Stewart, Signor Persichini, mandolinist, and Miss Olive Melba, the wonderful child soprano. Selections were played by the St. Pancras Prize Silver Band. Mr. C. A. Bayne was the assistant acting-manager, and the stage was under the able direction of Messrs. Fred Wilson, Will Clinch, and F. Reeve. At the conclusion Mr. Bertie Ralland, responding to a vote of thanks moved by Councillor T. H. Dey, to the proprietors of the hall, the artists, the staff, and all who had given their services, stated that although all the higher-priced seats were not occupied, they had been paid for, and as hon. treasurer he believed he would be able to hand over a sum of £50 to the Mayor's Fund.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

An excellent chamber concert was given by the students of the Royal Academy at Queen's Hall on Wednesday afternoon. Allegro ma non tanto and Dumka (Andante con moto), from Dvorák's Quintet for pianoforte and strings, was the opening item in the concert. The executants, Miss Norah Cordwell, Mr. Edwin Quaife, Mr. Willie Davies, Miss Phyllis Mitchell, and Mr. Benno Pitt, gave a good account of the Bohemian composer's music. The novelty at the concert was Three Concert Studies (C minor, F major, and E flat major, MSS.) for pianoforte, by Mr. Sydney Rosenbloom, which proved really excellent and artistic compositions admirably played by the composer, who well deserved his two very hearty recalls. Miss Edith Penville and Miss Nellie Fulcher played Widor's Suite for flute and pianoforte, and a capital performance on the flute was given by Miss Penville in the charming romance. Much applauded also was Miss Elsie Redfern for her singing of recit., "Trahir Vincent," and air, "Mon cœur ne peut changer," from Gounod's Mireille. Miss Ella Caspers sang the air "Have mercy upon me, O Lord" (St. Matthew Passion), Bach, the organ and violin accompaniment being ably played by Mr. Edward H. Hollingham and Miss Zona Trader. In Dvorák's Allegro con fuoco and Finale (Allegro assai), from Quintet in C, Op. 77, for two violins, viola, violoncello, and double bass, Miss Irene le Brun, Miss Olive Tydeman, Mr. Arthur Quaife, Mr. Benno Pitt, and Mr. Paul J. Stanley were very successful; and Mr. Harry W. Norris displayed no little technical skill in his violin solo, Capriccio Valse (Wieniawski. Mr. Constantine Morris sang "Don Juan's Serenade" (Tschaikowsky) with much ability and effect, while Mr. F. Ernest Osborne's pleasing and well-trained voice was heard to advantage in "Un' aura amorosa," from Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte," and "O Sun that wakenest," a very graceful musical setting of Tennyson's verses by Mr. F. Corder. Sir Alexander Mackenzie's two pretty spring songs, "The First Rose" and "Spring is not Dead," were also included in the programme, and cleverly sung by Miss May Purcell. Mr. Frank Hutchens, the last performer at this concert, was set down for a piano solo, Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue (Bach).

"MADAME X.," produced at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, on the 2nd inst., proved a "thriller." The author, M. Alexandre Bisson, used to make his audiences laugh, for it was he who wrote On and Off and other mirth-provoking farces. But now he makes them cry. Tears used to flow more freely in the theatre years ago, when playgoers were less sophisticated than they are to-day. But if it requires more cleverness to sway the emotions of a modern audience, it cannot be said that M. Bisson was not fully alive to the fact when he wrote Madame X. Such tearfulness as the trial scene caused on the opening night had not been seen in a New York theatre for many a day. The play was splendidly acted. Miss Dorothy Donnelly scored a success of the first magnitude in the title-rôle; and Mr. William Elliott covered himself with glory by his fine portrayal of the son, Raymond Floriot. His impassioned oratory in the Court scene provoked a storm of applause. Mr. W. H. Denny's Perissard was a clever character-study; and Messrs. Robert Drouet, Malcolm Williams, Robert Paton Gibbs, and Harry Bradley distinguished themselves in important rôles. Staged for Mr. Henry W. Savage by Mr. George Marion, the play was performed with remarkable smoothness on the opening night, and there is no denying that it is a huge success.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Alfred Butt, of the Palace Theatre, has announced in New York, according to cabled information, that he has entered into an arrangement with the Orpheum Circuit and the Associated Vaudeville interests there, whereby the Palace Theatre and the company controlling the Barrasford Tour and other interests will have preferential bookings of all American music-hall turns forming the "round the world circuit."

Possibly Mr. Walter de Frece, who casts himself loose from Moss' Empires on March 31, will also join in; and how about Harry Rickards in Australia and the Hyman Company in South Africa? It is expected that the new combine will be able to give international bookings extending for two years.

In America the principal parties concerned are Mr. Martin Beck and Mr. Meyerfeld, jun., general manager and president respectively of the Orpheum Circuit. The proposed arrangement means, says Mr. Butt, the Palace Theatre and the houses which are likely to be associated with it in the controlling company, will have the first call upon all acts booked by the Orpheum Company and the United Vaudeville Circuit—a big combination, which practically controls all music-hall affairs from Mexico to Canada, and the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Mr. Butt sailed for England on Thursday on the George Washington, and seems confident that the Palace shareholders, when he has explained affairs, will be glad to co-operate. He will still keep his connection with the Palace, but would act as European agent for the consolidated interests of what may be called the new international union of vaudeville

"There will be 130 music halls in the syndicate," said Mr. Butt to an American interviewer, "one hundred of them being in America. The syndicate calls for a working agreement among the American music-hall trust, the Barrasford group of provincial music halls, and several others in Great Britain, the Alhambra in Paris, and one in Berlin."

"The Polar Star" is the name of the new ballet divertissement which is to be seen for the first time at the Alhambra on Monday. The scheme of the production will be developed in three scenes, and the clou of the ballet will turn on the adventures of an ambitious explorer who seeks to make history in the regions beyond the Arctic circle. The music has been specially composed by Mr. G. W. Byng. Principal parts will be undertaken by Mlle. Britta, Miss Elise Clerc, Miss Julia Seale, and Miss Rita Leggiero.

We give in another page a photo of Miss Vesta Tilley's new Fiat car. What would Jenny Hill, Bessie Bellwood, or Nelly Power have said to such luxury? What an advance on the "pro.'s" brougham, which could scarcely cope now with the twice-nightly system, so firmly established in the distant suburbs. It was Bessie Bellwood who sang a most amusing song on the peculiarities of the "pro.'s" coachman—a character that seems to be threatened with extinction, like the hansom cabby.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones will address the National Sunday League on the present chaos in the licensing of theatres and music halls at the Alhambra on Sunday evening at eight o'clock. Sir Herbert Tree has kindly consented to take the chair, and will also address the League. Many other gentlemen of influence will be present on the platform. The usual programme of the Sunday League concert will be given, commencing at seven o'clock, with the full Alhambra orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Geo. Byng, to be followed with songs by Miss Amy Evans, soprano, from the Savoy Theatre, and Mr. H. Lane Wilson.

Mr. George H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, has just secured the music-hall singing rights of a number written by those two American past-masters of successful song-writing, Messrs. Ed. Madden and Gus Edwards, entitled "By the light of the silvery moon." Mr. Elliott, who is undoubtedly facile princeps in the art of singing love songs of a semi-coon nature, wedded to melodies of the langorous, ear-haunting type, has been achieving a pronounced success this year at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol. He will, on the termination of his present run in pantomime, on March 12, open at all his music hall engagements with "By the light of the silvery moon," which will be his "star" song everywhere.

The "chocolate-coloured coon" is more than delighted with his latest acquisition, to which a somewhat interesting story is attached. Originally published in America by Mr. Gus Edwards himself, the sales speedily leapt into a sale of many thousands of copies. Messrs. Jerome H. Remick, American song publishers, quickly realising the potentialities of the lyric, made various offers for the publishing rights to their lesser rivals, and eventually, after much negotiation, acquired all rights from the original publisher for the truly astounding sum of $7,000!

Feldman and Co., who have the sole rights of publishing "By the light of the silvery moon" in this country, are to be warmly congratulated on the excellence of the number and the talented exponent they have secured for its rendition on the halls of variety. In Mr. George H. Elliott's hands Messrs. Feldman and Co. may rest assured that this song will have as comprehensive a vogue in England as it has already acquired on the "other side."

Mr. John Henry Savile, in the course of a recent speech at the Perth Theatre, where he has produced ten pantomimes, made a most interesting announcement. He said that he had decided to commence at Easter the experiment of running the house as a first-class music hall and variety theatre on the twice-nightly system for seven or eight months of the year. During the remaining four months he will secure the best operatic and theatrical attractions.

Mr. Savile told the recent Committee on Licensing and the Censorship that the authorities North of the Tweed had long since settled the question for themselves of free trade in amusement by the adoption of one licence, and make no distinction between theatre and hall. This freedom enables a manager to vary his entertainment and to make a living profit that enables him to pay his rates and to give employment to artists of the legitimate and of variety.

Albert Chevalier is one of the few comedians whose art is as well understood in one hemisphere as in the other. He is now in America, where he first introduced the poetic coster in the nineties. We seldom have what may be termed historic nights in the metropolitan halls, but we had one when Chevalier first sang "The coster's serenade" at the London Pavilion. There was no booming; but when the lights were lowered, and a quaint figure in pearlies advanced to the footlights to sing to the subdued melody of oboe, clarionet, and strings the love song of the barrow owner, it was felt that a new star had arisen. America confirmed that verdict, and Chevalier's great success across the "pond" only increases with years.

It was a great pity that rain fell heavily in Birmingham up to two o'clock on Tuesday, for the unfavourable weather conditions seriously affected the attendance at the charity football match, arranged by Mr. George Robey, at Villa Park. The spectators numbered over 5,000, and the receipts totalled over £100.

Mr. Robey's football fixtures have been conspicuously successful, for he has had the pleasure of dividing amongst worthy institutions in various towns in England upwards of £5,000. Mr. Robey not only pays the expenses, but provides gold medals and a handsome cup for the winning side.

Mr. Robey's international side pitted against the Aston Villa F.C. Cup team was—Hardy (Liverpool), goal; Morley (Notts County) and Pennington (West Bromwich Albion), backs; Ducat (Woolwich Arsenal), Roberts (Manchester United), and Garraty (West Bromwich Albion), half-backs; Meredith (Manchester United), G. Robey (Manchester United), Hilsdon (Chelsea), Windridge (Chelsea), and Wall (Manchester United), forwards. The game was keenly contested, the result being three goals to one in favour of the Villa. Despite an injury to his leg, Mr. Robey scored the only goal for his side from a penalty kick. After the match the popular comedian entertained his international football friends at the Theatre Royal and the Imperial Hotel.

At this season of the year many claims on behalf of charity are made on the artists appearing in pantomime, and these are, without exception, nobly responded to. In Glasgow this week there have been three such calls. The first was on Tuesday, when Mr. Harry Tate organised a benefit matinée in the Theatre Royal to aid the funds of the Eastpark Home for Infirm Children, and had the loyal assistance of his fellow-artists all over the town.

The second was Mrs. Percy O. Humphrys' annual "Cinderella" treat to 800 poor children, which was also held in the Theatre Royal, and, besides a fine variety programme, included gifts of food, fruit, and toys to each child present.

The third event was a benefit matinée in the Glasgow Pavilion, in aid of local Jewish charities and the Zionist movement. On each occasion, in addition to the cream of the variety and pantomime talent, members of the Moody-Manners Opera Company willingly assisted.

In the new Parliament the Right Hon. John Burns retains his position as President of the Local Government Board. As plain John Burns he had much to say in his old County Council days, when he advocated teetotalism at the halls, and opposed drink licences at every new hall. The non-alcoholic house then was something of an experiment, and the Progressives, who first forced the thirsty drinkers of beer to go outside to the nearest pub. were regarded as cranks, whose policy would be reversed at the earliest opportunity by the Moderates. But nothing of the sort has happened.

Mr. John Burns drew attention, a good many years ago, to the success of Munt's Hall, Clapham, run on compulsory temperance lines by Dan Leno and Herbert Campbell. In an historic speech at a licensing meeting of the Council, John of Battersea said what was good enough for Dan Leno and Herbert Campbell was good enough for him.

Mr. Jack R. Bostock, the young and esteemed manager of the Paisley Hippodrome and Skating Rink, celebrated his coming-of-age on Tuesday. To mark the occasion Councillor and Mrs. E. H. Bostock entertained to supper and a dance a company of nearly two hundred in the Paisley Rink, which was gaily decorated and festooned. Mr. Sam Young, representative of the V.A.F. in the town, presided over the gathering, and he was supported on either side of him by nearly all the members of the Bostock family, while Mr. Fred Coutts, manager of the Paisley and District Tramways, and Mr. D. C. Gribben discharged the duties of croupiers.

After supper numerous presents were bestowed on Mr. Bostock the younger in honour of the auspicious and interesting event, the various gentlemen presenting them eulogising the good qualities and business abilities of the youthful manager. The articles included a gold hunter watch, with monogram engraved, subscribed for by personal friends in Glasgow, Paisley, &c.; a pretty gold fob, subscribed for by the entire staff of the Paisley Hippodrome; a roll-top desk, presented by two admirers; and a cheque for £100, previously promised by his father and given in adherence to precepts faithfully fulfilled. Mr. Bostock suitably, though touchingly, returned thanks. Dancing was indulged in till dawn.

At the Palace Theatre, Carlisle, on Tuesday evening, occurred an interesting ceremony, pleasantly illustrating the good fellowship which exists between amusement managers in the Border City. Mr. Simpson, manager of the house since Mr. Macnaghten's dégime commenced in August last, was the recipient of a silver matchbox and sovereign purse containing the result of a small collection subscribed by his brother managers and a few personal friends. The presentation was made by Mr. Thos. Courtice, of Her Majesty's Theatre. The purse was appropriately engraved with the date and the words, "Lest you forget," a motto used by the Macnaghten Circuit on their bills.

Miss Dorothy Ward will have good reason to remember with the greatest satisfaction her appearance in her native city of Bimingham as principal boy in the Babes in the Wood pantomime at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. On Wednesday night she took her "benefit," and the huge theatre was crowded in every quarter, and hundreds were unable to obtain admission. Miss Ward had a remarkable reception, and there was a scene never to be forgotten after she had sung her first success on the stage, "How would you like to spoon with me?"

Bouquets were handed up to her, and soon she was deluged with the floral emblems, which were prettily arranged on the stage by the lady members of the company. A handsome dressing-case was amongst the gifts. Miss Daisy Dormer, who has shared honours with Miss Ward in the pantomime, and Miss Joan Burton were on either side of Miss Ward, and conversed cheerfully with her as she wiped away tears, while the audience cheered and called for a speech.

Miss Ward thanked the audience and the members of the company, and expressed her great pleasure at her receptions during the run of the pantomime in her native city. During the evening the usual programme had, of course, to be altered to allow for the appearance of a number of artists from other places of amusement in the city, who gave their services. Among them were Mr. George Robey (Royal), Miss Ray Ford and Miss Millie Doris (Alexandra), Miss Daisy Jerome (Empire), and Mr. Dave Carter and Mr. Brent Hayes (Hippodrome) In addition, a very interesting and highly successful first appearance on any stage was made by tiny Violet Egbert, the pretty nine-year-old daughter of Mr. Seth Egbert, of the Egbert Brothers.

The general meeting of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild will be held at the Bedford Head Hotel, Maiden-lane, W.C., on Thursday next, March 3, at one o'clock Funds, boots, and clothing are urgently needed.

"Bravo, Kittee!" "Three cheers for Kittee!" were the enthusiastic cries of the huge audience at the Bordesley Palace, Birmingham, on Friday night (18th), after the Pelican cake had been presented to Miss Kittee Rayburn.

This charming principal boy stood in the midst of her warm friends, the members of Mr. Wentworth Croke's Aladdin company, and she smilingly forced back the tears. She said she was proud to be the recipient of the Pelican cake, but another gift, she said, gave her more joy. She had never worked with a more lovable company of artists, and she acknowledged their little present—an address, signed by the leading members, framed in silver—with the warmest thanks.

Loud applause followed, and afterwads the performance was continued. In the absence of the editor of the Pelican, Mr. Jack Parsons presented the cake to Miss Rayburn, after delivering a pleasing eulogistic speech.

We regret to hear that Miss Dora Challoner (of Rose and Challoner) had to undergo a serious operation on Tuesday last. She is now a patient in the Golding Ward, Charing Cross Hospital. She would be very pleased to hear from friends.

The mysterious Howards, second sight artists, left England yesterday (Friday) to open with Harry Rickards in Australia. The offer was made on Monday last, the contracts signed, existing contracts postponed by arrangement, and all details carried out in less than five days through the agency of the ubiquitous Tom Pacey.

The election of officers of the Terriers' Association for March will take place on Sunday. Applications for tickets for the annual dinner and ball should be made to Arthur Were as soon as possible. The annual general meeting of the Terriers' Association will be held at the Three Stags Hotel on Sunday, March 20, 1910, at 6.30 p.m.

Miss Maude Alexander, wife of Mr. Walter Adams, lies seriously ill in the Royal Eye Hospital, St. George's-circus, S.E. The specialist who operated on Thursday hopes to save the left eye, though he holds out but little hope of her seeing again with the right one. Any friend who would care to see the patient can do so on Sunday from 2 till 4 p.m.

Miss Millie Payne, the original portrayer of Phil May's guttersnipe characters, is at present singing an attractive and pleasing rooster song at the Oxford. In this number the comedienne wears a striking Chantecler costume. Miss Payne has recently been appearing with much success in a catchy song, entitled "Ring-a-ding, puff-puff!" She has been asked to extend her engagement at the Oxford.

Miss Martina Webb is the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. Jo-Jo Webb, of the celebrated Brothers Webb, the musical clowns now at the Empire, and the proud father has been highly gratified during the week by the success of his little girl as accompanist at a musical and dramatic recital given at the Constitutional Hall by Miss Eleanor M. Jones and Mr. F. Annis Burrows, who both signed a most complimentary letter to the young pianist.

We have much pleasure in adding another to the many cordial messages sent to Will Oliver during the week:—"Many healthful, fruitful, and beautiful New Years, my dear Will Oliver. May you be on the 'spot' at 88!

"When Will from 'sock and buskin' to the Agency migrated
To win the love of the 'profesh' he rapidly was fated,
Though heavy have his burdens been he's not yet overweighted,
And by his 'pals' when eighty-eight he can't be over-rated."—Tom Craven.

At the meeting of the M.H.A.R.A. on Wednesday, Mr. Harry Blake presiding, the committee confirmed the action of the Emergency Committee in giving the sum of £50 to the V.A.B.F. and the Institution. Mr. Harold Finden proposed and Mr. H. Cee Mee seconded a resolution, which was carried unanimously, to the effect that the amount received from the dinner should be divided in the proportion of 25 per cent. to the V.A.B.F. and 75 per cent. to the Music Hall Benevolent Institution. This was carried unanimously.

Presiding last week at the meeting of the Empire Palace (Limited), Mr. Frederick Hurdle referred to the death of Mr. T. W. Courtenay, one of the directors, which occurred on the 15th inst. Dealing with the accounts, the chairman said that while the company should congratulate itself on the excellent year's trading, yet the shareholders should not lose sight of the great competition in the entertainment business. The reason of carrying so much money to the reserve fund was to have a solid balance to provide against contingencies or other obvious reasons. The report and accounts were adopted unanimously, and it was resolved to send a letter of condolence to the family of the late Mr. T. W. Courtenay. The dividend was 20 per cent.

On Friday evening Miss Florrie Forde was announced to take a well-deserved benefit at the Theatre Royal, Leeds, where she has made such a hit in the successful production of Babes in the Wood. Amongst those who are billed were Miss Jane Eyre and Jack Pleasants from the Garrick Theatre pantomime, by kind permission of Mr. John Hart and Mr. Wynn Miller. Mr. Fred Wood was kindly sending Cassie Walmer, Emmie Ames, Harry Bancroft, Walton and Lester, and Fred Hallam; and Mr. Harry Dunford of Barrasford's Hippodrome was sending the Tennessee Coloured Guards, La Belle Morgan; the principal boy of the Bolton Theatre Royal pantomime was also announced to appear. Miss Florrie Forde's successes have included "I do like to be beside the seaside, "If you should see a little soldier," and the immortal "Kelly," all of which she sings with so much vivacity that she has the whole audience from the stalls to the gallery completely under control.

Miss Melinda May, secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, on behalf of the committee, begs most gratefully to thank the following: Mr. Jackson (Eight Lancashire Lads), donation, 5s.; Mr. Billy Brown, 1s., donation (per Miss Maude Mortimer); Miss J. Coultherd (donation), 1s. (per Mrs. James Horne); Miss Flo Banks (collecting), 2s. 6d.; Mr. Ben Abrahams, Queen's, Poplar (collecting), £1 7s. 2d.; Little Pauline Courtney (collecting), 5s.; Miss Edna Branston (Webb and Branston), 13s. (result of Hoop-la); Miss Irene Rose (collected in sixpences at the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association dinner, Sunday last, the sum of 8s.; and 10s. 6d. donation, from Mr. Alf. Leonard (per Sisters Macarte); Miss Lil Hawthorne, ladies' shoes; Miss Lottie Albert, Mrs. James Horne, and the Sisters Macarte have to be thanked for babies' new clothing; and Mr. Alec Barish for parcel of new stockings. Friends in or out of the profession should please note that a prize will be given to any lady or gentleman collecting the most money for this deserving charity in twelve months, commencing from Nov. 4 last.

Miss Dorma Morgan, the charming vocal comedienne, having been indisposed some weeks, is now better, and recommenced work on Monday last, at the Palace, Bradford.

Miss Bertha Doud Mack's skating act has been going great at Dudley, and for an encore she has been astonishing audiences by picking up four handkerchiefs with her teeth! Packed houses? Why, certainly.

Owing to the success of McEwen and Pollard in Duval Outdone, a new comedy sketch of the Georgian period, by Arthur Eckersley, at the Grand, Bolton, on Monday last, at a trial matinée, they were immediately put in the bill by Mr. J. F. Elliston for the remainder of the week.

Miss Alice Hughes was taken seriously ill last Saturday at Darlington, and has in consequence had to give up her present engagements. She hopes, however, to start again at the Argyle, Birkenhead, on Monday, March 7.

Miss Jessie Templeton, principal boy at the Princess's, Glasgow, on Friday, the 18th, had a very successful benefit. Miss Fanny Fields, who appeared, made a very nice speech on her behalf, and Miss Margaret Nibloc also assisted and made a big success.

The next committee meeting of the Music Hall Home will be held on Thursday, March 3. The secretary, on behalf of the committee, desires to thank Mr. Vivian Evans (Empire, Wolverhampton) for £1 19s., and Mr. Sam Jones (City Varieties, Leeds) for 4s., both being box collections. The parcels of men's clothes that have been sent by Peggy Pryde and Pat Carey are also very welcome.

We have had so much so-called classical dancing at the halls of late that audiences have to be reminded occasionally of the brilliant traditions of the famous pas de quatre and the triumphs of Taglioni in the thirties and forties.

The fame of this brilliant prima-donna, Cerito, and other dancers of exceptional gifts was based on the Italian school, and as a teacher of that school Mr. Edward Espinosa—who is quite British, you know—is illustrating with his pupils that, after all that has been said and written about Continental dancers, it is quite possible to train English girls who may equal in their attainments the exemplars of the Italian and French schools abroad.

With this object in view he has produced a petite ballet divertissement at the Tivoli, and it is quite agreeable to note the hearty reception that is nightly given to what may be termed the Espinosa Quintet, consisting of Edouard himself and four ladies from the British Normal School of Dancing situated close to Victoria Station. The names of these ladies are:—Misses G. Groom, G. Somerset, G. Cone, and R. Dene. The dances establish completely the fact that it is possible to train English artists to the degree of perfection required for classical dancing. The turn is a delightful novelty, the dancing being instinct with grace and skill. There should be a great demand for the services of the quintet.

In his solo work Mr. Espinosa shows wonderful alertness, and can boast of hereditary gifts handed down by his father, the famous Leon Espinosa. He does not regard the prancing of society people to the strains of classical music as dancing in any sense. The craze will pass away, and the public will turn with a sense of relief to the exposition by gifted and trained artists—not necessarily from the Continent—of the real art of dancing.

Miss Gertrude Beams, niece of Miss Gracie Grahame, on Saturday last took up the part of third girl in Charles Barnard's Babes in the Wood pantomime at a moment's notice, and was so successful that the management have retained her for the rôle this week at the Grand Theatre, Derby. The triumphant début of Ping Pong the Second, Mr. Dan Daly's little toy Pomeranian, also took place at the Grand. He appeared in Miss Grahame's "Sailor" song, which gained a double encore.

A packed house and a most enjoyable programme were features of the fourth annual matinée in aid of the Birmingham Weekly Post ("Uncle John") Charities, held at the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, last Saturday afternoon. It was gratifying to the promoters and to the artists who gave their services, to learn that all records were broken in the matter of attendance. The audience numbered 3,500 persons, and the total proceeds were about £125.

Several of the principal artists performing in the pantomimes at the Theatre Royal and Prince of Wales Theatre gave their services, and good support was also forthcoming from artists appearing at the local music halls and at halls in neighbouring towns. It was much regretted that Mr. Mark Sheridan, of the Prince of Wales Theatre pantomime, Miss Ethel Haydon, of the Theatre Royal pantomime, and Miss Gladys Mavius were unable to appear owing to colds. The audience, however, were delighted with the contributions of Miss Ada Reeve, Mr. George Robey, the Brothers Griffiths, Mr. Barry Lupino, Mr. Tom Shale (Theatre Royal), and Miss Dorothy Ward, Miss Daisy Dormer, and the Brothers Egbert (Prince of Wales Theatre).

The artists from the variety houses included King and Benson, American comedians; Vanando, ventriloquist; the Great Vincent, acrobatic table expert; Maizie Hibbs, speciality dancer; the Lester Brothers, the "Dancing Demons"; the Musical Jees, in a novel blacksmith shop musical act; Miss Kate Butler, comedienne; Charles R. Whittle, comedian; Pipifax and Panlo, eccentric acrobats; the Leslie Brothers, comedy musicians; Chung Ling Soo, the famous illusionist; the Gaudsmidts, clown acrobats; Russell and Held, vocalists and dancers; and Mr. Willis Crisford, who contributed a refined drawing-room monologue that proved immensely popular. The programme was completed by excellent pictures shown on the Bioscope.

Congratulations are due to the manager, Mr. E. Foster, and his capable staff, and also to the staff of the Birmingham Empire, for the smooth manner in which the entertainment was carried out, the programme being a fine example of successful organisation. In the conduct of the musical part of the entertainment Mr. J. H. Whittaker, the chief of the orchestra, was assisted by Mr. J. W. Clegg, musical director at the Empire Theatre.

Miss Ada Reeve was led back upon the stage by Mr. Foster, the manager, after rendering a song and encore item, and on behalf of her fellow-artists she acknowledged the thanks which he had expressed for their kind services. Mr. Cornish, editor of the Weekly Post, offered his acknowledgments of the patronage extended by the audience on behalf of the "Uncle John" Fund, and of the generous help afforded by Moss' Empires (Limited). He congratulated Mr. Foster upon establishing the matinée as the most popular event of the season. Miss Ada Reeve afterwards responded to a warm reception, expressing the delight of her fellow-artists and herself at having assisted in bringing brightness to the lives of the poor children of Birmingham.

Mr. Albert Bushell's large circle of friends heartily responded on his benefit night at the Gaiety, Birmingham, on Tuesday evening, and their good wishes were manifested by a number of presentations which took place during an interval in the programme.

The gifts, which were handed to Mr. Bushell by Councillor Marsh, a gentleman well known in local music-hall circles, consisted of cheques for Mr. Bushell and his wife from personal friends, a handsome travelling-bag, a silver cake-basket, and six serviette rings from the staff of the theatre, a gold-mounted ivory-handled walking-stick from Mr. Hample, and a gold-mounted umbrella (anonymous).

Mr. Bushell, amid great enthusiasm, acknowledged the gifts in suitable terms, and presented umbrellas to the musical conductor, Mr. F. Leake, and to the stage-manager, Mr. W. Harris. The artists appearing were Miss Ada Reeve, Miss Dorthy Ward, Miss Daisy Jerome, Miss Ethel Haydon, Miss Molly Wynne, Miss Ray Ford, Miss Lila Vesta, Miss Edie Veno, Miss Alice Hollander, the Six Ontarios, Vay's Juveniles, Geo. Robey, Mark Sheridan, the Bros. Egbert, Tom Shale, Sam Elton, the Bros. Griffiths, Barry Lupino, Mark Daly, Harry Conlin, Jack Sheridan, the Bros. Brooks, Cull Pitt, Herman, Ernie Garner, Bock Pylades, Frank Probin, Rastus and Banks, Leslie's Cadets, Fred Eric, Tony Black, Dave Carter, Brent Hayes, the Lancashire Lads, the Piccolinos, the Bachelors, the Szarvasi Ferencz Troupe, Sinclair and Whiteford, Tom Foy, Victor and Louie, the Five Bombays, the Bros. Ashley, Harry Pleon, and Daisy Mayer.

There was a night of enthusiasm at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, on Friday (the 18th inst.), the occasion being the visit of the members of the well-known Rocket Club. Established about fifteen years ago for social purposes and the encouragement of musical talent, the members of the club have made it an annual custom to visit one of the principal theatres in the city during the pantomime season, and distribute presents to all the artists.

On Friday night the members (there were about 400 of them) practically took possession of the house. The greatest good humour prevailed, and the evening proved one of the most enjoyable in the run of the pantomime. The men wore the scarlet geranium—the badge of the club—and the ladies rosettes of the same colour. The artists wore similarly coloured rosettes, and the theatre was decorated with red. All the artists came in for a particularly cordial reception, and a member of the club—Mr. William Gardner—delighted the audience with a series of impersonations of well-known performers, singing "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" Mr. Rodway, the general-manager, was loudly cheered when he appeared to acknowledge various gifts.

The midnight concert arranged by the choristers in the pantomime at the Prince of Wales Theatre is one of the "red-letter" events during the winter season in Birmingham. On Friday (the 18th inst.) the large Assembly Room at Ye Olde Royal Hotel was crowded, and striking tribute was paid to the excellence of the programme arranged by Mr. Sydney Langworth and Mr. Henry Matthews, the secretaries.

The chairmen were Mr. Seth Egbert and Mr. Humphries. The leading artists from the Prince of Wales and other pantomimes, and performers at local music halls turned up in strong force, and it would be difficult to equal the fine entertainment provided.

The vogue of Chantecler in the halls goes ahead. At the Empire, the final trio between the rooster, the hen pheasant, and the guinea fowl is the most successful number of the new revue, Hullo . . . London; and Mr. Gus Elen has a new Chantecler song, which he is about to produce. Miss Millie Payne has already astonished audiences at the Oxford with a wonderful make-up. But where is Walter Stanton? Possibly Jules Guitry, the Chantecler of Paris, might get a few hints from Walter, who has strutted many an hour as a gigantic rooster, with a gamecock as companion.

A movement is on foot in Paris to reform what may be described as the lighter side of Parisian life—the life of the café-concert. It has arisen with a Judge, M. Bonjean, who has invited the divettes of the music hall to unite for the defence of their interests. These popular favourites are urged to leave out of their répertoires songs and stories of a questionable character. M. Bonjean does not want the artists to become austere. He declares that they are themselves tired of the sort of stuff they are expected to present to the public every evening.

In this connection Mme. Anna Thibaud, the celebrated diseuse, declares that licence on the stage dates from the suppression of the censorship. She believes that the public find more enjoyment in free and healthy gaiety.

Yvette Guilbert welcomes the new movement, and hopes that artists will give it every assistance. Mme. Louise Balthy suggests that the reformers should start first with the auditors. She affirms that the present form of entertainment is just suited to the moral condition of present-day society.

On the other hand, Mlle. Lanthenay, a divette of note, cordially agrees that something should be done in the direction indicated by M. Bonjean. She hints that it would not be a bad thing for artists if there were fresh song-writers. With good artists and good authors she has no doubt that crowds would flock to the music hall, and that success would be assured. MM. Fragson and Fursy share this view. They have faith in the triumph of the purified café-concert.

The Council of the Festival of Empire entertained on Wednesday a large number of guests to luncheon at the Savoy Hotel. The assembly was brought together in connection with the historical pageant of London, which is to be given by 15,000 performers at the Crystal Palace during the coming summer, under the direction of Mr. Frank Lascelles. It is hardly necessary to point out that "Festival of Empire" is but another name for the London pageant. Sir Edward Moss was one of the guests present.

We regret to learn that Vonetta, the lady illusionist and protean actress, is lying seriously ill at Southsea, after fulfilling a successful week's engagement at the King's Theatre, Southsea. Acting under medical advice, she was taking a week's rest, and gastric hæmorrhage set in. Dr. Fancombe ordered her immediate removal to a nursing home, and it is feared an operation will be necessary. Vonetta's manager, Mr. T. M. Paul, announces that he has arranged to postpone engagements at Weymouth, Tunbridge Wells, Margate, and Southend.

The Master of the Rolls, Lords Justices Moulton and Buckley, sitting as a Court of Appeal on Thursday, dealt with the case of Irving v. Bodie, on the appeal of the defendant from a verdict and judgment entered against him last November, in an action brought by Charles Henry Irving, son of a Keswick farmer, who claimed the return of £1,000, which he alleged had been obtained from him by fraudulent misrepresentation. Having heard the appellant's leading counsel state the grounds of the appeal and submit his argument, the Court dismissed the appeal.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY'S professional department during the week now ending has been thronged consequent on the news having been noised abroad that the firm had begun issuing an entirely new selection of songs to suit the all sorts and conditions of artists who must have the latest and best of material.

THE crowds reminded one of the animated scenes that are to be witnessed at the monster drapery emporiums of London, and we may add that Francis and Day's are the Selfridge's of Sensible Song, the Whiteley's of Witty Words, the Peter Robinson's of Popular Rhythm, the Harrod's of Humour, and the Marshall and Snelgrove's of Melodies Saltatorial.

THAT fine cowboy romance "Pride of the Prairie, Mary," with its ear-haunting refrain, will be featured on Monday next and during the week by Miss Nell Emerald at the London Coliseum. Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers of this universally-admired item.

IN very great demand is Messrs. Francis and Day's "Don't stand there waiting at the gate," the catchy refrain being one that appeals irresistibly to the ear, the consequence being that it gains favour daily with hearers.

THOSE artists in want of a "business" number are voting Messrs. Francis and Day's "You want a sweetheart" the very ideal of what is required.

HERBERT E. HAINES'S new and charming "Coquette" dance, one of the most characteristic compositions of the delightful composer whose "Three Woodland Dances" are becoming great favourites with lovers of music everywhere, has been secured by Messrs. Francis and Day for publication, who are also bringing out the "Arcadia Intermezzo," the latter being from the graceful pen of Sydney Churcher, a musician held in high honour in Suffolk. Yet another link in the endless chain of harmony that emanates from the eminent house is Bernhard Fischer's "Les Fleurs des Printemps."

AMONG the newest acquisitions in the song line of Messrs. Francis and Day may be mentioned "Our little country cousin," by E. W. Rogers and John Neat; "It's all for the best, Polly, darling," by Tom Mellor, Charles Collins, and Harry Gifford; "I love my Lazy Lou," by Fred Murray and Charles Hilbury; and "All for you, and only you," by Tom Mellor and Harry Gifford.

MR. ARTHUR LENNARD'S laughable policeman song, "Pass along, please!" has just been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. It is by E. W. Rogers, a name that is a synonym for all that is best in song-writing—from "Father's footsteps" up to "Skylark," and a myriad other popular numbers. In collaboration with Herbert Clark (of Clark and Hamilton), Mr. Rogers has just fitted Lennard with an item entitled "I do love you."

ON Monday, at Newcastle, Mr. J. C. Piddock, so long connected with The Lady Slavey, and Mr. Frank Danby, one of Mr. George Edwardes's principal comedians, will produce a new sketch entitled Cupid's Arms, by Albert E. Ellis, with music by Henry E. Rether.

T. W. THURBAN, whose "Brooklyn Cake-walk" is a classic in its way, has just published with Messrs. Francis and Day "Le Chanticler Caprice," a number that will yet further enhance his already high reputation.

MR. WILSON JAMES, of the Gaieties and Euterpeans, has specially commissioned Henry E. Pether to write an opening chorus for his No. 1 company, which commission has been executed to the entire satisfaction of the well-known entertainer.

THAT fine revue Hullo! London has been made even more redolent of the great city by the interpolation of a number of Messrs. Francis and Day's items, including the great "Chanticler" trio, which is a version of the firm's admired "Down in Jungle Town," "I've got rings on my fingers," and "Shine on, harvest moon."

BUT a few hours since and the man who would have said the apparently unattainable was more than a possibility would have been laughed at; but such is the case. Following on "Sue, Sue, Sue" and "I used to sigh for the silvery moon," Messrs. Lester Barrett and Herman Darewski have written for Mr. G. H. Elliott a song that will help to yet further enhance the splendid reputation of the trio. It so delighted the artist on Thursday, when it dropped from the clouds, so to speak, that he wanted to sing it the same night; but even Darewski cannot do a "set of parts" for so fine an orchestra as that of the Prince's, Bristol, in a few minutes. Messrs. Francis and Day will put the song on the market in the course of a week or so.

MISS MABEL LAURI, the niece of the great pantomimist, held a concert on Thusday night at the Drill Hall, Chenies-street, Tottenham Court-road, when her pupils demonstrated the splendid powers of their mistress as a teacher of the pianoforte. The talented lady had the assistance of a host of professionals.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—In your notice for York last week you say "Rauschles, Duncan, and Brasque, in the burlesque scene, My Lancashire Wife, do well." In justice to Mr. Rauschles and ourselves will you kindly say in your next issue that our playlet My Lancashire Wife has always been played by yours faithfully, CORA DUNCAN and ALBERT BRASQUE.—Hippodrome, Greenock, Feb. 22.

The programme at the Avenue Theatre, Sunderland, this week is as good as it is varied. Madame Vera gave a creditable thought-reading exhibition; Mr. D. J. Pedley was warmly recalled for his clever singing and dancing; Charles Moritt submitted a performance of legerdemain that caused much wonderment. The pictures are also good, the principal films being The House of Cards and For Valour, two good dramatic items.

MR. A. HAMILTON WARDEN has been engaged by Mr. Arthur Carlton as resident-manager of the New Theatre Royal and Hippodrome, Barry, to be opened shortly. A handsome, up-to-date theatre, capable of holding over 2,000 people will take the place of the former building, which was destroyed by fire the end of last year.

SUFFRAGETTES protested on Monday at the Camden Hippodrome against the performance of the sketch H.M.S. Perhaps, one lady remarking that it degraded women by bustling them about on the stage. She had to make a hasty exit. At the second "house" other Suffragettes made a still more vigorous protest. One of them mounted her seat and waved aloft a Union Jack. She was also ejected. The movement headed by Mrs. Pankhurst and Mrs. Despard has been satirised by many comedians on theatrical and music-hall boards, and though the fun is sometimes a bit rough, our dear sisters may be certain that it in no way injures their cause.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

HOLBORN EMPIRE.

Mr. Leslie Conroy, jovial and smiling as usual, has a magnificent bill again at the cosy, well-patronised Holborn entertainment palace. The house is packed from floor to ceiling, the programme goes with a bang, and the people have not finished laughing even when the show is at an end, and they are once more in damp and dismal Holborn. There are two numbers in the current programme that call for especial mention. One is the Gascoignes' comedy juggling act, the other Mr. Geo. Lestocq's farcical musical episode dealing with the adventures of an A1 lady-killer, and entitled Very, Very Much Engaged. To take them in the order mentioned, Mr. Gascoigne affects an eccentric make-up, and is assisted by a prepossessing young lady in conventional stage costume. But there is nothing conventional in his juggling, and his tricks, many of them clever and new—absolutely new, mark you—are as far removed from the ordinary as the earth is from the moon. He patters away at a remarkable rate whilst at work, and therein lies Mr. Gascoigne's one weak point. Some of his remarks are extremely apt and witty, but there are others that are poor, and quite unworthy of the excellent show he presents. Revise them, my dear sir, and then you will possess an act second to none on the variety stage. The best of good fortune to you. That Mr. Geo. Lestocq as Percy is "Very, very much engaged" there can be no doubt. Percy is a flirt of the first water, in addition to being a married man, and in some remarkable way is permitted by Mrs. P. to have four weeks' "off" at the seaside. So he spends one week at Lowestoft, another at Dover, yet one more at Folkestone, and the last at another seaside resort. At each place he improves the shining hour by making love and becoming engaged to a young lady, who also is spending a pleasant holiday there. So one month's flirting and "telling the tale," which it must be admitted Percy can do in a way which would be creditable to Ananias himself, equals four promises to marry "directly the guv's permission can be obtained," and as many engagement rings. Some time afterwards, when staying at an hotel with wifey, the four young ladies also are found on the scene, and then the fun commences. Percy is very hard put to it for explanations, but he has a brilliant imagination, and comes out of an awkward corner very creditably—or discreditably; it depends on how you regard matters. Mr. Lestocq has never done anything better, and Very, Very Much Engaged should be booked by every manager who wants a big fifteen-minutes' laugh. The curtain would be a much better one if the dance were cut. Little Ganty's burlesque military number is excellent. We do not remember to have ever seen another comedian who can extract so much fun from a "cymbal-and-drum-only-march" as Ganty. Hal Forde is singing well just now, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden's comedy duologue Settled Out of Court is particularly good. Mrs. Lewis Waller's little farce, Lost, Stolen, or Strayed, first seen at the Tivoli a few weeks ago, is "top" at Holborn. Alice Hoodless, an English artist, presents "Gems from the Academies," a number of fine and very faithfully reproduced living pictures. The act is splendidly received. The remaining numbers are good all-round turns, and include the Stein Erettos, T. E. Bates, Maude Wilton, Narow Bros., Bessie Knight, Dusty Rhodes, and Vory. We hear there is a big surprise in Mr. Conroy's next week's bill, and "The Garden of Eden" has something to do with it.

CAMBERWELL EMPIRE.

One always expects a good programme at the Camberwell Empire, but this week it is even better than usual. The management seems to have gone out of their way to procure talent, and certainly this time they have proved more than successful. In obtaining the services of Nancy Thornton they have found a new star as a centre-piece to the circle of lights billed to appear. Styled on the programme as a charming comedienne, Miss Thornton fulfils to the letter its description, as looking fresh and dainty, though just having driven over from the Paragon, where she is also performing, she charms us with her two pleasant songs, "Come under my umbrella" and "I'd be happy with a chum like you." Conn and Conrad also add considerably to the enjoyment of the evening; they are described as the Aviators in the dash for the Pole, but really they are two very able acrobats in a trick act which, if not absolutely original, has, at any rate, never before been witnessed by the writer. In mid-air they balance a pole across the bar of a trapeze, and perform an astonishing number of somersaults at either end. This act is met with rounds of applause. Mr. Junius Booth and his company, in his original drama God Save the King, is also a delightful attraction, and is highly-appreciated by the Camberwell theatre-goers. Another really excellent turn is the Corney Bros., comedy duettists and character vocalists, who, together and separately, have made themselves favourites for all time with the patrons of the Empire. An exhibition of wooden shoe dancing is given by Frances Letty which would put even Terpsichore (if that mythical damsel ever performed in wooden shoes) quite in the shade. A great favourite in Camberwell is Geo. Antill; he is always sure of a hearty welcome, and his funny ways and sayings are a logue and business between the policeman and a burglar being capital. Miss Ella Shields is singing a new chorus song, "If you see Harry," which is very tuneful, and also delights her hearers with her catchy "Military" item, which suits the lady most indubitably.

Tenor and Baritone (Ed. McKeoun and Chas. Childerstone) are possessed with pleasing voices, which are heard to advantage in the ballads "Love makes the whole year June" and "Kathleen Mavourneen." Their harmonising is exceedingly good. Leonard Barry has a rollicking ditty in "You go where Hugo goes," and also gives his most recent success "On a Sunday afternoon," which is much enjoyed. Black and White, two lady acrobats, dressed as their names suggest, perform many extremely difficult feats with perfect ease and daintiness; Alpho, the ventriloquial college boy, in The Doll's Lament, proves himself a master of the art, his amusing gags and business being much appreciated; Miss Nancy Thornton, a charming and dashing young lady, sings a good number, "My umbrella," her other item being a little "Love" song well rendered. Mr. G. W. Webber, basso, sings delightfully those popular ballads "Asleep in the deep" and "Loved and Lost"; and Jordan and Harvey, Fred Earle, Ted Cowan, Kathleen Cogan, and Frank Bertram and company, in The Chaperon, complete the programme.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

The bill at this popular hall is well diversified, and business continues to be exceptionally good. The place of honour is filled by Joe Peterman and George Rickett's company in The Belle of the Orient. This proves to be a happy-go-lucky type of show, with some catchy music and plenty of knockabout business. Joe Peterman himself plays Novenski, and causes a good deal of laughter, his efforts being well supported by the two members of the company who play the hotel servants. Walter Williams does well as Lord Exmoor, gaining a big reception for his song "I wonder who's kissing her now?" Miss Rosali Jacobi was successful as the Belle, and a large and well-drilled chorus added to the effect. The three scenes are good, and the show had a cordial reception.

The Buster Browns submitted a capital turn, comprising vocal and dancing items. One of the troupe made a big hit with "Somewhere," and another member gave an excellent display of dancing. Altogether it is an admirable entertainment, and well deserved the enthusiastic reception accorded it. The Brothers Horne are still presenting their well-known boxing act The Biter Bit, and its powers of amusing seem as great as ever, the audience according them much applause. Fred Earle is successful in a couple of songs, this artiste being a big favourite here. Lottie Leighton submitted a dancing act of great merit, and gained a good reception. The Amaranths, four lady acrobatic dancers, proved themselves to be very clever, and introduced some novel features into their turn, gaining several calls. Jessie Preston in two songs—the first in a principal boy's attire and the second in a burlesque Scotch feminine dress—speedily got on good terms with the audience, and had to concede a short dance as an encore. Maddison and Webb in a sketch My Husband proved very amusing, the lady being a good dancer and the gentleman a capital comedian. Their concluding song and dance was very smart, and the audience were lavish in their applause. David Poole submitted a novel ventriloquial act with some very amusing conversation, and secured a thoroughly well-earnt call.

Geo. Gilbey is making a big hit here in two songs. The first, in the character of a vendor of great stimulent to mirth. Humorous and at the same time clever is the comedietta, The Colonel's Dilemma, played by Joseph Harvey's West End company. Each actor and actress in this charming sketch knows his or her business, and performs it with skill. The musical mélange, entitled The Idlers, performed with ability by four charming ladies in bewitching costumes, is the first turn after the overture, but though early put on, it is highly artistic, and deserves a better place on the programme.

THE PARAGON.

One is sure of an enjoyable evening when visiting this most comfortable hall in the East End of London, for a good programme is always in evidence. Heading the list of attractions we have Joe Elvin and company, who are playing that old favourite laughter-maker Touched, and notwithstanding its familiarity, the many funny situations are received with shrieks of merriment. Mr. Elvin is really funnier than ever in this impersonation of the new Keeper, and his reception should certainly prompt him to occasionally reproduce his early successes. That old favourite comedian Mr. Cliff Ryland is, as usual, well received for his quaint stories, which seem unlimited, and also his humorous songs, which are quite original. A smart turn is supplied by the Tree Children, a trio of clever youngsters, two girls and one boy, who play on the 'cello the popular number "Asleep in the deep." The young ladies also are talented, one in particular giving some capital impersonations of popular stars, amongst them being Miss Marie Lloyd, Gertie Gitana, and Hetty King.

Mr. George Gilbey, billed as the new star comedian, fully justifies the title given, for he is intensely funny. His first item, "The Prophet," is a good patter number, but the second, "Duffy the policeman" causes abundance of mirth, the dialogue and business between the policeman and an improved "Old Moore's Almanack," has some very humorous patter; and the second, as "Constable Duffy," in which he has the assistance of a boy and a gentleman made up as a ferocious burglar, suits his quaint style perfectly. Laughter was loud and continuous, and he took innumerable curtains. The Bioscope is very much up to date, presenting a clear and excellent film of the State opening of Parliament. Charles Carr, comedian, is also in the bill, and the orchestra render invaluable service during the evening. Mr. B. Adams, the popular manager, is very courteous and attentive in the front of the house.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

A fine and well-balanced bill is presented here this week. All the turns are excellent, and the whole constitutes a most enjoyable evening's entertainment. Mr. C. W. Young makes all comfortable and cosy in front, assisted by Mr. H. Percy Parry, while the stage is in the experienced and capable hands of Mr. Walter Smith.

After the capitally-played overture from Maritana, skilfully directed by Mr. Forbes Russell, Beaty and Blanche first engage our attention, and these capital duettists and dancers make a decided hit with song and dance entitled "On to sunny Ceylon." Charles Matthews (billed as the world's famous jumper), assisted by Miss Doris Reece, gives his novel entertainment, and issues a challenge to all comers. This turn went very well. The Elite Harmony Boys (Messmates Ashore) introduced some excellent numbers, including "Sons of the brave," "Bright blue moon," "His Majesty," &c., and all joined in well-rendered chorus. The Five Manchurians, Russian tumblers, gave a clever turn, their agility and ease causing them to be loudly applauded. Harry Merrylees made a success with "Wallie," and some Scottish patter was well received.

Mlle. Liane D'Eve's pretty turn was greatly admired and warmly applauded, her chansons and transformations being clever and artistic, and her changes of costume (and character) smartly and pleasingly executed. Tom and Marie Motramo in their novel and attractive musical comedy act were very successful, and their patter is both new and funny. The Great Raymond puzzled and delighted all with his capital entertainment, consisting of "The Hand of Fate," which hand he undertakes shall answer any question with surprising accuracy (certainly that promise was amply fulfilled on the occasion of our visit), "The Enchanted Table," a funny burlesque on superstition, "A Trip to Spookville," which causes roars of laughter, and a clever and mysterious illusion entitled "El Baul Misterioso," and his entire turn was a huge success.

EDMONTON EMPIRE.

The man in the street regards Edmonton as a far-away suburb of London City. He has heard of it, but has no particular desire to visit it. And yet, teeming with life, electric tramcars and light, Edmonton Lower, where Harry Bawn's Empire is situate, is a busy, bustling, almost densely-populated place, and when one has recovered from the all-stop thirty-five minutes' train ride from Liverpool-street, one comes to the conclusion that there are worse suburbs to be met with; that the Empire, viewed from the railway station, is very inviting—it is certainly well lighted—and that an old friend, Fred Alexander, is manager there. Again, there is another good comrade to be met in Angelo Asher, the musical director. So one simply enters the portals of the Empire and gets a greeting from both gentlemen second to none in the world. They are really pleased to see you, and don't care if you notice the fact.

Harry Bawn's house, after a year's excellent business, has its regular patrons—from the local Mayor and Councillors to the little boy who patronises the pit—there is no gallery at the Edmonton Empire. And each and every one of them is enthusiastic as to the fare Mr. Bawn provides for them.

Sam Mayo gets premier position on the bill this week, and he is very popular at Edmonton. They want more, like Oliver, after Sam has delivered himself of two ditties in his own quaint way. But so do other people out at Shoreditch and Walthamstow and the Tivoli. Heavens, what a way the Strand seems from Edmonton, and thinking this Mayo's task of doing seven shows nightly and keeping time at each seems stupendous. Sam has, however, done even better than this week's record, for the writer accompanied him on his journeys some seven years since, when he was working nine shows nightly, and singing twenty-two songs in less than 3½ hours.

Just back from Australia, and a delightful time on the Rickards Circuit, comes Nellie Wilson. This lady is simply billed as a comedienne and dancer, but Edmonton is in love with Nellie this week, and is very generous in getting its hands—often big and grimy perhaps—together. As a saucy sailor-boy Miss Wilson has always to our way of thinking been at her best. This week she sings a song with a swing: "We're a jolly lot of fellows in the Royal Navee," with the emphasis on the E, and in nautical rig, and then gives us a first-class hornpipe, too seldom seen in these days of clog, sand, and buck-dancing. We are glad Miss Wilson has returned to England, and we hope to see a great deal of her once more in London.

"His Satanic Majesty, Leo Tell" everyone was delighted to meet again. His Majesty's merriment was infectious, his quips, and puns, and absurdities as laughable as ever, his imitations of cornet, 'cello, whistle, and horse, as good as of yore, and his newest item, an imitation of the vicissitudes of a motor-'bus, really excellent.

Young and Evans deputised for Kenneth and Cane on Tuesday night, and proved to be a couple of out of the ordinary cross-talk comedians. Their make-up is far from being original, but this shortcoming is atoned for by the newness of their gagging. For which relief many thanks. We shall be delighted to laugh at Young and Evans again. The Sisters Gladwin are young and pretty girls—the one garbed in short nickers, blue tights, and a white gold-trimmed doublet, the other in a white and gold film-like dress, sweetly pretty in its simplicity. They dance delightfully, and one is sorry when they change for an Apache dance, a totally unsuitable effort.

A young vocalist, Helen Martin, is one of the bulwarks of the programme under review. A pretty girl, with a big cultured voice, Miss Martin first sang us "Down the Vale," and then a medley of old Irish ballads. It was a sheer delight to listen to this songstress, in our opinion. And Edmonton Lower thought so too.

Charles Wilson claims to be the finest all-round jumper living. We should say that that is so. He cleared 9ft. at a bound on Tuesday night, and we should like to see the man who can do better twice nightly and all the week. The Ted Karno crowd are real knockabouts and quite justify the title of their pantomime sketch, The Hotel de Quick. Arthur Rimmer would be very good with better songs.

A first-rate sketch is provided by Vona Clifford's company. It is called My Friend the Thief, and tells the story of a young man convicted of thieving, whose sister marries a rich Colonial whilst he is in prison. On the day he is released the thief saves his brother-in-law's life—although he does not know of the relationship—and then proceeds to burgle his sister's house. There is a meeting between brother and sister, and the Colonial believes the brother to be his wife's lover. Some bad shooting follows, and explanations ensue. Nobody is hurt, only frightened. The tabs fall when the men shake hands. The lady should modulate her voice to suit situations, and the Colonial gets well after the accident too quickly. The little sketch is excellent, despite these shortcomings.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Equipped with a huge budget of new and promising songs, the staff at the Arthur-street establishment are being kept particularly busy just now, supplying the wants of the multitudinous array of professional callers, fresh from pantomime honours, and ripe for such striking novelties as Feldman and Co. are able to supply to all and sundry.

"Playing the Game in the West" is undoubtedly far and away the biggest comic song of the present season. Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., who publish this number, anticipate very large sales, as the song has already begun to "move" with the trade in a most satisfactory manner.

Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. have just received a telegram couched in the following strain:—"Glorious success of 'Fireside.' Sung by audience as one man after first time of hearing. Many thanks.—Fred Barnes." This very satisfactory telegram refers to the new comedy chorus number, written and composed by John Glover-Kind, the full title of which is "I'd rather be by the fireside," which promises to be one of this year's biggest "hits."

Mr. George H. Elliott, on the termination of his engagement in the Prince's (Bristol) pantomime shortly, will specially produce at all his music-hall engagements Messrs. Madden and Edwards's magnificent number "By the light of the silvery moon," which Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. are issuing, and which everybody who has been privileged to hear it prophesies will be an instantaneous and lasting success as sung by the accomplished "chocolate-coloured coon."

At the Oxford nightly Mr. George Leyton is winning acclaim with his finished rendering of "I do like to be where the girls are," by Harry Castling and Fred Godfrey, a very fine sample of these two clever writers' work, published by Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., with which Mr. Leyton has been very successful at all his other London and country engagements for many months past.

A song that bids fair to be in everybody's mouth in the near future is Feldman's recent acquisition "Won't there ever be any wedding bells for me?" by John P. Harrington and Fred Godfrey. The chorus is simple, but distinctly original and arresting, while the tune is melodious. The theme is a love-story, and concerns the doings of a love-sick youth, anxious to wed his pretendedly-reluctant fiancée, who at last consents to marry him, merely, as she herself says, to save him reiterating the interrogation of the title.

That well-known artist Miss Ethel Ra Leslie returns to town after an absence extending over two years, opening at the Britannia Theatre with three of the popular Feldman songs, viz., "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," "Connemara," and last, but not least, "Molly O'Morgan." As all three of these have been stupendous successes with Miss Ra Leslie in the provinces, there is little fear but that they will be equally big "hits" in town.

The demand for permissions to sing Feldman and Co.'s successful "novelty" number "Pretty little girl from Nowhere," by Messrs. Rogers and Neat, which has been sung in upwards of a hundred pantomimes of 1909-10, continues unabated, and it may safely be predicted that this dainty number will be one of this season's principal seaside songs.

Mr. Harry Marlow, descriptive vocalist, has been creating a furore at the Hippodrome, Manchester, this week with two chorus songs from his own pen, "You can do without the money" and "Come for a ride on the tramway car," the refrains being taken up by large audiences in spirited fashion.

Mr. Fredk. C. Leister and Mr. Edward Mervyn have just completed a new Japanese song for Miss Florence Cooper, entitled "A-Mo-San."

Mr. Harry Luck has in study another new song, entitled "That's what I got for three ha'pence," written and composed by himself.

"THE DRESSING-ROOM."

Comedy, in One Act, by James Bernard Fagan, Produced at the London Hippodrome on Monday, Feb. 21.

Peg Woffington .....Miss Winifred Emery
Lord Cuddlem .....Mr. J. Loring Fernie
Tiffany .....Miss Daisy Thimm

Peg Woffington, whose engaging wit and gay rhetoric enslaved so many admirers among the courtiers of the coulisses in the theatres of the eighteenth century, was certainly the most inspiriting of coquettes—a delightful jade indeed. On the lime-twig of her spells she captured age and youth, and her affaires de cœur have been the theme of comedy and drama. In the petite comedy by Mr. James Bernard Fagan, produced at the Hippodrome on Monday, her love-darting eyes have inflamed the heart of Lord Cuddlem, an octogenarian. He pesters her with his odious attentions, even follows her to the theatre where she is playing, and while Peg is on the stage enters her dressing-room. Here he finds Tiffany, her maid, mending the star's stockings. The infatuated old fool steals one, and so that the mender shall buy another pair, gives her a couple of guineas, adding six more to ensure her absence from the room as well as possession of the key of the door. On the entrance of Peg the old rake immediately locks the door, and with a leer of triumph pleads his suit. The black boy, the Barbary ape, clothes, jewels, carriages, and horses have no attractions for Peg, who flouts her protector. If she wishes for forbidden fruit she will pick it fresh. Lord Cuddlem from cajolery comes to threats. Peg's reputation will be compromised. There will be most interesting paragraphs in the papers, and what mischief will not mistress Clive make of the story of an actress being locked in her dressing-room with a notorious rake. Peg sets her woman's wit to work. While my lord's back is turned she raps loudly in the region of the door, and imitating the gruff tones of an angry man, feigns trepidation and distress. She explains to the elderly beau that it is Hamilton her lover—a devil of a fellow, a deadly shot, and fine swordsman. If she does not open the door Hamilton will break it down. Cuddlem becomes anxious about his safety, and is concealed behind a screen on which hang Mistress Woffington's petticoats. The key being handed over to Peg, she opens the door and has a most loving interview with the imaginary lover, who will wait for her outside. In mortal terror Cuddlem agrees to cramp himself in a dressing basket and to be carried home. As soon as the basket is fastened down Peg commands two scene-shifters to take the rubbish to my Lady Cuddlem's house, and to tell her that the contents are suffering from senile decay.

Mr. Fagan has provided Miss Winifred Emery with a very fine part, and her indignation, her gaiety, and her raillery provide many delightful moments. The simulated interviews with an imaginary lover are also highly amusing, and the epigrammatic dialogue is delivered with all the espièglerie and love of mischief that one would expect from the most adorable Peg. Mr. Loring Fernie makes the absurdities of the gay Lord Cuddlem—why not alter this title?—sufficiently pronounced, and is an admirable foil to the witty shafts of Peg. Miss Daisy Thimm is quite effective as Tiffany.

"HULLO . . . LONDON!"

Revue, in Three Scenes, by George Grossmith, jun., Lyrics by C. H. Bovill, Music by Cuthbert Clarke, Produced at the Empire Theatre, on Feb. 19.

A Military Dramatist ..
Mr. Instead .....
A Caterer .....
Mr. Cody ..... } Mr. J. F. McArdle
Lily Philligabs .....Miss Millie Legarde
The Duke of Streatham
Dr. Bodie ..... } Mr. Davy Burnaby
Chantecler .....
The Hen Pheasant .....Miss Maud Gay
Von Bellow .....Mr. B. Ansell
King Karalonga .....Mr. Will Gane
The Guinea Fowl ....Miss Frances Kapstowne

Mr. George Grossmith, jun., has again supplied one of those frivolous and light-hearted entertainments so dear to the patrons of the Empire, and the category into which Hullo.....London may be placed, whether it be labelled revue or extravaganza, is a matter of little moment to those who enjoy its many topical references and laugh at its thinly veiled identities. There is nothing in the way of plot to speak of. Why encumber a scheme of fun with anything so useless?

In the first scene the p. and o.p. sides of the stage are flanked by Sandow's Institute and the shrine devoted to Julia, kept by Mr. Instead. The Duke of Streatham, on his arrival, has, of course, a reference to the House of Lords, and when a figure made up as Mr. Lloyd George crosses the stage, staggering under a big roll with the word "Budget" thereon, he is directed to Mr. Sandow's College for physical culture, in order that he may be made strong enough to carry it. A mysterious individual, Von Bellow, plays on the 'cello a waltz of his own composition, and is sought after by Lily Philligabs, longing for a "dream dance." Lily may be regarded in much the same light as the commère of the Parisian revue. Mr. Instead summonses the substantial figure of Julia to visit this terrestrial sphere. Julia burlesques vampire dancing, and really "takes off" a good deal. Another lady, with a chubby figure, turns out to be an aristocratic personage, whose explanation of her scanty clothes is that she dances for charity. She is asked to do so where charity begins—at home! A roving monarch King Karalonga has little to do with the general scheme of things, but he is to visit the City, just to cheer the members of the Stock Exchange.

There are roller-skate girls in mustard-coloured jerseys and short skirts; the Duke of Streatham becomes a military dramatist, who writes pieces for the theatres and sketches for the halls: and we are introduced to the "lion" caterer, who owns the Palace in the Strand. The second scene, a sea-swept shore where a smart contingent of pretty bathers in fetching costumes support a soloist in an introduced tuneful ballad, "Shine on, O seaside moon," is merely a prelude to the final scene in the Café du Monde, belonging to the lion caterer. Here the legend "No tips" is conspicuously in evidence. Cody, who has been aviating, falls through the roof with his machine, and, appearing on crutches, is joined by Dr. Bodie, who, after flashing a little electricity on to an injured leg, joins the aviator in a lively duet, "Said Cody to Bodie," a smart piece of writing by Mr. C. H. Bovill, the author of the lyrics. The final number is a "Chantecler" trio between Chantecler, the Hen Pheasant, and the Guinea Fowl, entitled "Do be true to your cockle-doodle-do." This is undoubtedly the chief hit of the production, and here we may congratulate Mr. Dave Burnaby, Miss Frances Kapstowne, and Miss Maud Gay. The bird costumes by Willie Clarkson are quite perfect, and may be said to be really "chick." We must also set down to Willie's well-known artistic skill the effective wigging.

Mr. J. F. McArdle, in the four parts of a military dramatist, Mr. Instead, a caterer, and Mr. Cody is particularly dry, and his clever notions of burlesque help the drollery materially. He is perhaps more amusing as Mr. Instead than in the other characters he plays. He has a capital song, "My wife's gone to the country." Mr. Dave Burnaby gives us something of the Grossmith manner in his sketch of the Duke of Streatham, and makes a hit as Chantecler. Miss Millie Legarde is piquant and vivacious as Lily Philligabs; and Mr. B. Ansell as Von Bellow and Miss Frances Kapstowne as the guinea fowl add strength to the cast, which is completed by Mr. Will Gane as Karalonga. "Hullo.....London," the exclamation of an aviator, who descries the great metropolis from aloft, is the lively and taking song which gives its name to the revue. The bright music has been arranged and composed by Mr. Cuthbert Clarke, and Mr. R. M. McCleery has painted some excellent scenes.

To the variety programme Graham contributes a turn of great versatility and cleverness as a human marionette. Comic singers, past and present, are presented in a series of most interesting portraits, from Leybourne to Lauder, but Mr. Graham's resonant baritone and real sense of character enable him to do justice to both. The musical clowns, the Brothers Webb, in an infinite variety of melody, produced from customary and extraordinary sources, assert their claim to be regarded as strong Empire favourites. They have had many happy returns to this house, and they always completely justify their re-engagements by the continual freshening up of their act, which is brightened by a pleasant humour.

Mr. Editor.—Sir,—Please note an error in your issue of last week in the Tottenham Palace report. We are the Markies, not the Mackies.—Yours faithfully, The Markies.

Last Friday, the 18th was set apart at the Theatre Royal, Leeds, for the benefit of the courteous acting-manager, Mr. Nathaniel Hepworth, when artists appeared from all the local music halls, by the kind permission of the various managers, besides which many artists travelled from the adjacent towns to give a help.

"THE MAFIA."

A Dramatic Sketch, in One Scene, Produced for the First Time at Collins's, on Feb. 21.

Sir Paul Delarey .....Mr. Howard Brennan
Count Bartelli .....Mr. Cecil Bevan
Pietro Modena .....Mr. Dudley Carlton
Tan So .....Mr. Frank St. Clair
Tessa Modena .....Miss Eveleen Mills

A playlet of considerable interest has been found in the above. The action takes place in an opium den in New York, and the story is founded on the doings of the secret society named the "Black Hand." Count Bartelli, a prominent member of the gang, by means of a false message, persuades Tessa Modena, the affianced wife of Sir Paul Delarey, to visit the opium den, and whilst she is there endeavours to force her to marry him. The woman, being a past member of the society, and having since seceded from it, has given Bartelli a certain hold over her. Before the opening of the story she has betrayed a member of the gang to the police, and in consequence the Count gives her a choice of marriage with him, or exposure of her guilt to the "Black Hand" and death. Tessa Modena defies him, and swears never to marry anyone but the man she loves. When the Council of Three meet, the Count gives her one last chance, which she refuses, and he denounces her to the others. Much to his surprise, however, they cast off their hoods, and instead of being members of the gang, as supposed, they are no other than Sir Paul Delarey, Tessa's future husband; Pietro Modena, Tessa's brother; and Tan So, the Chinaman, whom the Count imagined was on his side. When it is made known to Bartelli that every member of the gang except himself is safe with the police, he tries to escape, but Tan So, who has a little grudge of his own to settle, struggles with him, and eventually puts an end to the Count's miserable existence.

The piece is well acted and well received. The part of Sir Paul Delarey is played with skill by Mr. Howard Brennan, and Count Bartelli has a capital exponent in Mr. Cecil Bevan. He imparts to the character a sufficient amount of callous villainy, and is very successful. Mr. Dudley Carlton scores as Pietro Modena, Mr. Frank St. Clair is everything that could be desired as Tan So, and Miss Eveleen Mills plays with ability as Tessa Modena.

Another record has been established at the Empress, Hartlepool, where Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope pictures are nightly attracting audiences, who pack the house in every available part of the building. Thrilling pictures of Life on the Border and The Smuggler's Daughter are followed with considerable interest; they are splendid films. There are many more of varied subjects, which are particularly good, and capital humorous pictures are shown, particularly funny being those of What's Your Hurry? and The Watchmaker's Invention.

"I DINE WITH MY MOTHER."

A Comedy in One Act, Adapted from the French Je Dine chez ma Mère, by Michael Morton, and Produced at the Palace on Monday, Feb. 21.

Sophie Arnould .....Miss Ola Humphrey
Prince D'Hauteville .....Mr. Norman Trevor
Peter Didier .....Mr. Arthur Wontner
The Chevalier .....Mr. Frank Woolfe
Marion .....Miss Jean Harkness

Miss Ola Humphrey, a clever young Colonial actress, came to the Palace Theatre on Monday, when was produced a new version by Mr. Michael Morton of the old comedietta Je Dine chez ma Mère (Gymnase Paris, 1856), first adapted by Tom Taylor as A Christmas Dinner, and performed at the Olympic in April, 1860. Another version, entitled A Merry Christmas, was produced anonymously at the old Strand Theatre on Feb. 1, 1897, with Miss Florence Gerard as the actress—a part originally played by Mrs. Stirling in the Olympic production. That at the Strand was by the late Clement Scott. The volatile butterfly Sophie Arnould, the brilliant prima donna and wit, who appeared in the operas of Gluck and Rameau in the middle of the eighteenth century, is the chief character of Mr. Michael Morton's adaptation. The period of the play is 1765, the year that David Garrick visited Paris and pronounced Sophie to be the greatest actress on the French stage after seeing her in Rameau's opera Castor and Pollux. We are in Sophie's boudoir in Paris. It is New Year's Day, and the Chevalier is ushered into the apartment to pay his ceremonial visit. Invited to dinner, he is obliged to refuse; he has to dine with his mother. Following him comes the Prince d'Hauteville, who is evidently the greater favourite of this typical Frenchwoman. He, too, receives an invitation to join her at dinner, and gives the same reason for his refusal—he cannot get out of the engagement to dine with his mother. It is not only a custom established by years of observance, but a filial duty. Sophie employs all her arts of cajolery, but to no purpose, and then in a final burst of temper tells the Prince that if he will not accede to her request never to see her more. In her desire for companionship the actress turns to her maid Marion, but she, too, urges the oft-repeated excuse. In a burst of anger Sophie sacks all the servants. Her distress is observed by Didier, the lover of her girlhood, who calls upon her. As he cannot stay to dinner, he does the next best thing by inviting her to join him and his parents at their humble meal. She presents too fine an appearance in her reception robe for the visit, and speedily doffs it to get into one of her maid's gowns in which to hide her identity. But she shrinks from deceiving the old people, and in reflective mood bids Didier depart to fulfil his promise to his parents. Sophie then takes a portrait of her mother, which has been just restored. Gazing at it affectionately she places it on the table, and in a voice full of tenderness says, "I dine with my mother."

Considerable allowance must be made for the natural nervousness of Miss Ola Humphrey as Sophie Arnould; but although she did not sound the various moods of the part, she has distinction and style. Her support was excellent. Mr. Norman Trevor's Prince D'Hauteville had quite the manner of the old noblesse; and Mr. Frank Woolfe played with finesse and dignity as the Chevalier. M. Arthur Wontner made a tender lover of Didier; and Miss Jean Harkness did well as the maid.

MASKELYNE AND DEVANT'S.

A bureau of information seems to have been established by the St. George's Hall magicians, who, having settled the question as to who discovered the North Pole have now set themselves to find out the genesis of Chantecler, over the production of which so much excitement has prevailed. The problem is solved by Mr. David Devant, who includes it among a number of new illusions introduced into the programme. Mr. Devant begins by drawing on a sheet of paper the face of M. Rostand, the distinguished author of the play, which is found to be egg-shaped. The sheet being hoisted several feet in the air, the performer slashes at it with a stick, and from among the shreds of paper issues a gigantic egg, from which a chick with an unmistakable comb pokes its head. Thus is the Little Chantecler evolved. Mr. Devant also gives a variant of his Mascot Moth illusion. The gigantic and gorgeous insect with the face of a pretty lady floats gracefully down from the ceiling, and after the performer has made vain attempts to grasp it he sets light to it by a candle, and it vanishes in a puff of smoke, to the utter astonishment of the onlookers. A new item of Mr. Devant's programme is "The Magic Cloak," in which a comely maiden, habited in ordinary attire, having first demonstrated to the ladies in the audience that her dress is fastened in the orthodox way, envelops herself in the folds of a voluminous purple cloak, and in the space of a few seconds emerges therefrom in the costume of a vivandière. Another addition to Mr. Devant's stock-in-trade is a numeral trick wherein the total of a sum arrived at by members of the audience is reproduced by cards which rise up from a box at the bidding of the magician. The diverting egg-producing trick remains a never-failing source of merriment, and Beau Brocade still figures among the cleverest of Mr. Devant's accomplishments.

A warm welcome is extended to Mr. J. N. Maskelyne when that veteran wizard comes forward to perform his sensational feat, "Oh! or, The Mahatmas Outdone." The way in which a man bound to a chair is suddenly wrested from the grasp of two of the audience and spirited away, to return presently from the recesses of the auditorium remains a mystery unsolvable. Mr. Barclay Gammon carries on his "chats" with the audience amidst the customary bursts of laughter. He varies his droll confidences with examples of the methods of Chopin as applied to a popular tune, and of Edward German with the same melody, while his "Three little Suffragettes" ditty is deliciously witty.

Animated photography figures in the programme, an excellent and amusing example being given in Foolshead Pays a Visit, in which are depicted a series of catastrophes that occur as the result of the tricks of a mischievous youth. Mr. Gus Fowler continues to fascinate all with the dexterity with which he produces from nowhere watches and clocks sufficient to stock a store; the imitations on violin and piano given by Doraswami, the Royal Indian Court musician, provoke unlimited admiration, and Mr. Owen Clark executes his conjuring tricks with rare skill, his newest feat, in which a plate, after being broken into fragments, is restored to its original state by the performer merely throwing the pieces on to a board some distance away, being amply recognised. The entertainment at Maskelyne and Devant's thoroughly maintains its prestige, and is enjoyed by crowded audiences twice daily.

Topping an excellent variety bill at the Royalty Theatre, Chester, are the El Tampicos, Mexican troubadors, in a novel instrumental, singing, and dancing act, which charms the audience. Violet Romaine is a pleasing vocalist; Tom E. Dean, a promising comedian; the Lecardo Brothers, smart comedy acrobats and tumblers; Charles Grantley, a novel and surprising comedian; and the operatic duettists, St. Ruth and Conyers, are tuneful and effective vocalists. Two striking turns are Vandinoff, assisted by Mme. Louie, an expert lightning oil-colour artist; and Richard Finberg, who gives clever and faithful character studies from Dickens, Shakespeare, and modern dramatists. The programme concludes with a well-acted up-to-date comedy sketch, The Bride Elect, by Harry A. Meymott and company.

"ALGY'S ADVERTISEMENT."

A One Act Farcical Absurdity, by Thos. Brooklyn, Played for the First Time at the Rotherhithe Hippodrome, on Monday, Feb. 21.

Algy Farren .....MR. THOS. BROOKLYN
Ferdinand Fitzroy .....MR. REED PINNARD
Daisy Desmond .....MISS DOROTHY BLACKADER
Cook .....MISS FLO WALSH

We must congratulate Mr. Thos. Brooklyn on having scored a decided success in the above, a sketch full of rich humour. In its opening we have an amusing description of the difficulties of two bachelors in engaging a cook, and it concludes with a pretty love scena. Algy Farren, late officer in his Majesty's army, who spends his time and money in running musical comedies, and his friend Ferdinand Fitzroy, take a flat, and when the scene opens Algy is discovered reading two advertisements that he has put in the morning paper, one for an actress and the other for a cook. He tells Ferdinand that he has advertised for a cook, and that he is shortly expecting the applicants to call. Having previously made arrangements to go to Ascot races with some friends, Algy asks Ferdinand to interview the callers for the place of cook, but forgets to tell him that he has also advertised for an actress as well. Algy starts for the races, and Ferdinand sits puzzling his brains as to how he shall proceed in the engagement of a cook. The first applicant is Daisy Desmond, dressed in the height of fashion, whom Ferdinand treats as an aspirant for the cook's place. He rather disgusts her by telling her that he shall expect her to rise at 6 a.m., and do two hours' work before breakfast. She replies that she is usually called at 11 a.m., has a cup of tea in bed, reads her letters, and breakfasts at 12. This speech draws a good laugh from the audience, and rather startles Ferdinand, who replies that he cannot think of calling her, but he does not mind investing 2s. 6d. in an alarum clock. At this point Algy, who has postponed his intended visit to Ascot, comes home. Ferdinand tells him in an aside that this lady has applied for the post of cook, but Algy thinks that she is much too refined for that position, and persuades her to make love to him. Daisy, thinking that it is a test to see how she can act, falls into the scheme with zest. However, the love-making is abruptly terminated by the entrance of the real applicant for the position of cook, and the scene closes with the proposal and acceptance of Algy's suit.

Mr. Thos. Brooklyn, who, for a number of years has played in Mr. Chas. Frohman's companies, plays Algy Farren in a characteristic manner, and on the night of our visit the audience showed him much favour. Mr. Reed Pinnard is all that is required as Ferdinand Fitzroy, and Miss Dorothy Blackader makes a very charming and winsome Daisy Desmond.

ATTRACTIVE programmes have been prepared for the Good Friday concerts at the Crystal Palace. At the afternoon concert Rosini's "Stabat Mater" will be sung in the first part, with Miss Agnes Nicholls, Madame Edna Thornton, Mr. Charles Saunders, and Sir Charles Santley. The Crystal Palace Choir, augmented to 300 voices, and the London Symphony Orchestra also assist. The second part will be a miscellaneous one, and some interesting items will be included. Madame Clara Butt will sing "Sabbath Morning at Sea," from Elgar's "Sea Pictures," and Sullivan's "Lost Chord." Sir Charles Santley sings "Now Heaven in fullest glory shine" from Haydn's "Creation." A novelty at these concerts will be the "Laudate Dominum" from Cherubini's Fourth Mass, for which Miss Agnes Nicholls and the chorus will be responsible. Mr. Kennerley Rumford's selections will be Sullivan's "Thou'rt passing hence, my brother" and "Ombra mai fu" (Handel), and Mr. Charles Saunders, "The enemy said" (Handel). The whole concert will be under the direction of Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock. At the evening concert a popular programme will be contributed to by the full band of H.M. Coldstream Guards, conducted by Dr. J. Mackenzie Rogan, lieutenant and bandmaster, and the vocalists will be Miss Ethel Wood and Mr. Herbert Heyner.

THE Dulwich Philharmonic Society performs Coleridge Taylor's "Hiawatha" in its entirety on Saturday next, in the Concert Room of the Crystal Palace. A good cast of soloists has been engaged, viz., Madame Conly, Mr. Cynlais Gibbs, and Mr. Bertram Mills. The choir and orchestra number 300 performers, and the conductor is Mr. James Brown, Mus.Bac.

THE principal item in this week's programme at the Empire, Aberdare, is the Three Hilberts on the bouncing table—really excellent fun. Mr. Chris Baker is a clever comedian; the Lorettos are good in their line; and the Leovilles entertain in a dainty act.

"HIS LITTLE PAL."

Dramatic Playlet, Produced at the Bow Palace for the First Time on Monday, Feb. 21.

John Norton .....MR. FRANK C. MASON
Nan .....MISS MILLIE HENDERSON
Philip Garston .....MR. PHILIP DURHAM
Sam .....MR. ARTHUR STEVENS
Silas .....MR. RONALD GOODALL

The theme of a husband's friend robbing him of the affections of the wife is no new one, and has been treated in various ways by different authors. In this particular instance the idea has been cleverly unfolded, and although His Little Pal does not boast of original situations, the story is so prettily told as to hold the attention from start to finish.

The scene is laid at John Norton's home, Long Gap, Arizona. Nan has just returned from a ride with her husband's friend, Philip, and is radiantly happy, a fact which is not lost upon John on his return from town. After Philip has left, he asks her why when Philip is about she is so different and seems happier; but Nan dispels his illusions, and refutes the idea that the great contrast in life here and London has any effect upon her. Yet it has, for when Philip later informs her that he is leaving the following day for England, she is visibly affected, and he has but to declare his love for her and picture the difference of life on a lonely ranch to the brightness and gaiety of England for her to yearn to return. Seizing his opportunity, he entreats her to leave her husband and go with him; he will have horses ready later if she will only meet him, and they can be far away before anyone knows. The temptation is too strong for her, and she assents. John returns soon after, and discovers a letter to his wife from Philip which quickly explains Nan's absence. Immediately a text in his old Bible comes to him —"If there be shame, let he who can, wipe out that shame"; and fondly playing with his revolver, he speedily calls for his horse, for he is determined to comply with the demand of the text. Then finer feelings come to him, and he sits down to think, and his wife, who regrets her false action, returns, and, kneeling by her husband's side, receives forgiveness, for they both understand.

The sketch was very well produced, the scenery and effects and costumes being excellent. Mr. Frank C. Mason must be praised for a strong, natural, and convincing portrayal of John Norton. Miss Millie Henderson was charming as Nan; whilst Mr. Philip Durham was quite successful in the rôle of Philip Garston. The remaining characters were adequately filled.

The variety programme here this week is quite good, and Manager Gordon Herman has been in his element in dealing with the audiences which have filled the hall at each performance.

Amy Bathurst, looking very charming in kilts, has a good song in "Bonnie Mary," and dances very attractively. A most interesting turn was that of the Eight Marvels, who really seemed to enjoy their efforts every whit as much as the audience; their vocalisation, dancing, and mimicry was clever, and certainly appreciated. The Devona Trio, who deputised for Julian Mack, proved to be very entertaining, their step-dancing especially being particularly good; the programme also included Ray Royal, with illustrated songs; the Forestiers, with their dramatic episode A Society Sinner; Harry Biand, comedian; Chas. M. Daly and company, in their comedy skit I Must Have It; and the usual excellent Palace pictures.

AT the Hippodrome, Stoke-on-Trent, Ronnie Blair, a dramatic sketch, is smartly presented by Mr. Vernon Sansbury and Miss Josephine Colonna and company. Webb and Branston charm everyone by their vocal efforts; Lennard and Vereker present a new series of coloured slides in their picture-song speciality; Arthur Harris is an excellent comedian with good songs; Maude May Murray appears in some pretty skirt dances, enhanced by electrical effects; Luigi Salvino is a clever juvenile instrumentalist; and Jack McKenzie and the Perfection Pictures complete the bill.

THE film depicting the Driscoll v. Hayes fight, exhibited for the first time in any Welsh town at Messrs. Wadbrook and Scard's Bioscope and Variety Theatre, Maesteg, proved a tremendous attraction for the first three nights of this week. Another fine film is that of the opera entitled Carmen. Uncle Richard is the title of a picture which causes roars of laughter. The Three Van Earls, who form part of the variety programme, are a clever trio of dancers. Their latest dance, entitled the Whirlwind, being very new and smart. Johnny Jones, the boy comedian, is a first-class entertainer. On Friday night the generous proprietors gave the takings to the local football club.

"A ROYAL RIVAL."

A Romantic Episode of Ancient Egypt, Produced at the Bedford on Monday, Feb. 21.

Queen of Egypt .....MISS ESTHER PHILLIPS
Antrexa .....MISS MILLIE PHILLIPS
Natha Ru .....MR. HORACE DENTON
Fa Nador .....MR. JACK FORTESCUE
Court Jester .....MR. E. L. HOCKING

Ancient Egypt has always been a source of inspiration to the writer of romance, and occasionally the dramatist has gone to the land of the Pharaohs for his plot and characters. This week one of the principal attractions in the programme at the Bedford is the appearance of Miss Esther Phillips and company in "a romantic episode of ancient Egypt," in two scenes—The Reception Hall at the Palace, and The Torture Cage. The plot turns upon the infatuation of the Queen of Egypt for a stranger whom she has accidentally met while on a country excursion. She has brought him with her to the Court, and Antrexa, his devoted wife, follows her husband. Here she meets him and her royal rival, whose cruel nature having been temporarily softened by her love for Natha Ru, liberates all the prisoners in the capital. The forsaken wife makes an impassioned appeal to the Queen, who, however, treats her with scorn, and she then appeals to her husband, but without success. The Queen triumphs for the time being, and bids Antrexa begone. The jealous wife returns, and her attempt to plunge a knife into her rival's back is frustrated by her husband, who catches hold of her uplifted arm. The angry Queen, handing him the knife, commands Natha Ru to kill his wife, but he refuses, and the infuriated Queen gives orders for both to be taken to the torture chamber. The second scene gives a faithful representation of a form of torture used in Egypt at the time, the condemned being slowly crushed to death between two huge slabs of stone moved by machinery. Natha Ru and his wife are placed in the terrible torture cage, and both are resolved to die together, although one at least has been offered liberty. But the Queen finds the force of love stronger than her desire for vengeance, and finally she relents, and gives orders for the release of Natha Ru and his devoted wife, who leave the palace to return to their rural retreat. The Queen stabs herself, and on this tragic scene the curtain falls.

Miss Esther Phillips gives an admirable impersonation of the Queen, her impassioned lines being delivered with fine effect. Miss Millie Phillips gives a pathetic representation of the wife, whose love for and devotion to her husband is excellently expressed. Mr. Horace Denton is good as Natha Ru; Mr. Jack Fortescue is a dignified Fa Nador; and Mr. E. L. Hocking is well placed as the Court Jester. The new sketch, which was very favourably received, is most elaborately staged, and the costumes are deserving of special mention. Taken altogether, the sketch deserves, on account of its many merits, a prosperous career.

The programme contains a number of other excellent turns. Miss Daisy Mead, comedienne, sings with much spirit "Hampstead on a holiday," and she meets with a most favourable reception; Siegel and Fields appear with marked success in a comedy and dancing act; Yetta, the dancing girl on the wire, is deservingly applauded for her clever performance; the Four Vagabonds, premier comedy harmony vocalists, introduce some tuneful part-singing; Miss Dorothy Grahame appears in Ma Fille, ably assisted by Paul Armand as the Grafter and Alex. Clifton as Jean, and the little piece gives the greatest satisfaction, all the principals being loudly applauded. Miss May Lillian Levey, a clever male impersonator, scores with her songs; Ferguson and Mack, popular comedians, introduce the Dimple Sisters, clever acrobatic dancing girls; Ellis and Campbell, comedians and dancers, are well received, and so also are Hurman and Arthur, in a comedy speciality, and Sam Basso, comedian. The attractive programme also includes the Bioscope with new films.

AN efficient orchestra has been installed at the Hull Hippodrome (just reopened) under the direction of Mr. John Russell, previously conductor for many of the leading London halls.

MR. FRANK LAMBERT, the song composer, who has written so many delightful numbers, was recently severely injured through being knocked over by a taxi-cab, and is at present in a nursing home in Cavendish-square. He will be unable to attend to any professional engagements for a while.

AL FRESCO entertainments are required by the Town Council of Broughty Ferry, who are prepared to receive offers for the right to provide amusement on the promenade and sands for the summer season of 1910. Mr. Edward Cowan, Town Clerk, 4, High-street, Dundee, will give particulars.

MUSIC HALL HOME SHILLING FUND.

2,608 SHILLINGS.

We are again making an appeal on behalf of the Music Hall Home Era Shilling Fund, and with that appeal we have very great pleasure in associating the name of Miss Vesta Tilley, who will for the next few months act as a sort of fairy godmother to the fund. "I think," said Miss Tilley, in conversation with our interviewer the other day, "that the Music Hall Home is a very deserving charity and a very excellent thing. Something of the sort was certainly wanted for the poorer professionals. Every week of my life I give pounds away at the stage-door to numbers of the profession who call upon me for assistance. Now this year I want to create a record in the matter of collections for the fund, and I personally shall work my very hardest for it. In everything I wanted before the profession has always come forward very generously, and I hope that they will help me all they can now. I have a number of private friends who are going to work for me, too. I think, however, that most of the support should come from the professionals themselves. Outside people have their own charities to look after. I have asked my husband if he can arrange special matinées at each of his halls for the benefit of this fund, and he thinks that he will be able to do this. A great deal in that case will rest upon the artists, and if they would turn up we should be enabled to augment the funds of the Home very considerably. Wherever I am now appearing I am fixing up cards so that members of the same company for the week may put their names down for a subscription. I also hope by the sale of autograph postcards in the front of the house to collect a still further sum for the same purpose."

As was arranged last year, a solid gold medal will be presented by The Era to the collector who obtains the largest amount for the Fund up to March 31, 1910, the lists closing on that date.

ARTISTS' BENEVOLENCE.

M.H.A.R.A. DINNER AND DANCE.

"Buckie!"

"Bill!"

And two men shook hands vigorously. The scene was the reception-room in the west wing of the Criterion Restaurant, the occasion the annual dinner and dance in aid of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund and the M.H. Benevolent Institution, and the time last Sunday night.

"Buckie" and "Bill" are two well-known professional men, very old friends, and they had not met for over three years. In the same business their engagements always seemed to have kept them apart. Even this meeting had been brought about by one of them travelling that day from Manchester, and on the Monday he would be in Liverpool. The two old friends resolved there and then that in future years, if their lives were spared, and they were both working anywhere in the British Isles, they would always travel to London on the night of the M.H.A.R.A. dinner, firstly, "to hae a crack," and secondly, to assist at a function that should be dear to the hearts of all variety artists.

It is hard to have to write it, but it must be recorded that last Sunday night's dinner, well attended though it was, could not be said to be representative of the profession. There should have been ten times the number of people present.

A GATHERING OF STALWARTS.

'Gene Stratton said so, and if everyone would in future years "buck up" and emulate the resolve of "Buckie" and "Bill," and no matter where they might be working in the Kingdom on that day, take train to town for the function, there would be no question as to the financial success of the movement. As it was, the same old stalwarts were present, backed by a brave array of the "boys and girls." The Dandy Coloured Coon, Eugene Stratton, was in the chair, and at his right hand was his life-long friend, Joe Elvin. Supporting him were Alec Hurley, Paul Martinetti, Ben Obo, Fred Slingsby, and C. Douglas Stuart. The beaming face of another old friend, G. H. Chirgwin, could be seen to the left of the chair, and hard by the quips of the O'Gorman were to be heard. Frank Glenister, of the London Pavilion, and H. Belcham, of The Era, "reminisced" to their hearts' content, and big Ben Brown's broad shoulders were conspicuous at Table C. "The world's greatest lady dancer," "My Fancy," graced the chairman's table, sitting beside her husband, Harry Bawn, of the Edmonton Empire.

Everyone was merry and bright, and the scene was very animated, viewed from the band platform. It was, in fact, a big family party—just what "Uncle 'Gene" had intended it to be, as can be seen from this list of those present, in addition to the names already mentioned:—Joe Elvin, Buchanan Taylor, Geo. Gilbey, Ella Shields, Mrs. G. H. Chirgwin, W. H. Clemart, Percy Honri, Harry Masters, Charles Coborn, Mrs. P. Honri, Wilson Hallett, Sandford and Lyons, Barratt and Knowles, Fred Russell, Harry Weldon, Alec Hurley, Albert Voyce, Ike Rose, Burt Shepard, G. Hughes, Miss E. G. Clarke, Miss Melinda May, Mr. and Mrs. Ashby, Mrs. Bolton, Tom Bolton, Mr. and Mrs. Bartram, A. C. Gardner, Miss Irene Rose, J. Lotto, Mrs. Gilbey, J. Mitchell Langley, L. J. Littlejohn, Flo Hastings, Jack Crawley, T. C. Callaghan, R. Tye, Claude Stuart, Mrs. Douglas Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hoyle, G. H. Smythson, Minnie Mace, T. Foxe and Mrs. Foxe, W. H. Bryan, E. Leech, Fred Halliday, T. Wilson, E. Copley, H. Goddard, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Cowey, Valazzi, Tom Joy, H. Cory Woodrow, W. Hargreaves, Harry Blake, E. Garrod, Fred Herbert, G. Garrod, Arthur Hampel, A. Venner, E. Brown, Alf. Lotto, and Richard Judd-Green.

THIRTEEN YEARS' WORK.

After the Royal toast had been honoured, Mr. Charles Coborn proposed the toast of the "Music-Hall Artists' Railway Association," an organisation which, in its thirteen years' existence, had, he said, been instrumental in providing about £4,000 for the charities of the railways and music halls. He had great pleasure in coupling with the toast of the M.H.A.R.A. the name of Mr. Fred Herbert.

Mr. Fred Herbert, as chairman of the committee, responded, and told those present that everything connected with the Association was going on in an admirable manner. He made a strong appeal to some of the members of the committee to turn up at the meetings more frequently, if for no other purpose, to lighten the work of the willing ones who were always there.

To Mr. G. H. Chirgwin the toast of "The Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund" was entrusted. "The White-eye'd Kaffir" even then could not resist the chances the toast gave him to pun. He said, amidst much laughter, that they had got him on toast—the toast of the V.A.B.F. To-night they were full of Faith, Hope, and Charity. Harry Tate, Joe Elvin, and 'Gene Stratton were the Fund's Faith and Hope and Charity. During his year of office he had bitten many (y) ears. He was retiring, but they must all be untiring in helping the new president.

Mr. Harry Blake, the hon. treasurer, who responded, warmly thanked the little band of willing workers who were ever ready to work on behalf of the fund. That it was sorely needed was proved by the number of cases they had to consider at one of their meetings. He referred in the warmest terms to the work of Mr. Tom E. Callaghan, whose efforts had saved the Association very many pounds. It was one of their objects in life to strain every nerve to make their old friend Joe Elvin's scheme the greatest of successes.

Mr. Eugene Stratton, to whom a most cordial welcome was extended, submitted the toast of "The Music-Hall Benevolent Institution." No man, he declared, had served a longer or a harder apprenticeship than he had. For twenty years he worked before he gained a salary that enabled him to save a sovereign. Still, he never found that hard work hurt anyone. (Hear, hear.) It was only hard work that would produce anything, and he appealed to all his fellow-professionals to put in some hard work on behalf of the Benevolent Fund. A man who was successful could afford to be generous; and anyone who was successful and could not afford to be generous had no thought at all for others. (Cheers.) He hoped that nobody present would ever require any help from the Institution, but they might. He had seen people who had been very successful in life glad to receive help from the Fund. Nobody knew what was going to happen. Whatever they gave that night they must give from their hearts. They must not give for advertisement.

THE PENNY COLLECTING SCHEME.

Mr. Cory Woodrow announced that during the six months the institution had been in existence no less than £869 had been collected. Mr. Tom Joy started the penny collecting scheme with the most satisfactory results, and their "property bricks" had produced no fewer than 33,608 pennies. (Cheers.) Miniature gold bricks had been awarded to Mr. Tom Joy, Mr. G. H. Chirgwin, and Mrs. Wal Pink, who had collected the three highest amounts.

The main subscriptions and donations received since Aug. 6 are as follows:—

Mr. Joe Elvin responded to the toast. His reception was a magnificent one, and for some minutes he was unable to commence his speech. When "For he's a jolly good fellow" had been sung by all present, he started to speak in his characteristic fashion. "Dear Girls and Boys," he said, with just a suspicion of a tremble in his tones; "I am going to make an earnest appeal for £3,000. Surely such a sum is not beyond the capacity of the music-hall profession. The committee are determined to persevere. They have started the Institution, and there is to be no turning back. (Cheers.) We simply have to go on and make the Institution worthy of ourselves and of the profession with which we are associated. But I don't think we are going to get the money we want, and I will tell you why. The profession has not responded as it should have done to our appeal. It is very disappointing. The same old people have responded. They always respond, bless them! but the heads of the profession have not come forward as they should have done. I have to thank the Actors' Orphanage for their cheque. That Institution got £2,500 in one day at a garden party. Why cannot the variety profession do the same? I should just like to recite a little thing, which, I think you will admit, fits the situation, and is understandable of you all. It is entitled

THE CALL.

It always has been the ambition of each "Pro"—
the great or the small,
When his "turn" on "The Green" he has finished, to take a legitimate "call,"
Not a hurried-up, pinched sort of curtain, but one unto which he's a right.
Would you learn how to earn such a call? Aye!
You would, then I'll tell you to-night.
As you journey through life's vast profession, rehearse—rehearse well—"Self-denial,"
With a stick of "Benevolent" grease-paint, on your phiz place "Good fellowship's" smile.
When your job holds a big bunch of "Contracts," don't put on "the side" nor yet look Askance at the poor "thirty-bob turn," with scarcely a date in his book.
You don't know the cause of his downfall; you can't tell what brought his reverse,
So give him your hand, and, what's better, just give him a bit from your purse.
Give, and while giving, give freely; it matters not what the amount,
God sees the gift, and remember, that each trifle
for you will count.
Bid each unfortunate brother look ahead, spur him
on to succeed,
For the best of all friends, old or new, are the ones that we find in our need.
It's help, and not pity, that's needed in the hours of trials and distress,
And it only means one "Scotch and soda," a cigar,
or a couple, the less.
Do to all as you wish to be done by, always acting the part of a friend,
For good deeds, so says the old motto, will bring their reward in the end.
And when on life's stage your turn's ended, and there comes the last grand curtain's fall, You'll hear the great "Manager" saying: "Well done, old Pro, take a Call."

IS A KITTEN A LETTER?

Mr. Douglas Stuart, who proposed the toast of "Railway Companies and their Theatrical Representatives," said it gave him pleasure to propose the toast, for he came in contact with these gentlemen more than anyone. They were always most courteous and obliging, ever ready to do anything to help variety artists, and on behalf of the 7,000 members of the M.H.A.R.A. he thanked them. The committee had recently been asking for a concession from the railway companies for certain pet animals—elephants, to wit. One of the representatives said he considered 1s. a mile not too much, seeing that on a certain journey the elephants had eaten up the straps of the truck in which they were travelling. Mr. Stuart said he had received no complaint as yet from the elephants that they were suffering from indigestion from their meal of South-Eastern straps. The theatrical representatives had also been discussing with the committee the rates for ponies, which, curiously enough, travel at the rate of two dogs, or if particularly fat at the rate of three and a half dogs. There had been a lot of trouble just lately over the charge for cats. Until last December you could take twenty cats at the rate of two dogs; a new regulation was then enforced. Mr. Stuart said that if those present thought that cats were now charged as cats they were quite mistaken. Cats were now charged as parcels, and what he wanted to know was the price for the conveyance of kittens. Were they in the past charged as puppies, and did they now come under the category of letters?

Mr. Eugene Stratton then presented prizes in the shape of tiny bricks of gold to Messrs. Tom Joy, whom he thanked for his hard work on behalf of the Institution; and to Mr. G. H. Chirgwin, to whom he said, "Come on, Cork." Mrs. Wal Pink is to have a similar adornment presented to her for her admirable efforts when she returns from America.

Mr. Harry Bawn said he was sorry that more professionals were not present. The movement deserved the hearty support of every artist, big and small.

Mr. Bartram told how on a visit to the North he was with two pro's, who made a bet concerning the barring clause. He was called upon to hold the stakes. The man who won he persuaded to take a receipt from the Benevolent Fund for the money. Every manager and agent, besides the artists, was in a position to help the good cause, and if all pulled together they would not have to wait two years to start the building of the Institution.

THE WATER RATS.

Mr. Joe O'Gorman told how the Grand Order of Water Rats was originally composed of 80 members. Now it numbered 150. That Order had one ideal—the betterment and advancement of their profession. The members had steadily and strenuously fought to give some relief outside of their own work. It had been stated that the Water Rats consisted only of stars. That was not so. The Order was open to every man who was a man. They cared not whether their members were Irishmen or Scotsmen or Scandinavians. Art recognised no nationality. He was amazed to find so few artists present at a dinner of music-hall artists. He thought it was unfortunate that the Grand Order of Water Rats did not embody the whole of the profession. He took the opportunity of thanking Mr. Frank Glenister for the able management of the Water Rats' matinée at the London Pavilion. There were a number of star artists earning fabulous salaries who were conspicuous by their absence that evening, or by the omission of a cheque to help the poor and needy of their profession. He thought the poverty that existed in the music-hall world was greater than in any other profession he knew of. The average life of a music-hall artist to-day was five years. He had no enmity against his brother and sister artists, but those who could afford it, and who did not come forward and contribute, might one of these days themselves have to appeal to the Fund. They should cease to be selfish, and should assist the willing few to make the fund the success it undoubtedly deserved to be.

Mr. W. H. Clemart stated that a very fair proportion of the income of the V.A.B.F. came from the Variety Artists' Federation. Mr. Broadhead had given £50 to the Fund, and they had got that gentleman's permission to divide the sum equally between the Fund and the Institution. Mr. Broadhead had suggested that his contribution should be credited to Santa Claus, and that suggested the idea that other managers would like to join in. But that excellent example had not been followed as he had hoped it would have been.

Mr. Harry Blake presented a list of donations and subscriptions, including sums handed in that evening.

A UTOPIAN SUGGESTION.

Mr. Arthur Were, secretary of the Terriers' Association, said that the kindred societies were prepared to extend their sympathy to the scheme so ably originated by Mr. Joe Elvin. Without disparaging in any way the excellent work of the Music Hall Home, he was in cordial sympathy with Mr. Joe Elvin's philanthropic efforts to create a haven of rest for artists whose years of association with the glamour of the footlights had ended in public oblivion and bitter penury. If through the benevolence of Mr. Elvin and his generous friends, any alleviation of the sufferings of the impoverished artist could be effected, he was convinced that all connected with the kindred societies would render every assistance and financial support to so praiseworthy a cause, and the day was not very far distant he hoped, when they would see the opening of the building, which will for ever be associated with its generous founder, Mr. Joe Elvin. With a view to facilitating the consummation of this project, the secretaries of the kindred societies would ungrudgingly devote their services, as far as possible; and now having judiciously paved the way for some suitable recompense for their devotion, for charity began at home, he ventured to bring the following Utopian suggestion before the governors of the institution. The secretaries of the various societies view the prospect of a decrepit old age with grave apprehension, despite the attractions of old age pensions and labour bureaux. They were only buoyed up with the hope that some provision would be made for a cosy bungalow in the institution's grounds, where they can be relegated in their old age to the obscurity they desired. To be free for ever from the terrors of agendas and the perpetual motion of reckless proposers and seconders in a rural retreat where Terriers cease from barking and Water Rats are at rest. Committee meetings then would be painful memories of the past, and they would not be censured for not answering letters that have never been received. Mr. Callaghan's investigations would then be limited to horticultural ones, and their sole occupation would be the daily struggle with their patent pipe fillers. There in the garden of sweet contentment the jaded secretaries of the kindred societies would be able to vegetate, and visitors who can tell the tale so well, will be subjected to the barring clause of the lodge-keeper, and they would not be touched for the dollar that returneth not. The vista of a glorious summer sunset to their lives would lighten their hearts in the winter of their discontent, in those bitter hours when they were silent sufferers of the committee's loquacious eloquence.

After the speechmaking there was a conversazione, and this was followed in its turn by a most enjoyable dance made up of the following sixteen numbers: Barn dance, "Top of the morning"; valse, "Yip-i-addy-i-ay"; Lancers, "Big boom"; V.A.B. Fund valse, "Druid's prayer"; two-step, "Piggy back"; valse cotillon, "Sweet memories"; veleta, "Scarboro'"; M.H.A.R.A. twilight waltz and two-step; barn dance, "Kerry Mills"; valse, "Aeroplane"; Lancers, "Gaiety"; two-step, "Kelly"; valse cotillon, "Dollar Princess"; valse, "Septembre"; Lancers, "Our Miss Gibbs"; valse and galop, "Good-night, last lap." The M.H.A.R.A. orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Groves, was present, and the M.C.s were Messrs. E. Brown and A. Venner.

WOOLWICH HIPPODROME.

An attractive and diversified programme was presented here last week, and as a consequence good business is being maintained. Figuring prominently in the bill was the sketch entitled Broken Fetters, which was warmly received. Mr. Graeme Campbell as Lord Elton, Mr. Ronald Bogue as Dick Trench, Miss Hester Newton as Barbara Hurst, Mr. C. M. Halse as the Inspector of Police, and Miss Grande as the Maid all distinguished themselves, and received flattering recognition. Miss Vesta Victoria, it is unnecessary to state, brings down the house in several of her well-known songs, and is heartily applauded for her rendering of "Is there anybody looking for a widow?" and that amusing skit "Skating." Of course the audience are left unsatisfied until "And now I've got to call him father" is rendered. Rose Atherton and company present a most laughable sketch, entitled Murphy's Affinity, in which Michael Murphy and his wife Bedelia are caretakers of an old curiosity shop. The action of the sketch is, in reality, a dream of Murphy's, in which he imagines an urn has been left at the shop by two Orientals with instructions not to rub it, as it contains the ashes of Cleopatra. Of course these instructions are not obeyed, so on rubbing the urn Cleopatra appears, and a very amusing time is spent with Cleopatra assuring Murphy that he is her "affinity" and the indignation of his better half. Eventually the urn is again rubbed, and Cleopatra disappears; and Murphy wakes up with much disgust to find he is only caressing his wife. Mr. E. Mullins is most diverting as Michael Murphy, and causes much laughter; Miss B. Armitage is also funny as the wife, Bedelia; Miss C. Kingsley does well as Cleopatra, and looks well in her Egyptian garb; and help is also rendered by Mr. J. Leslie and Mr. B. Tomlinson as Ben Hassan and Ali Wattah respectively. Tom Costello, as usual, keeps everybody highly entertained, and receives a warm welcome, his song-scena entitled "My Home is Far Away" evoking much applause. Sylvia Phillips trills her ditty "What is the number of your front street door?" to everybody's satisfaction; Hiram Travers scores highly in his song "Now I'm living up the West," and his patter catches on; Verno and Voyce prove a popular turn in their racing song-scena Sporting Luck, which affords much interest and is well responded to; Kathleen Cogan also contributes a song, which is well received; and the Bioscope concludes the entertainment with the latest subjects.

At the Palace Theatre, Porth, Harry Grey, the Australian Nugget, in his burlesque on the North Pole, meets with success. Violet Armidale is a dainty soubrette; Walter Stanley a capital comedian; the Paul Kramer Troupe are marvellous trapeze artists; the flexible Sisters Indiana give a smart act; Phil Parsons repeats all his latest success; the Deuars Bros. are good hand equilibrists; and the Perfection Bioscope projects all the latest pictures.

THE PARIS FLOODS.

MAGNIFICENT ALHAMBRA MATINEE.

Crowded to its utmost capacity last Tuesday afternoon, the great Leicester-square house presented a splendid spectacle. Tri-coloured festoons hung from the tiers, and Mr. George W. Byng's orchestra was separated from the audience by a floral barrier, itself one of the sights of the afternoon. The occasion was the special matinée in augmentation of the Lord Mayor's Fund in aid of the sufferers by the disastrous floods in France.

The list of patrons was a formidable one, and it says a great deal for Mr. Alfred Moul's popularity and the high-class cosmopolitan nature of the Alhambra audience, when it can be stated that of the Continental celebrities alone who can be recorded interesting themselves in the movement were the Chargé d'Affaires for Servia and Mme. Slavko Grouitch, Chargé d'Affaires for Bulgaria and Mme. Hadji Mischef, Chargé d'Affaires for Italy (M. Alberto Martin-Franklin), Chargé d'Affaires for Norway (M. E. Huitfeldt), Consul for Liberia (Mr. J. T. Grein), M. E. Daeschner (Ministre of the French Embassy), M. A. De Fleuriau (1er Secrétaire), Marquis de la Bégassiere (2ème Secrétaire), Comte E. de Lastours, M. F. Sebastier d'Espeyran (3èmes Secrétaires), Vicomte de Felcourt, Comte de Montholon, M. C. Bérard (Attachés), M. J. Knecht (Secrétaire Archiviste), Commandant Baron Mercier de Lostend (Attaché Naval), Colonel V. J. M. Huguet, M.V.O. (Attaché Militaire), and M. Jean Perier (Attaché Commercial).

The programme presented was an exceptionally brilliant one, even for functions of this kind, and the following artists generously gave their services by consent of their respective managers: M. Harry Abbas in monologues de "Cyrano de Bergerac"; Mr. Henry Ainley in a recitation "A Gentleman of France," by Sam Walsh; the Hon. Mrs. Stuart Anderson; Mr. Wilkie Bard, "I can't reach that top note"; Miss Jessie Broughton and Mr. Dennis Creedon in selections from their répertoire; a play in one act, Before Sunrise, Miss Elise Craven and Master Bert Clerc; Mme. Alice Favier, Miss Evangeline Florence, Mr. Vaughan Grey, Miss Daphne Hope, Mme. Blanche Marchesi, Miss Helen Mar, Miss Decima Moore, Miss Ina Pelly, Mrs. Brown Potter, Mlle. Pauline de Schönberg, Miss Irene Scharrer, Miss Madge Temple, Prince Tchagadaeff, "The Rodney Stone Fight," Act 3 scene 2 of The House of Temperley, Mr. James Welch, and Miss Russ Whytal.

Three of the items call for special mention. The first is the ballet Our Flag, beautiful, soft, harmonious, with the ever-delightful Britta as principal dancer. Round her were grouped a brilliant trio—Miss Elise Clerc, Miss Julia Seale, and Miss Julia Reeve. The staging, the scenic distances, the colours, the crowds—all made as fine a display as even the Alhambra has achieved. Mdlle. Britta's graceful little act of tying the French tricolour and the British Union Jack together evoked a storm of applause. The Mirza Golen troupe, a round dozen of Persians, gave an act which was dressed with the utmost splendour. In a series of scenes—opening before a tropical sunset—they presented what may best be described as a wordless pantomime, concluding with an acrobatic display as novel as it was effective. A feature of the turn was the display of huge carpets from the East.

Mr. Wilkie Bard, too, came in for a goodly share of appreciation for his singing of "I can't reach that top note."

But before Mr. Bard made his appearance we had a chance of giving a hearty greeting to our old friend, Mr. Alfred Moul, happily recovered from his recent long illness. He stood in the centre of the stage when the huge tabs went up, pale and obviously weak, and from time to time leaned for support on a small table. But he spoke up bravely and clearly, and having thanked everyone for their assistance, introduced Miss Ellen Terry, who had generously acceded to the earnest request of the organisers of the matinée to appear during the afternoon to deliver a special and appropriate address to the audience.

Miss Terry then made the gratifying announcement that the substantial amount of £400 had been obtained. "Thank you very much for your welcome," said Miss Terry. "Mine is a very pleasant task. Isn't it delightful that we shall have no less than £400 to send to the Lord Mayor's Fund, and thus help to succour in some measure those to whom the invasion of the waters has brought disaster in Paris? I have been asked to give thanks to all those who have assisted to make this occasion a success, and I do so with all my heart. How can I express the gratitude we feel to all who have helped us—to the generous artists, the staff, the musicians, and to the Press! Once more, to one and all, thanks, thanks, and again many thanks."

Then came a few words, couched in a similar vein, from M. Cambon, who occupied a box.

There was a special notice in the theatre that the original framed drawing for the frontispiece of the programme, by the well-known artist, Val Prince, and which was exhibited in the foyer of the theatre, would be sold by auction during the afternoon to the highest bidder, by Mr. Wilkie Bard. Having sung his amusing ditty, "I can't reach that top note," Mr. Wilkie Bard assumed the, for him, novel rôle of auctioneer, inviting offers for Mr. Val Prince's striking picture. After some spirited bidding it was eventually knocked down to Miss Ethel Clinton for the sum of thirty-five guineas.

During the afternoon Mr. G. W. Byng, Mr. Hermann Darewski, jun., Mr. James Glover, Mr. Julian Jones, and Mr. Landon Ronald occupied the conductor's chair.

The honorary stage managers were Mr. Walker Gregory, Mr. Clarence Hunt, Mr. W. W. Keene, and Mr. C. La Trobe, and the following ladies undertook the sale of programmes: Miss Muriel Allen, Miss Lydia Bilbrooke, Miss Daisy Burrows, Miss Daphne Glenne, Miss Violet Graham, Miss Shiela Heseltine, Miss Evelyn Hope, Miss Violet Lewis, Miss Edyth Latimer, Miss Madge Melbourne, Misses MacLaren, Miss Marjorie Michie, and Miss Violet Walker.

Full houses are the order at the Hippodrome, Bishop Auckland. The Belong Brothers are wonderful cycle equilibrists; and Gladys and Alber do well in their funny acrobatic turn. Miss Lizzie Glenroy meets with approval in her singing and dancing; and Les Voces are admirable soloists and duettists. Wyndham and Kitty are especially entertaining as wire-walkers and jumpers; and a remarkably clever juggling turn is accomplished by Ernesto. Mr. Harry Nelson's songs and patter are highly pleasing. The Hipposcope continues to provide interesting films.

The attraction at the Victoria Theatre, Kettering, this week is "Scottie" and his variety combine. The following artists contribute to a capital entertainment:—The King's (comedians), Knoto (contortionist), Ivy Cornwallis (comedienne), Dot Irving (dancer), Sandy and Ramsay (comedians), Helen Bourne, and the Merries. Lloyd's Singing Colliers meet with a hearty reception, and Mr. Alexander's sketches Napoleon at Waterloo and The Cry of the Children are admirably presented.

At the Empire Music Hall, Wrexham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shelley produced a screamingly funny duologue, Mrs. Summerson's Baby, which is greeted with roars of laughter. Charles Ashdowne, an eccentric comedian and legmania dancer, commands a full share of the plaudits of the audience; Miss Minnie Ray is a charming comedienne; and H. O. Borle a clever and eccentric juggler. The Bioscope pictures are quite up to the usual mark.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

World's Championship Race.
THE series of heats in the great one mile professional race, open to the world, has excited the greatest interest at the Empress Rink, Earl's Court, this week. Undoubtedly speed skating is a big attraction with followers of the sport. The times recorded, however, have not been too impressive, and if the sport is to be encouraged, and the public support maintained, there must be an improvement in this direction. On Wednesday night the Sporting Life referee took an important step towards attaining this end by deciding that from that evening any heat that takes longer than 3min. 35sec. would be declared void. Foulger suffered defeat at the hands of Wilson, who took matters rather casually. The same may be said of Moore, for the American has a remarkable reserve of speed at all times. The heat in which Bear and Peters met was well contested. But there was one unfortunate incident in connection with it.

Peters Warned.
PETERS was the faster away, but Bear quickly drew up, and Peters going wide on the second bend, Bear gained the lead. For three laps Bear cut out a smart pace. Coming into the straight at the fifth lap, the American jumped and Bear responded. Nearing the bend Peters crossed his man within inches of his stride, and this brought a caution from the referee. Had Bear protested the referee stated he would have disqualified Peters, for by English rules of racing at least one clear yard must be allowed in passing. An official letter was sent to Peters immediately after the race, informing him that should he repeat the offence he would be disqualified whether a protest was made or not. The final is sure to be hotly contested to-night (Saturday), and an immense assemblage will undoubtedly be present, for the meeting of the two Americans points to a terrific struggle for supremacy and £60.

The Officials.
THE officials were:—Referee, Mr. H. W. Keen (appointed by the Sporting Life); Judges, Messrs. L. L. Thomas and G. Thomas; starter, Mr. L. Roscoe; timekeeper, Mr. F. Cost; M.C. and manager, Mr. H. W. Izod.

The Guitry Headdress.
THE Chantecler hat has made its appearance on the rinks. Thirty-five varieties have been seen at Earl's Court, about a dozen at Holland Park, three at Finsbury, and "a large number" at Maida Vale. The Chantecler veil has not yet been observed, but we live in hopes.

Miss Sybil Arundale "Chanteclers."
MISS SYBIL ARUNDALE skated garbed as the Hen Pheasant, the part played by Mme. Simone in Chantecler, at the fancy-dress carnival which was held at Olympia last week.

Farewell Night at Olympia.
NEXT Monday is Farewell Night at Olympia.

March 11 at Holland Park.
THE next carnival at Holland Park is to take place on Friday, March 11.

Last C.P. Carnival.
MR. F. G. STUMCKE, the manager of the Crystal Palace Rink, has arranged for a costume and evening-dress carnival, the last of the season, to take place on the evening of Wednesday, March 16, beginning at 6.30 p.m.

Rink Profits 50 per Cent.
MR. CARLTON ROBERTS, presiding on Tuesday at a meeting of the Brixton Skating Rink, Ltd., said that in the first ten weeks they earned a net profit of practically £100 a week, and in the succeeding eight weeks £140 a week. In eighteen weeks they had earned a total net profit of £2,200. In the matter of returns they had created a record which stood second to none in rinking enterprises in this or any other city. During the last four weeks the receipts had gone up from £173 to £225.

Street Skating.
FOR years the side streets in London have known the boy with a single roller skate upon the asphalt. But there was a tradition that a boy on one skate was on one side of the policeman's law, and the boy on two skates on the other. Some years ago it was proposed to put boy messengers on the new skates and send them careering through London. But the law stopped them. From the point of view of the pedestrian and the other traffic of the streets there is much to be said in favour of the skating messenger as against the bicycling boy. Though he goes as quickly and can carry as much, he takes up less room, and can steer himself more easily. And a pair of roller skates is cheaper than a bicycle.

Bertha Doud Mack.
THIS delightful skater has been exhibiting her charms and skating powers at the Dudley Trindle-road Roller Skating Rink this week. In the course of her performance Miss Mack introduced step-dancing, and under very difficult conditions presented some steps that called for exceptional skill and great physical effort. Her fine spectacular skating is also wonderfully clever, and her costumes are exceedingly costly and effective.

Jessie Darling's New Act.
SINCE we shook hands with Jessie Darling last the little lady has been to Paris, Berlin, Hamburg, Hanover, Frankfort, and Paris, and, to use the expression beloved of her countrymen, has "made good everywhere." Jessie has returned to London, and was to be seen "frivvling" with the best of them at the Olympia Carnival the other night. The fair skater has in active rehearsal a new act, in which she is "introducing the classic in roller-skating"—which intimation gives one a throb of expectancy, for imagination conjures up visions of a première skateuse à la Maud Allen. We have not been invited to attend rehearsals, so we may be wrong in this supposition, but Miss Darling is bound to send us an invitation for the première, after which we can enlighten the section of the public that will be so unfortunate as to be turned down at the box-office.

Rexos Going Well.
THE Rexos' splendid skating act is now in its third week of success at the London Hippodrome, and going as well as ever.

Rinking Championships.
THE National Skating Association has arranged to bring to issue their tests for roller championships at the Tournament Hall, Edge-lane, Liverpool, to-day (Saturday) between five and seven o'clock. Some of the most expert skaters in the country will compete.

Jewish Lady Skating Champion.
SPORTING circles in Budapest are much elated at the success of Fräulein E. Kronberger, the daughter of a Jewish manufacturer, in the world's skating championship, in which she obtained the title of lady champion for the third time. Fräulein Kronberger has been a skater since she was four years of age. When she was twelve years old she had the audacity to compete against some of the finest skaters in the world, and although she was beaten by the Berlin champion, Rendschmidt, her performance attracted a great deal of attention, and the Crown Prince, who was present, expressed a wish to see her skate again. She has twice won the championship of Hungary against male competitors. Fräulein Kronberger is only nineteen, and is able to devote her whole time to her favourite pastimes, as her late father left her a considerable fortune.

Chelsea's New Rink.
A NEW skating rink will be opened on March 8 at Chelsea. It promises to be a very luxurious affair. The appointments include a ladies' reading room, gentlemen's smoking lounge, and a large tea room capable of seating 300 persons. The skating surface is 135ft. by 72ft., and Mr. Walter Power will be the general manager. Under these conditions the welfare of Chelsea rinkers will be well catered for.

Naval Men as Rink-Managers.
COMMANDER LEADBETTER, R.N.R., and Lieutenant Quill (late 23rd Regiment) are the local managers of the Finsbury Park Rink, and are in constant attendance. They are responsible for the management and supervision of the rink, and their manner is enough to inspire respect and secure discipline.

Hampstead Palace Gymkhana.
ON Thursday in last week the spacious skating rink in Cressy-road was devoted to a gymkhana, arranged by the management. There a crowded attendance of spectators. The results were as follows:—Balaclava Melee.—Won by the Hampstead Roller Skating Palace Instructors' team under Capt. J. E. Rendle. Perambulator Race.—1st, Mr. Appleyard; 2nd, Mr. Murphy. Egg and Spoon Race (Ladies).—1st, Miss Henley; 2nd, Miss Emons. Tug-of-War.—Hampstead Palace Skating Club. Faked Skate Race.—1st, Mr. Nicholls; 2nd, Mr. Scull. Punt Race.—Mr. Appleyard. Musical Chairs.—1st, Miss Law; 2nd, Miss Appleyard. Half-Mile Club Handicap, Final.—1st, Mr. Garlick; 2nd, Mr. Brake; 3rd, Mr. Appleyard.

Maida Vale Rink Opened.
THE magnificent skating palace at Maida Vale was formally opened last Saturday afternoon by the Mayor of Paddington (Alderman H. H. Fuller, J.P.). His Worship was supported by the Mayoress, Sir Neville Beechcroft, Messrs. Hayes Fisher, M.P., Arthur Straus, M.P., Guy Campbell, and Aldermen Becker, Handover, Williams, Bannister, Urquhart, Whur, Major Dundas, and Major-General Laurie. Among those skating was Miss Dorothy Cullum, the amateur champion figure skater. The floor management is under the direction of A. A. Lennie, whose experience in rink management has been gained in three Continents. A. Lightfoot and F. Sylvester are the assistant floor managers, and the band is under the direction of Herr Voor Zanger.

River Park, Wood Green.
ONE minute from Lordship-lane terminus is the Wood Green Rink. There a grand fancy and evening dress carnival will take place on Thursday, March 10, when £40 in prizes will be given.

Round the Edinburgh Rinks.
THE over-supply of facilities for roller-skating in Edinburgh was bound to make itself felt in some quarters, and last week saw the closing of one of the largest rinks in the city—the American rink in Russell-road. As a result, the attendance at the Olympia Palace Rink, Annandale-street, showed considerable improvement. A hockey match between the home club and the Marine Gardens has taken place this week. At the Grand, Fountainbridge, matters continue to run smoothly. The Bellevue Rink, in Elm-row, and the Royal Park Rink, in St. Leonard's, receive a goodly number of patrons nightly.

Fine Building for Blyth.
THERE is to be a rink at Blyth, Northumberland, very shortly. A fine building is now in course of construction, and will be completed in about a month's time. The skating area of the building will be about 15,000 square feet. Richardson's have got the order for the skates.

Managing Director Wins Case.
A CLAIM was made at the Bolton County Court, last week, by Chas. Bedworth, of Hanley, and residing at Kidsgrove, Cheshire, in his capacity as managing-director of the Bolton Skating Rink Co., Ltd., Ferns Park, for £74 9s. 3d., as salary, travelling and incidental expenses, and £3 4s. 6d. costs. His services were dispensed with by the other three directors in October, and they had paid him £30 16s. 6d. to cover the September-October salary. It was arranged that the managing-director should attend on two days a week at intervals of not less than two days apart, his salary being £250 a year. There were three other directors, and £300 was to be divided as salary. Mr. Bedworth told the Judge that he had not claimed a quarter-share of that, although he thought he had a right to it. "I was the only one who had expert knowledge," he said, in reply to questions by Dr. Atkinson; "I had the whole of the building, formation, and equipping of the company. The manager of a skating rink requires special knowledge, which I venture to suggest no one outside myself possesses." The Judge said the agreement clearly showed £250 salary, and gave a verdict for plaintiff for £55.

"Enchanter" Skate Dance.
THE patrons of the Premier Rink, Boston, are delighted with the new skate dance, "Enchanter," which is most popular not only in Boston but all over the British Isles. The dance is having a very large sale. As we have already stated, it was originated, written, and composed by W. Hurst, the trick skater, and general-manager of the Premier Rink, Boston.

Evidences of Esteem.
A FIRST-CLASS steamer ticket to New York, a purse of gold, numerous cigar-cases, tobacco-boxes, card-cases, hair-brushes, a shaving-mirror, a writing-case, and a flask have been presented to Mr. H. E. Weaver on his being compelled to resign the management of the American Rink, Bristol, owing to ill-health. He is to take a trip to his home in America to recuperate.

Bury St. Edmunds Carnival.
LAST (Thursday) evening a grand carnival and gymkhana was held at the West Suffolk Skating Rink, Fornham-road, Bury St. Edmunds, and the management are to be congratulated on the success of the affair. The hall was prettily festooned with flags, and every electric light was enclosed in a large Chinese lantern. The whole, with the fancy dresses, presented a sight well worth seeing. Prizes were offered for the most original costumes, and the judges, Mrs. Bennett and Mr. H. Bankes Ashton, decided as follows:—Ladies: 1, Little Miss Hinnell, as "Free Trade"; 2, Mrs. Holloway, as "North Pole." Gentlemen: 1, Mr. Greene, as "Indian Chief"; 2, Mr. Holloway, as "Teddy Bear." There were twenty-two entries in the ladies' competition, and twenty-one gentlemen entered the contest. There were nine entries for the ladies' graceful skating competition, the awards being as follows: Miss Plumpton, Miss Orbell, and Miss Hedges. An excellent and varied programme of sports had been arranged. Roars of laughter were caused by the mishaps to the participators in the potato race and the tug-of-war.

Sir George Collard at Canterbury
THE best local and county families patronised the Charity Carnival recently held at the Pavilion, Canterbury. The prizes were distributed by Sir George Collard.

Bros. Luck Win Hockey Match.
AT the Chesterfield Premier Skating Rink last week there was an amusing and interesting match at hockey on skates, the teams being chosen from the Six Bros. Luck's company and the Chesterfield Premier Skating Club. The artists turned up in the most eccentric costumes, and were victorious by a substantial margin. Sid Bandon refereed.

Skating Rink for Chichester.
THE scheme for providing Chichester with an up-to-date skating rink, together with a cinematograph theatre, has been advanced a further stage. The directors of the company which has been formed for the purpose of carrying out the scheme, Chichester Olympia, Ltd., have received a report that sufficient shares have been applied for to enable the company to proceed to allotment, and contracts have been settled for the erection of the main rink to be started forthwith. The rink will be situated at Northgate.

"Event of the Season" at Durham.
A RECORD was easily established at the Olympia Rink, Durham City, on Wednesday night, the attraction being the first masked fancy dress carnival, which was billed "The Event of the Season." Nothing similar has ever before been held in the old cathedral city, and the occasion drew crowds. Judging was in the hands of the Mayor (Councillor W. H. Wood), Alderman Proctor, and Councillor C. Caldcleugh. Their decisions, giving entire satisfaction, were as follows:—Fancy.—Folly, Miss E. Belshaw; Roman soldier, Mr. J. James. Burlesque costumes.—Old woman, Miss Waite; ancient Briton, Mr. T. Liddle. Original costumes.—Christmas tree, Miss Hodgson; half man and half woman, Mr. Caley. Advertising costumes.—Black and White whisky, Miss Caslew; Maypole Butter Co., Mr. G. Morton. The Mayoress presented the prizes to the winners. An exhibition of fancy and trick skating was given by Messrs. J. Ellis and Nicholson.

New Rink in Glasgow.
HISTORICAL interest is attached to the roller skating rink which was opened in Argyle Street, last week. The new establishment stands on the site of the old Theatre Royal in Dunlop-street. The building has been well planned, and the skating surface, which measures 100ft. by 70ft., has accommodation for 300 skaters. Councillor Cohen declared the rink open.

Evening of Sports.
THE resident-manager of the American Roller Rink in Victoria-road, Glasgow, is arranging an "Evening of Sports" to take place on Thursday, March 3. The Dennistoun Rink, in the old East End Exhibition Grounds, Hillfoot-street, continues to be well patronised, and those attending the various daily sessions testify to the excellence with which this establishment is managed. Business at the West End Rink continues brisk, there being large numbers of skaters at each of the three daily sessions. The floor is maintained in splendid condition. The Ibrox Rink is exceedingly popular with the "rinkers" in that locality.

Hall-by-the-Sea Carnival.
THE third of the season's fancy costume skating carnivals, held at the Hall-by-the-Sea, Margate, last week, was a huge success. The large building was absolutely packed, and Mr. Charles Evans is to be congratulated upon the success which has attended these carnivals. The crowded audience gave added animation to a picturesque setting which has never been excelled in Margate. Among those present were Mr. Norman Craig, K.C., M.P., the Mayor and Mayoress of Margate (Alderman W. H. White, J.P., and Mrs. White), and the judges were the Mayoress, Mrs. T. R. Higgins, Mrs. T. Setterfield, Mr. T. R. Higgins, Mr. Newth, Mr. Paul Mardol, and Mr. Olliffe, chairman. The Band of the G Company 4th Battalion (the Buffs) played an attractive programme of music under the direction of Bandmaster Scott, and the Royal Excelsior Band (Bandmaster Pointer) was also in attendance.

Nottingham Empress Gymkhana.
THE manager of the Nottingham Empress Rink, Mr. George Holt, as the result of the gymkhana and sports which took place on the rink last week, is able to hand over to the Nottingham General Hospital a cheque for £25.

Presentation to Geo. Holt.
MR. GEO. HOLT, manager of the New Empress Rink, King Edward-street, Nottingham, has been presented with a handsome silver cigarette case inscribed as follows:—"Presented to Mr. George Holt by the Committee of the Cripples' Union Carnival, held at the New Empress Rink, Nottingham, Jan. 28, 1910, in return for his kindness and invaluable help."

The Seaforth Rink.
OUR Liverpool correspondent reports that rapid progress is being made in the construction of the new rink at Seaforth, near Liverpool. The rink will have a skating area of 20,000-odd feet, and Messrs. Plimpton have secured the contract for the supply of maple and also laying of the floor. The rink will be equipped exclusively with Richardson ball-bearing skates, as will also the rinks now building at Merthyr Tydfil and Pontycymmer.

Gavotting in Sheffield.
PATRONS of the Empire Rink, Sheffield, have each night this week been instructed in the gavotte by Little Doris and W. L. Arridge. A week of uninterrupted sessional skating is the order at the Olympia Rink. For the following week the management have engaged the expert services of John F. Davidson, who will give performances each afternoon and evening.

Warrington Children's Carnival.
AT the Empire Rink, Warrington, a most successful children's dress carnival was held last week. Fully 300 youngsters, whose ages ranged from four to twelve years of age, participated. The grand march was one of the features of the carnival. For the boy's costume the prizes were awarded as follows:—1, Roy Howard, courtier; 2, J. Parkinson, Dick Whittington. Girls': 1, Miss Parkinson, Spring; 2, Miss Brough, heliotrope fairy. Boys' humorous: 1, Master Boothroyd, Good-night; 2, Master Crossley, golliwog. Girls' historical: Miss Weir, Queen of Hearts. Boys' historical: Duke of Gloucester. Girls' original dress: Miss Smith, Folly; 2, Miss Ada Cooper, Pansy.

Sir W. S. Gilbert as Rink Director.
SIR W. S. GILBERT, of Savoy fame, has accepted a seat on the board of the Watford Theatre and Skating Rink Company, Limited.

Gale Damages Rink.
DURING the severe gale at the commencement of the week a very great deal of damage was done to the Queen's Skating Rink, Clarence-road, West Hartlepool. Preparations were just being made for the commencement of the afternoon session when a strong gust blew in the large semi-circular window at the west end of the building. The heavy glass and framework were blown inwards, and with them, or immediately afterwards, fell a large quantity of the surrounding masonry. The wind blew into the building with tremendous force, and it was not long before a portion of the wooden roof at that end was lifted off for a distance of ten or twenty feet. In its fall the masonry smashed the gallery which ran across the end of the building, whilst a great number of the falling blocks crashed through the skating surface below. A man and boy who were engaged with the large indicator had a narrow escape when the window blew in, the glass and debris falling on either side of them.

Two Hartlepool Attractions.
AT the Pavilion, West Hartlepool, manager Charles McPhail combines dancing with skating. His combined Cinderella and dance was a huge success, and is not likely to be the last one that will take place at this rink. One special attraction during the evening was some very good skating by C. T. Williams, the head of the floor staff. From a spectator's point of view a most successful carnival was held at the Queen's on Wednesday. Prizes to the value of £20 were offered for competition. The ladies' prizes were awarded for Comet, Lady Rancher, Rag Book, Fi Fi, Mercia, and Dutch girl; gentlemen's for Airship, Prehistoric Skater, Indian Rajah, Village Blacksmith, Cerebos, "Lily Elsie" (Merry Widow), and "Chirgwin."
